Torres Contracts to Show Pathe Films In Cuba, Porto Rica and San Domingo

ACCORDING to an announcement from the Pathe exchange, M. Ramirez Torres, of the Selection Film Service, has closed contracts for the rights to all Pathe productions of 1920 and 1921 in Cuba, Porto Rico and San Domingo. The Selection Film Service supplies the largest theatres on the islands and the deal assures the presentation of the Pathe productions in the finest houses in Havana and throughout the territory.

"The West Indies is the playground of the Western World," Mr. Torres said, "and in the next two years we will see an ever growing demand for the best motion pictures. In anticipation of this demand I am making preparations, and the closing of the contract with Pathe is in line with this. We are not only buying for the great native clientele, but for the expected thousands of tourists.

In line with other forms of amusement the motion picture theatre is coming into its own in Havana and in the other communities where vacationists are seeking rest and diversion, according to M. Torres. A great new motion picture theatre is to be opened soon in Havana. It is owned by Santosy Artigas, a wealthy Cuban, who proposes to secure for his house attractions of the highest class.

"All of the exhibitors in the territory are keen for the chance to demonstrate the superiority of their presentation of entertainment," M. Torres said. "They are men of character and business, who believe entertainment of the best character will pay and they are going to provide it."

Capable Cast Assures Strong Support to Bessie Love in "The Midlanders"

THE completed cast of "The Midlanders," the first picture which Bessie Love is making for Andrew J. Callaghan Productions, Inc., assures the star the support of a capable and distinguished array of film talent for her forthcoming independent productions.

Following the acquisition by the Callaghan organization of Joseph de Grasse and Ida May Park to direct Miss Love, the producing company announced its intention of obtaining the services of a high-class supporting company. Truman Van Dyke, in the role of Harlan Van Hart, will play opposite Miss Love. Mr. Van Dyke is expected to give a subtle delineation of the college-bred son of rigid, aristocratic parents who loves Aurelie, the primitive product of a squatter civilization on the banks of the Mississippi.

In the role of the picturesque editor of the town newspaper, Lloyd Bacon, a film actor of long experience, should bring a dramatic finesse to a highly colorful part. Mr. Bacon has had a varied training with Essanay, Lone Star, Keystone and in playing character leads with important stars.

Playing the parts of Judge Van Hart and Mrs. Van Hart, the pillars of this small town society, are Sydney Deane and Frances Raymond, both qualified by considerable experience in similar roles to adequately portray the narrow philosophy and snobbery of this particular upper-class household. Jack Donovan, C. Norman Hammond and Curt Rehfield complete the principals of the cast. Donovan will play the young Arne Vance; C. Norman Hammond takes the role of the fanatical squatter, John Lindstrom, foster-father to Aurelie and a worker in the quarries of the town boss, and Curt Rehfield plays the part of Capt. Lindstrom.

The Bessie Love Company will leave soon for location work in the north of California, after completing several interior scenes at the Los Angeles studios. A portion of the story will be made in the very locale around which the narrative was written, the Mississippi Valley, and for this purpose Miss Love will take her entire company eastward in the near future.

Selznick Details Progress of Three New Productions

THE Selznick Pictures Corporation, of which Lewis J. Selznick is president, announces that one production has been completed, another is well toward completion and a third is progressing very favorably in the East Coast studios.

"Out of the Snows," a Ralph Ince special production, has been completed at the Fort Lee studio. The picture features Ralph Ince and Zena Keefe, Selznick's 1920 star.

"The Valley of Doubt," written by Willard Mack, the well known playwright, is said to be undergoing the cutting and editing process. Burton George directed and the principal roles were played by Thurston Hall, Arline Pretty and Anna Lehr. R. Cecil Smith picturized the story for the screen.

In the production of "Whispers" Director William P. S. Earle is reported to have turned the entire first floor of the Selznick Bronx studio into an exact reproduction of the lobby of an internationally famous hotel. The scene is said to be one of the most costliest and elaborate sets ever erected for a Selznick production. Miss Elaine Hammerstein is starred in this picture written by Marcus V. Connelly.

Vitagraph Records Heavy Booking on Its New Serial

VITAGRAPH reports that its exchanges have lopped three weeks off of the normal selling time required for the booking of super-serials. The feat has been accomplished in behalf of Vitagraph's new super-serial, "The Silent Avenger."

This production, which has William Duncan as its star, and the beautiful Edith Johnson as leading woman, is declared to have reached the peak of a booking run three weeks ahead of the time ordinarily required. The campaign on "The Silent Avenger" started late. Within two weeks, by reason of the swift effort of exchanges and the popularity of the star, previous records for early bookings were broken.

Now, as the campaign nears its close, Vitagraph asserts that the entire volume of business done on previous chaptered melodramas has been exceeded. Many exhibitors are reported to have engaged the serial for solid week runs or three and four-day runs.

Anita Stewart in Vampire Role.

For the first time in her screen career, Anita Stewart will be seen as a vampire when her latest Louis B. Mayer production, "The Yellow Typhoon," is released through First National channels.

Miss Stewart has two roles in the picture, playing the part of twin sisters of widely contrasting natures. Hilda, a brunette, is a sweet, wholesome girl, well educated and refined and devoted to the care of her invalid mother. Berta is a blonde whose affections are guided by an insatiable desire for wealth and luxury. During her meteoric career she ruins and deserts several men, easily luring a new victim into her net each time by her great beauty and personal magnetism. "The Yellow Typhoon" was directed by Edward Jose and photographed by Rene Guissart.

SIMPLE SOULS

Bobby Connolly in "The Flapper."

Bobby Connolly, the inimitable child actor of the "Sonny Jim" series fame, has signed a contract to appear in the Selznick production of "The Flapper," according to Myron Selznick, production manager of Selznick Pictures in the east. Master Connolly will portray the role of King, Jr.

Mayflower Hires M'Loughlin to Handle Exploitation Work

THE Mayflower Photoplay Corporation has secured for its exploitation department the services of William P. M'Loughlin, well known throughout the newspaper and sporting world as "Wurra Wurra," the pen-name under which he conducted a column in the Evening World for several years. He also conducted the Live Tips column on the Morning World while acting as sporting editor on that newspaper.

Mr. M'Loughlin's activities in the field of publicity have extended over a wide ground. His latest efforts in that direction were with the Fox Film Corporation. He did considerable work for the Knights of Columbus, principally in France, Belgium and the British Isles, while that hustling organization was performing wonders toward securing aid and comfort for the boys overseas. One of the most notable of Mr. M'Loughlin's feats was an interview at Malines, Belgium, with Cardinal Mercier at the time that the prelate was the centre of the world's admiration.

"Mac" has a wide acquaintanceship with newspaper men throughout the country. He was for a good stretch with the Chicago American and the Hearst newspapers in New York.

Hall Completes Script for American Cinema Special

WALTER RICHARD HALL, noted writer of screen adaptations, has completed the screen version of H. Thompson Rich's widely read novel, "A Woman Strays," for the American Cinema Corporation. "A Woman Strays," a story of a woman's vain struggle to ward off the treacherous reactionary blow of destiny in spite of the strange elements that enmesh her, is said to possess a most powerful and original theme. Hall's clever and delicate handling of this difficult theme is said to be little short of marvelous. Confronted by one of the most intricate of plots to picturize, he has written a screen version of Rich's popular book that is vividly powerful.

To James Vincent has been entrusted the staging of this latest American Cinema Corporation special feature production. Work on this special feature has been started at the company's Glendale studios, where Mr. Vincent and a corps of assistants are busily engaged preparing to "shoot" the initial scenes.

Ralph Lewis in "Common Sense."

In announcing the forthcoming release of "Common Sense", Briton N. Busch, president of Republic Distributing Corporation, of which Lewis J. Selznick is advisory director, stated that Ralph Lewis is featured in the production.

Known as an actor with an excellent reputation, Ralph Lewis' performance in "Common Sense" is said to be one of the finest ever given by this actor. His recent appearance on the screen was as Uncle in "When the Clouds Roll By," a Douglas Fairbanks production. He is also known for his portrayal of "club foot" in "The Clansman." Supporting Ralph Lewis is Vola Vale.

"Common Sense" is a five-reel feature directed by Louis William Chaudet, which will be distributed through Republic.

Competition Keen Among Washington Houses with Discharge of Many Government Clerks

THEATRE owners and managers are rather apprehensive of the future, following the cuts that are being made in the number of Government clerks that have been employed in the various Government departments during the period of the war. There have been upwards of 100,000 of these employees. The desire of the Federal authorities now is to get back as nearly to normal as possible and cut down the drain on the public funds.

The question seems to be whether or not there are too many theatres in Washington to take care of a depleted population. Already the crowds are thinning out and there will be much larger holes visible and noticeable after July 1. Many of the theatres are spending much more money than heretofore in advertising of various kinds. During the war period it was not necessary to send out circular letters through the mails to an extensive list of possibilities nor to send out blot- ters and programs. One of the legitimate houses has just revived its list, and weekly sends advertising matter to more than 22,000 in the District of Columbia.

For some time past there have been announcements and rumors of various kinds to the effect that additional houses would be built shortly. There has been talk of an outside concern coming here with the most modern of modern motion picture theatres; that another exhibitor would shortly build houses in each section of the city. Despite all the verbal and newspaper talk, theatres that were promised last year to be ready for opening during the present spring are still only talk-theatres. There is little likelihood that anyone will risk money on a proposition in face of the possibilities of the future.

"The House of Toys," American's Coming Big Feature, Is Drama of Ambition and Romance

THE "Flying A" visualization of "The House of Toys," written by Henry Russell Miller, who was a Pittsburgh lawyer, is now in process of production under the direction of George L. Cox.

This new super-drama is a story of love and ambition which barely misses being a domestic tragedy. In it the selfish, doll-house dream of the wealthy society girl is shattered when she marries a talented but poor young architect and faces the necessity of economical home-making, and the accumulation of debts. But in the end she reaches the eminence of a true helpmeet, just before her husband's love for his "dream-girl" is entirely lost to her.

The drama will make a universal appeal; it will forcibly impress its truth on those who contemplate marriage, and more forcibly on those who are married and those who have viewed the identical situations as an interested observer on the outside. The story will show the need of sympathetic team work to successfully pull the family load, and not one pack-horse, however willing.

A large and well balanced cast has been selected to put over this special. For the role of the heroine, Shirley Lord, Seena Owen has been secured, with Pell Trenton, a popular leading man, and Helen Jerome Eddy in a prominent part. Supported also by George Hernandez in the role of the prosperous and benign employer taking all the unfortunate under his comfortable wing, Lillian Leighton as the wealthy and "I-told-you-so" aunt, Marian Skinner, Stanhope Wheatcroft, William Buckley, Henry Barrows and Perry Banks, make a practically all-star cast.

Hodkinson Has Approved 400 Contracts on Kerrigan Film Before Release Date

WITH a Balzac story as a medium for bringing out all that J. Warren Kerrigan does best in the silent drama and a typical Kerrigan cast to aid him in a series of surprises, "The Dream Cheater," newest in the star's series of Robert Brunton pictures, to judge by the volume of contract business received at the Hodkinson home office, should win the same public acclaim that has been accorded its predecessors.

That exhibitors have come to realize the audience power of Kerrigan productions is attested by the flood of bookings received on a Kerrigan-Brunton picture before its release date. This has been true of every Kerrigan production since the star's amalgamation with Brunton.

As an illustration, "The Dream Cheater" was set by the Hodkinson organization for release on April 4, and on that day upwards of 400 contracts had already been approved, the great majority of these from territories where Hodkinson managers had not held trade showings of the latest Kerrigan picture.

"The Dream Cheater," adapted by Jack Cunningham from Balzac's "The Magic Skin," is said to be unlike any of the hundreds of stories which Kerrigan has done for the screen. The popular entertainer discards his familiar light comedy attitude and runs the gamut of human emotions. He has the role of Brandon McShane, scholar, idealist, dreamer and philosopher.

New Home of the Rolin Film Company at Culver City, Cal.

The building was erected by Hal Roach, producer of the Harold Lloyd comedies. It will be ready for occupancy in about three weeks.

Blanche Sweet in "The Deadlier Sex" Breaks Pathe Advance Booking Records

WITH every mail bringing an avalanche of new contracts for the latest Blanche Sweet production released by Pathe as an Extra Special Feature, "The Deadlier Sex" has already exceeded all records for bookings in advance of release date. Bayard Veiller's produced story has captivated exhibitors at showings in the branches and important theatres in the exchange and key cities have contracted for it. Scores of theatres in smaller towns, where the management waits, as a rule, the result of the opening in larger cities, have in this case booked in advance.

As has been announced, it has been booked for the B. S. Moss theatre, the Fox theatres, the Loew theatre, the Keith and Proctor houses and the Poli theatres. In addition, a great number of important houses in the New York metropolitan theatre district have booked the picture, and in the last few days a great number of contracts from other territories have been approved.

Some Contracts Recently Signed.

The merit of the picture story by the author of "The Thirteenth Chair" and the establishment of Blanche Sweet as a favorite of the first rank is held responsible for the success of the picture. Her work in "Fighting Cressy" and "A Woman of Pleasure" is also a great factor in the record breaking contracts on "The Deadlier Sex," according to exhibitors.

Among the latest contracts received are the Terminal, Newark; Walnut, Louisville; Rialto, Pittsburgh; American, Troy; Kenyon, Pittsburgh; Tudor, Atlanta; Feiber & Shea houses in Youngstown, Akron and Canton; Wuerth, Ann Harbor, Mich; Orpheum, Flint, Mich.; Signal Amusement Company, Chattanooga; Metropolitan, Grand Forks, N. D.; Lyric, Norfolk, Neb.; Liberty, St. Louis.

The Strand, Easton, Pa.; Rialto, Amsterdam, N. Y.; Alhambra, Pittsburgh; Apollo, Dayton; Palace, Hamilton, Ohio; Princess, Springfield, Ohio; Hippodrome, Toledo; Palace, New Orleans; Tootle, St. Joseph, Mo.; Strong, Burlington, Vt.

The picture is supported by a great exploitation campaign. A series of articles on "The Deadlier Sex," being a study of the famous women who have made a mark in history, has been prepared by the star and many newspapers have requested the exclusive rights to the series in their respective territories.

Booking Drive Adds 1,644 Exhibitors; Selznick Names Contest Prize Winners

TO the already large list of Selznick bookings, 1,644 theatres throughout the country, representing 1,166 towns, big and small, and all showing the four Selznick stars, have been added by Selznick Pictures in eight weeks, it is made known this week by Lewis J. Selznick through Charles Rogers, sales director.

This latest record of 1,644 theatres is more than conclusive evidence of the sledge-hammer box-office drives which Selznick pictures are creating for the exhibitors. It also is concrete fact that, according to report, the exhibitors of today realize now more than ever the prestige that Selznick pictures bring in their wake. The returns of the contest inaugurated by Mr. Selznick a short time ago show that the entire corporation is a most harmonious, dynamic organization.

"In adding that long chain of theatres to the roster of Selznick Pictures," enthusiastically declared Mr. Rogers, "we have scored one of the most notable scoops in the history of the industry. I might go on and talk all day about Selznick productions and what they mean to the box office, but the stupendous amount of business that our sales force reports throughout the country is bona fide evidence that Selznick pictures are snatched 'hot off the griddle.'"

Latest announcement of the winners of the first, second and third business prizes, respectively, are as follows: C. C. Ezell, Dallas; H. L. Knappen, San Francisco; C. C. Reid, Kansas City. First, second and third advance payment prize winners are: Samuel Sax, Indianapolis; A. W. Moses, Buffalo, and Charles Walder, Albany.

Previous winners of the cash bonuses offered by Mr. Selznick to all his branches for the greatest amount of business were: James O. Dent, Detroit; S. S. Webster, Cleveland; J. A. Conant, Cincinnati; Benjamin P. Rogers, Boston; Morris Safier, New Haven; W. R. Liebman, Atlanta, and H. A. Rathner, Minneapolis. For the biggest sums received as advance payment the prizes went to Henry Siegel, New York; W. A. V. Mack, Los Angeles; C. W. Taylor, Omaha; J. U. McCormick, Washington; Ben W. Leadell, Chicago; Hugh Rennie, Seattle, and S. W. Hatch, St. Louis.

Capitol City Scenes in "Whispers."

Many scenes of Washington, the Capitol city, will be included in Elaine Hammerstein's forthcoming Selznick production "Whispers," according to an announcement this week.

Director William P. S. Earle is reported as having completed the interior scenes for this production at the Selznick Bronx studio, and has taken Miss Hammerstein and her supporting company to the Capitol city for additional scenes laid in and about Washington.

Inter-Ocean Makes Record Sales on World Productions

WHAT is regarded as one of the largest sales records ever made in the history of the export branch of the motion picture business is embodied in an extensive sales report issued this week by Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation.

In the report reference is made to the record number of sales that have been consummated to date for World Pictures, a product which Inter-Ocean Film Corporation has handled ever since May, 1915, when, by the terms of a contract, Inter-Ocean became the foreign sales representative for World Film Corporation. Since that time Inter-Ocean has distributed in foreign territories a total of more than three hundred World Productions. The list of releases embraces all of the pictures made by that organization since 1915.

According to this information, which is divulged to the trade for the first time, territorial franchises have been disposed of for World Pictures in the following foreign territories: United Kingdom; France and Switzerland; Belgium; Holland; Scandinavia and Finland; Spain and Portugal; Australia and New Zealand; Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay; Chile, Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador; Cuba, South Africa; India, Burma, Ceylon; Dutch East Indies and Straits Settlements; Porto Rico, Santo Domingo and Venezuela; Trinidad and British West Indies; Egypt and Greece; China, Japan and the Philippines; Brazil; Central America; Mexico; Russia; Italy; and German-Austria, Czechoslovakia and Jugo-Slavia and the Balkans.

Episode Titles of New Pathe Serial.

The editorial work on the fifteen episodes of Pathe's serial, "Trailed by Three," in which Stuart Holmes and Frankie Mann are co-starred, has been completed and the episode titles announced by the company are as follows:

First episode, "The Mystery Pearls"; second episode, "Trapped in Chinatown"; third episode, "The Tyrant of the South Seas"; fourth episode, "The Prison Ship"; fifth episode, "Buried Alive"; sixth episode, "Wanted for Burglary"; seventh episode, "In the Pasha's House"; eighth episode, "The Fifteenth Wife"; ninth episode, "The Pasha's Revenge"; tenth episode, "The Slave Market"; eleventh episode, "The Torture Trap"; twelfth episode, "The Burning Fuse"; thirteenth episode, "The Door of Death"; fourteenth episode, "The Hidden Crime"; fifteenth episode, "The Reckoning."

Stimson Visits New York.

C. A. Stimson, general sales manager for the American Film Company, has just made a "Flying A" trip to New York in the interests of the two new releases, "The Thirtieth Piece of Silver," starring Margarita Fisher, and "Slam-Bang Jim," in which William Russell carries the leading role. He reports that "Slam-Bang Jim" is going off with a start worthy of its name.

"The Stolen Kiss"—Never to Be Forgotten—Never to Be Had Again.

Constance Binney is preparing to take the second one over the telephone in her current Realart release.

Ince Returns from Washington.

Ralph Ince, the Selznick director, has returned from a trip to Washington, D. C. Mr. Ince, director of and appearing in Ralph Ince productions for Selznick Pictures, went to Washington to secure scenes in and around the White House to be used in a forthcoming Selznick feature.

The latest Selznick production featuring Mr. Ince is "Out of the Snows," which was reported undergoing the editing and cutting process at the Selznick Fort Lee studio. Zena Keefe supports Mr. Ince in this picture.

Paramount Stars Lead in Rio de Janeiro Contest

THE popularity of Paramount Arcraft pictures in Brazil is strikingly illustrated in a picture contest concluded recently by Paratodos, a prominent magazine published at Rio de Janeiro. The announcement of the conclusion of the contest received by E. E. Shauer, of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, shows that Paramount Arcraft finished first in five, second in two and third in one of the eight divisions into which the contest was divided.

One of the most interesting divisions of the contest in which the motion picture fans participated was a vote as to the most popular and best known film trademark. Paramount Arcraft received first honors with a vote of 5,983, or 2,000 more than the nearest competitor. This honor was won in competition with European and other American trademarks.

First place in the contest for the most beautiful screen actress was awarded to Dorothy Dalton by a vote of 13,978. Mary Pickford, as an Arcraft star, was awarded third place and Marguerite Clark sixth. Other Paramount Arcraft stars who received important support from the public in the voting contest were Ethel Clayton, Mae Murray, Lila Lee, Dorothy Gish and Gloria Swanson.

In the male star division, Wallace Reid was awarded first honors easily in the contest for the most popular actor, receiving 8,917 votes. Bryant Washburn was fourth in this contest, while Douglas Fairbanks, whose Arcraft productions are still playing to great crowds, and William S. Hart were other competitors for the highest honors.

Startling Photographic Effects.

Sidney A. Franklin, who is filming Robert W. Chambers' novel, "Athalie," at the Brunton Studio, Los Angeles, is well along on production now, having been shooting for the past three weeks. There will be a great deal of interesting stuff in Franklin's story, owing to the fact that he has made a drive for unusual settings and locations. It is believed there will be some startling effects, from a photographic standpoint, in this picture, dealing as it does with a game of blind-man's buff, love and the psychic power of a woman.

Having completed "The Deep Purple," R. A. Walsh is now reported to be sleuthing for another story. It is very likely that he will decide upon a vehicle dealing with city life—possibly an original rather than the picturization of some well-known book or play.

Moore Engaged for "Whispers."

Matt Moore, brother of Tom and Owen Moore, who has appeared in support of many screen stars, has been engaged by Myron Selznick, to play an important role in "Whispers," in which Lewis J. Selznick presents Elaine Hammerstein as star.

Mr. Moore will play the part of a star reporter on a metropolitan daily. The story was written by Marcus V. Connolly and picturized by George Proctor.

Mayflower's President Denies Split Between His Firm and Zukor Interests

THAT a split has occurred between the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation and the Zukor interests is vigorously denied by Isaac Wolper, president of Mayflower.

"Any printed statement to the effect that Mayflower and Realart have parted company is not true," Mr. Wolper stated. "Arrangements are now being made by Realart for the release of both Walsh's picture, 'The Deep Purple,' and Miller's production, 'The Law of the Yukon.' In fact, the billboard paper is out on these productions and the advertising campaigns are well under way. Several weeks ago an announcement was made through the trade papers that these would be the last two of the Mayflower pictures to be released through Realart. This, however, does not mean that there has been any 'split,' as the papers choose to call it."

According to Mr. Wolper, several deals are now pending which relate to the manner in which productions presented by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation are to be released. As yet, however, no arrangement has been closed and consequently nothing definite can be said about the method or medium of release.

Walsh has been working diligently at the Paragon studio on the film version of Paul Armstrong's and Wilson Mizner's play and expects to deliver the film to Realart within the next few days. Charles Miller's screen interpretation of Service's classic poem is now being cut and titled and delivery of the finished picture will be made shortly. Both pictures are scheduled for release through Realart on May 2.

Dwan Begins Last of Series.

Charles Miller is now looking for another story, and Emile Chautard is finishing work on his latest film, as yet unnamed.

Allan Dwan expects to start work on his sixth and last production to be presented by Mayflower the first of next week. Under his contract with Mayflower, Dwan was pledged to do six pictures, two of which, "Soldiers of Fortune" and "The Luck of the Irish," have already been released. Three more have been all but finished, and it is expected that his last will be ready for release early next fall.

Allan Dwan, Director-Producer, To Do Unique Scenario Featuring Locations

ALLAN DWAN, who won fame first as a director and later as a producer, has now turned author. He will leave his Los Angeles studio early next week for the mountains of Northern California to write a scenario featuring locations spotted from the window of the train which recently bore him westward from New York.

This is one of the few times a producer has made an effort to make his story fit the locations—usually it is the other way around—and it is believed this policy will present a new angle from which to exploit the picture.

"I saw some wonderful mountain scenery on my way home," said Mr. Dwan, "so I have chosen the section through which I traveled as the locale for my next picture. By a strange coincidence this country is exactly suited to the story."

The producer believes that by going over the ground where the picture is to be made and writing the scenario with a view to using definite locations, a great deal of time will be saved when he starts shooting scenes.

Although he is keeping the title of his new production a secret, Mr. Dwan announced that it is an original story based on a powerful theme, the idea for which developed from a conversation which took place at a dinner in New York during the producer's recent visit to the metropolis.

This will be the last Allan Dwan production to be presented by Mayflower, making a total of six pictures, which fills the requirements of the contract. Two of these pictures, "Soldiers of Fortune" and "The Luck of the Irish," have already been released through Realart, and three others have been photographed and are now being cut and titled.

"A Splendid Hazard," from the story by Harold MacGrath, has been shipped by Mr. Dwan and is now en route to Mayflower's New York office. "In the Heart of a Fool," from the novel by William Allen White, and "The Scoffer," an original story by Val Cleveland, a New York newspaper man, will both be finished shortly and shipped through to New York. It is not likely that any of these productions will be released until early fall.

Must Be His "Goat" the Way It Hangs Around Him.

Adapted from the famous "Billy Whiskers" book series, Commonwealth Pictures Company of Chicago are putting out comedy plays with Mr. Goat in the lead.

Agnes Ayres.

To be starred in Marshall Neilan and Albert A. Kaufman productions.

Alice Brady Has Started on Her Next Realart Production

ALICE BRADY has started work on "A Dark Lantern," which is to be her next production for Realart. Miss Brady is beginning a long engagement at the Princess Theatre in Chicago of her stage success, "Forever After," and during the day will work at the Essanay studios.

This will be Miss Brady's first picture since she completed "The Fear Market," by Princess Troubetskey, while playing the subway circuit around New York City.

The vehicle chosen for Miss Brady is the novel, "A Dark Lantern," by Elizabeth Robins, published in 1905.

James L. Crane, son of Dr. Frank Crane, the well-known minister-writer, and Miss Brady's leading man on the stage, will play the leading male role. Mr. Crane has twice before been leading man for Miss Brady. Others in the cast include Brandon Huest, Reginald Denny, David Montero and three members of Miss Brady's "Forever After" company, Mrs. Russ Whytal, Dorothy Betts and Virginia Huppert.

Kinematograph Year Book Jammed With Information

THE Kinematograph Year Book and Directory for 1920, edited by John Dunbar, has been issued by the Kinematograph Publications, Ltd., 85 Longacre, London. There are 500 pages crammed with advertising and most timely information of the trade, the latter covering, besides Great Britain and Europe, America, Canada, India and Australia. There is a recapitulation of the events of the year; trade shows in order of date, alphabetical lists of renters and artists and key list to titles.

Sections are devoted to technical matters, to trade organizations and to legal and financial matters. There is an elaborate trade directory and a directory of kinemas.

The publication is a most creditable one and should be a welcome fixture on any film man's desk.

"Humoresque" Is Completed.

"Humoresque," which Frank Borzage directed with Alma Rubens as the featured player, for Cosmopolitan Productions, is completed and will be released by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on June 6.

Kaufman Signs Agnes Ayres on Long Contract; to Play Lead in Third Neilan Picture

FOLLOWING the announcement of the co-operative production alliance between Marshall Neilan and Albert A. Kaufman comes the news of the signing of Agnes Ayres, one of the most beautiful and talented actresses of the screen, to a long term contract by Mr. Kaufman under the terms of which Miss Ayres is to be starred in a series of special features.

After her graduation from high school in Chicago, Miss Ayres was intent on entering the University of Chicago to take up the study of law or medicine as a profession. While on a visit to the Essanay studio, however, her attractiveness was noted by the director and she was asked to play a small part in a picture which she did in a capable manner. A permanent engagement was then offered her which she accepted.

Made Rapid Progress.

By conscientious application to her work, Miss Ayres advanced steadily and with each succeeding picture she was given roles of more importance. After her engagement with Essanay, she joined the Mutual Film Company and under the direction of Frank Powell she supported Nance O'Neil in one production and Marjorie Rameau in five. Then she went to the Eastern Vitagraph company where she remained two years.

After leaving Vitagraph, Miss Ayres free lanced for a while, playing leads opposite William Russell in "Sacred Silence," with E. K. Lincoln in "The Inner Voice" and in the Famous Players-Lasky Production of "Held by the Enemy."

Recently Mr. Neilan and Mr. Kaufman watched her work on the screen and both were enthusiastic about the probabilities of her becoming one of the screen's most popular stars.

Both May Use Player.

Both producers were anxious to obtain Miss Ayres for their respective companies. But being friends of long standing and with the proposed co-operative alliance, which is now a reality in mind, it was amicably agreed that Mr. Kaufman should make the bid for the new star with the proviso that Mr. Neilan should have an option on her services whenever she was available. This was successfully accomplished.

While her first starring vehicle is in preparation, Miss Ayres is playing the leading role in the third Neilan picture, which affords her exceptional opportunities.

The Agnes Ayres Company will be the second company under the Kaufman banner, he having recently signed Allan Holubar to direct a series of special productions starring Dorothy Phillips. Plans are under way to establish an extensive exploitation and publicity campaign to back up Miss Ayres.

Metro to Annually Release Eight Buster Keaton Films

BUSTER KEATON will make two-reel comedies for release by Metro when he completes his work in the Winchell Smith production of "The New Henrietta," in which he is to be co-featured with William H. Crane at the head of an all-star cast.

This became known at the Metro Studios in Hollywood when the existence of a contract signed in New York between Joseph M. Schenck and Metro Pictures Corporation was disclosed. The contract covers a period of years and calls for eight of the funny two-reelers annually with Buster Keaton starred. The pictures are to be made at the Metro studios and to be released by Metro. They will be produced under the management of Lou Anger.

Buster Keaton has been with Roscoe Arbuckle in comedies for three years, and is completing a role with the latter simultaneously with his beginning at Metro the part in "The New Henrietta" originated on the stage by Douglas Fairbanks. The latter part is Keaton's first essay at "straight" comedy in motion pictures, his previous work being classed as slapstick. "The New Henrietta" which was revised by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes from Bronson Howard's "The Henrietta," will be re-titled for release as a motion picture. Herbert Blache is directing, with Mr. Smith personally supervising every detail.

"Miracle of Money" Is Henley's Next.

An absorbing story of American life, with two spinsters in the principal parts, has been filmed by Hobart Henley as his second picture for release by Pathe. "The Miracle of Money" is the title of Mr. Henley's latest picture, and it is an adaptation of the story by Beulah Poynter, "The Marrying of Emmy." All who have witnessed the first screenings of the completed picture have been deeply impressed by the strength of the story and the unusual appeal it makes to all women.

Wistaria Productions, Inc., advises that its recently completed production temporarily titled, "Why Women Sin," has been changed to "Neglected Wives."

Mr. Thomas de Vassey, secretary of the corporation, in an interview, stated that after serious consideration he was afraid that the trade might misconstrue a title like "Why Women Sin" to mean a more or less salacious picture and it was for this reason that the new title, "Neglected Wives," was chosen for this production as being typical and more nearly descriptive of the picture.

Lehman May Enter Picture Business.

Bernard Lehman, a wealthy box manufacturer of Indianapolis, arrived in New York City early this week and forthwith let it be known that he is greatly interested in the moving picture business. He is interested to the extent of wanting to get into it with both feet.

The state rights field looks good to him, he says, but he has not decided which way he will jump. He may even organize a producing company of his own.

Robertson-Cole Stenographer Dies.

Miss Catherine O'Reilly, nineteen years old, of 362 West 127th street, a stenographer in the employ of Robertson-Cole, died at her home on Monday afternoon, April 5.

Miss O'Reilly was taken ill on Wednesday, March 31, with a severe cold which developed into spinal meningitis. Her funeral was held on Thursday morning, April 8.

Austin Story for Marion Davies.

Marion Davies' next starring vehicle for Cosmopolitan Productions will be a screen adaptation of F. Britten Austin's "Buried Treasure," which appeared in Hearst's Magazine. The company will make a trip to the Bahama Islands for the exteriors.

"Her Five-Foot Highness" Is Among Universal's Feature Releases for April 19

AMONG the releases on Universal's program for the week of April 19 is a five reel special attraction, "Her Five Foot Highness," featuring Edith Roberts. The subject is taken from a story written by Tarkington Baker. It is directed by Harry Franklin.

"Her Five Foot Highness" is an American girl, born and raised on a Texas ranch, who discovers after the death of her father that he was the son of a Duke, who had severed all family connections in his youth and emigrated to America in search of independence and fortune. As heiress to an English title and estate she sails for England to claim her inheritance.

In the telling of this clever mixture of comedy and drama Miss Roberts has excellent support from Katherine Kirkham, Harold Miller, Leonard Clapham, Ogden Crane, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Leota Lorraine, Rudolph Christians and many others.

"The Lion Man," the Universal serial with Jack Perrin and Katherine O'Connor, is now in its seventeenth episode and as it only has one more episode to run every foot of film is full of virile action. Another serial full of sure fire action is "Elmo the Fearless" featuring Elmo Lincoln. The release for this week is the eleventh episode, entitled "The Temple of the Dragon."

An Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran comedy entitled "Somebody Lied," and a Rainbow comedy, "A Jazzy Janitor" featuring Zip Monberg, Virginia Warwick and William Irving, are the fun rollickers for this week.

A two reel western entitled "One He-Man" with Jack Perrin and Josephine Hill, International News, Numbers 19 and 20, and the Universal New Screen Magazine No. 62 round out the program of releases.

Loew Books Drew Comedies in Ten of His Big Theatres

THE Mrs. Sidney Drew Comedies, featuring John Cumberland, have been booked by Marcus Loew in ten of his most important houses, and reports to Pathe Exchange, Inc., indicate that the advance showing of the second picture of the series is bringing the comedies into even greater favor with exhibitors in every territory. "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton," second of the series, is set for release on April 15.

Making a determined effort to have each succeeding comedy even better than its predecessor Mrs. Drew has produced in "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton" a picture that is certain to meet with public favor. Many exhibitors who have witnessed the comedy at advance showings have wired or written congratulations and have stated that it is certain to more than uphold the high standard created by "The Charming Mrs. Chase."

Willard Mack Story Is Completed.

From the offices of the Selznick Pictures Corporation comes the announcement that the final scenes of the selznick-Willard Mack story, "The Valley of Doubt," have been completed at the Selznick Fort Lee studio.

"The Valley of Doubt" was written especially for Mr. Selznick by Mr. Mack, and, according to report, it promises to be one of the most powerful, gripping dramas ever thrown on the screen.

The leading roles were played by Thurston Hall, Arline Pretty and Anna Lehr under the direction of Burton George. R. Cecil Smith adapted the story for the screen.

Marcus Loew Plans New Akron Theatre as First of String in Northern Ohio

MARCUS LOEW, moving picture and theatrical magnate, in Cleveland on April 1, announced that he has closed a deal for a large theatre to be constructed in Akron and that he has plans under way for entering other Northern Ohio cities with new theatres.

The new house in Akron will be known as Loew's Hippodrome. It will have 4,000 seats and will be the biggest in that city and one of the largest in the country. Plans for it are being drawn by C. Howard Crane, a Detroit theatre architect, and the contracts provide for the finest type of construction, similar to the Loew theatres in New York, Cleveland, Buffalo and Los Angeles.

The Akron theatre will be located on Main street in the heart of the business district, with an additional entrance on Bowery street. In front of the theatre auditorium a business block will be erected. In this building there will be an arcade leading to the theatre, with forty store rooms. The entire cost of the enterprise is $1,250,000.

The policy of this theatre has not yet been decided upon. It will be opened on January 1, 1921.

First of a String, Says Loew.

"This will be the first of a string of theatres that I propose to build in Northern Ohio," said Mr. Loew. "I have under consideration another location in Akron and in several other cities near Cleveland."

The deal for the Akron theatre was closed in Cleveland, the legal matters being handled by Dow W. Harter, of the law firm of Benner, Harter & Walker, of Akron, and Fred Desberg, one of Desberg and Keeley, attorneys, Cleveland, and E. A. Hahn, Cleveland attorney.

"Ohio is my home state," said Mr. Loew, "and I am deeply interested in my Ohio theatres and projected ones. Recently I visited Akron and was much impressed with the progress of that city. Immediately I made plans for the erection of a theatre there. And the Akron house will be a beautiful theatre, in keeping with the high-class atmosphere which we try to inject in all Loew theatres."

Mr. Loew spent several hours looking over the two new theatres he is building in Cleveland, one, the State, at Euclid, and East Seventeenth street, and the other, the Park, at Euclid and East 101st street. He also was shown several locations and it was understood that an important announcement concerning his Cleveland plans would be made within a week. He said that according to the present speed of construction work, the Park and the State would be ready for opening about October 1.

"Marama" to Be Miss Dean's Next Big Universal Picture

THE next big picture scheduled by Universal for Priscilla Dean, the star of "The Virgin of Stamboul" will be "Marama" a story of the Fiji Islands, by Ralph Stock, a popular magazine story writer. "Marama" was published as a magazine story in 1913.

The story deals with Marama Thurston, a young girl educated in an American school, where she is a favorite and a leader among the girls of her set. She does not learn, until she returns to her home in the Fiji Islands, that she is a half caste.

In her reaction from the shock of the discovery she discards her American clothes for native garments and tries to cast off her European culture as well. She dresses and lives like a native but at heart she is white.

As Marama Priscilla Dean will have an opportunity of displaying the latest fashions in South Sea feminine adornment. The role will call for an unusual display of her volatile screen temperament. It is expected that Rollin Sturgeon will direct the picture, which soon is to go into production.

Charles Ray Productions, Inc., Buys Fourteen of Charles Hoyt's Comedies

THE Charles Ray Productions, Inc., has just purchased fourteen of the most famous of Charles Hoyt's dramatic works for adaptation to the screen. With the purchase price running into large figures, the acquisition of these well-known farce comedies gives the star's producing organization a wealth of screen material which, in its original form, constituted some of the most popular theatrical amusement of the last generation.

The deal which brings these dramatic pieces to the Charles Ray organization was concluded last week in Los Angeles. The group of Hoyt plays include "A Black Sheep," "A Brass Monkey," "A Hole in the Ground," "A Midnight Bell," "A Milk White Flag," "A Rag Baby," "A Runaway Colt," "A Stranger in New York," "A Trip to Chinatown," "A Texas Steer," "A Temperance Town," "A Contented Woman," "A Day and a Night" and "A Dog in the Manger."

It is not known whether Mr. Ray will find any of these plays adaptable to his own personal uses, but the new star-producer is considered to have put over a clever business coup by the acquisition of the fourteen Hoyt comedies for the Charles Ray Productions, Inc.

Played Everywhere in Country.

It does not require much thinking back on the part of adults of today to remember the vogue which the farce comedies of Charles H. Hoyt had in this country from ten to twenty years ago. These stage pieces, which were adapted to use by stock companies, were played extensively in all sections of the country and the name of Hoyt was as well-known in the smaller centers of the nation as in the large cities.

Through all of this playwright's work ran a vein of genial warmth and of sparkling humor. They were popular in the simplest sense of that word, for their appeal was not to any one class of the population, but to the millions. The Hoyt plays never failed to draw full houses, the reason being that they aimed at nothing more than to furnish an evening of simple, innocent fun.

The wide acquaintance of America with the Hoyt plays is due in a large way, also, to the interesting fact that many of the actors who had their early roles in these famous farces have developed into the leading comedians of today. Otis Harlan earned his fame as a comedian in several of the Hoyt vehicles. These include such other well-known names as Henry E. Dixie, Willie Collier, Tom Wise, James T. Powers and Ed Garvie.

Republic Enters April in Front Rank of Leading Distributing Corporations

THAT Republic Distributing Corporation enters the fourth month of 1920 as one of the leading distributing organizations in the industry, firmly entrenched in the theatres of the country through its wide range of suitable subjects, is the gist of an announcement made this week by President Briton N. Busch.

"Republic has made wonderful progress," said Mr. Busch. "It is a tribute to exhibitors to note the progressive methods with which programs are being booked throughout the United States. We have kept right up with the exhibitor; have secured the material he must have; have arranged releases so that he can book his complete program from us—and the result is that Republic enters upon April, 1920, realizing that Lewis J. Selznick's slogan, 'I consider myself a failure unless the exhibitor is a success,' is true in every sense of the word.

First Episode on April 18.

"Exhibitors who have found their receipts swelled by serials of the rapidly moving sort, with action as well as drama, are getting on the band wagon for 'The Whirlwind,' which we have distributed so that the first episode can be shown on April 18. The campaign book and public-

The famous sunken gardens of the Busch estate, in Pasadena, formed the setting of an elaborate wedding scene for "Athalia," an adaptation of the novel by Robert W. Chambers, which Sidney A. Franklin is producing under the Mayflower banner.

The Busch gardens have been one of the show-places of Southern California for several years and are visited annually by thousands of winter tourists. Director Franklin selected this location as the locale for the "society wedding," in the picture because of the extremely picturesque landscape.

Cameraman David Abel, formerly with Norma Talmadge, "shot" a series of artistic effects in these gardens.

ity material supplied the exhibitor on 'The Whirlwind' is probably the most complete and best ever turned out.

"We are decidedly enthusiastic over serials, but not more so than over our features and short subjects. Through the growing popularity of subjects of two reels we have had to install a short subject department, composed of men whose experience and knowledge make them expert guiding posts for the exhibitor.

Many Book Features and Flynn Series.

"The William J. Flynn series, featuring Herbert Rawlinson, is taking the country by storm, setting a precedent in the short subject field by causing exhibitors to write letters of commendation to Republic headquarters. The first one of the series to be released this month is 'The Phantom Butler,' on April 15. It is the sixth of the eight pictures made from actual incidents in the life of Chief William J. Flynn. On April 27, 'The Kalda Ruby' is scheduled. The final one of the series, 'The Fake,' will follow in May.

"Feature subjects which are now booking are: 'When Bearcat Went Dry,' 'Romany, Where Love Runs Wild,' 'The Amazing Woman,' 'The Blue Pearl,' 'Trilby,' 'The Girl of the Sea,' 'Mothers of Men,' 'The One Way Trail,' 'The Gift Supreme,' 'The Great Shadow,' the twelve Chaplin reissues and five of the Flynn series. Kinograms, issued twice weekly, pursues the even tenor of its way as one of the best edited news weeklies of the times."

Cosmopolitan Takes Over Estee Plant.

The Estee studio in West 125th street, New York, has been taken over by Cosmopolitan Productions for use in conjunction with its own big studio in 127th street and Second avenue. Owing to the expansion of the company's activities, the smaller studio has been acquired to take care of small sets while the big studio will be used for the spectacular sets which are a feature of several forthcoming Cosmopolitan Productions.

Grace Darling Is Star in King Picture.

Grace Darling, not June Caprice, as previously announced to the trade, will be the star in "The Hidden Path," Burton King's second independent production, which will be begun shortly. Rod La Rocque has been engaged by Mr. King for the leading male role.

"The Hidden Path" is an original by Lawrence McClosky, who wrote the screen adaptation of "The Road to Arcady," Mr. King's first feature under his own banner. Lloyd Lonergan, the well-known scenarioist, wrote the continuity.

He's a Caveman Dressed in the Latest Fashions.

Eugene O'Brien can't believe himself when he looks at Arthur Houseman. Robert Ellis, who is directing Selznick's "A Fool and His Money," also marvels at the clubman's weapon.

Equity Picture Opens Simultaneously.

Equity Pictures Special production, "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives" starring House Peters, opened at the Metropolitan and Knickerbocker theatres, Washington, D. C., for week beginning Sunday, April 4, appearing simultaneously in both theatres on the same day. Both theatres were packed to capacity at all performances of the day, and all existing records of both theatres were broken in point of paid admissions and attendance. The picture will be shown in Crandall's entire circuit of theatres.

Initial Selznick News Reel

Contains Live Wire Items

ON April 4 the Selznick News made its initial bow. Reports indicate that it established itself firmly in all sections of the country, creating widespread interest.

Selznick News is edited to contain interesting live wire items that are of international importance. For instance, the great tornado that recently swept and devastated thousands of homes in the South and Middle West is contained in the news.

Political magnates play a part in the reel. Ex-President William Howard Taft, Nathan Strauss and Senators Freylinghuyzen and Hitchcock are seen playing golf at Augusta, Ga. President Wilson's summer White House, at Woods Hole, Cape Cod, Mass., which is to be occupied by the presidential family and staff beginning June 15, is also shown.

As a light touch an appropriate thought for the Easter season is shown in a brief incidental bit of Easter lilies in bloom, followed by a basket of fuzzy pups.

A Chinese funeral and its attendant ceremonies, Miss Josephine Van Til, a Dutch trained nurse and wartime comrade of Edith Cavell, a sporting Parson and why he is famous—all these and a little more sugared with deft touches of humor give an insight to the contents of Selznick News.

American Gets Out Posters That Tell a Story on Russell's Comedy, "Slam Bang Jim"

THE billboard appeal of "Slam-Bang Jim" has been strengthened to the limit in the five posters which are being used by the Pathe Exchange for the American Film Company. The action in "Slam-Bang Jim" swings from the haunts of New York's fashionable set to the wilds of Arizona, and the posters have been selected to bring out this blend of eastern and western atmosphere.

The one-sheet portrays the banged-up bridegroom, in his disheveled evening dress, being shown the door by his almost-father-in-law when he arrives for the wedding hours after the guests have been dismissed and the affair called off. This poster at once strikes the note of zippy comedy to which the whole picture is tuned. It is a perfect character study of Bill Russell as poor Slam-Bang Jim, full of his unuttered excuses, and Harvey Clark as Papa Manning, full of dignity and indignation. Both figures will cut out to excellent advantage.

One three-sheet emphasizes the romantic element, showing the bride and her several pretty, fluffy bridesmaids, with the girl's anxious papa interrupting to tell what he thinks of the missing bridegroom.

The second three-sheet is western in its setting and costuming—the cave scene, showing Slam Bang Jim chuckling with boyish glee over the clever fashion in which his bandit double has put it over on

Educational Makes Rapid But Careful Selection of Exchange Representatives

ACTIVITIES of Educational Films Corporation during the past fortnight are partially represented by the signing of contracts involving the expenditure of more than $1,000,000, according to an announcement made by the company.

Arrangements are progressing with all the rapidity consistent with careful selection of representatives for opening of Educational exchanges in principal centers. These will be controlled directly by the company and will handle only short subjects.

During the week contracts were signed with some of the most important exhibitor interests in the country for the establishment of exchanges. Several of the largest centers await only announcement of locations of the offices; negotiations are near the signature point with several others.

While Educational will maintain the controlling interest in each exchange, it is adopting a co-operative policy whereby men of high standing are interested in their ownership. In every case these are men who have large exhibitor interests and who have been led to become associated with the company because of their knowledge of the high quality of Educational's product.

Three Features of New Policy.

"We believe," said E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager, "that our new policy will bring about the three things necessary for the ideal exchange system; first, the exchange will handle nothing but short subjects, enabling a specialization in this product that is not possible with exchanges handling the features as well. Second, we will be able to exert direct control of the exchanges and provide sales' arrangements and exploitation aids that will be of direct aid to the exhibitor. Third, the management of the exchange will have financial interest in its earnings and in its permanency and therefore there will be every urge for fair business dealings, the fullest co-operation with the exhibitor and the creation of a volume of business that is bound to have its reflex in the quality of product.

"We are offering local interests participation in individual exchanges up to 49 per cent. of their capital stock. We are making no charge for 'franchises,' good will or any other joker. The arrangement is simply that we put in 51 per cent. of the capital and the local interests 49 per cent. and the profits are divided accordingly."

his father-in-law and the sheriff. More good cutouts.

The six-sheet plays up the western scenery effectively. The three bandits are shown under the crooked tree, against a wonderful background of rugged mountains. The star is in the center, pointing off into the distance; the poses of Bull Montana and the other man indicate a strained attention that makes one wonder what they are looking at.

At five minutes to one on Easter Sunday morning just as the proverbial Easter rabbits were scampering around in thousands of houses, preparing to color the various Easter eggs that later in the day would gladden the hearts of the children, a loud flapping of wings was heard in the domicile of Rudolph C. Kneuer, 479 Onerdonk avenue, Ridgewood, Brooklyn, and to everybody's surprise a large boisterous stork flapped his way into the midst of the Kneuer family and quickly departed after leaving a chubby, black-haired, blue-eyed, nine-pound boy.

Exhibitors Praise "Six Feet Four."

"Some picture! The theatre was packed before we started running 'Six Feet Four' and we turned away twice as many," was the terse comment of Stephen P. Ziadic, of the Derby Theatre, Derby, Conn. "A splendid picture and should get a good house anywhere," is the verdict of the manager of the Mystic, of Marmarth, N. D. J. C. Herron, manager of the Minerva, of Pittsburgh, expresses himself in the highest terms, and Fred McCoy, of Liberty Theatre, Ft. Scott, Kansas, says "Six Feet Four" is the best picture William Russell ever made.

"April Folly" Goes Big at Capitol During Holy Week

DESPITE the fact that it was Holy Week which, as every showman knows, is the bugaboo of the show business, Cosmopolitan Productions' "April Folly," starring Marion Davies, outdid all expectations at the Capitol Theatre, New York, the week of March 28.

Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol, the world's largest theatre, is not given to praising any of the pictures that play his house, but the record set by "April Folly" was so gratifying that he sent Cosmopolitan Productions the following letter:

"At the end of the week of Marion Davies in 'April Folly,' the first of your productions which we have exhibited at the Capitol, I want to thank you for the splendid co-operation you have given us and for the magnificent box office result.

"As you know, this is Holy Week and we had every reason to anticipate the customary decrease in gross receipts, due to the Lenten observance, but it may gratify you to know that our receipts for this week, instead of showing a decrease, have shown a very material increase."

"April Folly's" remarkable box office pull during a week when slow business is the general rule was due to a combination of circumstances. The picture in itself is meritorious enough to recommend it to the fans, but the fact that its star is Marion Davies and its author is Cynthia Stockley, aided by an unusual advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign, was too much for any Lenten hindrance and it went over the top big at the Capitol.

Title of Owen Moore's Next.

Owen Moore's fourth Selznick Pictures production will be "Love Among the Chickens," and not "Stop That Man," as announced last week.

"Love Among the Chickens" is reported in the course of production at the Selznick west coast studios under the direction of Wesley Ruggles. The story was written by Pelham Grenville Wodehouse.

"Stop That Man" is announced as Mr. Moore's fifth Selznick production which will be produced at the Selznick Eastern studios.

Rubin Visits Metro Coast Studios.

J. Robert Rubin, secretary and general counsel of Metro Pictures Corporation, is in Los Angeles on his first visit to California. His wife, son and baby are with him. Mr. Rubin will be in town ten days.

Combination of Author, Director and Cast Provides Realism in "Treasure Island"

SELDOM has a happier combination of author, director and cast joined in the production of a motion picture than in "Treasure Island," Maurice Tourneur's Paramount-Artcraft super-special which was released April 4. The production is founded on the well-known adventure story from the pen of Robert Louis Stevenson, and working under the direction of Maurice Tourneur the cast includes such film celebrities as Shirley Mason, Lon Chaney and Charles Ogle.

The part of Jim Hawkins, the young English lad who finds himself cast upon the high seas of adventure is taken by Shirley Mason, who measures a little less than five feet. The painstaking casting done by Maurice Tourneur has resulted in the roughest crew of pirates who ever sailed in a motion picture caravel. Charles Ogle as one-legged Long John Silver plays the leading heavy.

Lon Chaney in Role of Thug.

Another character actor who comes to the fore in "Treasure Island" is Lon Chaney, who will be remembered for his splendid acting as the Frog in George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man" and as Ricardo, the stiletto artist, in the Maurice Tourneur production of Joseph Conrad's novel, "Victory!" In "Treasure Island" Chaney plays the role of the old cutthroat, Pew, in the first reel of the picture, and later appears as the pirate, Merry. Bull Montana, Al Filson, Wilton Taylor and Joseph Singleton are the other pirates who keep the spirit of Jolly Roger flying in this picture.

Splendid photographic effects bear out the thrills of the story and intensify its climaxes. One of the most dramatic moments of the picture is the cutlass duel between Captain Bones and Black Dog, when the pair make the sparks fly in old-time pirate style. The scene has a no less startling sequel when Captain Bones is found murdered shortly after with an ugly dirk sticking in his back.

The almost ghost-like re-appearance of old Ben Gunn on the apparently deserted island provides another "thriller" when he calls from the tree tops to scare away the treasure seekers. Mad with fright they run helter skelter in every direction, after which the old man, his face covered with years-old whiskers, descends from his perch in the trees. The final climax comes in the struggle with the pirates amid the ghostlike setting of underground caverns bearing visible traces of former habitation.

Famous Players Studio Employees to Give Ball

FOR a long time, J. N. Naulty, general manager of the eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been considering the possibilities of establishing an association to aid the studio employees when in need. As a means to raise the necessary funds an association was formed to give a ball, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the formation of this beneficial association. The organization in charge of the ball, which is known as the Eastern Studios Ball Association, is headed by J. N. Naulty as president, Gardner Hunting as vice-president, M. Healy, treasurer and James Hood MacFarland, secretary.

The Commodore Hotel ballroom has been engaged for Wednesday, April 28, and committees to handle the arrangements have been formed. This is the first time the men of the studio have staged a real ball, charging admission.

The plans now under consideration are for vaudeville to occupy the evening between the time the doors open at 8:30 until 10 o'clock, at which time dancing will begin and last until twelve. The grand march will be at twelve and after the grand march—more dancing. A buffet supper will be served.

The souvenir of the evening will be a program, the front cover of which will be done in colors. Photographs of the stars, done in sepia, with a perforated edge, so that they may be removed for decorative purposes, will be part of the program.

Two bands of twenty pieces each have been engaged to supply the music for the entertainment and dancing.

Edward Cecil to Be "Heavy" in Bert Lytell's Next Film

EDWARD CECIL will play the part of the East Indian rajah in "The Temple of Dawn," Bert Lytell's next Metro special production, upon which camera work has started at the Metro studios in Hollywood. This role is one of the most important supporting parts in the cast surrounding the young star. The rajah is the villain, or "heavy" character in the story.

Mr. Cecil was selected from a number of character actors, all of whom submitted to screen tests. Mr. Cecil has been in pictures many years, having started with the Majestic-Reliance Company. During the past year he has played in "The Wildcat of Paris," with Priscilla Dean; "The Girl of Bohemia," with Peggy Hyland; "The Danger Zone," with Madlaine Traverse, as well as being featured by Universal in "After the War" and several other productions.

"The Temple of Dawn," which follows "The Right of Way" and "Alias Jimmy Valentine" in Bert Lytell's starring schedule, is an adaptation of I. A. R. Wylie's powerful novel of East Indian life put into continuity form by Arthur J. Zellner. Dallas M. Fitzgerald is the director. Mr. Lytell has the role of Leigh Dering, a young British officer who accomplishes his regeneration after he has sunk to degradation and becomes an outcast among the poor white population of India.

Vivian Martin Returns from Florida.

Vivian Martin Pictures, Inc., of which Managing Director Edward Bowes, of the Capitol Theatre, New York, is the president, announces the return of Miss Martin and her supporting cast from Tampa, Fla., where all of the exterior scenes of the organization's first picture were completed. At the same time it was made known that the company has leased the Hal Benedict studios at College Point, L. I., and has entered upon the work of filming all interior scenes there.

For the picture showmen in the small town Moving Picture World is especially compiled and edited. "The Tradepaper of Features" serves its subscribers with features that sell tickets and make this a better business.

SIMPLE SOULS

Harold Lloyd's Sixth Comedy Will Be "An Eastern Westerner," a Keen Satire

EASTERN WESTERNER," a keen, ultra-humorous satire of a popular type of motion picture drama, will be Harold Lloyd's $100,000 two-reel comedy, produced by the Rolin Film Company for distribution by Pathe.

With the completion of this production and its issue on May 2, Lloyd will have finished his first series of two reel comedies for Pathe, and will have achieved a record that few other comedians in motion pictures can equal. First introduced to the public as the star of multiple reel features in "Bumping Into Broadway" little more than six months ago, Lloyd has contributed five triumphant comedies to exhibitors.

With each production he has become a greater box office drawing card and with his last release, "Haunted Spooks," he attained his greatest success. From every section of the country, exhibitors are heaping praise upon Lloyd for his work in this picture, and in some quarters it has been hailed as the best and most wholesome comedy ever seen on the screen.

Has Advantage of New Studio.

When Lloyd begins work on his second series of six special comedies for Pathe, he will have a much greater advantage than was his when he first started the filming of "Bumping Into Broadway," which inaugurated his two reelers. In addition to the experience and knowledge of what exhibitor and public want gained during the production of the initial series, Lloyd will enter work on the second six in the new Rolin studio, which has just been completed at Culver City at a cost of approximately $200,000.

In order to maintain the high standard of excellence set by his first product, Lloyd needed greater studio facilities, because the lavishness of production has increased with each picture. In the making of an "Eastern Westerner," as with other of the Lloyd attractions, the settings rival those used in the biggest feature pictures. An entire western town was erected solely for the filming of the sixth Lloyd and several hundred "extras" were engaged for the big scenes.

Praise for "Haunted Spooks."

"Haunted Spooks," after its reception at the Strand Theatre, which led Managing Director Jack Eaton to call it the "greatest comedy of the year," has repeated this reception throughout the country. Critics in every key city where the latest Lloyd comedy has been shown were unanimous in their opinion that Lloyd has become the leader in his field of comedy endeavor and that "Haunted Spooks" represents the cleverest and cleanest mirth-maker seen on the screen.

Assured that every exhibitor now playing the two-reel Lloyds will unhesitatingly contract for the next series of six comedies, the Pathe sales department looks for a tremendous increase in business with the issue of the first of the second group of Lloyds.

Charles Ray Fosters Spirit of Good Will, Says Britisher

DECLARING that the nations of the world are learning to know and sympathize with each other through the medium of the screen, W. G. Faulkner, personal representative of Lord Northcliffe, has hailed Charles Ray as a typical American character and has said that his screen studies of Americanism are doing a great deal to establish a better understanding of this country among the rank and file of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Faulkner, who is studying the production of motion pictures in this country, has just paid a visit to the new Ray studios in Los Angeles. As the personal emissary of Lord Northcliffe, the most powerful newspaper publisher in the British Isles, Mr. Faulkner expressed his views on the desirability of closer relationship between American and English film interests.

In an interchange of views with the First National star, Mr. Faulkner stated his belief that the expansion of films in every corner of the world would eventually prove to be a powerful factor in the establishment of mutual understanding among the various nationalities. An example of this trend was evidenced, according to the English observer, in the reception by British audiences of the pictures of Charles Ray, who makes entirely sympathetic and real the character of honest American manhood.

Mr. Ray is attaining a rapid popularity in the British Isles, declared Mr. Faulkner, and his studies of the country boy have broken through the reserve of English audiences, who have come to look upon him as a typically American personality, with all the rough genuineness of the pioneer and the tender sympathies of the man close to nature.

"The Honey Bee" Given Long Runs by Showmen

YOU won't be stung if you see 'The Honey Bee' at the Alhambra," advertised the manager of that theatre for his seven-day showing at Ogden, Utah, using the large cut from the colored insert in the trade journals for his quarter page in one of Ogden's dailies, in place of the material provided in the campaign book.

Many other exhibitors are eagerly booking Mme. Marguerita Sylva in "The Honey Bee" for first runs and extended showings. The Rivoli Theatre at Portland, Ore., signed a contract for a week; the Alcazar of Chicago, one week; the Boston Theatre of Boston, one week; and other contracts for several days, just received, are the Amphion at Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Casino at Chester, Pa.; the Mutual Theatre Company of Marion, Ind.; the Liberty Theatre of Springfield, Ohio; Proctor's at Elizabeth, N. J.; the South Bend Auditorium and the D. V. Picker Enterprises of New York.

William Farnum Completes "The Orphan" on the Coast

WILLIAM FARNUM, under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards, has completed the first of his Fox productions to be made since his arrival on the Pacific Coast.

"The Orphan," probably the most popular of the books written by Clarence E. Mulford, is the basis of the picture. "The Orphan" is described by the producer's representatives as a most powerful western novel from the pen of this author, whose fame was originally built upon the series of "Bar-20 Ranch" stories, in which that lovable character, Hopalong Cassidy, appeared.

Mulford has written many westerns. In each he set a distinctive series of incidents and tense situations. In "The Orphan" the author has given William Farnum a vehicle in which there is punch after punch.

fold to play opposite Farnum in this, his first Western for the season of 1920. Miss Lovely plays the part of Helen Shields, sister of the sheriff and the cause of all the fun and trouble in the story.

In addition to the principals the cast includes Henry J. Herbert, Earl Crains, G. Raymond Nye, George Nichols, Harry Devere, Al Fremont, Olive White and Carrie Clarke Ward.

The Mulford novel was adapted by Roy Somerville and is scheduled for release on the Farnum series during April.

Famous Players Editorial Department Well Equipped

THE new Famous Players-Lasky studio, now nearing completion at Long Island City, L. I., will be able to boast one of the most efficiently organized editorial departments in the country. Gardner Hunting, eastern production editor, outlined the company's plans recently.

"For some time past," Mr. Hunting said, "the task of editing our production has been surrounded by difficulties. Owing to the crowded studio conditions and the consequent lack of office space, we have hitherto been compelled to distribute the various units of our department around in our different studios, which, in spite of the best of co-operation, has not always had the tendency to produce entirely satisfactory results.

"In our new plant, all undesirable features will be eliminated, for we shall all be housed under one roof. We are planning to install every device for the comfort and convenience of our employees, as well as for increased efficiency in production. Adjoining the main office of our department will be the title printing and photographing rooms and cutting room, which will be equipped with the best of everything to facilitate speed and precision. The staff writers will have separate rooms of their own. The projection room will also be included in our departmental group of offices.

"We are looking forward to moving into our new quarters with a great deal of satisfaction," he concluded, "for at last we feel that we will be able to work at our own rate of speed, unhampered by unfavorable and annoying conditions."

Leading New York Theatres Hasten to Book Second Series of Lloyd Comedies

HAROLD LLOYD'S rise to the front rank of screen comedians is reflected in the flying start made in the booking of his second series of two-reel comedies distributed by Pathe. The young comedian is now working on the last of his first series of six multiple reelers and then will begin his new series in the new $200,000 studio of the Rolin Film Company.

Two of Broadway's biggest houses of entertainment, the Strand and Capitol, will play the new Lloyds day and date. The Pathe star is new to the Capitol patrons, but his entire first series has been featured and widely exploited by Managing Director Jack Eaton, of the Strand. It was only after spirited bidding that the Capitol was enabled to land Lloyd. Manager Edward Bowes was determined to get him and paid the highest price he ever gave for a comedy series.

Bigger Results When Campaign Starts.

No concerted effort has been made by the New York branch or any other office of Pathe Exchange, Inc., to book the second Lloyd series, yet virtually every important theatre in the metropolitan district has signed for the new comedies. The success that greeted Lloyd's first two-reelers was so great that exhibitors have brooked no delay in tying him up for the second series. The new comedies will be played over the entire Marcus Loew circuit in the metropolitan area, and in five of B. S. Moss' leading houses.

The Strand Theatre, in Brooklyn, has taken the series and will have an exclusive showing of each one.

Virtually 100 days' booking is represented in this one aggregation alone. It is expected by Pathe that when the New York exchange opens a vigorous campaign on Lloyd that double the number of day books recorded on the first series will be registered by the local office.

Prisoners See "Peddler of Lies."

"The Peddler of Lies," a Universal picture with Frank Mayo and Ora Carew and dealing with the crooks and the Secret Service, was shown at Sing Sing Prison recently. It was heartily applauded.

"The Sing Sing Bulletin" published by inmates of the institution reviewed the pictures as follows:

"Fast action, fine photography, including some of the very finest marine scenes we have ever seen filmed, beautiful settings and an interesting story. A 'crook' play always seems to hold its audience and when it is so well done as this it is sure of success."

Poli Circuit to Show Four Current Hodgkinson Releases

MARX S. NATHAN, Hodgkinson New York manager, has just completed arrangements with R. C. Miller, booking manager for S. Z. Poli's chain of Connecticut houses, whereby four of the current Hodgkinson releases will be given immediate presentation in swift succession on the circuit, including the Poli theatres in Hartford, Bridgeport, New Haven and Waterbury.

The productions selected by Mr. Miller are Benj. B. Hampton's Emerson Hough and Zane Grey pictures, "The Sagebrusher" and "Desert Gold," respectively; "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," J. Parker Read, Jr.'s, Louise Glaum production, and Joseph Levering's vehicle, "His Temporary Wife," featuring Rubye De Remer, Edmund Breese and Mary Boland.

The New York office turned in an excellent week's business on "His Temporary Wife" and also made a splendid showing on "Desert Gold" sales.

Educational Receives Posters.

The Educational Films Corporation has received from the lithographers the first of the posters which are to be supplied with each comedy release, as a part of the company's policy of affording the exhibitor the same degree of exploitation aids with the short subject as he gets with the feature.

"Four Times Foiled," the first of the Chester-Educational comedies, is the subject covered with the first supply of paper. Two one-sheets and two three-sheets are supplied. These are strikingly colored, but the content is limited to actual scenes from the production, the poster department having been given strict orders by Vice-President and General Manager E. W. Hammons that there must be no exaggeration or misstatement. These were all made from actual enlargements from the film itself.

National Offers Feature with Billy Rhodes as Star

THE latest feature picture announced for release by National Film Corporation of America is "Nobody's Girl" starring Billy Rhodes. It will be offered on the state right market. The story deals with a tiny girl who lands on a desolate island from a shipwreck. She is found by smugglers, mistreated, and finally makes her escape in a rowboat. She is picked up by an aviator and government agents annihilate the band. A love affair springs up and she becomes somebody's sweetheart.

Joe Brandt, director general of National, predicts great popularity for this picture, particularly with the younger generation, as he is convinced that the trend in pictures is turning toward "little girl" stories. The picture is said to be punctuated with exciting moments and dramatic situations; also to have fine scenic effects and beautiful settings.

Francis Grandon, who directed five other Billie Rhodes pictures for National, is the director. Prominent in the cast are Melbourne McDowell, Mary Alden and Lloyd Bacon.

Prisoners See "The Gay Old Dog."

Bess Gearhart Morrison, who plays the leading female role in the latest Hobart Henley production, "The Miracle of Money," addressed the inmates of the Nebraska State Penitentiary at Lincoln, Neb., at a recent presentation of "The Gay Old Dog," and explained to them the making of a great feature picture from the writing of the scenario to the presentation before the public. Many of the men had never seen a motion picture except within prison walls and had not the remotest idea of how they were made until they heard Miss Morrison's talk.

Olive Thomas Company Off to Florida.

In presenting Olive Thomas in her forthcoming starring vehicle, "The Flapper," Myron Selznick of the Selznick Pictures Corporation, is credited with sparing no end of time or expense in injecting the proper atmosphere into the production. Further reports state that Miss Thomas and her director, F. Alan Grosland, and the supporting company, have left for Florida to imbue the production with realistic scenes.

This is the picture in which the much heralded ability of Miss Thomas as a ski artist will come to view. The story was written by Frances Marion.

Charles Gay Injured by Lion.

The filming of the Century Lion Comedies is fraught with more danger than generally is supposed. Recently Charlet Gay, the noted lion tamer engaged by the Century Comedy Company, was badly injured during the filming of a scene from "Harem Lions" at Hollywood. Although the set was enclosed by a wire netting, the lion broke through, then turned upon and attacked Gay when the trainer tried to stop him. Gay's right leg was badly lacerated. It will be several weeks before he will be able to return to the studios.

Cummings and Booker in Metro Play.

Irving Cummings and Beulah Booker have been selected to play important parts in the screen production of "The New Henrietta," the first Winchell Smith picture, upon which work will soon start at the Metro studios in Hollywood. Irving Cummings has just completed a contract with Lasky, which called for nine pictures. Miss Booker recently completed a picture with Robert Anderson at Universal.

"Rio Grande" Is Booked by Border Towns in Advance

THE Edwin Carewe production of Augustus Thomas's stage play, "Rio Grande," released by Pathe is exciting the greatest interest in cities and towns along the Mexican border, and, in the last week, one month before the release date, many theatres have wired for early dates on the production. The picture involved the use of several hundred cowboys and Texas rangers.

Among the houses that have already contracted for the picture are The Amuse-U of Las Cruces, New Mexico; the People's Theatre, of Port Arthur, Texas, and the Jewel and People's theatres, of Beaumont, Texas. Others have wired for contracts and will close in the next week. Many newspapers have commented on the filming of Mr. Thomas's story, and the public of the area so intimately concerned in the border situation are intensely interested in the production.

The story clearly reveals the narrowness and prejudice responsible for the almost perpetual feeling and misunderstanding between Mexico and the United States. It is cleverly exposed in all its folly and, in a constructive way, the author points out the necessity for education calculated to destroy prejudice and create permanent friendship between the United States and Mexico.

Now It's "Dollars and Sense."

The title of Octavus Roy Cohen's first story, written for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has been changed from "Two Cents Worth of Humanity" to "Dollars and Sense." Madge Kennedy is starred in this picture which Harry Beaumont directed. It presents the experiences of a plucky girl who dreams of a great future on the stage, but meanwhile has considerable difficulty in earning a living. The situations developed by Mr. Cohen are novel and interesting. Included in the supporting cast are Richard Tucker, Willard Louis and Florence Deshon.

Bracken to Direct Anita Stewart.

Bertram Bracken has been engaged by Louis B. Mayer to direct Anita Stewart in her next First National production, title of which has not yet been announced. Miss Stewart has just finished playing in "The Yellow Typhoon" and is at present taking a rest.

Mr. Bracken goes to the Mayer lot from the Selig studio where he directed "The Mask," a dramatic story by Arthur Hornblow. Another story filmed under his direction is "The Confession," starring Henry Walthall, now being released.

Mary Beaton in Cast of "Clothes."

Summoned to New York by Maxwell Karger in his all-star production of the Hopwood-Pollock drama, "Clothes," Mary Beaton has left Metro's West Coast studios for the East.

Metro recently purchased screen rights to the dramatic comedy of society life by Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock and announced that it would be filmed under Maxwell Karger's supervision.

Metro Acquires Dallas Exchange from Hulsey and Puts L. Bickel in Charge

THE Metro Pictures Corporation has come into full ownership of the Dallas exchange formerly controlled by the E. H. Hulsey interests. Official announcement is made by the company of the completion of all negotiations by which Metro takes over this most important exchange, that reaches virtually the entire southwestern motion picture territory.

Absorption of the Dallas exchange, following Metro's purchase of its New Jersey exchange from Herman Jans about a fortnight ago, leaves only two offices among those handling Metro pictures in the United States still under independent management. These are in Boston and Philadelphia.

Metro's southern district manager is L. Dent. He makes his headquarters in the Dallas office. With the acquisition of the exchange, Metro plans to place L. Bickel again in charge as branch manager. Mr. Bickel for a long time held that position. A few months ago he resigned and was succeeded by J. B. Dugger. The present offices of the exchange at 1924 Main street will be retained for the time being at least.

District Manager Dent has supervision over the extensive territory embracing Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. This rich field is now open as never before to Metro pictures and the purchase of the exchange is in line with Metro's policy of expansion in every direction. Systematic absorption of its exchanges has been done over a period of a couple of years, until now only two out of a total of twenty-six exchanges remain outside the Metro fold.

Sam Morris Tells How His Exploitation Aided Showmen

TWO more instances in which the Selznick exploitation department has scored heavily are revealed by Sam E. Morris, general manager of Select Pictures, who has received a telegram from George J. Schade, of the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, congratulating him on the efficiency of Selznick exploitation service.

Mr. Schade is a prominent Ohio exhibitor whose emporium is noted for showing nothing but quality pictures. In his telegram to Mr. Morris he says: "Broke house records with 'Out Yonder' with style show feature conducted by Mr. Carrier, and other novelties." Mr. Carrier is Selznick exploitation man.

On top of this telegram Mr. Morris made known the contents of another from the Rivoli Theatre, Denver. The Rivoli management reports hanging out the S. R. O. sign all day during the showing of Eugene O'Brien in "His Wife's Money." The telegram reads, in part: "Twenty-five hundred heralds and 3,000 copies special edition Denver Express were dropped over city from airplane. Streets crowded with people looking for coupons. O'Brien in 'His Wife's Money' opened to capacity. Standing room only all day. Day's receipts nearly double of opening day on 'Pollyanna' and several hundred dollars ahead of Farnum last week."

Miss Minter Appears on Stage.

Mary Miles Minter and her sister, Margaret Shelby, recently made a most successful stage appearance at the Little Theatre in Los Angeles. They were leading persons in the cast of "Entre Nous," one of a series of one-act playlets put on by amateur players in that city.

They are known as the "Amateur Players," and constitute one of the most popular and exclusive society organizations in the city. Rehearsals for "Entre Nous" were held in the evening, as Miss Minter's days are filled with work on her latest Realart production.

Increasing Merit of Pathe's Features Reflected in Three Months' Business

WHILE Pathe's feature business during the first three months of this year has been booming at a rate to carry the total figures far and away beyond the best total for any three months in 1919, a consistent effort has been made by officials of the great releasing organization to improve the merit of its product. The success attending these efforts has been very marked, and included in the January, February and March releases of Pathe have been some most successful productions, namely "Other Men's Shoes," "My Husband's Other Wife," "Fighting Cressy," "Smoldering Embers," "Tarnished Reputations" and "The Deadlier Sex."

During March, "Brunet Anniversary Month" in the annals of Pathe, when all feature sales and collections of a similar period were shattered, the releases were "In Walked Mary," starring June Caprice; "Tarnished Reputations," with Dolores Cassinelli, and "The Deadlier Sex," with Blanche Sweet's name billed as the big attraction. Each one of these productions has been selling at a rate calculated to far exceed the quotas set for them by Pathe.

"Other Men's Shoes" a Big Success.

In the previous month, "Other Men's Shoes" was the distinguished performer in a trio of pictures rated among the finest Pathe has ever released. In the first month of its existence the Big Edgar Lewis production sent into the discard booking records established by "The Thirteenth Chair" and "Common Clay," which had stood at the top of all Pathe feature business.

During February, in addition to "Other Men's Shoes" there was also released "Smoldering Embers," called by exhibitors and critics the best picture ever produced by Frank Keenan, with the exception of "The World Aflame." Another issue was J. Stuart Blackton's "Respectable by Proxy," starring Robert Gordon and Sylvis Breamer, ranking next to "My Husband's Other Wife" in the list of Blackton triumphs.

Three Offered for April.

Incidentally the latter production inaugurated the year for Pathe, being the first feature release in January. It recalled to exhibitors some of the great productions made in the past by Commodore Blackton, and did, and is still doing, a business in proportions exceeding Pathe's expectations by many thousands.

During the first month, "Fighting Cressy" and "The Web of Deceit," respectively starring Blanche Sweet and Dolores Cassinelli, were other releases, and they, too, proved not only their class, but became established with the best box office attractions of the period.

Maintaining the excellence of product distributed during the first three months, Pathe offers during April three more above the average attractions—"Lifting Shadows," a Leonce Perret production starring Emmy Wehlen; "The Blood Barrier," a Blackton Melodrama starring Sylvia Breamer and Robert Gordon, and "Rio Grande," Edwin Carewe's first independent feature, based upon Augustus Thomas' famous stage play of the same name.

Realart's Selling Drive on Wanda Hawley Results in Big Business on Her Productions

THE unique selling campaign conducted by the field forces of Realart Pictures Corporation in behalf of Wanda Hawley's first production resulted in the shape of contracts from exhibitors and circuits in such a flood that the machinery to approve and inspect them has been swamped.

Southern Enterprise, Inc., has closed for "Miss Hobbs" for its three "key city" houses, and the remainder of its large circuit. In a letter to Realart the company calls Miss Hawley "one of the film's fairest and say they waived their customary rule of seeing a picture in advance of booking in her favor.

Sam Harding, of the Liberty Theatre in Kansas City, Mo., wrote to the company that "I am wasting no time, taking no chances, but instead have signed contract on 'Miss Hobbs.'"

W. D. Dineen, general manager of the H. C. Moir Theatrical Enterprises, wrote that he knew "Realart had picked a winner" when they signed Miss Hawley, and speaking of the proposition under which her first picture was offered said, "I have never heard of its equal in the history of the industry."

The Comerford Circuit in Pennsylvania and the Chamberlain Circuit have booked "Miss Hobbs" among others, according to advices from Jay Emanuel, Realart's manager in Philadelphia. Tom Moore has taken a contract for the picture for the Rialto Theatre in Washington, and a flood of contracts arrived from the Boston office, which officials of the home office were unable to examine this week.

The campaign conducted by Realart which produced these extraordinary results were based on theory that the producers should assume the risk in introducing a new star. By the arrangement the exhibitor was offered only the first picture and not a series, as is usually done.

If the first picture was a success and the exhibitor wanted a series, he was told that he would be given the chance to obtain it after the showing. Furthermore the picture was offered first to exhibitors holding the contracts for the Realart star series and no attempt was made to stir up competitive business.

Cosmopolitan Gets Curwood Stories.

Cosmopolitan Productions has added another famous author to its staff of well known writers. James Oliver Curwood has signed his name to the dotted line, thus giving Cosmopolitan Productions exclusive motion picture rights to any and all of his stories published in Cosmopolitan, Hearst's, Good Housekeeping and Harper's Bazaar. By this arrangement several of the best Curwood stories will be pictured by Cosmopolitan Productions. Arrangements are now being made for the scenarioizing of the first Curwood story.

All-Star Metro Cast for

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath"

PRODUCTION of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," a de luxe picturization of the stage farce by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, has been begun at the Metro studios in Hollywood. This special feature, with an all-star cast headed by Ruth Stonehouse and Eugene Pallette, will be a forthcoming Loew-Metro release and constitute still another link in the company's chain of noted plays by noted authors.

In the selection of the cast for "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," great care was exercised by Metro officials to obtain precisely the types necessary to portray the various roles. Toward this end the choice of Miss Stonehouse for the role of Polly Hathaway, the sprightly society reporter who becomes a "wild woman" was considered ideal. This is the part created in the stage production by Florence Moore, when the comedy made its hit in New York a few seasons back.

Eugene Pallette will play opposite Miss Stonehouse in the part of Reggie Irving, the harmless young husband, on account of his pronounced abilities as a farceur.

The part of Angelica, the impressionable young wife of Reggie, will be portrayed by Kathleen Kirkham. Charles H. West has been cast in the role of Jeffrey Haywood, a married friend of Reggie's who is a veritable fire-eater where his wife is concerned. Others in the all-star cast are Helene Sullivan, George Periolat, Dorothy Wallace and Henry Miller, Jr.

Dr. Goodman Is Author of

Georges Carpentier Story

DR. DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN is the author of the original story that Director John G. Adolph is now producing at the Solax studio with Georges Carpentier in the leading role. The production, which is a multiple reel society drama, will be distributed by Robertson-Cole.

Dr. Goodman has just completed "Thoughtless Women" starring Alma Rubens, at present being featured in Cosmopolitan Films. The doctor not only personally produced the picture, but wrote the story as well. It is an intimate domestic drama. The distribution of the subject has not yet been announced.

The doctor is the author of five novels, two of which are "Hagar Revelly" and "The Taker." For the screen he has written fifty original stories.

Telegram Staff Holds Reunion With Semon

Practically the entire staff of the New York Evening Telegram went to the bat strong last week for their old pal, Larry Semon, the Vitagraph comedy king, who used to be a cartoonist on the Telegram. All attended a showing of Larry's new feature comedy, "The Fly Cop," at the Capitol Theatre, which is the largest theatre in the world.

Ben H. Atwell, press representative of the Capitol Theatre, was host of the occasion. It was Mr. Atwell's idea to stage a reunion of Larry and his fellow workers of bygone days.

SIMPLE SOULS

Archainbaud Directing "Marooned Hearts."

Myron Selznick, president of Selznick Pictures Corporation, sponsors for the statement that the filming of "Marooned Hearts," featuring Zena Keefe, Lewis J. Selznick's 1920 star, and Conway Tearle, is well under way. A further statement is to the effect that the first scenes for this production will be taken in Florida.

George Archainbaud is directing. The feature was written by Lewis Allen Browne.

"The Lone Wolf's Daughter" Fast Nears "Sahara's" Mark

PROOF of the popularity and audience-pulling power of Louise Glaum in J. Parker Read, Jr., productions is found in the announcement of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation that "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" is fast nearing the high mark set by the emotional artist's "Sahara," for almost a year one of the reigning successes in the picture market. Within the past week the great volume of business done on "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" has necessitated a second edition of press sheets and other accessories.

Eighty per cent. of the first run houses throughout the country where "Sahara" was shown last fall have either played or are about to present "The Lone Wolf's Daughter." In addition to its own power as an attraction, the fact that it is a sequel to Louis Joseph Vance's "The Lone Wolf" and "False Faces," successes well remembered by exhibitors, assisted in no small measure in winning a spot-booking record on it for a dozen Hodkinson managers in the field.

The Louise Glaum Peacock Kalogram, an exploitation medium that evoked interest in the production at Detroit and other large cities recently, proved a big factor in the successful engagement of "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" at Boyd's Casino Theatre, Chester, Pa., the Morning Republican giving over two columns of its front page to the novel guessing contest for three days of the run at the Casino.

"The River's End" Plays Two Weeks in a 300-Seat Theatre

ANOTHER indication of the drawing power of Marshall Neilan's first independent production, "The River's End," adapted from James Oliver Curwood's famous story, is cited by the Neilan offices in the case of the Waldorf Theatre, Akron, Ohio. This theatre, although seating only 300 persons and in a town of 75,000 persons, was compelled to run the picture two weeks in order to take care of the demand for seats.

Manager Barbian, of the Waldorf, immediately after the run of "The River's End," contracted for the second Neilan production, "Don't Ever Marry," for a two weeks' run. The showing of a picture two weeks in a 300-seat house indicates not only a big attraction, but also unusual showmanship.

Sarah Mason on Metro Scenario Staff.

Sarah Mason has joined the Metro scenario staff to write continuity for Loew-Metro productions. Miss Mason has been in motion picture work for two years. During this time she prepared scripts for a number of successful photodramas as well as writing several original stories.

Miss Mason's entrance into motion pictures came when Douglas Fairbanks saw her in a theatre in Tucson, Ariz., and offered her a position with his company. After six months with Fairbanks Miss Mason went to the Ince studios and wrote continuity under C. Gardner Sullivan.

Selznick Bookings Show Decided Spurt as Salesmen Swap Ideas at Convention

THE sales records and booking sheets of the Select organization show a decided spurt towards an increase, a report from the home office this week states. One Selznick official has said that no one of the managers who is attending the Select convention in New York this week wanted to find himself there without a good record.

Members of the "super" sales force of Sam Sax, in Indianapolis, succeeded in adding twenty-two more towns to the booker's pages in that exchange last week. The Hoosier sales force has been at the head of the list or near it for the past few weeks. Additional prints on all Select and Selznick productions have been ordered for that exchange and the manager is authority for the statement that more will be needed within a short time. William Niles, salesman for the National Picture Theatres, brought in two contracts last week, one from Evansville and the other from Washington, Ind.

The Atlanta office reports an exceptional week and the number of new theatres booking Select productions are increasing.

The New Haven Select office last week reported such an increase in business that new prints were called for and a number of telegrams sent out to assure prompt return of those in the territory.

Manager Ben Beadell, of the Chicago branch, has been appointed to represent the Chicago Film Distributors in the "Chicago Boosters' $4,000,000 Publicity Campaign." A meeting of the theatre managers was called and Mayor William H. Thompson was introduced by Manager Beadell. When the mayor had finished, $20,000 in subscriptions had been made.

In commenting on the increase in bookings Charles Rogers, sales director, said, "The Selznick organization feels confident that its productions are becoming more popular each month because of the fact that the bookings are increasing at the time of the year when a decrease in bookings might be expected. The slack season has started and it is only natural to attribute the increase in bookings to better pictures."

Goldwyn Secures Rights to Books of E. P. Oppenheim and Cynthia Stockley

ADDDED to the already long list of famous authors whose works are being transformed into photoplays by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, are two more names that stand for the best in current fiction both here and in England, E. Phillips Oppenheim and Cynthia Stockley.

Contracts with those two writers were signed last week, giving Goldwyn Pictures Corporation the screen rights to their books for a period of years. Mr. Oppenheim's novels have long held a high place in the "best seller" class and only a few of them have been done in pictures. They are rich in dramatic material of the kind that lends itself particularly well to screen interpretation.

In selecting the most suitable works of the novelist, the Goldwyn company may turn to some of his earlier stories as well as those of a more recent date. During his long career Mr. Oppenheim has been a prolific writer with a seemingly inexhaustible fertility in plot building. His works are marked by fast action and dramatic incident. Among his books published during the last ten years are "The Mischief Maker," "The Way of These Women," "The Amazing Partnership," "The Game of Liberty," "A People's Man," "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," "The Double Traitor."

Although Cynthia Stockley is not quite so well known in America as is Phillips Oppenheim, "Wild Honey," "Poppy," "The Claw" and other works from her pen, published in this country by G. P. Putnam's Sons, have had a large sale. She lived all of her early life in South Africa and most of her books deal with the Free State.

Famous Players-Lasky to Have Its Own Sub-Station in New Long Island Studio

THE electric equipment of a modern studio for the making of motion pictures is keeping pace with the steady improvement to be found in the pictures themselves. Experts have given their time and knowledge to perfect methods of lighting sets. With their Cooper Hewitts, Kliegs, spotlights, floodlights, and later, the Sunlight arc, which reproduces the rays of the sun with such realism that to stand with the face exposed to it for half an hour will produce a sunburn, these men are responsible for many of the recent artistic achievements.

The electrical equipment which is now being installed in the new Long Island City studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is hailed as the last word in modern control, distribution and lighting.

The first departure is the installation of a sub-station in the studio, which will allow 7,600 volts, alternating current, to be received direct from the central station. Special permission had to be obtained before this could be put into effect. Seventy-six hundred-volt synchronous motor-generator sets will apply the direct current for studio lighting. The general lighting and power will be obtained from a step-down transformer connected to the 7,800-volt primaries. The entire plant is automatically controlled.

Many Safety Features.

On account of the life hazard which is involved, safety features of many different kinds have been installed. In the event of a breakdown of a transformer or motor generator it becomes automatically disconnected. All high tension connections are enclosed in a high tension concrete vault two stories high.

A network grounding system, with shafts sunk twenty feet into the ground, has been provided as a precaution against accidental grounding, in case of faulty insulation. The object of this is to dissipate high voltage injury to the operators. In the event of a transformer burning out, it can be disconnected by means of a special switching system which will allow removing any one individually without interfering with the operation of the rest of the plant.

The high tension switchboard is placed flush with the wall separating the generator room from the transformer vault, and is equipped with signal lamps which the operator can see from the opposite side of the room in case of trouble with the apparatus. The direct current generator sets are controlled from a low tension switchboard on the opposite side of the room.

Direct Current Feeder System.

Another departure from convention is to be found in the direct current feeder system for lighting the studio stage. It consists of stacks of bare bus bars, run from the main switchboard in the generator room, up studio walls and across the girder space of the main studio to feed the various switchboards. The bus bar system is thoroughly protected by wire grille where exposed and is supported on special insulators imbedded in the brickwork of the studio walls.

The insulators were designed especially for this building on account of the high capacity and extreme weight of the bus bar system. It is designed to supply 10,000 amperes to the main studio at present, and will be increased to 15,000 amperes. In the feeder system alone it is interesting to note that 20,000 pounds of bare copper is being used.

Remote Control of Stage Lighting.

J. N. Naulty, general manager of the eastern studios, was quick to realize the possibilities of remote control lighting and consequently the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation were the first to inaugurate the remote control system for studio lighting in the East, although others now have systems in operation which embody the same principles as that now being installed.

The feeder system is designed to supply ten overhead remote control switchboards, and arrangements have been made so that the entire studio can be supplied from any one or all switchboards. Each switchboard can be controlled by the cameraman or director from any point on the studio floor by means of a special portable control station which may be hung on a man's belt.

Details of this innovation have not as yet been made public. Remote control, such as outlined above, will eliminate shouting of "Lights" or the more recent blowing of whistles. It means that the lighting of sets can be controlled from any remote point without the necessity of going to the switchboard.

All machinery in the carpenter shop, blacksmith's shop, restaurant and kitchen is operated by individual motor drive using 22-volt, 3 phase induction motors. For the still room, projection rooms, and electricians' shop, direct current will be supplied from either the large generators or small 10-kilowatt motor generator located in generator room.

The entire electrical equipment was designed and is being installed by the E-J Electric Installation Company, pioneers in the electrical equipment of the largest eastern studios.

Chester to Make Pictures for Release via Educational Only

A STATEMENT was furnished the trade press last week by someone who among other things said that C. L. Chester Productions, Inc., stands ready to furnish a travel release to the independent market. This is inaccurate," said Raymond S. Harris, sales manager of the company, this week.

"The Chester name, so long sponsor for Chester Outing Pictures, and recently for Screenies, will continue to be seen exclusively upon those pictures, in the outdoor picture field.

"Education Films Corporation of America has taken over the distribution of both of these releases, and C. L. Chester Productions will be busy enough making them the best releases we have ever produced."

Finishing "The House of Toys."

"The House of Toys" has already been constructed by the American Film Company and is now getting its finishing and decorative touches at the Chicago laboratory. The foundation is found to be excellent, and the superstructure in fine condition. The chief actors in this "House of Toys" are Seena Owen, Pell Trenton, Helen Jerome Eddy, George Hernandez, Henry Barrows, Marian Skinner, Lillian Leighton and Perry Banks.

Ballad Based on "Harvest Moon."

That another of the W. W. Hodkinson releases has been the inspiration for a ballad of considerable appeal is revealed in the announcement by Harry Von Tilzer of his newest song hit, "When the Harvest Moon Is Shining," based on the new Gibraltar picture, Augustus Thomas' "The Harvest Moon," starring Doris Kenyon.

The ballad, dedicated to the star, is sponsored by Mr. Von Tilzer and Andrew B. Sterling, authors of a string of song successes.

Oh, How Happy She Is Again

To be back on the screen with Universal after being on the stage. It's Carmel Myers.

Carmel Myers Signs to Star in Universal Productions

CARMEL MYERS, who ran away from the screen a year ago to enter musical comedy, soon will be seen again in the film world under the Universal banner. She has signed up with Universal for several years, and will be starred by that company.

Miss Myers will do crook society dramas. This will mark a difference from her former work with that film company, which included various kinds of pictures, comedies and otherwise. Her first picture is not chosen yet, but Universal expects to have it ready for her when she reports at Universal City several weeks hence.

Miss Myers recently completed a successful season on Broadway in "The Magic Melody" one of the musical comedy hits of the season. Previous to that she was featured in many Universal Bluebird pictures.

Miss Myers is delighted at the thought of getting back into moving picture work.

Hill Buys Two More Theatres.

Roland Hill, remembered several years ago as the hefty comedian lead in Vim comedies, since settling in the South has gone into the exhibitor end of the business and is frequently adding to his imposing string of theatres in North and South Carolina, his most recent deal having been the purchase of the Bijou and Victory theatres at Greensboro, N. C., from George W. Pryor.

Other theatres owned by the Hill interests include the Strand and Cozy at Gaffney, S. C.; Dreamland and Liberty, Chester, S. C.; Rialto and Grand, Union, S. C., and the Rex, at Sumter, S. C.

Head offices for the circuit have been established at Greensboro, N. C.

Cardinal Remains Unalterable.

Cardinal Gibbons has again declared against legalizing Sunday motion picture shows. He has been watching with the keenest interest the fight in the Maryland legislature and expressed gratification when told that Senator Frick would oppose the bill.

"I am unalterably opposed to the bill," he said. "Tell them to fight it to a finish for the sake of our city."

The Cardinal explained that a distinction should be made between amusements spontaneous in nature and those for gain. He said that open theatres would tend to keep some people from church and rob the day of its religious atmosphere.

Consensus of Trade Press Reviews

Here are extracts from available reviews printed in the five motion picture trade papers. It is the aim to present one sentence that will reflect the spirit of the writer's opinion. The papers are indicated as follows: Moving Picture World (M. P. W.); Motion Picture News (N.); Exhibitor's Trade Review (T. R.); Wid's (W.); Exhibitors' Herald (E. H.).

The Brand of Lopez

(Sessue Hayakawa—Robertson-Cole.)

M. P. W.—Sessue Hayakawa sustains his reputation for careful interpretation in Robertson-Cole production.

N.—Role hardly fits the Japanese star.

T. R.—Hayakawa scores in "The Brand of Lopez."

W.—Unsustaining and rather unpleasant melo that goes to extremes.

E. H.—Reveals Sussue Hayakawa as a Spanish matador, a role which he essays without the aid of make-up.

A Child for Sale

(Gladys Leslie—Graphic)

M. P. W.—Tells successful heart interest story.

N.—Timely economic question treated in dramatic story.

T. R.—The picture has received a fine production, and ranks well with the average melodrama.

W.—Generally satisfying melodrama that might have been a great picture.

E. H.—The subject is timely. The picture is well produced.

The Inner Voice

(E. K. Lincoln—American Cinema)

M. P. W.—One of the swiftest moving dramas of the season.

N.—Should satisfy any audience anywhere.

T. R.—A positive human story with an abundance of sympathetic appeal.

W.—Strong melodrama enriched by unusual production values.

E. H.—Will doubtless be pronounced the best of E. K. Lincoln's productions.

Jack Straw

(Robert Warwick—Paramount)

M. P. W.—Should please an average audience.

N.—Obvious light comedy has amusing moments.

T. R.—Combines a good story, an amount of clean, wholesome fun, good acting and fine directing and photography.

W.—Romantic comedy proves best vehicle Robert Warwick has had.

E. H.—Should have many successful runs.

Mary Ellen Comes to Town

(Dorothy Gish—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—Written with the sole purpose of affording Dorothy Gish an opportunity to display her peculiar talents, it serves its purpose admirably.

N.—Dorothy Gish scores in a homespun role.

T. R.—Quite the best thing Dorothy Gish has done since "Hearts of the World."

W.—Star's comedy business and good treatment put this one over.

E. H.—Surpasses by a considerable margin the recent Dorothy Gish vehicles.

Stronger Than Death

(Nazimova—Metro)

M. P. W.—Presents Nazimova at her best in a superbly pictured story of India.

N.—Nazimova's rare art capitalized again.

T. R.—Once more Nazimova scores a brilliant triumph in cinema histrionics.

E. H.—Will doubtless be pronounced by the great majority of those who see it the greatest of Nazimova's photoplays.

Sooner or Later

(Owen Moore—Selznick)

M. P. W.—The complications are lively and well tried, and a capable cast gets good results from the material at hand.

N.—Farical idea is frail, but fairly amusing.

T. R.—A light and entertaining farce with many clever situations which give an audience plenty of chances to laugh.

W.—First half poor, but last half picks up and registers good comedy.

E. H.—It is a picture with a single aim, to entertain humorously, and it succeeded admirably in an eminently fair test.

Water, Water, Everywhere

(Will Rogers—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—A generally good-humored view of the constitutional amendment denying us alcohol as a beverage. It should prove a popular number wherever people are broad-minded.

N.—Will Rogers makes this picture worth while.

T. R.—Classes as good comedy drama, providing Will Rogers with an appealing hero role.

W.—Not enough plot to link comedy and human interest scenes together.

E. H.—A skillfully prepared mixture of comedy and drama, it serves Will Rogers excellently.

Women Men Forget

M. P. W.—It is doubtful if the average head of a family will take kindly to the rather exaggerated example of marital infelicity which the picture presents.

N.—In "Women Men Forget" we find some things to be censored and much to be commended.

T. R.—Good "triangle" picture.

W.—Mollie King returns in very well done domestic drama.

E. H.—It has many points which make for commercial value.

Huckleberry Finn

(Lewis Sargent and Katherine Griffith—Paramount)

M. P. W.—People can sit back and enjoy the picture while the scenes build themselves into a delightful entertainment.

N.—Mark Twain's immortal story lives on the screen.

W.—Mark Twain lives again on the screen, a picture with a wide appeal.

E. H.—The exhibitor who can play it is assured of big business and grateful patronage.

Faith

(Peggy Hyland—Fox)

M. P. W.—Will appeal to the family circle and make friends in spite of the lack of dramatic pretense.

T. R.—Will serve to amuse those not too exacting folks who delight in the portrayal of virtue triumphant over villainy.

W.—Fair entertainment offered in picture based on healing through faith.

E. H.—It provides Peggy Hyland with probably the best role of her career. Standard Fox production prevails throughout.

The Flaming Clue

(Harry T. Morey—Vitagraph)

M. P. W.—Is good melodrama of the detective type.

N.—Harry Morey has a vigorous melodrama here.

T. R.—It is bully good melodramatic entertainment.

E. H.—The picture as a whole should please.

Overland Red

(Harry Carey—Universal)

M. P. W.—The chief appeal is in the fresh, humorous bits strung along through the production.

N.—No doubt it would score even though Lynn Reynolds gave it an ordinary production.

T. R.—Is wholesome, crowded with interesting detail, and is, in parts, quite thrilling.

W.—Should please generally and appeal especially to Carey fans.

Youthful Folly

(Olive Thomas—Selznick)

M. P. W.—Is entertaining because Olive Thomas makes it so.

N.—The star will make this picture a fair average production.

T. R.—Olive Thomas pleasing in "Youthful Folly."

W.—This one scores as a very pleasing comedy-drama.

E. H.—It is without question the most satisfying production of her career, a story that all may enjoy both in its humorous and dramatic sequences.

The Amateur Wife

(Irene Castle—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—From beginning to end it has a dash and spice that is alluring and fascinating.

N.—While there is nothing new in the play, nor anything startling, it is interesting, and its chief merit lies in the excellence of the production and the good work of the members of the cast.

T. R.—The picture abounds with fascinating women, beautiful dresses, pathos and thrills.

E. H.—Will be regarded by the majority of fans as the best picture Irene Castle has made for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Black Shadows

(Peggy Hyland—Fox)

M. P. W.—Crook story of pleasing character.

N.—Story of self-sacrifice has interesting moments.

T. R.—Good social crook melodrama.

E. H.—The subject offers pleasing diversion, with Peggy Hyland as the starring player.

A Man There Was

(Victor Seastrom—Radiosoul)

M. P. W.—A picture of high intensity and tender pathos, a drama of the soul.

N.—Powerful theme and rich backgrounds make fine picture.

T. R.—Once the story starts to swing it moves surely and with an interest that is unflagging.

W.—Might well be great if supplied with a new set of subtitles.

Molly and I

(Shirley Mason—Fox)

M. P. W.—Amusing subject of light caliber.

N.—The picture is a wholesome, clean, light comedy, which your patrons may enjoy as a surcease from heavy, emotional drama.

T. R.—An extremely light offering which depends too much upon the star's personality.

W.—Popularity of star may put this over in average style.

The Luck of Geraldine Laird

(Bessie Barriscale—Robertson-Cole)

M. P. W.—Kathleen Norris story furnishes excellent vehicle for Bessie Barriscale.

N.—Has some good points which should interest.

W.—Pleasing and dramatic production of a real human story.

E. H.—It is not highly dramatic, but interesting.

CONDUCTED BY EDWARD WEITZEL, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE extracts from the notice by Bushnell Dimond in the Boston Evening Transcript on "Dr Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which takes up nearly the whole of this column is so unusual that no apology is offered for its length. After leading up to John Barrymore's acting by a well written description of the novel features of the screen version of the Stevenson story, in which he holds that "the supreme merit is that the spirit of the author has been felt and crystallized," the writer says:

"When you have seen the man come in, fastidious and inhibited, Barrymore and Jekyll will thenceforth be merged in your memory. The delicately-cut nostrils, the imaginative, impressionable eyes, the spare sculpture of the cheek, seem to belong by innate right to this unsoiled and rather dainty altruist. But there are overtones. How in heaven—or hell—he does it is his secret, but the actor contrives to foreshadow the man's impending tragedy. He is a damned angel. This suggestion of forthcoming downfall is made with no physical symbol; the touch with which it is insinuated is one of the perfect things motion pictures have brought forth. It is so entirely independent of paint, false hair and powder that, if you are over-nice about "realism" Jekyll's transmutation, later, will seem a little brusque.

"But what irony, what impudence, have gone into this transmutation! Stiff, waxen fingers play convulsively about a seared, leprous throat. Flinty and broken nails scratch a neck corded and writhen. Beneath the egg-shaped skull peer shrunken, malevolent eyes. The cheeks are lytic, the back deformed, the whole creature unspeakable. Produced with the most precise care, these details excite wonder at their cleverness; in mass, they present the worst man, not in London, but in the world. Perhaps nothing more ingenious and exciting has ever been devised by an actor than the contrast between Jekyll's facile, boyish, yet dignified, stride, and the demoniac hobble and hop of the cripple. The epileptic leap into the air when first the potion is drunk, is a stroke of pantomimic inspiration possible only to the born moving picture actor. Note, too, that in all these supreme tricks, the player asks little of the accommodating camera. The faking is discreetly infrequent; the double-exposures limited.

"Celluloid-legerdemain aside, do not think that grease-paint and wigs are the sole reliances of the actor as he shows the progress of this self-corroding soul. Beneath the touches of the rabbit's-foot and the eyebrow pencil lives and squirms a very real spiritual wreck. We have had, before this, physical monsters in the pictures, and men of evil spirit. Here, for the first time is recorded, with indelible cunning, a complete correspondence between broken body and broken soul—the unclean mind and the unclean flesh, a stained heart covered by, though not hidden, in maculate rags. The epitome of the characterization—and the play—may be found in one scene in which a kiss is suggested so horribly that you turn aside your face. Yet this kiss is not repulsive, or realistic. It is not even visible."

"Alias Jimmy Valentine"

Metro Production Stars Bert Lytell in Celebrated Crook Play That Rivets the Spectator's Attention.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ONCE in a blue moon is a stage play in its original form so well adapted to the screen as is "Alias Jimmy Valentine," the celebrated crook drama written by Paul Armstrong and produced by Metro with Bert Lytell as the expert bank robber. The play was the first of a long line of dramas dealing with the under world that were intended to appeal to the better class of theatre goers and was a notable success in its day. First and foremost, it is drama from start to finish. The story seizes the attention at the very beginning and hangs on to it to the finish. The heroic crook has always been a favorite figure in fiction; in this story the author had wrought so cunningly in his behalf that the sympathy of the spectator is never lost. Paul Armstrong was familiar with his characters and illustrated their individuality with flashes that were novel as well as interesting. Also he told a straightaway story that moves with increasing tension to the big situation and is full of heart throbs. "Alias Jimmy Valentine" should repeat its stage success upon the screen.

Bert Lytell's Original Method.

The production has received expert handling. The story does not call for elaborate sets and effects, but relies upon its human interest. Correct atmosphere is supplied for every scene, and the acting of the cast is all that could be asked. Bert Lytell plays Jimmy Valentine along different lines than those used by H. B. Warner, who created the part. Mr. Lytell is more youthful and frank and open. He is never the hardened criminal and consequently it is easier to believe in his reformation. His sense of humor never wholly deserts him, and he is quick to take advantage of every opening to lighten matters by a smile or a laugh.

Vola Vale is earnest and attractive as Rose Lane. Excellent character drawing is contributed by Eugene Pallette as "Red" Jocelyn, Wilton Taylor as Detective Doyle and Marc Robbins as Bill Avery.

Story.

Lee Randall, the leading character in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," is an expert at opening safes by the "touch" system. His fingers are so sensitive that he can detect the combination by his sense of touch. While serving a term in prison he is brought to the warden's office and told to show his skill by opening the office safe in his professional way. Having declared that he is innocent of the job for which he was tried and sentenced, he refuses to fall into the trap. The warden has a delegation from the Gate of Hope Society and is anxious to prove that "once a crook always a crook." One member of the delegation interests Jimmy greatly. Rose Lane, the daughter of a banker in Springfield, Ill., is the person. Jimmy once saved her from assault in a Pullman car. Rose recognizes the prisoner and shows that she is more than grateful to him. Her sympathy inspires him with a determination to reform and, through the help of her uncle she gets him a pardon.

Set at liberty Jimmy finds that he has a relentless enemy, a detective named Doyle, who is determined to prove that he was connected with a bank robbery in Springfield, Mass. Resisting an appeal from two of his pals, "Red" Jocelyn and Bill Avery, to help them pull off just one more robbery, Valentine is offered a position in the bank owned by Rose Lane's father. He accepts and takes "Red" Jocelyn with him as a watchman. For the next three years Jimmy works faithfully and is rewarded by being made the assistant cashier of the bank. He has become a great favorite of Mr. Lane's and also of the small brother and sister of the family. Rose has kept on believing in him and encouraging him all this time, and Jimmy now asks her to become his wife. Her answer sends him after a marriage license.

Just before the wedding Doyle turns up. He is positive that he is going to land Jimmy for the Springfield, Mass., job, but the assistant cashier has framed up such a clever alibi that Doyle is about to go away convinced that he has made a mistake. At this moment "Red" hurries into Jimmy's office. The little Lane girl has been locked in a new vault by her brother, and no one knows the combination. Jimmy runs to the safe. As he is about to use his old profession to free the child he finds that Doyle has followed him. If he goes ahead with his touch system he will betray himself. The child's life is in danger and Jimmy does not hesitate. Sandpapering his finger tips he starts to work on the combination, with the detective and Rose watching him. When the lock yields and the little girl is brought out of the vault Jimmy turns to Doyle, expecting arrest. The detective, realizing the sacrifices that Jimmy has been willing to make, tells him that a certain little woman needs him more than does the state of Massachusetts, and leaves him free to marry Rose.

"Atonement"

Very Satisfactory Modern Version of a Tolstoy Novel Released by Pioneer.

Reviewed by M. A. Malaney.

EXHIBITORS have often wondered why Conway Tearle has not been starred. They will be pleased to find him in such a role in "Atonement," a picture based on the story by the late Count Tolstoy, called "The Living Corpse." The story has been adapted to American conditions, and made thoroughly modern. Conway Tearle is seen to splendid advantage. He generally is leading man to some female star, and is required to do a great deal of love making. Here he has a part that has no love making after the second reel. The leading female role is played by Grace Davidson, another rising favorite. The part calls for many strong emotional scenes. The cast also includes Sally Crute and Gretchen Hartman.

The story of "Atonement" concerns the vivid experiences of a man who has defrauded his bank to save his brother from financial ruin. He sinks to the dregs of despair, while his wife, thinking him dead, is again happily married. But it's all a dream. That is the only mark against this production. Dream stuff being used so often, the exhibitor may be disposed to criticise. The theatre that has a large woman trade will please these patrons by showing this picture. Men may not care much about it. It is a very satisfactory photoplay, photography good, settings not very elaborate but fitting, and is well directed.

The Story.

Theodore Proctor, bank cashier, and Vincent Carlton, his friend, both love the same girl, Laura Hamilton. The former wins her. They are married, but Proctor suspects his rival is still in love with his wife. His brother has speculated and, facing ruin, comes to him for help. Proctor is tempted to defraud his bank to provide the money for his brother. He takes the money, but instead of saving his brother both are ruined.

Proctor then becomes a fugitive. His wife casts him off and demands a divorce. He refuses to give it to her, but instead decides to kill himself so that she may be free to marry Carlton. At the suggestion of a gypsy girl who becomes enamored of him, he leaves his clothes on a river bank. When they are found, Proctor is proclaimed a suicide. His wife remarries, while the fugitive husband drags out a living death in the underworld.

At last his identity is discovered, he is exposed to the police and his wife and her second husband are accused of bigamy and face a long prison term. In his rags and degradation, Proctor is brought in to confront the pair, but before the investigation discloses anything. He then shoots himself—and wakes up. It was a dream from the time his brother confesses his predicament. Proctor, seeing the evil results that would accompany the embezzlement, resists the temptation. His brother, who went out in

Goldwyn Presents Tom Moore in An Entertaining Romantic Melodrama.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

DERIVED from a mystery tale published in the Saturday Evening Post, the Goldwyn production "Duds" is exceptionally well suited for an entertaining screen story. Though it emphasizes situation and more exciting aspects of the home show than we come across in real life, it is made realistic by careful attention to cast, continuity and clear treatment. Besides this, it has a romantic content so handled as to reach out for sympathetic interest. Starting with that spirit of adventure so dear to the American hearts, the story does not deal in falsification of character for the sale of sensation. It is lifted out of the treadmill of old melodrama into a modern highly colored human exhibit, the kind of stuff that takes us out of our own treadmill of existence. It is a case of sound workmanship and showmanship providing good entertainment.

The best part of the cast is that least exploited. Moore is good when he lays aside his mannerisms, but it is largely a case of the role carrying the actor. Much better is Edwin Stevens as Karakoff. In fact, the entire supporting cast is so strong that they give dignity and striking effect to the intense scenes. Direction and camera work exceptionally fine. There is a high sum of entertainment value in "Duds," and it should prove well worth while on any program.

Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

"Duds," as an aftermath of the war, brought young Captain Plunkett unexpected adventure. Out of a job, leisure palling on him, he comes upon a police raid near the waterfront of Brooklyn and assisted a young lady, Olga Karakoff, to extricate herself from unpleasant consequences of being caught in the house of a dealer in stolen goods. She explains on the way to her house that she was there in the interest of her father. This is substantiated by Karakoff at his Washington Square mansion. He further assigns Plunkett to an adventurous job after his own heart. That of running down a band of smugglers bringing in jewels stolen by the Germans. When Plunkett and Olga are attracted to each other, she gives him as keepsake a diamond-shaped piece of cobalt glass. It is so beautiful that he has it attached to a chain for her to wear.

Plunkett's adventures now become active. Through social acquaintances he meets Patricia Melton. She represents that she is in the French secret service and suggests that they work together. They discover that the smuggled jewelry is dropped overboard from incoming vessels and, after a fight in launches off Fire Island, secure a string of the floating containers. These enclose nothing of great value, and they are appropriated by Patricia. Plunkett attends a meeting of big jewelers with Karakoff and is offered a large sum for getting possession of the famous Sultana diamond, if it can be found.

Plunkett is watching a suspected curio shop disguised as a sailor. He sees Patricia enter the shop and waits long for her to come out before he guesses she has met with foul play. He goes to his lodging house and prepares to ascend to the roof when he comes upon a ghastly discovery. One of the owners of the curio shop had descended to kill Plunkett and been killed by fumes intended to disinfect the room. Plunkett reaches the den of the curio men, where Patricia has been overcome and bound because of a rash threat of exposure. While Plunkett is in hiding, he sees the supposed chief of the gang remove his scarf and disclose the face of Karakoff.

Plunkett rescues Patricia in an exciting fight, but he is seen coming out of the house with her by Olga. In order to ascertain what are the relations of Plunkett with the woman he rescued, Olga visits Patricia, who has just discovered that a gem of glass cobalt she obtained, in which she expected to find the Sultana Diamond, is a substitution. Learning that Olga has one similar, she invites the latter to supper ostensibly to compare the cobalt ornaments. When Olga visits Patricia she is drugged by her and her confederate. Then comes Plunkett once more to the rescue and saves both Olga and the Sultana diamond. He wins a beautiful girl, whose father was merely pretending to be a member of the smuggling gang, and he wins a fortune besides.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines: Tom Moore in Entertaining Romantic Melodrama.

He Was After the Sultana Diamond—Many Are the Obstacles That Beset Him—But He Gets It and the Beautiful Girl He Saved in the Rescue Besides.

A Melodrama of Punch and Pep with Tom Moore as the Star—He Was Just Out of the Army But the Adventures He Met Up With in His Search for the Sultana Jewel Were Just as Strenuous.

Exploitation Angles: Play up Moore for all he can bring you, but do not overlook other favorites in the cast, many of whom have strong followings. Exploit the fiction origin of the story, if possible getting one of the papers with the story for lobby display, opened at the page showing the instalment. You can get a good hook up with jewelry stores on this play. You can also hook up with any store handling novelties made from old shells explaining that these are duds, but that the play so named is packed to the rim with action.

"Just a Wife"

Initial Offering By National Pictures Proves Excellent Presentation of Eugene Walter's Stage Play.

Reviewed by M. A. Malaney.

JUST a Wife," the first production of National Pictures, is a most worthy picture to start a new venture and one that will be remembered as an artistic achievement and a splendid drama. Originally it was a stage play, in which Charlotte Walker was starred. It was written by Eugene Walter, author of many successful plays. Of course, it is "the eternal triangle" once more, but this theme does not seem to grow old.

The "triangle" of the cast could not have been better selected. They are Roy Stewart, Leatrice Joy and Kathlyn Williams. All three do good work. Miss Joy, a newcomer to co-starring parts, seems to have a great future. Her part in "The Right of Way" was quite attractive and she repeats her fine portrayal of a good part in this picture.

The story is logical, although one cannot conceive of a man neglecting his wife quite as much as does the hero of "Just a Wife." However, he keeps the sympathy of the audience in spite of this. There are some rich settings and the scenes in the west are realistic. There is not the usual strain of sensationalism to provide artificial thrills, and the third woman in the case actually keeps you guessing as to whether or not she really will lure away the husband.

Cast.

Richard Emerson.....Roy Stewart
Mary Virginia Lee.....Leatrice Joy
Robert Lee.....Albert Van
Eleanor Lathrop.....Kathlyn Williams
Tom Marvin.....Wm. Leon West
Directed by Howard Hickman.
Length, About 5,000 Feet.

The Story.

Beautiful Eleanor Lathrop, keen of intellect and well trained in business, discovers the ambitions of Richard Emerson, a young engineer, to become the railroad king of America. She accepts the place in his life to stimulate his ambitions.

Upon Eleanor's advice Emerson marries Mary Virginia Lee, a sweet Southern girl, of ancient family, because the world is talking about the relationship between the young engineer and his confidential adviser.

Mary has married Emerson because of her hatred of genteel poverty. On their honeymoon, the bride tells Emerson she married him to secure luxuries. Emerson confesses that he has married because he needs a wife of social standing. Hurt, Mary tells him that the debt between them as husband and wife has been canceled and that there need be no thought of love between them. Husband and wife live apart—he at his club in New York and she at Emerson's beautiful country home.

Eleanor is jealous of Mary and the position she occupies. Emerson and Eleanor spend a year together in a western railroad construction camp. Here Emerson begins to realize that his heart is empty. In the meantime, Mary, alone amidst her luxuries, discovers that the love of her husband is the only thing that can make her happy. Successful beyond his wildest expectations, Emerson, accompanied by Eleanor, has returned to New York, when the third anniversary of Emerson's marriage rolls around. He is thinking of Mary, and determines to visit her.

The lonely wife has remembered the anniversary too and when Emerson arrives there is an anniversary dinner, prepared with the forlorn hope that the missing husband might come. Bobby, Mary's brother, and a Mr. Martin, lately returned from Alaska, are also in attendance. Bobby, piqued at Emerson's treatment of his sister, is anxious to have the Emersons divorced. Late in the evening, when love at last seems possible between Mary and her husband, Eleanor enters the room. There is a frank confession on the part of both women that they both love the same man. There is a duel for his possession. The wife wins!

"The Mother of His Children"

Five-Reel Fox Production Features Gladys Brockwell in Story of Farisian Art World.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A STRONGLY entertaining, if not powerfully dramatic, story of art life in Paris is found in this five-reel Fox picture, "The Mother of His Children." It pictures the eternal strife between sin and virtue, as reflected in the interesting lives of two sculptors of opposing ideas, an Oriental princess who has come to the great European capital to find pure love and idealism, and the wife of one of the sculptors and her children.

All the action, which carries a unique and pleasing plot, occurs in attractive studios and salons, with a satisfactory sprinkling of social types. Gladys Brockwell appears as the Princess Yve, who has come to Paris to find beauty and purity. The characterization is unusual and pleasing, once it is thoroughly understood; the makeup and manner of living at first suggests one of the familiar vampire roles, but this feeling is dispelled as the story progresses. The picture is full of entertaining high lights and carries the interest well.

is attended by Hadji, a faithful servant of her own country, a veritable slave who is willing to die at her request.

Count Joachim Tolstoff, a sculptor who is in love with the princess, offends her greatly by reproducing her features on a statue being shown at an art exhibition. The statue attracts much attention and suspicion is aroused that she posed for it, though the face was in fact modeled from memory. Prominent among the other exhibits, is a marble group done by an American sculptor, Richard Arnold, representing his wife and two children. The princess meets Arnold, but does not discover he is married until after she has fallen in love with him.

Count Tolstoff makes himself constantly obnoxious to the princess, invading her apartments in an unwelcome manner. He is jealous of Arnold. He is killed by the servant, Hadji, while endeavoring to smash Arnold's group. Arnold's wife, whom he loves devotedly, dies while coming to France and he afterward finds consolation with the princess.

"Love Insurance"

Affords Bryant Washburn a Novel, Characteristic Role.

Reviewed by Mary Kelly.

WITH a plot that is charmingly new, and a star eminently suited to his role, the Paramount production, "Love Insurance," is a picture that will be sure to arouse interest. The story, which first appeared in book form, was written by Earl Derr Biggers, and the basic idea is one that admirably lends itself to screen use. A prospective groom has his sweetheart's love for him insured, and the luckless insurance agent, although in love with the girl, is forced to promote the marriage, so that his company will not lose.

Bryant Washburn depicts the perplevities of a young man possessed with a burning conscience, in his customary serio-comic fashion that never fails to entertain. An extensive, capable supporting cast is headed by Lois Wilson, and includes Theodore Roberts in a delightful characterization of the girl's father, Eddie Sutherland in a pleasing comedy bit. Frank Elliott, Edwin Stevens and Frances Raymond are also in the cast.

The direction shows excellent dramatic conception. Appropriate settings and good photography are also attractive features.

nient role is handled by John Halliday, who plays a serious part with understanding.

The crying need for better sub-titles is distressingly apparent in "The Woman Gives." There is a note of affectation in the flowery, bookish phrases that distracts and detracts. For instance, "'Tis madness to come here" is not the natural way of chiding a young girl who has braved the extreme dangers of an opium den that she might save her benefactor.

The Story.

Two young artists, Inga Sorderson and Robert Milton, win recognition through the disinterested efforts of Daniel Garford, a famous painter. Garford's brilliant career is suddenly halted by a horrible disillusionment which he suffers in learning of his wife's faithlessness. He loses all ambition and sinks lower and lower into a state of disreputable immorality.

Inga, meantime, feels bound by gratitude to him, and is doing her utmost to redeem him. Her efforts are misinterpreted by Milton, her fiancé, who thinks she is unnecessarily meddlesome in trying to solve Garford's problems. Inga, however, cannot bear to see Garford give up a career that holds so much promise. She continues to make every effort to uplift him, despite Milton's evident resentment and jealousy. But her visit of supplication to Garford's wife, as well as her care of Garford after a drunken stupor, fail to awaken any dormant sense of manhood.

Upon learning that he has become addicted to the use of drugs, she determines to follow him into the recesses of an opium den. To accomplish this she is subjected to the unpleasant experience of fighting back an evil-minded Chinaman. She is saved from harm by Garford, who suddenly revives sufficiently to trounce her assailant. She then pleads with Garford, but he only resents her intrusion. Desperately she snatches his smoking outfit and smashes it. Garford is enraged. He loses all control and is about to attack her, but is strangely stayed by the look of innocence in her face, and he decides to go back to the studio with her. In making sure that he returns home she goes to his door with him and is seen by Milton, who wrathfully upbraids her for this unconventional act. The engagement is then broken off, and Milton, angered beyond words, smashes the statue which he had carved with Inga as a model.

Garford now begins to reform. Slowly he wins back his former position of respectability and fame. The rumor reaches Milton that she is to marry Garford. He is heartbroken, and by now has become thoroughly remorseful. He is about to leave the city, when Inga comes to him and in response to his query about her marrying Garford, she answers that she is going to marry the man she loves—Milton.

"The Devil's Pass Key"

Seven-Reel Universal Jewel Production
De Luxe Pictures Life in Gay
Paree.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THOSE familiar with the work of Eric Von Stroheim in the Universal production, "Blind Husbands," will find a similar interest in this new subject, "The Devil's Pass Key." Von Stroheim does not appear in this, but he wrote the story in collaboration with Baroness De Meyer, and directed it personally. The subject shows throughout a keen eye for artistic effects and a mastery of pertinent details. As in the case with "Blind Husbands," the appeal is to the eye and senses, there being a sex story, admirably controlled, and free from seriously offending situations.

"The Devil's Pass Key" plays upon the emotions of the spectator lightly. It reflects the gaiety and glitter of the Paris shops and boulevard. Watching it is like reading a typical French novel of the lighter sort, with a few side glimpses into the Paris comics. The bath room scene, in which La Belle Odera takes her ablutions and has one of her tiny feet manicured, is like an animated drawing from La Vie Parisienne.

The plot, like the sparkling atmospheric effects, is a "continental" creation, appropriate to its settings. It has considerable reality, for it is admirably acted, though its logic may not be inquired into too closely. Briefly, it tells of an extravagant wife who runs up huge bills for clothes in anticipation of the success of her husband's play. The play fails and her modiste calls for money. The wife valiantly refuses to sacrifice herself for money, but is later lured innocently enough into a blackmailing scheme, and becomes the talk of all Paris. Everyone knows—except her husband. He, after reading a newspaper account of the story, minus names, proceeds to write a play around the situation. The play succeeds, but the author-husband is greeted with jeers on all sides. Tragedy threatens when he learns the truth, but in the end happiness prevails.

The subject, despite its slight intellectual fare, is one that will have wide appeal because of its plot novelty and brilliant presentation.

The Story.

Grace Goodwright, in "The Devil's Pass Key," is the wife of a playwright. She and her husband, Warren Goodwright, are living in luxurious style, and the young wife runs up huge bills at the dressmaking establishment of Renee Malot. The couple are deeply in love and anticipate making a fortune from Warren's play. But, to their dismay, the play is rejected and fails of production.

The young wife is pressed by Madame Malot for money and knows not where to turn for it. Madame Malot, knowing the admiration of Captain Rex Strong for Grace Goodwright, turns her over to him as a possible friend in this emergency. Captain Strong would be glad to accommodate with a loan "for value received," a proposal which Grace refuses with indignant tears.

Later Madame Malot, through La Belle Odera, a former friend of Captain Strong, gets hold of a compromising letter, linking his name with that of Countess Trouvers. Grace Goodwright is innocently made the bearer of a blackmailing note to the Countess. Captain Strong has got wind of the plan and Grace is intercepted. She finds herself the victim of a scandal, from which the captain does his best to extricate her.

Warren Goodwright, reading an account of the scandal in a Paris journal, which mentions no names, writes a play around the main situation. The play is produced and makes a great success, but all Paris is laughing at her husband, who is ignorant of the fact that he has dramatized his own wife's indiscretions. He threatens to kill Captain Strong when he learns the truth, but later relents and forgives his wife.

Pathe Comedies

Second of Mrs. Drew's Charming Subjects
Shown; Also a New Pollard Comic.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton" we have a new and enjoyable two-reel comedy, adapted and directed by Mrs. Sidney Drew from one of Julian Street's entertaining "After Thirty" stories. This, like its predecessor, "The Charming Mrs. Chase," pictures another adventure of Jimmie Wickett, the bored husband, who is cursed by innate respectability and yet secretly craves romance.

The combination of Mr. Street's delicate humor and the light touch of Mrs. Drew is ably interpreted by a cast of four: John Cumberland, Elinor Custis, Margot Leighton and Harold Foshay. In this story Jimmie Wickett and his wife both try their hands at flirting with others. In each instance the ardor of the chase is speedily dampened by too much conscience, the solidifying effects of middle age and the fact that they love each other more than anyone else.

Comedies of this type make a strong appeal to the spectator, and while they do not bring the shouts of laughter that greet the slapstick subjects, their power of entertainment is quite as strong.

"Cut the Cards."

A one-reel comic featuring Harry ("Snub") Pollard. The poker game is an amusing feature of this subject, which carries no particular plot. Mr. Pollard is a comedian who is always threatening to "go over big" and never quite gets the proper combination. He works too hard to get a spontaneous effect, and tries to put too much action into his scenes. If he would get just enough of a plot to carry some small degree of suspense and then play for about three really funny situations in a reel, no doubt a better effect would be achieved. Deft, comic stunts, such as Chaplin and Harold Lloyd achieve, are almost invariably planned ahead and not too many of them.

Goldwyn-Bray Comic

A Pleasing Comedy Release Consisting of Cartoons and "Lampoons" of Carefully Edited Clever Sayings.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Goldwyn-Bray Comic which will be released weekly, beginning April 18, has been compiled with a view to providing humorous entertainment for theatre patrons, and consists of cartoon comedies based on the well-known newspaper characters, Happy Hooligan, Silk Hat Harry and the Shenanigan Kids, and "Lampoons." The latter are composed of witty sayings from the press of the world. They are carefully edited, and will no doubt be gratefully received by the public.

The first release opens with a Silk Hat Harry cartoon called "Shimmy Shivers," in which "Harry" steals a dress suit from his neighbor in the next room in order to attend a dancing contest, to which both characters have been invited by a fickle maiden named Ruth. Harry is having a high old time when the victim of the theft, attired in an empty barrel, puts his hand in the window and drops a flea down his back. The remainder of the cartoon shows his efforts to get rid of the flea. When finally he conquers his tormentor he is awarded the dancing prize.

The second picture presents Happy Hooligan in "The Great Umbrella Mystery," in which Hooligan tries out a scheme to make money by mending umbrellas. When he is about to give up in disgust, he discovers a paper which tells the whereabouts of a box of treasure. His search for the box is disappointing when he finds that it contains nothing but umbrellas.

The third, and one of the best, is a performance of the Shenanigan Kids, in which they place their father's clothing on the edge of the well and tell their mother that he has committed suicide. When the mourning is under way, the old man appears on the scene. This is a very entertaining cartoon.

Comments

HULA HULA TOWN (Fox). A Mutt and Jeff animated. Something novel and diverting. They invade a native island, where they are entertained by the king and have some laughable adventures.

TRAINING FOR HUSBANDS (Fox-Sunshine). An unusually good two-reel comic, directed by Edwin F. Cline, with Slim Somerville, Polly Moran, Dave Morris and others in the cast. A group of athletic girls does some very interesting physical culture work. One of the strong features of this comic is the intelligent acting of a great Dane canine and a very active monkey. Both these animals do astonishing work.

"BILLY WHISKERS" (Commonwealth). A two-reel subject with a billy goat as the "star," the first of a series pictured from the well-known book by Frances Trego Montgomery. It will be sure to amuse children. Billy Whiskers is played by an unusually intelligent goat-actor, who has been cleverly trained and directed. His supporting cast includes children, their colored mammy, a soda-fountain clerk, the town sport and a bevy of pretty girls, all of whom are thrown into a state of skirmishing excitement by Billy's lively antics and pranks which range from ringing doorbells at midnight to dancing the hula-hula, and promenading on the dining-room table.

THE FLY COP (Vitagraph). One of the best of the Larry Semon comedies. The plot centers about a necklace worn by a cabaret singer, and claimed by a king of Chinatown to have been stolen from a Chinese temple. When the picture gets under way it develops speed accompanied by acrobatic thrills that have rarely if ever been outdone. The way in which the principals of the play leap from roof to roof, over vehicle-lined streets that seem an endless distance below, presents a remarkable spectacle. This comedy is clean and well worth the seeing. The picture is a story within a story.

ONE HE MAN (Western), April 24.—A two-reel subject, written by George Hively and directed by Henry Murray. Jack Perrin makes a picturesque hero, in his black velvet suit and sombrero. He has the conventional job of rescuing the heroine from a band of gun runners, led by "Snake" Royce. The manner of accomplishing this is pictured in an exciting and convincing way. Josephine Hill plays the girl. The subject contains many good scenic shots and moves with satisfying speed.

PATHE REVIEW, No. 42.—Some exquisite tinted views of Seville, Spain, lead this number, which give an excellent idea of its beautiful streets and varied industries. A great dynamite explosion, card tricks revealed by the "slow" camera, an interpretation of the minuet and other features are included.

FLAT BROKE (Rolin-Pathe).—A "Snub" Pollard comic, in which the hero first appears sleeping in a hammock, underneath a freight car. Chased out of this restful place by a brakeman, he enters the city and, with a pal, earns a living at street singing. There is a clever monkey in some of the scenes, which should make a hit with children. Little Sambo also performs some interesting tricks. The number as a whole is quite amusing and should have a strong juvenile appeal.

PATHE REVIEW NO. 40.—Opens with tinted views of the Lake of the Four Cantons, Switzerland. The picturesque scenes include a number of views of the beautiful Lake Lucerne. Metal tests make a good educational subject, and there is a strong protest against shooting birds for women's hats. The wrestling turns illustrated by "slow" camera are interesting.

SPEED TO SPARE (Pathe).—A "Snub" Pollard comedy which contains a number of laughs, but is not out of the ordinary. The fun is clean, but not startling. The most of the action takes place in a hotel where a couple have found refuge after being held up in an automobile. The most of the comedy centers about the elevator man in the hotel and the little negro page. When a gang of masked bandits take the hotel by storm there are a number of amusing scenes in and about the elevator. The picture contains a fair amount of slapstick comedy.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"

Breaking Records All Over

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE," the Paramount Aircraft super-special in which John Barrymore is starred, set up during Holy Week at the Rivoli Theatre in New York the most astonishing attendance record in the history of Broadway picture houses, according to figures made public by the Rialto-Rivoli management. The statement says that with total paid admissions for the week of 60,496, the best previous week was beaten by 3,066. The former record was made during last Holiday Week, which included both New Year's Eve and New Year's Day. Transferred to the Rialto, where it is now playing, it proceeded to shatter the records it had set up at the Rivoli and on Sunday showed to 10,513 paid admissions, eclipsing the best previous performances in either house for a single day.

On Sunday, the opening day of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" engagement at the Rivoli, the attendance record was 9,842, bettering the best previous Sunday mark, made by "Huckleberry Finn," by two. Then on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the record for each of those days was successively broken, and in every instance the previous week-day mark of 7,354 was passed. Then Saturday came, and even the record of the preceding Sunday was broken.

The figures for the week in detail are as follows: Sunday, 9,842; Monday, 7,977; Tuesday, 8,255; Wednesday, 8,365; Thursday, 8,180; Friday, 7,905; Saturday, 9,972.

This marvelous achievement, doubly so because it was Holy Week, not only reflects the popularity of the Stevenson masterpiece, both as fiction and drama, but it emphasizes the position which John Barrymore, the star, occupies on the stage and in motion pictures.

New Moss Theatre Nearing Completion.

B. S. Moss' new Coliseum Theatre, at Broadway and 181st street, New York, is rapidly nearing completion. The exterior work has been entirely finished and the playhouse stands as a model of architectural beauty and scientific construction. The seating capacity is almost 3,500, but it has been Mr. Moss' idea to have the man in the last chair in the last row see as well as those farther in front.

The Island Is Full of Terror and Thrills for Houdini in This Paramount Production.

Lila Lee looks away, hoping for the best. These scenes should convince that there is plenty of action in this special, "Terror Island."

BETTER EQUIPMENT

CONDUCTED BY E.T. KEYSER

Mercy Knew What He Wanted and His Theatre Plans Look As If He Got It

BACK in the summer of 1912 Frederick Mercy purchased a 25 foot store room show named the Majestic in the city of Yakima. After six months' ownership he remodeled and redecorated it, making it one of the largest moving picture theatres in the state of Washington.

Mr. Mercy's next move was to acquire the lease of the Empire Theatre in March, 1915, and during the next year he leased John Court's Yakima Theatre, which he operated during 1916-17. In 1917 Mr. Mercy added the Amusement Theatre to his chain.

All of which indicates that Mr. Mercy has had considerable picture theatre experience, which adds interest to the following description of his new house, the Mercy, which has been built and equipped throughout in accordance with his ideas gained from the operation of the previously mentioned theatres.

Fire Risk Reduced to Minimum.

The house is 100 by 140 feet, of concrete, brick and steel construction. The roofing is of asbestos, making the house as entirely fireproof as any structure can be. Along the line of fire protection, it may be mentioned that the largest water main running into any building in Yakima enters the Mercy Theatre and connects directly with numerous regulation hose lines, racked and ready for instant use.

The fire exits are more numerous and larger in size than specified for a much larger seating capacity and all doors are fitted with fasteners that cause them to open with the slightest pressure at any angle from the inside.

The seating arrangement plan illustrates these exits and indicates the facilities which are offered for the emptying of the

Tell Us Your Troubles

WHENEVER any exhibitor or house manager runs up against a snag in the matter of equipment—its choice, use or installation; whenever you are in doubt as to just what you should do to make a new house attractive or improve an old one—ask the "Better Equipment" Department and we will dig up the dope for you. BUT don't forget to enclose a stamped return envelope with your inquiry.

fully occupied theatre in less than three minutes.

Bowl Shaped Auditorium.

A feature of the house is the bowl-like shape of the auditorium floor, which permits an uninterrupted view of the stage and screen from any seat in the theatre, and makes all seats practically of the same value.

Extending around the entire front of the balcony is a row of eleven loges, each containing eight chairs of Circassian walnut.

The Mercy Theatre has no gallery and no benches. Every seat is comfortably upholstered and each may be reserved.

The aisles are wide and well illuminated with Aislelites, which means quick and comfortable entrances and exits for patrons, without at any time interfering with the stage lighting or picture projection.

The entire dome of the house is illuminated with artistically arranged cove lighting which reflects from the art glass in the centre, designed and colored to harmonize with the general style and scheme of decoration, which is Italian renaissance type.

Decoration Specially Designed.

The interior relief decorations were specially designed for the theatre, and drawings, models and casts for them were made on the premises and the work required sixteen weeks' time and many tons of plaster. Special colors are incorporated with the relief carvings, making a decorative scheme that blends perfectly with the architecture and completes the effect of the decorations.

The relief portion of the work is in a warm grey color, forming a frame and background for the murals and flat decorative panels.

As the Mercy Theatre is both a vaudeville and picture house, considerable attention was paid to the stage equipment. A feature of this is a special counterweight system for handling the scenery and curtains with the utmost ease.

Unique and Effective Lighting.

Large batteries of specially built bunch lights augment the numerous sets of border lights, and makes the stage a blaze of light when desired. Three special large switchboard panels control the different lighting effects and a special set of dimming switches has been installed, by the use of which stage lights can be so gradually dimmed from brilliant light to complete darkness that the change from one degree of light to another is not noticeable.

The stage is forty feet in depth by one hundred feet wide and beneath it, in fire-proof quarters, are located fourteen large dressing rooms, musicians' room, musical library, stage workers' room, and two large chorus rooms, all well lighted and with hot and cold water in them.

Simplex Projection.

The projection equipment consists of a battery of Type "S" Simplex machines with double acting automatic arc controllers, and the Simplex special dissolving single arc effect stereopticon, and special heavy duty flood and spot light.

The projection apparatus is controlled by special panels, switches and signal apparatus, which latter permits intercommunication between all the departments.

The screens are Minusa Cine and the projection safety devices include an automatic fire shutter system, fire extinguishers, safety film cabinets and automatic film rewinder.

Sturtevant Ventilation System.

Ventilation is by the Sturtevant system. In the front basement are two large batterers of steam-heated radiators and between them an improved high pressure air washer. The air is drawn from the outside at the top of the theatre, through one battery of radiators, into the air washer, thence through another set of radiators, from whence it is propelled by a thirteen foot high-speed fan into the plenum chamber. The plenum chamber is a sealed space under both the lower floor and balcony, through which the air circulates before entering the theatre proper through six-inch mushroom type ventilators located under each seat. On the roof of the theatre is located a large high-speed exhaust fan which draws the used air from around the ceiling.

Radiators of a special type are required for the purpose of rapidly and thoroughly heating the air as it is drawn from the outside. To secure the proper water pressure for the air washer, it was necessary to install a high pressure tank and pump to augment the standard city water pressure.

Countless nozzles throwing fine sprays under pressure make a perfect fog or cloud of moisture, through which the air is drawn and thoroughly cleaned before again passing around radiators and into the plenum chamber.

In the summer time the radiators are shut off and ice placed in the air washer, insuring a temperature much cooler than the outside atmosphere.

The Vallen Automatic Curtain Machine Saves Time and Labor

FOLLOWING a four-years' trial of an electric automatic curtain machine the E. J. Vallen Electrical Company, of Akron, Ohio, has been organized to manufacture and market it.

The machine was invented about five years ago by E. J. Vallen and the first model was installed in the Akron Strand, September 1, 1915, and was in continuous service until two months ago when it was replaced by a later model, of the type to be manufactured.

Although several machines of this nature have made their appearance in the country the Vallen Company claim that its invention is the first to stand the test of long service. J. P. Dunlevy, manager of the Strand, where the machine has been operated vouches for its practical use and says that its efficiency and economy of operation has been thoroughly demonstrated.

Electrically Operated.

The Vallen machine is electrically operated and can be controlled from two points, either in the operator's booth or from the stage. Only one button is used in switching the electric current on and off.

The machine not only automatically controls the curtain which serves as a protection for the screen or for dividing photoplay offerings into various periods but can be used to control such lights as are necessary during intermissions.

The fact that the machine can be controlled from the operator's booth means the saving of labor and time and also adds efficiency to the showing of pictures as the curtain, screen and lights can thereby be controlled at the will of the operator.

The advantages of such coordination can readily be seen. The machine occupies a space three feet long, one foot wide and one foot high when installed. It may be installed at a moderate expenditure. The company manufacturing the machine is prepared to back the offering with a guarantee of service.

Inter-Ocean Receives Order for Accessories via Wireless

E. H. KAUFMAN, manager of the accessory department of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, has received an order via wireless from Sidney Reynolds of the Alliance Film Company of London, successors to the London Film Company, for eighteen stands of Wohl Lamps for rush delivery. The wireless order which was dated Mid-Atlantic March 23, reads as follows:

Mr. Walter Crotch, chairman of Alliance Film Co., London, will arrive in America 26th and arrange payments. Kindly ship as quickly as possible 9 duplex Wohl toplights with funnels and 9 Wohl Broadside lamps and carbons, appreciate immediate shipment.

(Signed) SIDNEY REYNOLDS.

This is declared by Inter-Ocean to be the first time that an order for studio accessories has been forwarded by wireless from mid-ocean to an American export house.

The Technical Film Department of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, now under the supervision of A. Hartlieb, has been augmented by the addition of Albert Boasberg.

The Vallen Curtain Machine.

It controls the curtain and lights from either the projection room or any desired part of the house.

'Shooting' the wild men with a UNIVERSAL

IN a climate of intense heat, averaging 130 degrees, traveling in whale boats and through trackless forests, Martin Johnson, the noted explorer, carried the Universal Camera to which he refers in this letter.

With this camera he made 25,000 feet of perfect film, and it came through this endurance test as sound and perfect as the day it left our factory.

When you see Johnson's wonderful pictures of the savage South Sea Islanders, you will have demonstrated to you the kind of film the Universal makes. This is the camera used exclusively by explorers, travelers, the United States Army and educational film makers.

Write for illustrated booklet on the Universal. It tells why the Universal will one day be your camera.

Dear Sirs:-

On account of the hasty letter I wrote you just before I left for the New Hebrides, seven months ago, I thought you would be glad to know that both Universals stood up great, we spent six months among the head hunters and cannibals of Malekula, and used only the two Universals.

I have just finished printing the positives, and without a doubt they are the finest films I have ever made--in fact there is not a foot of poor film among the twenty-five thousand feet.

The old camera that I used down here two years ago stood up as well as the new one, and outside of scars and scratches caused by long expeditions through the jungles and over mountains, it is as good as new--in fact, it's like an old shoe, it is like a part of me, and I will always use it in preference to any other.

Will send you some photographs on the next steamer.

Sincerely yours

Martin Johnson

You may use this letter or any part in advertising, my next feature that will be released in about six months will create a sensation, it is the most wonderful film of exploration that has ever been made, and the photography is perfect--it was all made on the two Universals.

It will probably be called WILD MEN OF MALEKULA.

Metcalfe's Combination Cabinet and Motor Rewind.
The illustration shows the combination both closed and open.

Metcalfe Has a Mighty Good Stunt for Both Projection Room and Laboratory

HERE is a device that will increase the attractiveness and efficiency of operating rooms and film laboratories by about one hundred per cent.

It is the combination cabinet and motor rewind of G. A. Metcalfe, 117 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, and 305 Broadway, New York.

As will be noted by the illustrations, the combination is extremely compact, measuring from floor to top of rewind case fifty-six inches, forty-four inches in length by nineteen and one-half inches greatest depth.

Each of the eight film containers shown will accommodate a two thousand foot reel, making a total storage capacity of sixteen thousand feet of film. The film containers are so modeled that the doors close automatically and it is impossible to leave them opened and thereby to expose the film. On the top of each film container are two metal guides for holding a card label, on which may be indicated the number or name of the film which each compartment contains.

The three drawers at side of the row of film containers provide storage room for lenses, slide material, carbons, tools, film cement, oil, etc.

The Rewind Cabinet.

Above the film containers and storage drawers is mounted the rewind cabinet, the doors of which are hung on adjustable spring hinges and fitted with heavy brass spring catches.

The process of rewinding is noiseless, the film passing directly from one reel to another without passing through valves, guides, or any other apparatus that would tend to scratch or mark it. The rewind is driven by an electric motor of one-eighth horse power, conveniently placed on the lower shelf at the rear of the drawers. A fourteen inch diameter pulley is belted to the motor and when the film is all rewound or a broken place is reached, an automatic cut-out stops the motor. This cut-out switch is enclosed in a conduit box, four inches square.

The motor may be stopped or started at will by means of a manual operated switch lever without affecting the automatic cut-out feature mentioned above.

The entire cabinet is constructed of heavy sheet iron and meets every requirement of the fire underwriters.

The shelf above the film containers and the storage drawers consists of a marble plate and constitutes a very desirable table for film mending. The motor rewind and the combination cabinet may be furnished together or where a good rewind is already owned, the cabinet alone may be purchased and the rewind mounted on top of same. The weight of the complete outfit, crated for shipment, is two hundred and twenty-three pounds.

Among the houses in which the device has been giving satisfaction for some time past may be mentioned the California, Strand, Imperial, Rialto, New Fillmore, New Mission, Royal and Coliseum, all of San Francisco; the Rialto of Eureka, Visalia Theatre of Visalia and the Sequoia of Redwood City, California.

The Goerz-Optical Company Is Now Entirely American

THE German ownership of the C. P. Goerz American Optical Company, consisting of 549 shares of its common stock out of a total of 600 shares, together with all its photographic patents, trade-names and other valuable concessions, was sold by the Alien Property Custodian on March 5, 1920, to a syndicate of Boston financiers.

The office and factory of the company will continue to be maintained as previously at 317 East 34th street, New York City, and the company proposes to continue the manufacture of photographic lenses of the highest quality, as an entirely American enterprise.

A force of highly skilled workers, together with the same supervising staff of experts with their many years of practical experience in the making of anastigmat lenses, and under the management of Fred Schmid, who has been connected with the company in executive positions for twenty years, will give full assurance that the standard of quality of the celebrated Goerz Lenses will be fully maintained.

The demand for Goerz lenses continues to be very strong and the present facilities of the factory are taxed considerably to meet the urgent demand. The company has lately succeeded, however, in furnishing the Goerz Dagor, Dogmar and Hypar lenses in fairly good quantities, and there is every prospect that the volume of production of the many different types of lenses will soon greatly increase.

How D. W. Griffith's New Invention for Color Effects in Projection Operates

When the trough in Figure 2 (6) is bent, it forms a suitable reflector, and has suitable glow lamps (8) mounted therein, one in each compartment, and supplied with

A long trough, as shown by Figure 3 (6) has a number of partitions (7) which divide the space in the trough into several distinct compartments, so arranged that light cannot leak from one to another. The front of the trough is closed by a perforated plate (10) and each perforation is closed by means of a colored diaphragm or screen (11).

lights used with the invention. The glow lights (8) have their wires (9) run to the ordinary main wires, which are designated 12 and 13 for the blue lights, 14 and 15 for the red lights, and 16 and 17 for the yellow lights.

The blue lights are controlled by a rheostat or dimmer (18), the red lights by a corresponding instrument (19) and the yellow lights by another (20). The wires (12, 14, 16) run to the bus bar (21) and the rheostats (18, 19, 20) are connected to the other bus bar (22). Wires 23 and 24 connect these bus bars through the projector (4) and its regulator or rheostat (25).

If electricity be shut off the red and yellow lights, and turned on the blue lights, the entire screen will appear blue, and the images from the projector will be correspondingly colored. Also, by the regulators or dimmers (18 and 25) the intensity of illumination of the screen may be varied so that an infinite number of color effects may be produced with one set of colored lights.

Los Angeles Kinema Will Get an Orchestral Robert-Morton

AN instrument that its builders claim will represent the finest and most elaborate work of the pipe organ maker's art is to be installed in the Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles, and immediate construction will begin shortly. The contracts have been signed between the owners of the Kinema Theatre, Michael Gore, Abe Gore, Sol Lesser and the American Photo Player Company.

The instrument will be a five-manual, completely unified organ, embodying a main organ with pipes large enough for the human body to crawl through, tapering down to some not larger in size than a lead pencil. In all the Kinema's new mammoth organ will have 15,147 pipes. The cost of installation will, it is estimated, reach $75,000. It is the intention of the management to provide Kinema audiences with not only the most elaborate pipe organ, but also to give Los Angeles a subject of particular civic pride.

A large echo organ is to be installed in the rear of the balcony dome, while a modern jazz organ is to be built with pipes and instrumental effects never before heard. This jazz organ will contain every master effect as well as a giant marimbaphone, and a harp which is promised to be perfection in itself.

The largest xylophone ever built in an organ is also included in the specifications. Various colored lights are to be a feature of this particular part of the instrument, showing audiences the effects being played. A piano with Hawaiian attachments, guitars, mandolins, an elaborate set of chimes; bass drums, tympanies, cymbal, triangles; Vox Humana; Chinese Wood Drums; Tom Tom; hundreds of bird whistles placed in various parts of the theatre auditorium; sleigh bells; and dozens of other instrumental novelties promise to make the Kinema's new orchestra organ a symphonic orchestra of marvelous tone and beauty.

The console, or keyboard, is to be placed in a glass enclosure upon hydraulic elevators, so that during solo performances audiences may have an insight into the intrinsic mechanism of the giant Robert-Morton.

Moving Picture World's Exploitation Department was founded years ago—before other trade papers knew there was any effort being made to "concentrate" on selling tickets. It's still the leader; still the best

Never out of commission. Not a moment's trouble since its installation

That's what is said of WESTINGHOUSE MOTOR-GENERATORS used for projection work.

Mr. Dave H. Shuman of the Florence Theatre, at Pasadena, Calif., says, "We are glad to say that we have a very enviable reputation for especially good projection, which we believe is due as much to your generator as anything else. We are certainly convinced that we made no mistake in our selection."

A SMALL INVESTMENT— LARGE RETURNS—

This Machine is designed to apply a wax compound to the margin of New Films, to prevent damage during the first few runs thru the Projecting Machine.

The collecting of emulsion from "green" films on aperture plate and tension springs of the projector is in many cases causing untold damage to the film and excessive wear to the projector as well as marring the presentation on the screen by jumping.

Proper Waxing of New Films—

- Prolongs the life of the Film.
- Eliminates excessive wear on Projecting Machine.
- Insures Steady Pictures on the screen.
- Prevents tearing of sprocket holes by emulsion deposits.

AND

Saves the film from having Oil squirted all over it by some Operator trying to get "green" film thru his machine without a stop.
The Werner Film Waxing Machine applies the Compound accurately to the margin of the film and positively will not spread wax onto the picture.
Wax always in position. Requires no adjusting.

Typhoon Company Opens Atlanta Office and Says that Big Fans Are in Fashion

ERNST GLANTZBERG, president of the Typhoon Fan Company, has left New York for the South and will stop over at Atlanta, where he will open a permanent office and headquarters for the company. F. K. Ricksecker, of Atlanta, identified for the past four or five years with the American Photo Player Company, has been appointed representative in this territory.

The Atlanta office makes the fifth in the chain of offices that are being established by the Typhoon Fan Company, and it is the purpose of the company to establish and one twelve foot Typhoon Twin Set, together with two eight foot Typhoon Twin Sets have recently been shipped for installation in Marcus Loew's new Metropolitan Theatre, Memphis, Tenn. Marcus Loew has also purchased two twelve foot Typhoons for his Vendome Theatre, Nashville, Tenn.

Harry K. Lucas Visits Town; Is Attacked by Pleurisy

HARRY K. LUCAS, sole southern distributor for the Simplex Projector, with headquarters at the Lucas Theatre Supply Company, Marietta street, made his quarterly-annual visit to the Metropolis last week, accompanied by Mrs. Lucas.

At the time of going to press Mr. Lucas was confined to his room at the Hotel Astor with an acute attack of pleurisy, but it is hoped by his numerous friends in the industry that he will have fully recovered by the time this story reaches the readers.

Conditions Are Good.

Mr. Lucas, whose Simplex franchise includes the entire South and covers more territory than any single other distributor, was highly optimistic as regards conditions in his territory. He is particularly pleased with the volume of business he has done through his Dallas, Texas, office, which is being operated under the direction of E. J. Callahan.

Mr. Lucas reports that the state of Texas, which up until a couple of years ago was particularly destitute of Simplex machines, is being Simplexized at a rapid rate and the only complaint from his territory seems to lie in the fact that he cannot supply machines fast enough.

Installs Printing Plant.

Mr. Lucas reports that owing to his large mail-order business he has found it necessary to install a large printing establishment equipped with a twelve by nineteen press, together with folding, cutting, addressing and ruling machines.

The Lucas Company is preparing to print its three hundred page catalog on its own press, as well as the "Cosiki," the snappy little Lucas house organ.

Wants a Portable Projector.

Moving Picture World:

I am wondering if you can put me in touch with any firms who are marketing a small projector for home use, schools, etc.

I am told that there are several on the American markets, indeed I have just seen one here—a splendid little machine that can be run when attached to any electric light socket. This projector is already in the hands of our agent, so I would like very much to find another.

If you know of anything I shall be very grateful if you will drop me a line.

A Big Typhoon.

The fan is twelve feet in diameter.

headquarters in practically all of the large motion picture centres throughout the country.

Before returning Mr. Glantzberg will visit Nashville, Knoxville, New Orleans, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago.

Some Large Typhoons.

The Typhoon Fan Company has recently received more orders for large diameter Typhoons than ever before. This is due to the fact that more large theatres are now being constructed than for the past several years. Some idea of the size of these large Typhoons may be had by referring to the accompanying illustration.

This particular Typhoon is twelve feet in diameter. Two such fans are being made ready for shipment to the Cozy Theatre, Okmulgee, Oklahoma.

One ten foot in diameter has recently been shipped to Harry Crandall's new Strand Theatre, Cumberland, Maryland, together with several of smaller size.

Four other ten foot Typhoons have been shipped to the Victory Theatre, Tampa, Florida.

OPLEX SIGNS

A Mark of Good Taste

O PLEX Electric Signs carry a suggestion of good taste, with their raised, snow-white, glass letters, standing out from a dark background, that is why so many of the new theatres are installing them.

They are day signs as well as electric night signs—raised, snow-white letters in the day-time, clear cut letters of light at night. Oplex Signs have greatest reading distance, lowest upkeep cost, most artistic designs.

Oplex Electric Signs are also built with interchangeable letters. To change the reading of the sign all that is necessary is to take out one set of letters and put in another. It only takes a few minutes.

Let us send you a sketch showing how your Oplex Sign will look.

Gentlemen:

Replying to your inquiry of recent date, please be advised that our entire battery of 14 projecting machines is comprised of Power's Cameragraphs, both #6A and #6B models.

After rather exhaustive tests, we have concluded that the Power Cameragraph is the most satisfactory machine for the projection of unwaxed film and best suited to all-around studio requirements including laboratory inspection.

Very truly yours,

DON'T WORRY!

THE exhibitor's worry, his mental suffering, his harassment, disquietude, discomfort and dissatisfaction spring mainly from one source. Unsatisfactory ticket sales! And the saddest part of the whole unpleasant business is this—that it is quite and altogether unnecessary worry. It is not only unnecessary, but it is not even his job—it is ours!

To solve his box-office problem is the only function of the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. It has absolutely nothing else to do apart from that one thing.

It directs its every effort toward increasing his box-office receipts so that he may receive the maximum profit at all times. His prosperity and ours are mutually interdependent, and it depends upon just one thing, the production of great motion picture posters! Posters of such dynamic force and power as to literally compel the passerby to attend the photo-play they advertise.

To make such posters is our essential worry, but we do produce them, and we produce them every time.

The one thing the exhibitor should worry about is how to get them, for if he does that, his troubles are cured at their source, and his coffers will be kept full. Keeping him prosperous is our one essential job—and we are always on the job!

In this World Vision of the New Order which is to come lies the solution of Humanity's greatest problem:

THE ELIMINATION OF CLASS HATRED!

In all lands and ages there has existed an unceasing conflict between Democracy and Autocracy.

In a delightful, soul-gripping romance of graphic realism is portrayed this conflict as it exists in our modern civilization, wherein heroic men and women of today continue unabated the long struggle for more room, greater opportunity—FREEDOM!

YOUR CALL ^T_O BATTLE

AS an Independent Exhibitor you have got to add your voice to the demand we will make from the floor of our national mass meeting of Independent Theatre Owners to learn the truth about the practices, intentions and tactics behind the competition we are getting from the producers who are buying, building or leasing theatres next door or across the street from our houses.

My desk is covered with telegrams from Independent Exhibitors who will be in Chicago on Monday, April 26, to mix in this straight-hitting, all-cards-on-the-table show-down with the Producer-Exhibitors. We're going there for action, and we're going to get it.

Producers are stampeding their way into the theatre field by organized activity. Their agents stick together and work together. And you're the victim.

Now—we'll fight fire with fire. We're going to take organized Independent Exhibitor action and find out just how hard they are going to bite the hands that are feeding them with advance deposits and rental money.

An organization of fifty or one hundred Independent Exhibitors doesn't mean anything to them. We've got to be there by the thousands.

Don't depend on us to do your fighting for you. Be there yourself, bare-knuckled and ready to do your part. Come to Chicago! You're an almighty, important part in this show-down.

That's why they like HARRY CAREY—because he's human. And he's human because he's a good actor. And because he's a good actor HARRY CAREY is playing today in the biggest theatres in the land—and where he plays—just take it from us—he sticks!

A Million dollar Reason

UNIVERSAL invests a million dollars a year in making Serials. Naturally, the only way in which Universal can get that money back is to make serials that make money for you. To do anything less than this means imperiling one million dollars and if anybody thinks Universal is going to do that he has another guess coming.

UNIVERSAL refuses to gamble on Serials. If we wanted to gamble we'd make a measly little $100,000 serial once a year, like the fly-by-night producer, and trust to luck that it would get over. But serial-making, with the Universal, is a business. We don't gamble in it—we invest. Invest our million dollars and our know-how brains and our big, crowd-pulling stars. This production has been sought more eagerly and given play dates on national release date more swiftly than any production we have ever known in the industry. Louise Glaum on April 11 achieves the unprecedented feat of playing fifty-five full week first runs simultaneously in the United States. In at least a dozen of these first run cities "Sex" will have two, three or four week runs.

ROY CLEMENTS

When we tell you that we would be pleased to discover ten pictures made by independent producers with the power and quality of "King Spruce" you have a much better estimate of its strength than if we merely told you how big a picture we considered it to be. First run exhibitors have sensed this, too, and "King Spruce" is booking the big theatres.

Holman F. Day's biggest and best known novel is a story of real people—it throbs with life and vitality. It has the healthy, fresh scents of the great forests in its photography and it stars in Mitchell Lewis a mighty fine, sincere actor that many of you exhibitors have accidentally under-rated. Prints of "King Spruce" are in all branches for pre-release now.

What They Say About "THE DANGEROUS TALENT"

MARGARITA FISHER

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Plenty of action. A well directed, exciting climax. Story is interesting and exceedingly appealing."

AMUSEMENTS: "Here at last is a real picture. A model of dramatic construction. Margarita Fisher has arrived. Not only is her work excellent, but also that of all the supporting cast. Harvey Clark deserves special mention."

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: "Satisfactory presentation of story in which elements of melodrama play a prominent part. Miss Fisher is exceedingly attractive."

BILLBOARD: "Constant interest in the unfolding of the story. Miss Fisher proves adept at emotional work and received splendid support throughout."

TRADE REVIEW: "Strong in suspense—plenty of quick action. Perfect continuity, cleverly devised climax. Margarita Fisher possesses both physical beauty and emotional ability. A sterling attraction."

WIDS: "Good play with unusual twists. Interests because of many surprising turns of plot."

DRAMATIC MIRROR: "In this day when so many film plays are sent out with barely enough plot to get by with audiences, it seems almost extravagant for any one picture to have so much story as has 'The Dangerous Talent.' It is all intensely interesting and not in the least confusing."

HERE'S THE PROOF FOR YOU, MR. BUYER!! KREMER CHAPLINS ARE SWEEPING THE COUNTRY

The Kremer Bulletin Board

The entire Fox Circuit of theatres books "The Champion," "The Jitney Elopement," "Work" and "By the Sea"—Chaplin's four funniest two-part comedies.

The Rivoli Theatre, of New York, is playing "Work" this week to record-breaking audiences. Dr. Riesenfeld, Managing Director of the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres, has already played "A Burlesque on Carmen" and "The Champion."

The New York newspaper and motion picture trade press hail "The Champion" as one of Chaplin's greatest comedies. To wit:—

Exhibitor's Trade Review—

"A revival of the Chaplin comedy, 'The Champion,' proved to be one of the best program hits; in fact, many patrons were heard to remark that nothing Mr. Chaplin has done recently compares favorably with this old-timer. The prize fight scene is a scream of fun and the only Charlie appears at his best all the way through."

New York Tribune—

"Charlie Chaplin appears in a revival of 'The Champion' bolsterous enough to bring several people near us to the verge of hysterical apoplexy."

"A Burlesque on Carmen" is breaking house records regularly wherever shown. Read:—

"Broke all house records for Sunday. Everybody well pleased."—J. J. Lamm, Shakespeare Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

SCREEN SMILES

"After viewing the last three releases of 'SCREEN SMILES' I have come to the conclusion that it is indeed as you told me—a novelty short-reel in every sense of the word.

The short, snappy sayings handed me many a laugh, and along with the illustrations should prove a valuable addition to any theatre program.

I feel that once an exhibitor starts playing "SCREEN SMILES" that it will undoubtedly remain a fixture in his theatre.

This five hundred feet of film has more laughs than the average two-reel comedy, and judging from the business we are doing now with "SCREEN SMILES" it will be at the head of our short stuff in the very near future.

Wishing you every success, I am,"

A HOMESPUN LETTER To Real Folks

To My Friends:—

I want to thank you for the many fine letters you are sending me and for the kind expressions they contain.

I am deeply grateful for your appreciation and understanding of what I am trying to bring out as an expression of good to all.

You will soon have an opportunity to see and judge "The Family Honor." It is my first independent production released through the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

I want you to see The Family Honor. I want you to know and understand the thought I have endeavored to convey.

I am making a stand for the picture you will want to carry home with you for a fireside topic.

You have lived, laughed and loved with the human characters in "The Turn In The Road," "Better Times," "The Other Half," and "Poor Relations."

And in The Family Honor you will find a new theme of tenderness that will strike a responsive chord on your heartstrings.

I know you will enjoy seeing this picture as much as I have enjoyed making it.

Personally I like it better than any picture I have had the privilege to produce.

Rosalie Ray was vaudeville's favorite. Rich men, poor men, young and old, fought for the garter she kicked to them off her shapely limb each night as she swung out over their heads. But Rosalie was disgusted with it all.

Then she gave it up. In the small town where she sought to escape from the glare and glamour of the stage and the sordidness of its people she met her ideal young man. And with the meeting came happiness until—

She learned that he worshipped some secret memento—something he kept hidden from all eyes but his own—a memory of some by-gone romance. Then one day, in an unguarded moment she saw it! It was—

That's the lure of this splendid picture and we won't spoil it for you—the smashing surprise climax that comes, unguessed at, unthought of to break the breathless spell of the story.

"THE INNER VOICE"

TWO Thomas H. now offered ON STATE

A "PERSONAL WORD" TO STATE RIGHT BUYERS AND INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES

By JOHN A. HAMMELL, Majestic Pictures

I WANT every State Right and Independent Exchange man to get the sincerity of what I say here and get my message straight.

Last week I turned down two flattering offers from two of the largest Distributing Organizations in the business for the two pictures advertised on the opposite page. WHY? Because I figured that to sell to ONE big Distributor meant making one good customer, while selling twenty-five or thirty State Right or Independent Exchange means making twenty-five or thirty good customers who will buy other goods from Majestic. What we want are friends and customers, not immediate gain—that's our whole idea in a nutshell.

MAJESTIC PICTURES is out to build up the biggest State Right business in the trade with good pictures and we're going to do it by not putting our eggs all in one basket.

So I say to you, Gentlemen—here are TWO BONA FIDE WINNERS. Thomas Ince produced them both, with two big Stars—Sessue Hayakawa and George Beban. You know them both. And you know them to be GENUINE BOX OFFICE STARS. And you know Thomas Ince pictures.

NOW—MAJESTIC plays no favorites, therefore we will State Right these two big pictures on the basis of "first come first served."

What the Press says:

L. R. Harrison in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Victor Seastrom's handling of the spirited and realistic scenes of storm at sea is almost a revelation. "A Man There Was" is a picture of high intensity and tender pathos, a drama of the soul.

John Morrell in the NEW YORK REVIEW

The picture keeps the spectator completely fascinated. In point of picturesqueness, story quality, interpretation and direction, it is an exceptional offering.

The star is Victor Seastrom, who is also the director. Fine as his performance is, his direction is better. The angles he has caught on the wreck are almost like animated conceptions of marine paintings.

As an actor he resembles William Farnum in countenance, but his performance is more finished. It is said that Mr. Seastrom is an American who is recognized in Europe as one of the foremost artists of the cinema. He should come to his native land and teach some of his rivals how to GET INTO CHARACTER.

Lawrence Reid in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS

In this picturization of "A Man There Was" there is revealed one of the treats of the season. As intelligent and carefully wrought as is the performance of Victor Seastrom, his direction is even better. His marine views resemble animated masterpieces. His entire work is highly realistic.

Helen Rockwell in the EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW

"A Man There Was" is presented with such simplicity and realism that its effect is twice as forceful as if moulded of the conventional melodramatic metal. The picture has been beautifully produced with exquisite views of the ocean in its various moods. The camera-work is excellent.

WID'S

Direction—has handled the sea scenes wonderfully well and registered the drama effectively. Photography—generally very fine. The star renders a powerful characterization.

The drama unfolded is one of strict elementals. All the sequences are handled very dramatically. Viken's attempt to save his boat is pictured with a real thrill. Certainly no sequence of sea scenes produced in this country has ever equalled in sheer natural force the sequence that leads to the climax of "A Man There Was."

NEW YORK DRAMATIC MIRROR

Victor Seastrom, an American artist hardly known in the United States, acclaimed in Europe as the "Prince of the Screen," appears in Henrik Ibsen's masterpiece, "A MAN THERE WAS." The story, symbolizing the life of a red blooded man in the clash of real human passions, is exceedingly dramatic in every respect.

W. Stephen Bush in THE BILLBOARD

This is a picture of rare merit, approaching our best in the technique of its photography, and equally our best in direction. In the subtlety of its art and its wonderfully calculated appeal to our pity, it comes close to surpassing our best average.

Victor Seastrom in the leading role dominates the situation. Without putting too great a strain on the press agent's popular group of adjectives, one cannot do justice to his great art, to his extraordinary powers of portrayal, to the subtlety of his characterization.

AND THIS FROM LONDON ABOUT OUR PICTURE:

THE CINEMATOGRAF

With magnificent photography, intense acting, and a story which grips the spectator, "A MAN THERE WAS" is one of the most attractive productions we have seen for a long while. Seldom has such a breezy, natural, human story been seen on the screen. It is a sea story that appears to convey the spray of the ocean in every scene, and being a clean, wholesome, well-told and intelligent narrative, it cannot fail to prove of inestimable value to the exhibitor.

THE BIOSCOPE

People who have grown weary of "the eternal triangle" of fickle wives and telephone intrigues, will welcome this grim epic of the sea where lilliputian emotions are substituted for by grand tragedy where the fundamental passions by which all humanity is swayed sound in a deep, deep vibration. Ibsen is the author of "A MAN THERE WAS" and it ranks with the works when the great master became poet and not cynic. The photography is excellent.

THE CINEMA

Whether Ibsen be the greatest of all times, or merely a sporadic flower of genius, any work to which his name is attached will always be sure of a full measure of respectful attention. There is that elusive something about it all which will not be denied. The play is most admirably acted; the action becomes tenser and tenser as the play proceeds and some of the scenes on the sea are uncannily realistic. The photography is exceptionally good.

Watch Albany These Days

A FINISH fight is being staged these days in Albany, where the exhibitors and distributors are endeavoring to impress on the rules committee of the Assembly their respective views on the merits and demerits of the Cotillo bill, which aims to amend the general business law in relation to money deposited or advanced upon a contract. The measure already has passed the Senate. As our correspondent very truly sets forth the battle will be watched with keen interest by the entire industry, for if in New York the measure becomes a law it will be a fore-runner for the introduction of many similar measures in other states.

Attempts have been made previously to enact deposit legislation in several commonwealths, but so far without success. As the New York exhibitors last year were instrumental in getting through the New York Legislature a Sunday opening measure they enter the present contest with the prestige of that achievement. To be sure at that time there was no opposition, on the contrary there was help, from the producing and distributing divisions of the trade. There will be many exhibitors throughout the country who will feel, by reason of the cordial relations existing between exhibitors and legislative leaders, that if a deposit measure can in any state be enacted into law that state will be New York; and that if it cannot be done in this state it will be more than an ordinary task—it will assume the proportions of an extraordinary task—to put through a like measure elsewhere.

These are some of the reasons why attention is being centered on Albany. And the legislature is slated for adjournment on April 24.

Ontario Favors Federal Censorship

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, by formal vote of its members, has gone on record as in favor of censorship for Canada. The action does not seem to be inspired by a desire to further the general principle of subjecting films to censorship. Rather it is aimed to get rid of the annoyance caused by the varying decisions of provincial boards; to have but one body, invested with the authority of the federal government behind it. In other words, being unable to dispose of the greater evil of separate boards they choose one of lesser proportions and greater scope.

To read that motion picture exhibitors have taken action looking to censorship in any form has an unusual sound—at least it does until we hear the whole story.

READERS of Moving Picture World will note this week a slight cutting down in the size of the paper. This is done as a measure of precaution in view of the threatened shortage of print paper. The situation has three angles, all of them important and any one of which may be dominating. In the first place the supply of print paper has been dwindling for many months. Again the possibility of labor troubles at the mills is not out of the question. Thirdly, and of immediate importance, is the transportation problem, which at the time of writing is a question of vital importance in the East.

The publishers of the World believe that in a few weeks matters will be straightened out. In the meantime prudence suggests a slight curtailment in the size of the paper, and for this they crave the indulgence of its readers.

"Don't Scold; Do Something"

NINE months ago it looked as if an association for the betterment of associations for the betterment of motion pictures would be necessary. The daily papers of the country were then devoting valuable space to communications from the president of the Motion Picture and Theatrical Co-operative Association and commenting editorially upon such startling headlines as "Calls Films 'Bunk,'" "Present Pictures World's Biggest Joke," and such statements as "We haven't a single trade-mark today that people believe in and their belief in the honesty of any particular firm is disappearing." At that time the Moving Picture World refused to support these absurd statements and also the ambitious but impractical plan by which the association proposed to remedy every ill in the motion picture industry.

Communications now appearing in the daily papers reveal a complete change of tone in the articles lately sent out by the president of the M. P. T. C. A., who is also president of the Motion Picture League for Better Pictures. The level-headed reply of Bottom, when cautioned that his roaring like a lion might offend his betters, that he would roar like a sucking dove is a famous example of diplomatic consideration. The league's motto, "Don't scold: Do something," is not only soothing, but shows proper regard for the practical side of the situation.

Last July the president of the M. P. T. C. A. was cautioned by this publication against uttering only half truths. His recent statement that the M. P. L. B. P. is actuated by a "spirit of sympathy and some comprehension that the producer has problems and perplexities" is a clear indication that he has seen the light. The Moving Picture World is naturally on the side of any movement that makes for better pictures, and will support the M. P. L. B. P. on the grounds laid down in its present confession of faith in the honesty of the producer as well as in its interest in the public welfare.

ONE of the chief features at the National Marine Exposition, held at the Grand Central Palace in New York the week of April 12, was motion pictures. One hundred and twenty-five commercial subjects were on the program. The number is impressive, as indicating the growth this form of advertising and exploitation has attained. It is even more impressive when it is taken into consideration that these pictures are representative of but one industry—that of ships and shipbuilding and their allied crafts. Apparently the photoplay division of moving pictures is not the only section of the trade that has discarded swaddling clothes for the garb of the husky youngster.

Canadian Exhibitors Run Sunday Shows Unmolested Despite Lord's Day Act

NO attempt whatsoever was made to hinder the operation of the moving picture theatres in Hull, Quebec, opposite Ottawa, on Sunday, April 4, in spite of threatened legal developments in the Province of Quebec. The talk of closing the Quebec theatres on Sundays had the effect of attracting still larger crowds than usual to Hull from the Ontario side of the Ottawa River on Easter Sunday, and not the slightest move to restrict the Sunday shows was apparent.

A report from Quebec City that no actual move would be taken by the provincial authorities for the present to ban Sunday shows led to an expression of opinion in Ottawa that apparently the Quebec government intended to throw the onus of enforcing the Lord's Day Act upon the federal authorities, with whom the Quebec government is not in harmony in a political sense. This is highly interesting, in view of the fact that the French-Canadian section of Quebec is said to be anxious for a federal election in Canada as soon as possible.

There is also a report from Montreal that the Lord's Day Alliance has decided not to take action against exhibitors who violate the Lord's Day Act until the arrival in Montreal from Winnipeg of the Rev. Dr. Rochester, general secretary of the alliance and one of the most active of the uplifters. The alliance at Montreal has appointed a special committee to deal with the Sunday show question, and it is intimated that this committee will meet shortly to decide upon the action that is promised.

No Commercialism in Work of Trade for Americanism

REPORTS from all sections of the country continue to come to Harry M. Crandall, chairman of the exhibitors' branch of the Americanization Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, from exhibitors indicating their continued activity in the movement.

Already the trailers that had been written by Franklin K. Lane, former secretary of the interior, and chairman of the committee, are being used in theatres throughout the country.

Mr. Crandall, in speaking of this work, said this week: "I want the exhibitors to realize that there is no commercial side to this movement. The producing companies are making the films without profit and they are being distributed without profit and are being sold to the exhibitor at the lowest possible rate. It is the intention to get circulation, and after they have been shown in the regular motion picture theatres they will be released through community, church, industrial and welfare agencies."

Revenue Bureau Revises Tax on "First" Feature Showings

THE use of large New York theatres for first showings of "big" features, as part of the advertising campaign of the producers, has made it necessary for the bureau of internal revenue to revise its regulations for the collection of the 5 per cent. rental tax on films exhibited by owners. Officials of the bureau now declare that returns on pictures exhibited in this manner show frequently that they were exhibited at a loss because the rental of the theatre and other expenses were high.

Accordingly, the acting commissioner of internal revenue has ruled that: "The fair rental or license value of a film exhibited by an owner for a limited period as a part of an advertising or other program intended to enhance the future rental or license value of the film shall be based on the actual rental received for the film at the expiration of that period by the owner or by the person purchasing state or other territorial rights therein. An owner-exhibitor under such circumstances shall accompany his return with a statement showing the actual amounts for which the film has been leased, and in what city or cities and at what theatre or theatres it is to be shown."

Saskatchewan Law Provides Censorship of Advertising

A DRASTIC advertising censorship law has been adopted by the provincial legislature of Saskatchewan to come into effect on May 1. The new law prohibits the use of any lithographs, still photographs, slides or moving picture advertising matter until approval has been secured from the government. The adopted law is similar to the one proposed a short time ago by the new Ontario government, but which was abandoned, after investigation, because of the apparent impossibility to enforce such a drastic measure to the letter. The Saskatchewan law provides that proofs of all theatre advertisements for newspapers must be submitted to a censor board before they can be used.

The Saskatchewan theatres are face to face with a serious situation. In Ontario the government decided to keep an eye on all theatres advertising in the newspapers and to point out objectionable features when they arise. The same understanding has been reached in Manitoba, it is understood, but in Saskatchewan an advertising censorship law has actually been adopted.

The proposition for Sunday shows was defeated in Bloomington, Ill., on April 6 by a majority of 600.

This was much smaller than the majority at the last election, and the managers hope to be able to put it over the next time.

For the Love a—of a Girl.
William Russell's got that spring feeling in Fox's "Leave It to Me."

A. M. P. A. New Member of U. S. Chamber of Commerce

A NOTABLE step in the development and progress of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., was taken when that body was elected an organization member of the United States Chamber of Commerce. At a regular luncheon meeting, President Paul Gulick read a letter from D. A. Skinner, assistant secretary of the Chamber in Washington, announcing the election.

The advertisers' organization is grouped in Class A by the Chamber, its numerical membership strength entitling it to a delegate representing it in the Chamber, this delegate also to act as national councillor. Paul Gulick was unanimously elected to serve as the first delegate and councillor. Mr. Gulick paid a tribute to the interest which Alfred P. Perkins, of New York, has taken in the recommendation of the association for election to the Chamber. The affiliation officially dates as of March 4.

Exhibitor Paul Gustanovic, of Cleveland, briefly addressed the advertisers on the growth of the industry and announced that it was his early intention to increase his number of theatres from five to ten.

Sabbath Opening Movement Makes Progress in Nebraska

GRAND ISLAND, one of the larger cities in Nebraska, voted three to one on April 6 to permit its motion picture houses to remain open on Sundays. This is the first Sunday opening fight of the season in Nebraska and is almost certain to be followed by a widespread effort of many other cities, including Lincoln, Neb., to open their motion picture theatres on Sunday.

Lincoln, the state capital, has been closed on Sundays for years. The Chamber of Commerce, however, has appointed a special committee to see what can be done toward opening Lincoln theatres on Sunday.

Fremont, another of the larger cities in Nebraska, a year ago elected a "liberal" city administration, but thus far the city officials have not seen fit to bring about Sunday opening. This step is expected, however, at any time.

More Rigorous Taxation.

The British Columbia government expects to secure a revenue of $600,000 a year from the theatre business of the province through a new system of amusement taxation which has been proposed. The proposed legislation, which has been under the consideration of the legislature, provides for the payment to the province of 20 per cent. of the gross receipts of all theatres. This is an extremely heavy levy, and exhibitors of Vancouver are talking of closing their theatres.

The proposed law is classed as the highest tax on amusements in the whole world, and it has been pointed out that the admission tax in Ontario, which is fairly high, averages 7½ per cent. on the gross receipts.

To Erect a Third in Pine Bluff.

J. B. Simon, proprietor of the Best and Orpheo theatres, of Pine Bluff, Ark., has purchased Main street property for the erection of another large theatre. His policy is motion pictures, interstate vaudeville and motion pictures and road attractions. He is manager of the Best Theatre Company.

Exhibitors and National Association Clash at Albany Over Deposits Bill

Cotillo Measure Already Has Passed Senate and Is Now in Rules Committee of Assembly, Where Distributors Will Try to Keep It—Each Side Issues Statement—Legislature to Adjourn April 24.

Albany, April 13.
BATTLELINES are being drawn in the Legislature today for the bitterest fight ever staged between the motion picture producers and the exhibitors of this State, the former doing their utmost to down the Cotillo bill, which seeks to amend the general business law in relation to money deposited or advanced upon a contract, while the exhibitors are working tooth and nail in its favor. The bill, introduced and passed last week in the Senate, is now in the rules committee. The State Legislature is slated to adjourn on April 24. Every effort on the part of the exhibitors will be bent toward releasing the bill from the rules committee and getting it to a vote.

When first introduced by Senator Cotillo, the bill slipped quietly along without arousing any opposition. A dissection of the measure, however, has brought about a storm of opposition in which the producers are leaving no stone unturned in their efforts to keep the bill from getting further than the rules committee. Each side has its representatives on the ground and the storm center about the bill is one of the features of the closing days of the session.

Producers Say Bill Would Kill Deposits.

According to the producers, the bill, while it appears innocuous, has for its real intent the prevention of motion picture companies from asking or receiving advance payments on bookings of films. The measure will be watched by the industry throughout the entire United States, for if passed in New York State it is probable similar efforts will be made in other states to bring about similar action.

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League; W. H. Linton, of Utica, treasurer, and W. A. Callihan, of Rochester, one of the vice-presidents arrived on the scene of action today and lost no time in plunging into the fray. Royal K. Fuller, a representative of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry, is also on the ground. Senators and assemblymen are being flooded with letters and telegrams from the producers.

Cohen Says Aim Is to Safeguard.

Tonight Mr. Cohen gave out the following statement, as outlining the attitude of the State Exhibitors' League in regard to the bill which it is claimed will safeguard the film deposits paid by the exhibitors of New York State:

The bill is a constructive measure to safeguard the vast amount of moneys exacted by producers and distributors of film by way of deposit or advance payments from exhibitors doing business in New York State. The exhibitors of the State strenuously oppose the vicious deposit system at present in vogue, but so long as the producers and distributors of film insist on deposits and advance payments from responsible theatre owners, then we in turn ask only what is fair and just, that our moneys which they have in their possession be safeguarded and protected so that when we perform our contract this money will be available to be applied on the contract.

Concerned as to Possible Bankruptcy

We also want to make certain that our money will be available in the event of the producer or distributor not performing his part of the contract or going out of business, or possibly into bankruptcy.

We also want to prevent the moneys exacted from us for deposits or advance payments being used by irresponsible promoters in either building new theatres in competition with us or in wildcat speculation, or to use the same to produce pictures which may take a year or two years before they are offered to us for showing in our theatres, and very often when one of these pictures, which has been made with our own money and has turned out to be a very good one, has been completed, they will not permit us to play it on the original plan, claiming it is either a special or a super-production, and then proceed to sell it to us on a different basis.

Says Producer Should Not Oppose Bill.

This bill ought not to be opposed by any distributor or producer of film who has the interests of exhibitors at heart. The position of the producer and distributor in opposition to this bill, according to the statement of their own representative, creates considerable surprise to the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the State of New York, because not alone do these people have our moneys on deposit or by advance payments on account of our contracts, but they have a combination known as the F. I. L. M. club, composed of all the distributors in this State, backed by their home offices, which organization prevents any exhibitor in the State of New York from securing film of any kind from any manufacturer or distributor of film if he does not perform his contractual obligations. The exhibitor in this State, as well as in many other States, has suffered many injustices and abuses by representatives of film companies in their negotiations and their contractual relations.

Proposed Indemnity Rejected.

The Exhibitors' League of New York State formed a Credit Indemnity Association, composed of substantial exhibitors in this State, and has offered time and again to put up a fund sufficiently large, $100,000 if necessary, to guarantee the contractual relations of every member of this organization, and made this offer for the purpose of doing away with the deposit system or advance payment which we object to so much, but this offer has not been accepted.

Association's Statement Denied.

It is unfortunate that in this big industry of ours the manufacturer and distributor members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry have not seen fit to treat with the motion picture exhibitors of the United States in a spirit of even-handed justice and fair play. The exhibitors' interests have not been considered at any time by the members of this association, and time and again the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has gone out of its way to antagonize and injure the motion picture exhibitors of the United States. This should be corrected at the earliest possible moment, as there are a number of matters where the combined and concerted efforts of everybody in this industry are required.

To cite one specific instance, we mention the statement issued today by the representative of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, who we would not like to believe has wilfully misstated important matters affecting this bill. We call attention to the statement he has made that 99 out of every 100 persons of those engaged in this industry are satisfied with the present deposit system. It is our thought that almost every exhibitor in the United States opposes it, and at our convention in Utica March 9 and 10 a resolution was adopted unanimously by the 1,000 members of our State league vigorously protesting against the continuance of the deposit system as it now exists, and urging that the same be done away with.

Has Deposits of $27,000.

As to this party's statement that it would be difficult to find a bank to accept exhibitors' funds because of their very smallness, might we not mention that one of the members of our league has more than $27,000 on deposit with various film companies, another more than $20,000 and any number of exhibitors have sums ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 on deposit with film companies.

It is also our thought that a continuation of the deposit and advance payment system has resulted in increasing the cost of our doing business, as it has been made very easy for some irresponsible promoters to secure large sums of money in advance for objects only in contemplation, and this has resulted in inflation of the worst kind, as these promoters have offered more money to stars and players than their present contracts have provided, enticing these stars and players either to break existing contracts or at the termination of their present contracts to ask and get two and three times what they were formerly paid and were satisfied with.

Believes Bill Constitutional.

In our opinion the bill is constitutional. It is fair and just to both the exhibitor, the manufacturer and the producer, as all we ask for as exhibitors is that if our money is taken from us we shall at least be assured that the same is in safekeeping.

We also hope that the producers and distributors of film will join with the exhibitors of this country at the earliest possible moment to draw and have in use in their business a uniform contract. It is our thought that by encouraging this movement and putting the same in operation it will show good faith to the exhibitor and the same will be repaid to the producers by good will and additional business of their customers, the motion picture exhibitors of the United States. This bill has been drawn to correct and prevent the abuses existing only in the renting of motion picture films.

Association Outlines Position.

In opposing the bill, the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry, through its representative, outlined its stand as follows:

The opposition to the bill is that it changes the entire method of doing business, built up over a period of years and satisfactory to 99 out of every 100 of those engaged. Even in its amended form, limiting it to the motion picture business alone, the bill is in the opinion of the producers and distributors a pernicious one and the passage of which will work immeasurable injury to the business, provided that it could be enforced, which is impossible for constitutional reasons.

In its original form, the bill would have seriously hampered a great many branches of industry entirely foreign to the motion picture business, although there is no question but that the measure was drafted for the sole purpose of taking care of a certain condition of affairs that has brought about unwarranted objection from some quarters.

Would Convert Deposits Into Trust.

In its amended form, the bill now reads that whenever money shall be deposited or advanced on a contract for the use or rental of personal property as security for performance of the contract or to be applied to payments on such contract when due, such money with interest accruing thereon, if any, until repaid or so applied, shall continue to be the money of the person making such deposit or advance and shall be a trust fund in the possession of the person with whom such deposit or advance shall be made and shall be deposited in the bank or trust company and not mingled with other funds or become an asset of such trustee.

The bill affects only the rental of personal property and there is no reason why it should not affect real estate, except, of course it was aimed to affect only motion picture interests. The bill is absolutely without force or effect for the pure and simple reason that under the state constitution no one can be prevented from entering into a legal contract for legitimate purposes.

It is doubtful if a bank could be found, which would accept the so-called trust funds because of their very smallness. No exhibitor has lost any money by reason of the arrangements that are in force today and a number of lawyers have expressed the opinion that if the bill in its present form becomes a law, it will affect the industry in no way as it cannot destroy the right of parties to make a contract.

One of the strange features of this attempted legislation affecting one of the largest industries is that no hearing has been held on the bill and furthermore that the men in the industry have been given no opportunity to protest against it. So quietly was the bill slipped along that many of the members of the Senate who voted for it had absolutely no knowledge of the drastic but cleverly concealed provisions.

In carrying on the fight Senators and Assemblymen today received letters and telegrams from producing companies carrying the following message of protest:

The majority of the exhibitors object to this bill, regardless of any assertions on the part of the State League. The payment in advance was originally devised to protect responsible exhibitors from irresponsible ones and to protect the films against loss and damage which frequently occur where the exhibitor has no responsibility for the return of the film in the condition in which he received it. The passage of this Cotillo bill will work a hardship on the exchanges and distributors, who are operating very smoothly under the system now in vogue, and also on the next exhibitor who has to run the film. We oppose any effort toward the enactment of this bill into a law which will be most far-reaching in its effects.

Otter Elliott to Collect Tax.

The enforcement of the amusement tax in Ontario has been transferred from the provincial treasurer's department to the moving picture theatre bureau, of which Otter Elliott, of Toronto, is the head. The checking up of tax returns by exhibitors throughout the province will now come under the direction of Mr. Elliott, who was also recently appointed chairman of the new moving picture advertising censorship board established by the government.

Ivan Abramson's "A Child for Sale" Is Hailed as a Blow to Profiteering

ON request of several organizations interested in solving the high cost of living and rent profiteering, a special screening of Ivan Abramson's latest production, "A Child for Sale," was given at Wurlitzer Fine Art Hall, 118 West Forty-first street, New York, on April 8. A representative of the mayor and president of the board of aldermen, officials of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering and a number of justices of the municipal court were present. Some of the justices brought their wives and other members of the family with them.

Perhaps nothing will so well express the opinion of those present as the words of Justice J. Strahl in a letter addressed to Mr. Abramson:

"I am glad that I availed myself of the opportunity to attend the screening of your remarkable production, 'A Child for Sale,' dealing with the high cost of living and rent profiteering. The timeliness of the subject, as well as the entertaining quality of your intense drama, will surely not only please but bring home the much needed lesson to people in all walks of life. Your picture has an important mission and will prove a valuable collaborator in solving the most important problem now facing the country."

Solomon Lewisohn, of the mayor's committee, who has had over 40,000 cases before him treating of this crucial problem, wrote as follows: "On the advice of my physician I had to resign from active work from the committee last week. While the work of the mayor's committee is going on and doing splendid work, I am more than pleased to see that your picture, 'A Child for Sale,' which I viewed last Thursday due to your kind invitation, makes me feel that I can more easily follow my physician's advice, inasmuch as in this picture a most powerful influence toward solving this problem has arisen. While of course, it does not go into all harassing details of the question, I appreciate that as a producer you kept the dramatic value in the foreground, so as to make it entertaining to the masses. I congratulate you and all the citizenry upon the splendid, highly entertaining and yet so forceful argument."

Receive Letters of Praise.

A number of letters from prominent women's clubs have been received. The most touching one was from the Little Mother's Aid Association, Mrs. Clarence Burns, president. This one excerpt from the letter will convey just how the picture appealed: "It is an appealing and pathetic story, beautifully staged and unusually well acted through the whole cast and it will not fail to carry an appeal that softens the hearts of all who will see it."

Seeks Exploitation Ideas.

The management of the Graphic Film Corporation is desirous of entering into the largest and most extensive publicity campaign ever attempted by it. The plans will not be confined to the use of the trade press; plans have already been laid to go into an energetic campaign in all large centers throughout the country, feeling that the question is a burning one in each municipality.

Walter Edwards Dies While on a Vacation in Honolulu

A CABLEGRAM received on April 14 by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced the death in Honolulu, Hawaii, of Walter Edwards, for the past three years a director of Paramount Artcraft pictures. The message was brief and omitted all details as to the cause.

The death of Walter Edwards marks the passing of a veteran figure of stage and screen. On completion of his education at a Michigan college he went directly into the editorial offices of a Lansing newspaper. His natural ability at mimicry made an impression upon Frederick Warde who offered him an engagement.

When the industry was young he became affiliated with Thomas H. Ince and later with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. In his latter day associations he directed Bryant Washburn, Vivian Martin, Lila Lee, Wallace Reid, Ethel Clayton and Marguerite Clark.

Mrs. George F. Rendall Dies.

On Monday, April 12, Mrs. George F. Rendall, mother of Harold F. Rendall advertising solicitor for the Motion Picture News, and mother-in-law of Robert W. Priest, president of the Film Market, died in a hospital in the Bronx, New York City. Both of these are well known in the film trade, and the sympathy of their many friends is extended to them in their bereavement. Mrs. Rendall has been in bad health for a long time, and during the last few months has been confined to her bed. She was buried April 14.

Says Reformers Supporting Censorship Wish to Close Massachusetts Theatres

(By wire to Moving Picture World.)

CHARGES that five reformers behind the movement for moving picture censorship in Massachusetts are working with the avowed ultimate aim of closing all photoplay houses in the state were made by Representative John I. Fitzgerald, of Boston, a member of the House ways and means committee, at a hearing on Wednesday, April 14, at Boston, on the revised censorship bill.

"I tell you this is no idle matter," shouted the representative at Mrs. Ralph F. Kirtland, social worker of Malden. "You reformers have a sinister aim. You are out to close all the movie houses the only amusement the poor have left. I was standing at the rear of this hearing room and I heard four women discussing censorship. 'We'll close their theatres yet,' said one woman. The others nodded their approval.

"You say you represent the foreign element, that foreign women plead for better movies. It might interest you to know that the thousands of foreigners of all nationalities in my district think the movies are all right, that not one complaint has been made to me. You want to wipe out the movie theatres entirely; that's what you reformers, who represent everyone in the country, want to do."

Both Sides Favor Referendum.

Representative Frank B. Phinney, of Boston, declared that the proposed censorship law was an invasion of personal rights of the people, who, he said, should be allowed to be their own judges in anything of a moral nature. He stated that a number of the women who have been touring Massachusetts to line up women's clubs for censorship are paid workers. In securing the endorsement of the women's organizations, he said, these women had given the voters only one side of the question.

Suggestion of putting the whole censorship question up to a referendum of the people seemed to meet with favor on both sides. Judge J. A. Brackett, of Boston, who conducted the opponents' case, and B. Preston Clark, who headed the proponents, expressed their willingness.

"I'd like to see the people themselves given a chance to pass on these questions," said former Rabbi Charles Fleischer. "Let's have a referendum on censorship of moving pictures, on prohibition, on war, on the way women dress. I believe the people would say that there are plenty of laws on the statute books now. You reformers are making more mischief on the sex question by continually talking about it, but I suppose you have got to let your feelings out somehow."

Says Hysteria Animates "Reformers."

That the authorities have the power under the present law to censor moving pictures was the contention of Judge Brackett.

"The final analysis of the whole matter," he said, "is that it is hysteria. It is a pitiful confession for the people of this commonwealth to say that the authorities have not done their duty in stopping such hideous evils which some good folks say are going on in this state today. If they did not know they had the power, I think it the duty of the legislature to at least give them another year to postpone this question. Another twelve months, and in the meantime if people have complaints against films, let them go to the proper authorities as provided by law and have them stopped."

Under the new proposed bill the State

Public Safety Committee would have a director of censorship at a $3,500 a year salary, four assistants and four clerks, nine new members of the state police to act as censors-general and four motion picture machines. Col. Alfred F. Foote, head of the public safety department, estimated that the censorship work would cost his department $40,350 a year and that the revenues from fees would amount to only $31,200 annually.

Representative Fitzgerald promptly attacked these figures as Col. Foote went over the various items. Mr. Fitzgerald said moving picture censorship would cost Massachusetts easily $100,000 the first year. The representative also expressed curiosity to know if the bill, which would allow members of the public safety committee to view films, wouldn't give members of that department an opportunity to see all the movie shows free and to take their families along, and have a good time. Col. Foote denied this, saying the bill simply gives state police officers entrance to theatres at all times. Mr. Fitzgerald added that delinquency used to be traced to liquor but now it is fastened on the moving pictures.

Pennsylvania a Poor Example.

Pennsylvania, which has a censorship board, was held up by proponents of the bill as a model of what good censorship will do. Judge Brackett introduced evidence to show that out of 7,000 letters sent out by the National Federation of College Women, 5,000 replies came mostly from Pennsylvania, and that most of the college women of the Keystone State condemned censorship.

"Censorship of motion pictures," said Judge Brackett, "has long been a hobby with the state police. No standard of morals which would be applicable to children could be applied to adults. If we are to go into the morals of the state we should start at the bottom and keep children from motion picture shows. The state police have no right to determine for 700,000 theatrigoers in Massachusetts what is right and what is wrong for them."

The ways and means committee took the bill under advisement.

Power Projects Pictures at First New York Marine Show

THE final touch to the successful marine show held this week at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, was added by the Nicholas Power Company, Inc., whose machines projected motion pictures on the screen in two different rooms. The picture showed marine apparatus in actual operation in shipyards, and in one of the rooms a lecturer described the pictures in detail.

The Power company had an exhibit where two models were on display, the 6B arc and the 6B incandescent. The machines are of the type used on battleships and are painted so as to be rust-proof. Ten men under the direction of General Manager Will C. Smith alternated in attendance at the booth. One of the interested visitors to the booth during the week was Admiral Benson.

Export Trade Grows.

Our export trade in moving picture films is growing steadily, according to figures which have just been compiled by the department of commerce. Reports for February show that unexposed film was shipped abroad to the total of 1,172,294 linear feet, with a value of $46,869, while exports of exposed film totaled 11,541,973 feet, valued at $589,248, a total of more than 2,400 miles.

The figures show that our most important customers for unexposed film are Argentina, Canada, Mexico and Brazil, while England, Australia and Canada are the largest users of exposed film.

Disastrous to Shut Out Foreign Films from American Theatre, Says Howells

THE American screen has never barred the foreign film and never will. World progress and the advance of civilization forbid it. The development of the industry makes it impossible. From the more selfish standpoint of commercial expediency any effort, however slight, to keep foreign films from American theatres would be disastrous.

"The motion picture is an art. Art is international. The work of the great masters of the world in music, painting, drama and literature belong to no nation and to no race. Likewise the work of the masters of motion picture production belongs to the world."

Answers Misinterpretation of Interview.

David P. Howells, international distributor, gave this answer this week to a misinterpretation of his recent interview in which he charged that American exporters, discouraged by unfavorable rates of exchange, were "deserting under fire."

Mr. Howells made clear in no uncertain terms his opinion of international film conditions and expressed his sincere belief that the foreign film, recovering from the handicaps of production during the war and early reconstruction, would find its place on the American screen.

In fact, the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which Mr. Howells represents in the foreign field, was the first large American distributing organization to release, after the war, a foreign made picture in the United States. It was a picture made in England.

Merely a Question of Merit.

"On a trip through Europe a year ago I personally investigated this phase of international distribution," continued the distributor, "and my opinions on the matter are based upon personal investigation."

"Before the war France, Germany and Italy were the principal motion picture producers abroad. Some production had been developed in England under adverse climatic conditions. The war interrupted picturemaking in Europe. The best brains of all Europe turned to the business of making war. Art stood still.

"The more liberal-minded men in the industry in Europe admit that the reason foreign films have not been accepted by the American public during the last several years is because the standard of foreign production has fallen so far short of the standard of American production.

Foreign Producers Progressing Rapidly.

"Imagine, if you can, what kind of pictures we would be producing in the United States today were picture production to have been arrested in the fall of 1914 as it was in Europe. American production stepped ahead in the natural development of a new industry. Foreign production stood still. Just step out and screen an average American production of 1914 alongside of a 1920 super-feature and you will get a picture of comparison.

"Foreign producers are making up for the lost time. On the continent last autumn I saw that tremendous strides are being made in production. It will not be many months before Europe or the British Isles will send us something in the way of pictures that will surprise us.

Talk of Ban Is "Tommy Rot."

"As foreign representative of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, I make it my business to keep closely in touch with the American market as well as the world market, and I can say that First National for one has the latchstring out to the foreign producer who comes along with the picture up to its standard, just as the First National doors are open to the American producer who delivers the sort of picture First National demands.

"This talk against importation is all tommy rot. The American public wants to see good motion pictures just as it wants to see good paintings, read good books, wear good clothes and eat good food products, regardless of where they come from.

Would Be Blow Below the Belt.

"The foreign producer realizes as well as the American exhibitor and the American distributor why there is no market today for his pictures here. He isn't kidding himself about it for a minute. He's sawing wood, getting his standard of production up to the American standard, and when he does the foreign picture will come back and come back strong.

"I look upon the business of motion picture exporting as a specialized branch of the industry's development and I intend to stick to it. I'm not going to quit just because the going has become a bit rough. I don't believe that the rest of the exporters ought to desert under the conditions.

"I feel that any attempt to deliberately check the importation would be a blow below the belt to the motion picture industry and I believe I am expressing the opinion of the best thinkers of the industry in America when I say so.

America Has Its Poor Pictures.

"There is no place on the American screen today for the cheaply produced, poorly made picture, irrespective of its source. There are any number of American productions in storage vaults today in this country which have never been shown outside private projection rooms, and probably never will be because they aren't good enough.

"The American exhibitor, I will admit, has a prejudice against the foreign film because all the foreign films he has seen in several years have been below the standard he expects in pictures. The market for foreign films was virtually 'killed' in the days just after the war began by the release as foreign art films of a quantity of mediocre productions.

Latin Americans Like Foreign Films.

"As an evidence of the fact that merit and not American prejudice has kept foreign films off the screen in this country, conditions in non-producing countries can be cited. Latin America actually prefers pictures made in France and Italy. They depict more nearly the mode of living and the mode of expression of the people of Latin America and they have a greater appeal. Despite this advantage which the foreign producer had and still has, the American picture has won a pre-eminent place in the theatres of Latin America because its quality is so much better than European films.

"We can all recall that our first features came from Europe and that European producers forced American producers into making five-reel features. One of the classics of motion picture art, 'Cabiria,' came from Italy, and I don't believe that any picture in the history of the business received a more cordial reception nor was a greater commercial success in the American theatre than this masterpiece.

America Must Not "Rest Content."

"The United States has acquired, strictly on the merit of production, world leadership in motion picture making. I hope to see American production retain its leadership. Speaking with a knowledge of what is going on abroad, European producers are doing some things that are going to amaze us and our world leadership cannot be retained on the laurels we have won. We have got to keep making better pictures or somebody is going to take that leadership away from us, and they can take it away from us on the American screen just as well as they can on the screens of Europe or the Orient."

Patterson Says Big Money Interests Oppose Coming Exhibitor Convention

THIS is a show-down. It has been a long time coming but it is here. All the anticipated opposition propaganda against it, which, I am reliably informed, has been sprung in a dozen places within two days after publication of the announcement that I had taken the initiative as an independent exhibitor and asked every fellow independent in the country to join me in a huge mass meeting in Chicago, won't and can't stop it. The Chicago meeting means that the independent exhibitor is through being walked on."

With the foregoing as a prelude, Willard C. Patterson, manager of Sig Samuel's Criterion Theatre, Atlanta, and president of the Southeastern Theatre Managers' Association, charges that already several forces are at work in the exhibitor field in various sections of the country, attempting to forestall any concerted response to his call for a national meeting of independent theatre owners at the Hotel Congress, Chicago, on Monday, April 26, to demand what he terms "a show-down with the producer-exhibitors who are trying to drive the independent fellows out of the business by buying, building or leasing theatres to compete with them."

Perceives Counter Attack.

"I knew before I started this national call for a mass meeting," declares Mr. Patterson, "that immediately it became public property there would be a well organized attempt from the quarters where its force will be felt the most to offset and discount it in the estimation of every independent exhibitor the opposition can reach through personal meetings with their representatives."

"That is why I took the initial precaution of assuring myself, before making a definite decision to assume the initiative, that other independent exhibitors felt as I do about the necessity for knowing exactly where we are at with the producers who are invading the theatre branch of the industry. I had received answers from more than 200 exhibitors before I felt certain that my attitude as an individual was a genuine reflection of the national exhibitor sentiment toward competing with theatres operated by the producers whose films they are renting. These studied attempts to discourage a national mass meeting are too late to be effective."

"This mass meeting will be sensational. I do not mean that it will be full of politics and the sort of sensationalism that have made some of our previous national exhibitor meetings memorable within the industry and disgusting outside. There are going to be revelations of the methods of the producer invasion which will startle the trade."

A Call to Fight Hard.

"The independent exhibitors fortunate enough to be in territories where the producer has not yet attempted to get a theatre foothold, where the hand of monopoly will strike as soon as it gets a firm clutch on its present objectives, are alive to the dangers but not so thoroughly as are their brother exhibitors who have seen their tactics in operation."

"The big-money effort to dominate the motion picture is not a bugbear. It is an actual danger and I have facts and figures to reveal at the Chicago meeting to show that it is. Unless the independent exhibitor fights, fights hard, fights now and fights together, there won't be an independent exhibitor in another two years."

"There have been efforts before to monopolize the business. These efforts were directed chiefly at a monopoly of production, and because production is an art and cannot be 'cornered,' the attempt failed. It is possible to monopolize theatres, to effect an absolute motion picture theatre trust. With theatre ownership and control of the avenues of distribution, big capital can quickly accomplish this."

Will Convince Skeptical Exhibitors.

"The exhibitor who doesn't fully appreciate the danger which confronts him, who says that the menace we see is 'bosh,' needs only to attend the Chicago meeting to convince himself. It is duty he owes to himself and his theatre. The independent exhibitors cannot be wiped out, forced to sell out or frozen out, if they will stand up and fight together. There are enough of us successfully to protect our interests if we get into action, and we will—in Chicago."

"Thirtieth Piece of Silver" Appeals to All Classes, Says S. S. Hutchinson

THE 'Thirtieth Piece of Silver' will prove one of the most popular photostories ever presented by making a strong appeal to all classes," is the prediction of S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company. "This new special contains every element of popular appeal and runs the gamut of human emotions with the exception of the sordid elements, which are happily missing."

"To begin with, the public wants a good story, well told. This is an exact description of 'The Thirtieth Piece of Silver'—a good story, well told. Every detail of environment and action is so suggestive of the points to be put across, every step in the development of the plot so clear and convincing, the continuity so excellent, and the actors' performance is in such perfect accord with the concept of both director and author, that the result is a masterpiece. Mystery, humor and suspense are well interlarded with the unfolding of romance."

"This meeting is not called for the purpose of forming an association, but to determine, in open conference and discussion, with facts and figures to reason from, the best method of combating the danger of producer monopoly in the theatre field, and it seems to me that the organization of a national, permanent association of the real independent exhibitors can accomplish this better than any other method."

"From the responses I have received to date it is certain that many of the biggest and most important exhibitors in the country will be there, and for every one of them there will be two or more of the independent theatre owners from the smaller cities and town, men who have had sufficient experience with producer-exhibitor theatres or producer-exhibitor agents, or who know exhibitors who have had this sort of opposition confronting them, to realize the need for immediate action to check the encroachment."

Fisher appeared so attractive, so piquant and captivating. King Baggot, one of the best known and most popular leading men on the screen, is admirably adapted to the part of the reserved and eccentric husband whose penchant for collecting relics of the past make him oblivious to the claim of the present."

"In this 'Flying A' special King Baggot is appealing in the realization of possessing a loving young spouse, yet torn by jealousy and burdened with a heaviness of a guilty conscience which dampens all his surroundings. In complete contrast is the role of the other man in the drama, Forrest Stanley, that of a carefree young aviator, with all the joyous possibilities of life in prospect before him, and yet with nothing attained, except a fine army record."

Charles Leaves Universal to Handle Simplex Business

CHARLES C. CHARLES, president of the Albany Theatre Supply Company, Simplex dealers, and for ten years traveling representative for the Universal Film Company in New York State, has sent in his resignation to the latter company, to take effect on Monday, October 12.

The news of this action will come as a surprise to his many friends, but as he says in his statement: "The affairs of the Albany Theatre Supply Company have long since reached that stage where they require the personal attention of the company's chief executive."

As Simplex selling agents, the Albany Theatre Supply Company has found it necessary to enlarge its quarters. But so great a future does Mr. Charles predict in his territory that he has just completed negotiations for the ground floor location in the Clinton Theatre Building, North Pearl street, Albany.

This new location, with a fifty-foot frontage, includes two large show windows in one of which Mr. Charles plans on placing a specially finished French ivory Simplex Machine, which, illuminated with vari-colored lights, will attract the theatre-goers. The front of the new store will be devoted to a machine and parts display room, while in the rear will be located the executive offices."

The proceeds went to the widow and children of the late Patrolman Henry Immen, who was shot and killed in the performance of his duty as a policeman in Bronx County.

Ontario Exhibitors Unanimously Vote Against Accepting Percentage Booking

At its monthly meeting, held in the club quarters at 34 Richmond street, West, Toronto, on Tuesday, April 6, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association, of Ontario, placed itself on record as opposed to the booking of moving pictures on a percentage basis. A standing vote was taken on the question and the decision was unanimously against the percentage plan.

Further, on the motion of William Sturges, a Toronto exhibitor, which was seconded by Mr. Redway, the association decided to draw up an agreement form for all members to sign, with regard to the percentage booking feature.

In this connection, it should be pointed out that the association possesses a membership of over 200 exhibitors in Ontario, and practically all independent theatre owners or proprietors are supporters of the organization. The decision of the association, therefore, apparently carries with it considerable weight.

A discussion followed the reading of a letter from E. Reeb, of the Grand Theatre, Port Colborne, in which the statement was made that Mr. Reeb would close his theatre before he would consent to a percentage basis for any picture. Following the discussion, it was moved by Major Arbuthnot and seconded by A. Bailie that Mr. Reeb be advised by letter as to the stand that the Ontario association had taken.

The Ontario association also placed itself on record as being strongly in favor of federal censorship in Canada and it was decided to advise Sir Henry Drayton of Ottawa, federal minister of finance, regarding the desire for federal censorship. A campaign to secure one board of censors for the whole dominion has been opened and the Ontario association is advising all other exhibitor and film associations regarding the stand that it has taken.

Want Operators' and Distributors' Support.

It was also decided to ask for the support of the Motion Picture Operators' Union and the Canadian Film Distributors' Association for federal censorship. It is expected that the whole industry will now line up for a fight to secure the abolishment of all provincial censorship boards in Canada.

In connection with the censorship troubles, a communication was received from R. J. Kershaw, manager of the New Osborne Theatre, Winnipeg, in which he pointed out various details of censorship in Manitoba to which he took great exception. He asked that something be done by the Canadian film industry as a whole to secure relief from present conditions and incidentally to move for federal censorship.

The desire for federal censorship in Canada has been in evidence for a considerable time, but it is apparent that exhibitors in all parts of the country are fast losing patience with present arrangements for the examination and approval of pictures.

Exhibitor Convention in May.

Announcement was made that the Ontario association would hold a general exhibitor convention at Toronto in May when officers will be elected and important business reports will be received. The annual general meeting of shareholders in the Canadian Exhibitors' Exchange Ltd., the distributing company that is operated in Eastern Canada under the auspices of the exhibitors' association, will also be held at the same time, it is intimated.

At the recent monthly meeting, a letter was received from Sir Henry Drayton in which he confirmed the report that the per diem tax of 15 cents a reel is being considered by him and that he has all data before him in connection with the request made by the Ontario association for the abolishment of the so-called reel tax. It is hoped by the exhibitors that the reel tax will be repealed at the present session of the Canadian Parliament.

Driscoll Accepts Appointment.

Announcement was made, through G. Minninnick, of London, Ontario, that G. F. Driscoll, Montreal, president of the Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., had accepted the appointment of honorary president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association, of Ontario.

J. M. McLennan, of the Brock Theatre, Brockville, Ontario, also advised the association by letter that he would rather close his theatre than to run pictures on a percentage basis. It was decided by the meeting to have the secretary write Mr. McLennan commending him for the stand that he had taken.

Wedding Is One of Many Attractions at Dinner-Dance of Directors' Association

THE dinner-dance of the Motion Picture Directors' Association held at the Hotel Biltmore on the evening of Saturday, April 10, was even a greater success than was its predecessor of a couple of years ago. There was a large attendance. Practically every one of the forty-four members of the New York Lodge was present. Of actors and actresses there was a full representation. There was a shortage of men prominent in manufacturing, due possibly to the absence of so many at the coast. William Fox and P. A. Powers were of the exceptions. Edward Earl was surrounded by several of his aids.

One of the incidents of the evening was the marriage of Travers Vale, a member of the association, and Emmy Barbier. The ceremony was performed in one of the smaller rooms on the ballroom floor by Judge Samson Friedlander, a member of the Friars. William F. Haddock was best man, and there were also present many of Mr. Vale's fellow-directors.

There were twenty numbers on the dance program. Interspersing these there was an entertainment contributed by Doralina with a quartet of Hawaiian musicians. The graceful dancer appeared twice in the hula and in her striking and original "vamp" movement. Thalia Zanou gave two Grecian dances, the second time being accompanied by Vasson Kanellos. Evelyn Law, a pupil of William Pitt Rivers, danced twice.

Several motion picture cameras were on the floor and in the balcony and many pictures were taken of notables present, among these being Georges Carpentier, who attracted much attention.

The dancing lasted until 4:30. The verdict of those present was that the occasion was in all respects the equal of the best in the history of the industry—and some were heard to declare it topped all predecessors.

A Lady of Leisure—That's What Leah Baird Appears to Be in "Cynthia of the Minute."

This production will soon appear under the Hodkinson banner. Scene three is a four to one "shot," with the hero winning.

Lasky Makes Important Announcements Regarding Famous Players Production

UPON his arrival in New York last week, after a visit of several weeks to Hollywood, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, made several important announcements regarding the production affairs of the corporation.

In the first place, Mr. Lasky announced that the title of the big new super-special which Cecil B. DeMille has just finished at the Lasky studio in Hollywood is "Something to Think About," and he predicted that this picture not only would give exhibitors and the motion picture going public something to think about, but would prove one of the greatest photoplay sensations of recent years.

"I have seen 'Something to Think About,'" said Mr. Lasky, "and it is my opinion that Cecil B. DeMille has never done anything that can compare with it. In it Mr. DeMille has a theme which is even bigger and of a more profound and widespread appeal than that of any of the pictures he has already made."

"This picture marks the return to the screen of Elliott Dexter, who has completely recovered from his recent illness. Gloria Swanson has a leading role in it. Theodore Roberts, Monte Blue, Julia Faye and other well-known players have prominent parts."

Two Promotions Announced.

Mr. Lasky also announced the promotions of Robert E. MacAarney and Howard Turrill. Mr. MacAarney, who has been scenario editor of Famous Players-Lasky for several years, will take over greater responsibilities in the eastern production activities of the company. Mr. Turrill, who also has been in the production department, will act as Mr. Lasky's personal assistant.

In this connection Mr. Lasky made it plain that it was his hope to be able to spend more time in New York in the future. Frequent consultations between Mr. Lasky and Adolph Zukor and other heads of the corporation are necessary, and this fact, in conjunction with the coming opening of the new Famous Players studio in Long Island City, has decided Mr. Lasky to make his stays in the East longer.

Mr. Lasky also announced that George Melford, who is now nearing the completion of Sir Gilbert Parker's story, "The Translation of a Savage," will shortly begin on a big special production of William Vaughn Moody's stage success, "The Faith Healer." This production is expected to prove a fitting successor to George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man." Milton Sills will appear in the title role.

More Popular Stories Bought.

George Melford also will produce the new screen version of Denman Thompson's play, "The Old Homestead." Theodore Roberts will play the role created by Denman Thompson, while others in the cast will be Monte Blue and Mabel Julienne Scott.

Mr. Lasky's statement also included the interesting news that a long list of popular stories have been bought as starring vehicles for Thomas Meighan. This list includes "The Frontier of the Stars," by Albert Payson Terhune; Booth Tarkington's novel, "The Conquest of Canaan"; Peter B. Kyne's book, "Cappy Ricks," and "Easy Street," a short story by Blair Hall.

Another interesting announcement was that Joseph Henaberry, one of the best known directors, who has made a number of the biggest Paramount Arctcraft pictures, will direct Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in his new five-reel feature comedies for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

One of the big special Paramount Arctcraft productions to be made in the near future is "The Shulamite," a screen version of Edward Knoblauch's play of the same name.

Mr. Lasky also declared that Opie Read's story, "The Jucklins," is to be made into a motion picture under the direction of Charles Maigne, who directed "The Cop-perhead."

Murray W. Garsson Pays Big Price for Five-Reel Ascher Comedy Production

ONE of the most pretentious five reel comedy features ever produced has been purchased by the Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., of which Murray W. Garsson is president and Charles F. Schwerin is secretary and treasurer and general sales manager, from Ascher Productions. This production has been exploited widely under the tentative title of "Up in Mary's Attic."

The deal was negotiated through Sidney Ascher and Joseph A. Jacobs, representing the Ascher interests, and attorneys representing the Fine Arts.

"Everyone to whom we have shown it," Mr. Ascher said, "has been overwhelmed by its bigness and by its wonderful exploitation possibilities. The price we paid was a large one, but all who see it will agree that the subject was well worth the expenditure."

Since it became known to the trade that Mr. Garsson and Mr. Schwerin had purchased "Up in Mary's Attic" bids have been arriving at their offices on Forty-sixth street, New York, from all sections of the country.

While there are details to be done before the subject is released to the trade, it is believed it will be ready for release within a few weeks. Harry Grisson and Eva Novak, sister of Jane, are the featured players.

Red Lodge Theatre Opens June 1.

A new theatre which the Theatorium Company is building at Red Lodge, Mont., will be opened on June 1. It cost about $100,000 and is a thoroughly modern structure. W. C. Parker, who is the manager, has been a subscriber of Moving Picture World for ten years.

"Don't Ever Marry" to Have Big Exploitation Campaign

MARSHALL NEILAN'S second independent production, "Don't Ever Marry," an adaptation by Marion Fairfax of Edgar Franklin's popular story recently concluded as a serial in All-Story Weekly Magazine, offers great exploitation possibilities. The First National Exhibitors' Circuit, in conjunction with the publicity department of the Marshall Neilan organization, has prepared an extensive exploitation campaign.

A set of special window cards, seven by eleven inches, carrying tersely worded "personal" messages from "Joe" to "Myra," present a novel teaser campaign available to the exhibitor at little expense. These cards can be used by all merchants in the neighborhood of the theatre a week in advance, and by making a daily change the exhibitor can drive home the message, "Don't Ever Marry," as excellent propaganda for his picture.

The First National press sheet also offers reproductions of an unusual line of lithographs, cuts, mats, advertising copy, etc. Preceding this exploitation on the part of the exhibitor, a national newspaper publicity campaign is being conducted by First National in collaboration with the Neilan staff.

If the Title Means Anything We Might State That the Mines of Silver Are Missing in These Pictures. However, it's a powerful Goldwyn production, called "The Silver Horde," from the Rex Beach novel.

Metro Celebrates Its Fifth Anniversary; Rapid Expansion Marked Firm's Advance

METRO this month celebrates the fifth anniversary of its organization. Just five years ago in April, Richard A. Rowland and a few other kindred spirits launched Metro upon its career.

The success of Metro is all the more to be applauded when it is remembered that the company was started on what might have been termed a gamble. It was the direct outgrowth of a concern that had failed to make good.

Old-timers in the business will recall the Alco Company. This was a producing and distributing organization, financed by a system of exchanges. These exchanges relied upon the Alco Company to supply them with pictures. Alco, for some reason, was unable to turn out the pictures wanted.

Maxwell Karger, now Metro director general, heard about the plight of the Alco Company. Mr. Karger at the time was, as he admits, almost "flat." He had a little money to be sure, but not enough to take over the operation of the Alco Company.

Mr. Rowland was then an official of the defunct General Film Company. Mr. Karger got in touch with him, and after "selling" the idea to him, they took over the affairs of Alco. The new company included the affairs and good will not only of Alco, but of the Columbia Films, the Dyreda Company, Quality Pictures and Popular Plays and Players. Mr. Rowland was made president of the new concern, which adopted Metro as its trademark and launched upon the production of pictures.

The beginning was auspicious. Pictures were made on time and the system of exchanges was supplied with prints as per schedule. Metro was a going concern.

Mr. Rowland had always been of the opinion that the public wanted to see big stars on the screen. He put his theory into practice, and picture-goers will remember some of the notable productions screened by Metro in its early days with such eminent stars as Ethel Barrymore, Emily Stevens, Edmund Breese, Valli Valli, William Faversham, Emmy Whelen and Grace Valentine.

A little while later Metro secured the services of Francis X. Bushman, then in the heyday of his career, and Beverly Bayne, whose following was large. They were co-starred in big productions.

Mr. Rowland was then instrumental in developing Harold Lockwood as a screen star, elevating him to stardom from the position of leading man. Metro saw Lockwood rise until at his untimely death, a year ago last fall, he was among the best

Metro's start was made in the Heidelberg Building, at the corner of Broadway, Seventh avenue and Forty-second street. From a small beginning the company rapidly expanded, and outgrew its offices in the Heidelberg Building a year after organization, moving to the Longacre Building, diagonally across the street, where the company has since occupied almost the entire eleventh floor.

As the company expanded it began to re-capitalize and to absorb, first the separate companies that made it up at its inception and then the exchanges. The exchanges were acquired one after another, until, with the recent acquisition of the New Jersey and Dallas exchanges, Metro owns outright all but two of its system of twenty-five exchanges. These two are in Boston and Philadelphia.

Virtually all the men who cast in their lot with the Metro company under Mr. Rowland's leadership are still loyal followers of their chief and still ardent boosters for Metro on any and all occasions. They include, besides Mr. Karger, W. E. Atkinson, now general manager; Joseph W. Engel, until recently treasurer of Metro and now general manager in charge of the company's west coast studios in Hollywood; Harry J. Cohen, manager of the foreign department, and E. M. Saunders, general sales manager, and Charles K. Stern assistant treasurer.

In addition James B. Clarke, of Rowland and Clarke, controlling a chain of picture theatres in the Pennsylvania district, is interested in Metro.

Mr. Rowland has earned the reputation of possessing considerable foresight. Metro in consequence has benefited greatly thereby. The company inaugurated the "fewer and better" pictures idea.

From the very beginning, Mr. Rowland inculcated in every Metro man a keen desire for the welfare of the company. The results of this have been reflected in the spirit of loyalty to Metro that pervades the entire organization.

Metro Now Running Studios in East and West; Karger Heads Eastern Production

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION'S fifth anniversary finds the company again operating studios in the West and East simultaneously, for the first time since the United States Fuel Administration established its wartime regulations about economy in the consumption of coal for all but the most essential industries.

This dual arrangement has resulted in bringing Maxwell Karger, director general of Metro pictures, to New York for the re-opening of the company's studios in New York, and in placing upon the shoulders of the individual directors remaining in Hollywood full responsibility for the results of their work.

As yet no announcement has been made regarding the staff of directors who will work in the Sixty-first street studios for Metro under the supervision of Mr. Karger.

Of the men in charge of productions in the studios in Hollywood, John E. Ince and Henry Otto to date have to their credit the greatest number of productions, three each, of the "fewer and better" series of Metro pictures.

Blache Working on "The Saphead."

Next to Otto and Mr. Ince in the number of productions completed comes Herbert Blache, who picturized "The Walk-Offs," a satirical comedy-drama by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, for May Allison's second starring vehicle in the "fewer and better" series. Rather an abrupt change of subject followed, it being the Drury Lane melodrama, "The Hope," by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, and presented on the screen with an all-star cast headed by Jack Mulhall, Ruth Stonehouse, Frank Elliott and Marguerite De La Motte.

At present Mr. Blache is engaged on the beginning of "The Saphead," from Winchell Smith's and Victor Mapes' "The New Henrietta," which in turn was revised from "The Henrietta," by Bronson Howard. This picture will have an all-star cast headed by William H. Crane and Buster Keaton.

What Other Directors Are Doing.

Jack Dillon, who directed Bert Lytell in the picture production of Sir Gilbert Parker's world-famous novel, "The Right of Way"; Rex Ingram, whose staging of "Shore Acres," with Alice Lake was so noteworthy; Jack Conway, to whose credit is the first Lytell success, "Lombardi, Ltd.," from the Morosco stage hit by Frederic and Fanny Hatton; and Ray Smallwood, who directed "The Best of Luck," another Drury Lane melodrama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, are other Metro directors who have achieved celebrity for their work on the "fewer and better pictures."

First Eastern Production.

On the west coast at present Edward Dillon is engaged in producing "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" from the stage comedy hit by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan; and Dallas M. Fitzgerald is directing Bert Lytell in "The Temple of Dawn," from the novel by I. A. R. Wylie, who wrote the book on which Nazimova's "Stronger Than Death" was founded.

The first picture to be produced in the East by Metro under the new regime is "Love, Honor and Obey," a screen story adapted by Eugene Walter.

Metro's Western Plant Is the Latest in Motion Picture Studio Construction

WITH the rounding out of its fifth year as a motion picture organization and with the completion of the third large dark stage at its modern studios in Hollywood, Metro has at its disposal one of the most perfectly equipped picture-making plants in the country.

Facilities in the West, not to mention those in the East, now include the original extensive studios in Hollywood with the addition of an equally large lot directly across the street, for future expansion, and also a sixty-five acre tract of land in the wonderful San Francisco Valley. This was acquired recently to furnish outdoor settings for Metro's "fewer and better pictures." It formerly was known as Rose Hill Park, but since its acquisition by the makers of Metro-Classics, it has been renamed Metro Park. It lies fourteen miles northeast of Hollywood, and comprises a rolling, country-like stretch of land with mountains in the distance—an ideal space for making scenes outdoors.

Five Stages in Main Lot.

There are in the main Metro lot in Hollywood five stages—two of which are open, and the other three, the last of which is now undergoing finishing touches in the shape of installation of electrical equipment, dark.

A feature of the studio equipment is the silent control system of lighting, put in the plant during the period of Mr. Karger's stay on the coast before he came east to inaugurate the reopening of the Sixty-first street studios in New York. Under this system of lighting the control of all the great banks of Cooper-Hewitts, Kliegs, Wohls and other lights used on his set will be right at the director's finger-tips. The bulky portable switchboards, requiring the services of from three to five electricians on each set have been discarded. In their place is a little box that may be held in the palm of the hand.

The new cutting rooms are of the most modern pattern and comply in every respect with fire and insurance laws. The interior construction is cement and sheet iron. Large tables are covered with heavy tin. Three of the rooms adjoin the administration building of the studio, while the other forms the second floor of the film vault.

Third Dark Stage Cost $45,000.

On the lot across from the studios a spacious four-shop building has been constructed for the plaster-casting department. In this Victor Andre, chief of that work in the Metro studios, and his assistants, carry on their work. A two-story building containing five artists' studios, two lettering shops and a number of storerooms, houses the art department, which is headed by D. Anthony Tauszky. On the studio grounds a storehouse 140 feet in length has been built for laying away extra flats and other studio equipment when not in use.

The newest structure, the third dark stage, slightly larger than the other two dark stages, cost $45,000 to make. It is 90 by 100 feet in dimensions, with twenty foot wings on each side. It is roofed over, skylighted and used for the making of interior scenes by artificial illumination. The skylight is blackened.

The capacity of the big studios in Hollywood as yet has not been tested to the full, but six companies easily can work there without interfering with each other.

Metro Working on Exploitation Service that Will Be of Benefit to All Showmen

EXPANSION and development of its exploitation service until it provides for every Metro exhibitor, whether his house be 300 seats or 3,000, is under way in that distributing organization, according to a fifth anniversary announcement made by an official of Metro.

There is being worked out, and at the same time applied, a system whereby local representatives of Metro in various parts of the country, and the home office in New York will co-operate in working with the individual exhibitor, no matter where he may be located in business or what the capacity of his house, for achievement of maximum returns from every one of the Loew-Metro "fewer and better" pictures shown.

Press Book Is Backbone.

The backbone of exploitation and advertising, Metro believes, is the press book issued with every picture; and these books have been enlarged and made so comprehensive as to embrace every angle and detail of an advertising, exploitation and publicity campaign. But at the same time Metro holds that no one person or set of persons can be aware of the local conditions and point of view in the thousands of places where constituent attractions of the "Perfect 36" series of photoplays adapted from big stage successes and best selling novels are run.

Hence the extensive work of the press books has been augmented with personal and local co-operation from representatives of the Metro exchanges, who being on the spot are acquainted with the exhibitor, his theatre's character and his public's taste and susceptibilities. By the joint working of the home office, through the issuance of press books and individual advice and co-operation with exhibitors, and of the Metro exchanges, the organization which releases to the world the "fewer and better pictures" believes that showmen will find themselves getting more and more out of each picture.

Covers Every Angle.

The press books in themselves provide for every side of advertising, exploitation and publicity. At the very first is a brief, clear story of the picture, next a general talk on the big points Metro believes the film has for advertising. Reproduction of lobby stills of three sizes, a mail campaign needing only the insertion of the date of showing, striking and artistic advertising cuts, scene and star cuts of modern, distinctive style, a wealth of publicity material, advance and review stories, biographical sketches of players, human interest items,

Maxwell Karger, Metro Director General Sees Dawning of New Era for Pictures

ONE day a pupil of Joachim, the great violin virtuoso—a man who had played first violin at the Metropolitan Opera House and in the Philharmonic Orchestra and toured in concert as solo violinist with Edouard de Reszke—broke his violin across his knee. He had had a new dream—a vision of motion pictures, then in their crudest beginnings, developing into a new art to enthral the world. He was going to be one in the pioneers of this dawning development.

The pupil of Joachim was Maxwell Karger, Metro Pictures director general. Now the fifth anniversary of the formation of Metro finds Maxwell Karger in charge of all the company's productions in the East.

Urged "Fewer and Better Films."

Mr. Karger had always been a close student of the stage and during his career as an opera violinist carefully noted the work of production from every angle.

His argument, shared by other officials of Metro, was that the motion picture industry was suffering from over-production and "the short-run evil"—an evil because a short run made it impossible for the producers to put their best into the pictures without piling onto the rocks of financial disaster.

With that evil overcome, however, Mr. Karger has been confronted with a new one. That is the scarcity of ideas for screen dramas and the dearth of writers capable of realizing what ideas there are.

Nazimova at Work on Ninth Picture for Metro; No Details Concerning Story Revealed

NAZIMOVA, the Russian star, has done eight pictures and is in the midst of her ninth production for Metro. Her work has but recently been widely placed in Europe, through an arrangement made by Metro with Jury's Imperial Pictures, Ltd., in London, of which Sir William Jury is managing director, and the Mundus Film Company in Paris, under the direction of Madame Schuepbach.

The brilliant artiste had made but one cinema production prior to signing her contract with Metro. Her first picture for Metro, produced by Nazimova Productions, was "Revelation."

Nazimova followed "Revelation" with "Toys of Fate," "Eye for Eye," "Out of the Fog," "The Red Lantern," "The Brat," "Stronger than Death," and "The Heart of a Child."

"The Heart of a Child" is Nazimova's current release. It is based on Frank Danby's novel, and was adapted to the screen by Charles Bryant, who also plays the leading male role of Lord Kidderminster opposite the star.

Metro Purchases "The Hole in the Wall," "Big Game" and Other Stories and Plays

COINCIDENT with the fifth anniversary of Metro Pictures Corporation the company announces the purchase of a number of big novels and plays for early production on the screen.

Prominent in the list of new plays recently acquired by Metro are "The Hole in the Wall," Fred Jackson's thrilling drama of the supernatural, which is playing to packed houses in the Punch and Judy Theatre, with Martha Hedman in the leading role, and "Big Game," by Willard Robertson and Kilbourne Gordon, which was one of the season's productions at the Fulton Theatre, with Allen Dinehart, Pauline Lord and Reginald Barlow in the cast.

Further additions to the Metro schedule of great plays by great authors are "Held in Trust," George Kibbe Turner's thrilling mystery serial which is now appearing by monthly installments in the Red Book Magazine, and "June Jeopardy," by Inez Haynes Gillmore. The latter is a fascinating novel of social life by the gifted author of "Phoebe and Ernest." Other purchases by Metro include "The Gay and Festive Claverhouse," which is a novel by Anne Warner and published by Little, Brown and Company, and "Head and Shoulders," a short story by F. Scott Fitzgerald which appeared recently in the Saturday Evening Post.

The company also made the purchase of Adolphe Belot's celebrated French drama, "L'Article 47." This famous old play was first produced at the Ambigue Comique in Paris, October 20, 1871. Its New York production followed at Daly's Theatre, the year following.

Producing Ibanez Novel.

"The Girl Patsy," J. Mauldin Fiegl's well-known stage play, which enjoyed a successful New York production, completes the list of recent purchases made by Metro that have up to the present time been made public. In this production June Mathis, Metro's gifted scenario writer, played one of the prominent roles.

Three more Jack London novels will reach the screen through Metro, to follow "Burning Daylight," which will be released shortly, with Mitchell Lewis as the featured player. These novels include "Smoke Bellew," "The Mutiny of the Elsinore" and "A Daughter of the Snows." "The Best of Luck," another Drury Lane melodrama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, will succeed "The Hope," which is about to be released, and will be followed in turn by "The Great Millionaire" and "The Marriage of Mayfair."

Metro Plans Expansion of Literary Staff; Has Three Dramatists and Ten Scenarists

FURTHER enlargement of the scenario writing and playreading departments of Metro is promised by company officials as Metro enters into its sixth year as an organization. Those staffs, which are exclusive of the three well-known dramatists—Eugene Walter, Bayard Veiller and Winchell Smith comprising Metro's trio of distinguished authors—have already reached large proportions, will be amplified in number and ability in line with Metro's belief that the writer is of the utmost importance to big screen productions.

Metro's acquisition of Messrs. Walter,

Veiller and Smith is a recent verification of the company's leaning toward recognized dramatic craftsmen to originate drama and prepare it for the screen. Eugene Walter has taken possession of an office in Metro's New York studios and is preparing the screen version of "The Tyranny of Weakness," the novel by Charles Neville Buck, which will be produced with an all-star cast and released under the title of "Love, Honor and Obey."

To Write Four Original Plays.

Bayard Veiller is on the West Coast. He will write four original dramas for Loew-Metro stars, the first to be a strong story for Bert Lytell. Also on the Coast is Winchell Smith. Mr. Smith's play, "The New Henrietta," revised by himself and Victor Mapes from Bronson Howard's stage success of the last generation, is now being produced by Metro with an all-star cast, headed by William H. Crane and Buster Keaton, under the title of "The Saphead." The picturization of the play is being supervised by Mr. Smith in an advisory capacity as its author and stage producer.

June Mathis is at the head of the Metro scenario writers, of whom the staff now comprises ten. The others are the Zellners—Arthur J. and Lois—Finis Fox, Albert Shelby Le Vino, A. P. Younger, Percy Heath, Harvey H. Gates, H. Thompson Rich and Sarah Mason.

Miss Mathis is one of the most gifted and prolific women screen writers in motion pictures. Her list of successes is so lengthy that space will not permit their recountal here.

Have Written Many Successes.

Arthur Zellner and his wife, Lois Zellner, have been with Metro since last November. They are credited with a score of screen successes in the last two years. On most of them they collaborated.

Albert Shelby Le Vino is a veteran on the Metro scenarios staff and has done a great number of adaptations for the company, both under its program policy and under the "fewer and better" specials policy inaugurated several months ago. His most recent scenarios have been for the two big Drury melodramas, "The Hope" and "The Best of Luck."

A. P. Younger, who has been several months with Metro, has done some excellent work with light comedy material. He has just finished co-authorship of the scenario for "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," written in collaboration with June Mathis, for an all-star production.

Finis Fox, like Albert Shelby Le Vino, is a veteran of the staff. He has done a number of notable scenarios, and is particularly adept in scenarioizing dramas of intense dramatist interest.

Two Recent Acquisitions.

Percy Heath and Harvey H. Gates, who recently were added to the scenario staff at the Metro studios in Hollywood, are already busy on the construction of continuities for forthcoming Metro releases. Mr. Gates is one of the most successful writers in the motion picture industry. Mr. Heath has been in the theatrical business for fifteen years. He started his career as a newspaper reporter and later was dramatic critic for Boston and Washington papers.

H. Thompson Rich former editor of The Forum, has been associated with Vitagraph prior to joining Metro. He wrote scenarios for "The Climbers" and "The Winchester Woman." He recently sold an original story to the American Cinema Corporation.

Sarah Mason was the last to join the Metro scenario staff to write continuity for Loew-Metro productions. Miss Mason has been in motion picture work for two years. During this time she prepared scripts for a number of successful photodramas as well as writing several original stories.

Jasper Heads Play Reading.

Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, former soldier, newspaper writer and novelist, is in charge of Metro's play reading department, with offices in the Longacre Building. Col. Brady has a staff of trained readers under his direction and adheres to the policy laid down by Metro in the selection of screen material, to confine it to successful stage dramas, notable novels by celebrated authors, and a few of the big current stories from the national magazines.

Walter, Veiller and Smith, Prominent Dramatists, Turn Talents to Metro Screen

TAKING the cue from the presidential aspirants now presenting their claims to preferment, Metro Pictures Corporation, entering its sixth year as a producing organization, "points with pride" to the trio of dramatists who are the head and corner of its authorial structure.

In Eugene Walter, Bayard Veiller and Winchell Smith, Metro boasts to having enlisted the services of the "Big Three" of American writers of plays. Each of them has a string of stage successes to his credit—dramas and comedies that have stood as milestones in native drama.

The engagement of these three playwrights signals the beginning of a campaign by Metro to get the best brains in the country turned to the development of motion pictures from the standpoint of stories and dramatic craftsmanship of the highest character.

Veiller in Hollywood.

Bayard Veiller is writing original screen dramas at the Metro studios in Hollywood. Eugene Walter has his headquarters at the New York studios, 3 West Sixty-first street, where his first script, "Love, Honor and Obey," an adaptation of Charles Neville Buck's novel, "The Tyranny of Weakness," is already in production. Winchell Smith is personally supervising the screen production of "The New Henrietta," adapted from the modernized version of Bronson Howard's "The Henrietta," at the Hollywood studios. "The New Henrietta" has been renamed "The Saphead" in its screen version.

Eugene Walter first came into prominence as a playwright through the production of "Paid in Full," which he sold after he had "dogged" the New York managers with it unsuccessfully for years. He had started to write plays after his return from the Spanish-American War, in which he served with Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

Started as Newspaper Man.

Bayard Veiller started his career as a newspaper man. He was writing plays all the time he was in newspaper service. He estimates that about thirty plays were turned out in this time. The first one to bring him artistic recognition was "The Primrose Path," in which his wife, Margaret Wycherly, now giving one of the most brilliant performances of the season in "Jane Clegg," scored one of her early triumphs. The play was not a box office success, however, and Mr. Veiller had to wait for "Within the Law" before becoming established as a playwright.

Winchell Smith started his career as an actor and for twelve years he played many parts before finding that the part best suited to him in life was that of a dramatist and producer. It was at a memorable special matinee, one of those highbrow matinees that are usually and mercifully quickly forgotten, that Winchell Smith's name became important. In conjunction with Arnold Daly, he put on George Shaw's "Candida." The success of the production led to "Candida" being put on as a regular attraction, and then came the long series of Shaw plays.

Toledo to Have Million-Dollar Theatre.

Toledo will have a $1,000,000 motion picture theatre, to be known as Zorn's Million-Dollar Capitol Theatre. The seating capacity will be 2,500 and the house will be located on St. Clair street, almost opposite the Temple Theatre and just in the rear of the Federal Building. Work will be started during the summer and will end during the autumn.

Ed Zorn, who manages the Temple; Joe Fanning, of the Temple staff; E. P. Severcool and E. B. Edmonds are interested in the venture. The theatre will be five stories in height and a replica of the Capitol Theatre in New York.

S. Rankin Drew Benefit Show Takes in Total of $17,000 for Post Gymnasium

THANKS to the proverbial willingness of the theatrical profession to help a worthy cause, and to efficient committee work, the benefit show of S. Rankin Drew Post 340, American Legion, held Sunday evening, April 11, at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York City, was an outstanding success both from a financial and artistic viewpoint.

The theatre receipts approximated $11,000, surprising not only the ex-soldiers but the personnel of the theatre and other theatrical folk. About $6,000 also was taken in for advertisements in an attractive year book.

But the Broadway stars gathered together under the one roof that night were not there alone to help the Legion post raise money for its gymnasium—they were there in memory of the gallant death in battle overseas of Sidney Rankin Drew, son of the late Sidney Drew and the late Gladys Rankin Drew.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the lights dimmed and a marine bugler blew "taps." The audience, which packed the theatre from pit to roof, stood silently in memory of the first American actor to give up his life fighting the Hun on the fields of France. Then the lovable "Polly" Drew, step-mother of the soldier and president of the Women's Auxiliary, spoke briefly. She had come from California to be present that evening.

More Than Enough Acts.

There were few disappointments, for they had been guarded against by having on hand more acts than possibly could have been presented. As it was, the bill lasted until well after midnight and the audience went away satisfied it had seen one of the finest arrays of talent ever gathered together in one bill in the history of New York.

The bill opened with the blowing by the bugler of "sick call" for Ed Wynn, who was to have been master of ceremonies. John Barrymore and Sam Bernard and Irene Bordoni. The acts which followed were uniformly good. There were selections by a navy recruiting band, Sabina, Mi Yakos, Arvid Paulson and Ethel Barrymore and company in Barrie's ageless play, "The Twelve Pound Look."

There were reminiscences by Miss Dorothy Donnelly, and Frank Morgan and company, Clifton Crawford, Georges Carpentier and Miss Bird Millman. All made hits. Carpentier was present through the courtesy of Robertson-Cole and Miss Millman through the courtesy of Ringling Brothers.

Following the intermission came Evan Burrows Fontaine, Augustus Thomas, Clark Silvernail and company, Jimmy Flynn, Georgie Price and sister, Lionel Barrymore and company in one act of "The Copperhead" and John Agee and Nemo. Miss Minnie Dupree and company and Corporal Joe White, a Twenty-seventh Division soloist, showed their esprit de corps by readily consenting to not appearing when it was discovered that the bill was too long. Miss Dupree was to have been seen in "The Nocturne."

Augustus Thomas' Reminiscences.

Mr. Thomas called the honor roll of the past and prefaced his speech with reminiscences of thirty-one years ago when a play of his called "The Burglar" was running in New York. Maurice Barrymore was the star and in his company were Sidney Drew and Gladys Rankin. The Drew-Rankin marriage occurred during the run of the piece, with the playwright as best man. One year later he was godfather of the baby who grew up to give his life for his country.

The boxes were occupied by Eugene Zukor, E. F. Albee and family, A. H. Woods, Dorothy Dalton, Mrs. Sidney Drew, William P. Carlton, President F. H. LaGuardia of the board of aldermen, Mrs. LaGuardia, and Georges Carpentier, with his interpreter, Captain Mallet, of the French army.

Those responsible for the success of the show would make a long list if given here. Suffice it to say that every last member of the New Amsterdam stage staff, the property men from Ringling Brothers Circus and the kindly Leo Blanc, stage manager for Ed Wynn, gave their all and contributed largely to making the show a complete success.

Independent Exchanges Show Interest in Efanell Film, "The Secret Formula"

THE SECRET FORMULA," the super feature that is being state-righted by the Efanell Film Corporation, of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, is attracting considerable attention among the independent exchanges as a consequence of the commendable reviews the production has received from trade critics. The title too, has attracted attention and offers possibilities for unique exploitation.

Well-known producers, critics and fans who attended the recent trade showing in New York are said to have marveled at the entertainment value of the picture. Heretofore directors often have paid considerably more attention to bringing out some one particular phase of a picture than they have to the story or production itself. The director of "The Secret Formula," however, worked with the fact in mind that he had contracted to furnish a picture that would entertain.

There was as much attention paid to the lighting and settings as there was to the selection of cast and story. All factors were combined into making a production that would grip and hold the interest of the patron.

"The Secret Formula" is a super-feature made for the sole purpose of entertaining the public," said F. L. Ferguson, general manager of the Efanell Film Corporation. "We did not invest a million dollars in the production; neither did we lavish gold on any particularly well-known star. But what we have done is this: We have taken a real story, a capable all-star cast and made a picture that will rank with the best of the year."

Cosmopolitan to Produce Plays Based on Cartoons

COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTIONS is going in for the production of stage plays as a side line to its motion picture activities, according to a statement issued from the office of Henry M. Hobart, vice-president and general manager, at 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

Stage productions will be made on an extensive scale and it is planned to have at least two shows on Broadway at the opening of the season this fall. Following their run on the stage these plays will be pictured and released as Cosmopolitan productions.

The first of Cosmopolitan Productions' stage ventures will be a three-act comedy version of Harry Herschfield's cartoons, "Abie, the Agent." The book is now being done by Herschfield in collaboration with ly a lieutenant colonel in the A. E. F., acquitted himself nobly as stage manager, while Gordon Standing, another A. E. F. veteran, was assistant stage manager. President Wells Hawks and Vice-President James Loughborough, W. J. Roddy and Floyd W. Stoker worked tirelessly in securing all necessary properties and settings and handled all the details incident to the theatre, stage, program and billing without a hitch. Sydney G. Gumpertz, one of the three medal of honor men in the post, was ably assisted in his assembling of program advertising by a staff of twelve men.

William G. Newman, manager of the Empire Theatre, made good his promise that the entire house would be sold out before the curtain rose. Not the least efficient work, and work of the greatest value, was done by William H. Cook, who, as chairman of the publicity committee, saw to it that every avenue of publicity was utilized.

George V. Hobart. Samuel Blair, formerly associated with A. H. Woods, it is announced, will be the producer. The play's premiere will probably occur in August.

The next stage production to follow immediately will be a musical comedy version of Cliff Sterrett's comic strip, "Polly and Her Pals." Arrangements are now being made with a famous librettist and composer to collaborate with Sterrett on the play. George M. Gatts will be the producer and the show will probably reach Broadway in September.

Montgomery Makes Appointments.

General Sales Manager G. V. Montgomery, of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, has completed the first leg of a nation-wide tour of exchanges in the interest of the exploitation of a large number of pictures which Frank G. Hall will distribute through Hallmark, including "The Evil Eye," featuring Benny Leonard, lightweight boxing champion.

On April 3 he was in Los Angeles completing negotiations for personally making a serial in conjunction with the Ascher Enterprises. While en route west he made the following appointments: H. E. Boswell, to be manager at St. Louis; J. E. Foland, to be Kansas City manager; W. L. Campbell, to be Denver manager; Jules H. Wolf, to be Salt Lake manager; C. E. Edwards, to be supervisor of the Pacific Coast offices, with headquarters in San Francisco, and Robert Green and J. J. Halsted, additions to the force at Los Angeles.

"Free Grass" Features Allie Raye.

Miss Allie Raye is being featured by the Big Ben Picture Corporation, of San Antonio, in a series of five-reel western comedy-drama stories by Tex O'Reilly. The first has been completed and is ready for release by the Arrow Film Corporation. Its title is "Free Grass."

The possibility of San Antonio having a picture future looks big, according to Manager William Politzer, of the Pearl and Queen theatres, the San Antonio Picture Corporation having installed a $100,000 studio there.

Ulrich in New York.

E. D. Ulrich, managing director of the Romaine studio of Culver City, is now in New York, with headquarters at the Hotel Astor. While in New York Mr. Ulrich will commence the production of a feature entitled "Shams," written by Walter McNamara, the author of "Traffic in Souls," who will also direct the production. The exteriors will be taken in New York.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

FILMLAND is busy. The one-armed paper-hanger, the peglegged buck and wing dancer, the cranberry merchant and other shining examples of industry haven't got a thing on us. Every producing organization is shooting, and there isn't enough empty studio space anywhere in the colony to whip a cat in.

Several things have happened this week. Hiram Abrams, general factotum of the United Artists, came to town. Eph Ascher, special representative for Mack Sennett, blew in from a long and extended trip. Jesse L. Lasky and H. H. Van Loan departed for the East. Bill Desmond and Mrs. Bill, who used to be Mary McIvor, have taken a lodger in the person of a little girl who arrived on the Stork Express early in the week.

Mary Thurman, of the Allan Dwan company, got burned with some kind of an explosion with a (punk) incense burner. Madeline Fairchild, of the Astra studio, got tangled up with a broken trolley wire on Spring street and broke two or three bones of her right foot in getting out of her car. Earle Williams poked his head through a windshield during an auto collision that he took part in while he was in Santa Barbara.

Chaplin Versus Mayer.

Omar Locklear created a lot of excitement by speeding around over downtown in his air buggy and almost got pinched for it. The city fathers say that Omar can step on his gas and stay in high as much as he likes as long as he keeps high in the air, but if he cuts up didoes over Broadway and shaves the leaves off the tops of the eucalyptus trees in Central Park any more they'll have the law on him, and maybe put him in the hoosegow.

Charlie Chaplin and Louis B. Mayer furnished some lively entertainment for the guests of the Alexandria Hotel by staging a boxing contest on the million-dollar rug in the lobby of the hotel on Wednesday night. Charlie was outclassed by Louis B. in size and weight, but he made up the difference in agility, and the mill was very lively while it lasted. If Charlie hadn't slipped and fell and bumped his head on a painter's scaffolding in the lobby, and the friends of the pair had not interfered, it might have been a regular battle. Personal difficulties between Charlie and Louie were the cause of the encounter.

Nevada "All Het Up."

We have about calmed down over the news of Mary and Doug's wedding, but the state of Nevada has not. The state of Nevada does not care so much about the wedding, but it is all "het up" about the divorce that immediately preceded the nuptials. Officials of Nevada are making scathing remarks and accusations to the effect that the divorce was secured through collusion, and they threaten to annul the decree.

Of course, anyone who knows how difficult it has always been for mismatched couples to get their marital status Renovated in Nevada will understand how Nevada feels about it.

One of the charges is that Mary, who established legal residence in the state by buying a ranch at Minden, a small town in Nevada, and declaring that she intended making the place her permanent residence, only stayed in the state seventeen days.

All According to Hoyle, Says Mary.

Just as if a woman cannot change her mind once in a while—and just as if seventeen days is not long enough for anybody to make up her mind that she does not want to live in Nevada.

Why Should Nevada Dislike Mary for Reno-vating Marital Status in Minden?

By GIEBLER.

Mary and Doug are not worrying. Mary says everything was done according to Hoyle, and her attorney says it was all done according to well-established precedent, and cites numerous cases of a similar nature.

But Nevada will not be appeased. Her feelings are hurt. She is probably afraid the news will get about that she isn't strict in matter of divorces. They even threaten to change the present unhitching laws—an action that would lose the town of Reno a lot of free advertising and ruin one of the most profitable industries of the state.

Of course, no one with a grain of charity in their system blames Miss Pickford for securing her divorce in the easiest way. Mary was unhappily married to Owen Moore. They had not lived together for years.

A True Love Match.

Doug was divorced from his wife a year and a half ago, and the fact that the former Mrs. Fairbanks stepped off again five days after the decree was granted proves that she was not broken-hearted.

Doug and Mary wanted to get married to each other, and Mary went about securing a legal separation from Owen Moore in the simplest and quickest manner possible.

After the decree she and Doug were married—surely their privilege under the laws and rules of society. No one was harmed and two people, at least, were made happy, for according to all accounts the match between Doug and Mary is a true love match.

Would it have been any better if seventeen months, or seventeen years, for that matter, instead of seventeen days, had elapsed between the time of filing the petition for divorce and the handing down of the decree? Would it have been any better to have filed the petition in a state where the action would have been dragged through the courts for weeks, with the attendant mush, gush, rot, slop and sob-sister stuff filling the daily press?

Mary is to be commended for her action. She has acted like a lady and a sensible woman through it all, and so far as the talk of collusion and bribery in connection with Owen Moore is concerned, Mary answered this in her reply to a reporter who asked her the question.

"Mr. Moore is not that kind of man," she said. And those who know Owen Moore know that he is not that kind of man.

In the meantime, no matter what the people of Nevada say, the people of Filmland wish Mary and Doug every happiness.

Saying Goodbye to Williams.

One of the big events of the week was when Sol Lesser said good-by to J. D. Williams with a spread of eats and an elegant assortment of film folks as chief mourners. It was anything but a mournful occasion, however. Shakespeare was right when he doped out the stuff about parting being sweet sorrow. It is all of that when the occasion is graced with chicken salad, dill pickles, ice cream, French pastry, two or three bushels of ripe olives, cigars and coffee and enlivened with eloquence and oratory.

Those at the Luncheon.

Everybody hated to see J. D. shake the alkali dust of our fair city from his boots, but I don't think there was one of us but would admire to tell him good-by again if Sol would stage another lunch.

The luncheon was served on the big stage out at the Charles Ray studio, where Charlie is making "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" for First National.

In addition to Sol Lesser and Mrs. Lesser, and Mr. Williams and his wife, there were Dave Bershon, manager of the First National exchange; Mike and Abe Gore, who are associated with Lesser in the operation of the Kinema Theatre and the First National territory for Southern California and Arizona; Jack Calicott, manager of the Kinema; Sam Rork, manager of the Katherine MacDonald Company; Mrs. George Beban (George was busy cutting "One Man in a Million" and nothing could drag him away from that important duty); Katherine MacDonald; King Vidor and Florence Vidor, his wife, and star in his current picture, "The Jack Knife Man"; William Parker, King's personal representative; Anita Stewart and Rudolph Cameron, her worse half; Charles Ray; Richard Willis, of Willis & Inglis, and manager of the Ray organization; Gus Inglis, of Willis & Inglis; James Young, Max Roth, Dick Spier, Ben Feltman; Virginia Norden, who represented the Louis B. Mayer studio, and, in fact, almost everyone connected with the First National enterprises on the West Coast.

Wants Talmadge Units in West.

There were speeches by J. D. Williams, Sol Lesser, Dave Bershon, Charles Ray, King Vidor and Jack Calicott, who acted as toastmaster and displayed a wonderful strain of eloquence that got better and better the farther he went.

J. D. Williams, who made a good talk, said that he believed that the best results were secured by having each star of the First National under a separate management and in a separate studio, as is now done, and that as all of the First National units but two were now in Los Angeles, he was going to try and get the Norma and Constance Talmadge units to come out and make it unanimous for the West Coast just as soon as he got back to New York.

Pictures, both moving and still, were made of the dramatic scene, and then we all told Mr. Williams good-by, and everybody expressed the wish that he would come back soon, and that it might occur to some one to tender him an arrival lunch when he hits the coast the next time.

Vivian Rich Starts Second Fox Feature.

Vivian Rich, William Fox's newest star, has started work on her second Fox production, "A World of Folly." Frank Beal, who has been absent from the Fox corps of directors for some months, returns to direct Miss Rich in this new drama. Playing opposite the star is Augustus Phillips, who makes his Fox debut as leading man for Miss Rich.

"Treasure Island" Is Finely Produced By Maurice Tourneur for Paramount

By EDWARD WEITZEL

PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT has a release on its list that will set all the small boys to regretting that the ancient and honorable calling of pirate is no longer in fashion and bring back to their fathers and uncles the time when they first read "Treasure Island" and thought Jim Hawkins the luckiest youngster in all the world. Maurice Tourneur has transferred the Stevenson story to the screen with a fine regard for the spirit of the original, and the picture smacks of romance and the lure of hidden gold in the same wonderful way that makes readers of the tale stick to the book until the last page has been reached. Following so soon after the release of Robert Louis Stevenson's remarkable psychological study, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," the later picture will give the screen public a rare opportunity to appreciate the wide range and masterly style of this prince of story tellers.

Maurice Tourneur's Skillful Atmosphere.

No director has outclassed Maurice Tourneur as a producer of seafaring adventures and his sailor men and their goodly ships would pass inspection before the briniest old salt that ever helped to man the main brace. In the period called for in "Treasure Island" the buccaneer business was at its picturesque and most murderous best, and Stevenson chose his gallant cutthroats from among the ugliest looking bloody-minded ruffians of all the merry crew. And now Maurice Tourneur has made them all walk out of the Stevenson book just as they were sketched by the Scotch writer and sent them to sea with Jim Hawkins and Squire Trelawney and Dr. Livesey in a ship that is as much a part of the seventeenth century as is the old Benbow Inn on the coast of England, where Jim's mother tries to earn a living and the blind men gives Bill Bones the black spot. If you love the sea and have a soul for romance you are going to revel in this picture.

An Aladdin's Cave of Gold.

Stephen Fox has done an excellent piece of work with the scenario and kept close to the original tale. The few added incidents are full of drama and there is never a moment when the interest is permitted to lag. The one feature of the production that can be called in question is the cave where the pirate's treasure is found, with the bewildering display of gold pieces on the floor. Only Aladdin and the wonderful lamp could have created either the cave or the gold. However, "Treasure Island" is a first cousin to all the stories in the Arabian Nights, and no one is going to begrudge Jim the size of his treasure and his joy at the thought of how he can lavish it on his mother.

Bones at the Benbow Inn.

It is in keeping with the genius of Stevenson that he opens his story among the honest folk of the Benbow Inn and shows you a peaceful scene in old England, with the magistrate and squire of the neighborhood as the friends and protectors of the Widow Hawkins and her son before the first of the pirate crew appears in the offing and Bill Jones settles down to his bacon and eggs and frequent glasses of grog as the only paying guest of the inn. The determination of Jim to help his mother keep the wolf from the door, and the boy's joy at the arrival of the mariner with plenty of gold to spend does not bring Mrs. Hawkins a tranquil mind. When in his cups Captain Bones spins such blood-curdling yarns about desperate deeds on the Spanish Main and is so fond of roaring out bits from the piratical ballad which contains the disquieting allusion to "fifteen men on the dead man's chest," the hostess of the inn begins to suspect that her guest himself has sailed under the black flag.

With the arrival of Black Dog, one of Captain Bones' old shipmates, the truth comes out, and Jim learns that the sailor-man is after a map which shows where the treasure that once belonged to the celebrated Flint is buried, the map having been stolen by Bones after Flint's death. Jim is a badly frightened witness of the fight between Bones and Black Dog, in which the common sailor is driven off, Captain Bones celebrating his victory by drinking harder than ever.

Then one day Pew, the blind man, finds his way up the path to the inn, and Jim realizes that another desperate character has arrived when he feels the fingers of Pew about his throat and hears the savage tones of the voice that demands its owner be taken to Bones. The two cutthroats have a stormy meeting. Pew hands Bones the black spot and, in an encounter with him, stabs the captain to death. The dead man has not settled his bill at the inn and Jim and his mother help themselves from the stock of gold stored in Bones' chest. They also find the map of the buried treasure. Before they can put it in a place of safety the rest of Pew's companions attack the inn, and the widow and her son are obliged to flee. The pirates are driven off by the neighbors, lead by Dr. Livesey and Squire Trelawney, and Jim shows the magistrate the chart.

The Search for the Treasure.

Livesey and Trelawney at once decide to go in search of the hidden treasure. Jim is anxious to make one of the party, but the doctor and the squire tell him he must stay with his mother. A ship is bought and a crew shipped for the voyage. Long John Silver, the cook, proves to have great influence over his mates. He is minus one leg, but can best any ordinary man in a fight. After the voyage is well started the ship's captain discovers that most of the crew belong to the pirate band that killed Bones and tried to recover the map. Jim Hawkins, who has stowed away on the ship, overhears Long John planning a mutiny with the other buccaneers. The boy carries the tidings to his friends. The owner of the ship and those on his side manage to hold off the pirates until land is reached. Once at the island Trelawney and his followers leave the vessel and take refuge in a stockade built by Flint. A battle between the pirates and the Trelawney faction results in most of the cutthroats being killed. Ben Gunn, a pirate who had been left on the island, takes the victors to the cave where the treasure is hidden, and Jim is able to return home and fulfill his dream of placing his mother beyond the reach of want.

The Cast Is Well Chosen.

The many illustrated editions of the Stevenson story have made the faces of all its characters from Jim to Black Dog as familiar as those of old friends. Maurice Tourneur has selected his types with great care. Al Filson as Bill Bones, Lon Chaney as Pew, Wilton Taylor as Black Dog, Charles Ogle as Long John Silver, Sydney Deane as Judge Trelawney, Charles Hill Mailes as Dr. Livesey, and Josie Melville as Mrs. Hawkins are of uniform excellence. Shirley Mason's only shortcoming in the character of Jim Hawkins is due to her inability to disguise her sex.

NEWS of the INDEPENDENT FIELD

PRODUCTION

By C. S. SEWELL

DISTRIBUTION

Independent Exchangemen's Organization Purchases National's "Nobody's Girl"

JOE BRANDT, director general of the National Film Corporation of America, announces that "Nobody's Girl," featuring Billie Rhodes, has been purchased by the Federated Film Exchanges of America, for distribution. This is a new organization, the outgrowth of recent convention held in Chicago, and is evidence that the independent exchange men have their new machine in working order and are ready to go right ahead with their plans.

The Federated Film Exchanges of America will exploit, advertise and take care of all publicity in connection with the marketing of "Nobody's Girl." A special department has already been started to take care of this angle, while a sales staff will work on its distribution.

"I am particularly gratified over this sale," said Mr. Brandt, "because I feel that the solution of the independent production and exchange problem is now in sight. The board passes on the merits of every picture before the purchase of it is considered. This means that only good pictures will be marketed through their exchanges, also that the independent producers will be spurred to greater efforts in making better pictures because they know there will be distribution at the end of the trail."

National's "Kentucky Colonel"

Ready for Release, Says Brandt

"The Kentucky Colonel," film version of Opie Reed's novel, is now ready for release, announces Joe Brandt, eastern representative of National Film Corporation. The story concerns two retired army men, bosom friends and former rivals in love, who become estranged through the sowing of seeds of suspicion by a scoundrel, only to be later brought into an even closer bond of friendship.

Joseph J. Dowling, who portrayed "The Miracle Man," is the colonel and Frederick Vroom the general, while Elinor Field plays the feminine lead. Included in the cast are Frances McDonald, Lloyd Bacon, Cora Drew, Fred Kohler, Gordon Griffith, Thelma Salter and others. William A. Seiter directed the production.

Seifert Reports Big Bookings on Kremer Films in Michigan

The manager of Independent Masterfilms, Inc., of Detroit, is in New York and reports considerable interest in his territory on the series of short length Chaplin productions distributed by Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc. Many first-runs have been secured in leading theatres.

Mr. Seifert is conducting an extensive exploitation campaign on these productions. He also reports that exhibitors are rapidly signing up for the topical weekly "Screen Smiles" and is enthusiastic over "Skinner's Dress Suit."

More Sales on Darkfeather Series.

The following additional sales are reported by C. B. Price Co., Inc., on the series of Mona Darkfeather Indian Drama reissues: C. A. Meade on a trip through the Central West sold rights for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois to the United Film Service, and Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to Co-Partner Attractions, Pittsburgh, Pa. A. L. Ehrigott sold eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey territory to Royal Features, Inc., Philadelphia.

Leo White and Bud Ross Support Billy West in Reelcraft Series

Leo White and Bud Ross have entered into contracts to appear in the support of Billy West in a series of comedies for Reelcraft Pictures Corporation. Leo White is an old-timer in the comedy field, having appeared in a large number of Keystone productions, particularly in the role of a count, a characterization which he is said to have created. With Billie West, he will continue to appear in "villainous" roles. Bud Ross has also appeared in comedy roles for several years.

Pioneer Holds Convention; Also Opens Two New Exchanges on Pacific Coast

AT Pioneer headquarters in New York a meeting of the majority of the executive heads comprising the Pioneer Co-operative Distribution System has just been held. Among those present were Ben Amsterdam, of Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia; Michael Lessy, of Screen Art Films, Baltimore; M. A. Lightman, of Criterion Film Service, Atlanta; Herman Rifkin, of Eastern Feature Film Company, Boston; Phil Hazza, of Amalgamated Exhibitors' Circuit, Canada; D. S. Davidson, of Pioneer's Cleveland office; Floyd St. John, of Pioneer's San Francisco office; R. H. Murphy, of Pioneer's Buffalo exchange, and Clyde Elliott, one of the executives of Greater Stars Productions, Chicago.

The subjects discussed dealt with the management and the question of greater co-operation between the offices handling the different productions. General Manager Hoffman announces account of the benefits derived he will call these meetings often.

Pioneer also announces the opening of two new exchanges, one in San Francisco, the other in Los Angeles. Floyd St. John is in charge of the former, while S. W. Whitehead will manage the latter.

The next releases of this organization will be "Midnight Gambols," starring Marie Doro, and "Bubbles," with Mary Anderson. It is reported that the present offering, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with Sheldon Lewis, is breaking all records for Pioneer films.

William Nigh Directed Lybarger's "Democracy"

FRANCIS LEE LYBARGER'S production, "Democracy—the Vision Restored," was directed by William Nigh, who is well known as a director of big productions. He was born in Berlin, Wisconsin. His debut in pictures was made with the Majestic Company, and he was featured in comedy roles. He later joined the California Motion Picture Company and directed features starring Beatriz Michelena.

Metro was the scene of his next work as a director, during which times he made productions for Lionel Barrymore, Mary Miles Minter and others. After this he made several independent productions including "My Four Years in Germany," "Beware" and two comedies starring Johnny Dooley.

"Madonnas and Men" to Be a Big Jans Special Film

THE third production of Jans Pictures, Inc., will be "Madonnas and Men." It is announced that it will be in eight reels and will be an unusual production and one that can be exploited on a big scale. There will be no star, as it is the desire of Herman F. Jans, president of the company, to place upon the market a feature of such strength that no star will be needed to make it a moneyed attraction for the exhibitor.

Particular attention, however, will be given to the cast, and the most prominent players are Eva Burroughs Fontaine, prominent in Ed Wynn's Carnival; Edmund Lowe, leading man for Leonore Ulric in "The Son-Daughter"; Anders Randolph, Gustav von Seffertitz, Raye Deane and Faire Binney.

The story opens in Rome when Christian slave girls were fed to the lions, and draws a parallel with conditions in modern times.

In addition to directing, Mr. Nigh also portrays roles in his own pictures, and his versatility is further shown by the fact that he is also a writer of books and plays, a painter on canvas and a cartoonist.

Park-Whiteside Set Release of "Empty Arms" for May 1

FOR what is claimed to be the first time in the history of the state right market, a definite release date has been set for a production, and it will be released throughout the United States on that date.

The picture is "Empty Arms," the Park-Whiteside production distributed through Photoplay Libraries, Inc. It will be released May 1, on which date the territorial buyers will inaugurate their campaigns.

"Practically the entire territory has been disposed of on this picture" says Byron Park, general manager of the company. "We are not giving out the names of the buyers in justice to them, and also because we plan to run a four-page advertisement in the trade papers, naming the entire group of buyers and the territories they own."

Harry Revier to Direct Serial "Son of Tarzan" for National

Harry Revier, who recently completed the "Return of Tarzan" for Numa, has been engaged by the National Film Corporation of America to supervise the production of "The Son of Tarzan," the latest serial to be announced by this company. This is the first of the Edgar Rice Burroughs books to be adopted for the screen in serial form. National previously produced "Tarzan of the Apes" and "The Romance of Tarzan," but these were five-reel features. Roy Somerville has been engaged to collaborate with Revier. He will prepare the continuity.

Al Christie to Direct a Two-Reeler.

After completing his work of directing with Scott Sidney, the story, "A Smart Aleck," which is to be a special Robertson-Cole feature, Al Christie will direct another of the Christie two-reel comedies of the fast farce type. In the picture will be Bobby Vernon, Teddy Sampson, Neal Burns, Vert Steadman and Charlotte Merriam.

Schaefer Returns to Chicago After an Extensive Trip on the Pacific Coast

PETER J. SCHAEFER, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, return to Chicago, accompanied by Mrs. Schaefer, April 5, after a Pacific Coast trip which began January 4. Most of the time was spent in California, with San Francisco as the most favored spot. Mr. Schaefer took his auto along and much of the time was spent in motor-ing up and down the coast, during which Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego were thoroughly explored. While in Los Angeles all the studios were visited and most of the stars were met personally.

Mr. Schaefer was naturally greatly interested in the condition of the moving picture business, especially in the theatres. He found capacity business at every house visited in Los Angeles. Big two-hour shows, with prices of 50 cents for the main floor and 75 cents for the balcony, were the rule in Los Angeles.

"They are now building half a dozen big, new theatres there," said Mr. Schaefer. "Marcus Loew is building a picture theatre to seat 3,500 persons, at Seventh and Broadway, and another that will seat 3,000 at Mercantile Place. The estimated cost of these two houses is $3,000,000. Syd Grauman is also building a picture theatre at Hill and Sixth streets that will seat 4,000 persons, at a cost of $1,000,000.

"Then the Pantages are at work on a vaudeville house at Seventh and Hill streets, at an outlay of $1,000,000. The Orpheum Company is also building a new vaudeville house at Eighth and Hill that will cost over $1,000,000. The building of new houses is not really overdone, as there is plenty of business for all of them. There are only about half a dozen small picture theatres in the downtown section of Los Angeles."

Mr. Schaefer told me that notwithstanding the great stride forward in the housing of moving pictures and the marvels of modern picture productions, he was impressed that we have only entered on the threshold of what the moving picture is still to be. He received this impression when investigation revealed that one can now seldom find a picture in the making at Los Angeles that will cost less than $100,000!

Mr. Schaefer called on Mack Sennett, with whom he passed a very pleasant time. "He was up to his eyes and ears in work, but he has always time to see his friends," Mr. Schaefer said with much emphasis and feeling.

Mr. Schaefer, while acknowledging that he had seen many wonderful things in the business out in the Far West, yet believes that Chicago has some of the finest and greatest theatres in the country and that they offer better shows than anywhere else for the money.

J. Rich Moss Buys the Grand Theatre, Lincoln, Ill.

J. RICH MOSS, who is widely known in Chicago film circles both as a salesman and in the management of picture theatres, has purchased the Grand Theatre in Lincoln, Ill., a progressive, growing town of 13,000 population.

The Grand will be opened Monday, April 19, under the personal management of Mr. Moss. The house seats 800 persons and it has been thoroughly renovated and re-decorated. An orchestra of seven pieces will furnish the music.

Mr. Moss, at various times, was connected with the management of the Imperial, Crown and Studebaker theatres, Chicago, and is a bright young man thoroughly imbued with up-to-date business methods. He has had considerable experience as a road man for state-rights pictures.

Federated Exchanges Head Advises Against Selling Theatres to Film Powers

DO not, under any conditions, sell your theatre to film powers and do not let the big interests get even a finger hold on your business," is the advice of President Joseph L. Friedman, of the newly formed Federated Film Exchanges of America, to exhibitors.

"For the last year, or thereabouts, the film industry has been hearing rumors of such and such an organization investing in theatrical interests all over the country," continued Mr. Friedman. "As a consequence, individual theatre owners do not know just which way to turn. It was partly to combat this feeling of unrest and to settle in the minds of the exhibitors that the business they have built belongs to them, and to them alone, that the Federated Film Exchanges of America was formed.

"In the past the independent producer has sold his pictures where the profit was greatest and where full distribution was practically guaranteed. It was impossible for the independent exchange man to compete in buying power with the big film circuits, for the simple reason that he had no organization.

"In spite of the fact that the united buying power of the leading state rights exchanges was on a par with the buying power of the leading exchange systems throughout the country, state rights men had to sit idly by and watch the greatest pictures pass into the hands of others, simply because they were not organized. This ability to swing the largest deals has enabled the interests in many instances to take from the exhibitor what he has built up by years of sticking to his own business—his theatre.

"The Federated Film Corporation releases the exhibitor from dependence on the product of any one organization. He can laugh at 'freezing out' threats. He is not obliged to make any disagreeable contracts in order to save himself from bitter competition. With the Federated back of him, he can rest assured of a high grade product for his screen, without any joker.

Are Still Independent Exchanges.

"It stands to reason that an organization such as the Federated Film Exchanges of America cannot continue to live and do business unless the pictures handled by them live up to their advance notices. There is no tie-up. Each individual picture released through Federated channels must make money, or all succeeding pictures will cost the exchange system dearly.

"Understand me. The Federated exchanges are independent exchanges still, but they are independent exchanges which are united and organized for the betterment of the film business. The men who by their own efforts, in their own territory, have built up a business that has proven highly successful, are at the helm for the Federated. Their chief aim now is to preserve this confidence of exhibitors and nourish it. Each Federated film exchange manager, in his own territory, will necessarily be interested in keeping the pictures released through the Federated up to standard.

"Understand me further. The purchasing power of the Federated Film Exchanges of America runs away up into money. No picture ever produced can faze it. If the picture shows possibilities of earning a profit for the men who make up the Federated Film Exchanges, it will be bought. If we want it, we'll have it."

Lila Lee, Juvenile Star, Files Suit Against Mrs. Edwards

AUGUSTA APPEL, fifteen-year-old daughter of Carl Appel, owner of the north side Turner Hall, Chicago, filed through her father a suit in the Circuit Court, Friday, April 9, asking for an injunction restraining Famous Players-Lasky Corporation from paying any further moneys earned by her to Mrs. Gus Edwards, who has had charge of her stage and screen career since she was five years old.

Augusta Appel's screen name is Lila Lee. She is now a juvenile movie star in Los Angeles and her mother is with her. Mrs. Edwards is charged with mismanagement and extravagant expenditures.

Lila says she does not know how much money she is earning with the film organization mentioned, nor does her father. To ascertain this is one of the objects of the suit.

Mrs. Edwards is at present in Chicago and will contest the suit. She asserts that she has spent a large sum of money in preparing Lila for a stage career, and that the success Lila has made, both on the stage and screen, is due to her efforts and support.

Mary Pickford to Appear in Three Pictures in Europe

KENNETH McGAFFEY, publicity representative of Mary Pickford, spent a few days in Chicago recently and left for Minneapolis, where he joined Ralph O. Proctor, general manager for United Artists. Thence he will accompany Mr. Proctor to Seattle and thence to Los Angeles, where he expects to arrive about the middle of April.

He informed me while here that Miss Pickford is now busy at work on "Op O' My Thumb," this title having been expressively changed to "The Duchess of Suds." Jack Dillon is the director of this superfeature.

Mary Pickford will visit Europe about June 1, and will engage in the making of three pictures during her stay. Two of these will be made in England and one in France. An American director will have charge of the productions. The titles of these pictures have not been given out yet.

Office of Middle East Films, Ltd.
Located in Weltevreden, Java.

Good Business Reported in Borneo and Celebes Islands

FROM Singapore comes word that Joe Fisher, of the Middle East Films, Ltd., has recovered from an attack of acute malaria contracted while traveling in Borneo and the Celebes Islands. The Middle East Films is associated with African Films, Ltd., African Theatres, Ltd., India Films, Ltd., and African Films Productions, Ltd., the New York office of which is in the Putnam Building. The company is handling theatrical enterprises in addition to films. At the time of writing Marie Tempest and a London company was playing to capacity business.

Mr. Fisher reports that business has expanded very much in Borneo and the Celebes, that branch offices have been opened in Medan, Batavia and Soerabaia and that shortly one will be opened in Borneo.

Oldtime Heavyweight Boxer Is in Fox Sunshine Comedy

PROMINENT in the forthcoming Fox Sunshine Comedy Special, which comprises "five reels of mirth, magnificence and maids," is "Big Tom" Kennedy, as he is familiarly known in the California film colony. While President William Fox, of Fox Film Corporation, was looking over some film received last week, he spotted Kennedy's face in the first reel of the comedy and immediately recalled him as a former professional heavyweight boxer.

Kennedy started fighting back in 1910 and got a licking and $1,000 when he tackled Al Palzer. Others he has boxed are Georges Carpentier, Jack Johnson, Carl Morris, Bombardier Wells, Frank Moran, Gunboat Smith and Max Robert. His last three fights were with Al Reich, Jim Coffey and Tony Ross. During the last named fight he was badly hurt, and after six months in the hospital gave up boxing in favor of motion picture acting.

The comedy in which Kennedy appears was produced by Hampton Del Ruth, who availed himself of the services of every Sunshine actor and actresses at the West Coast studio. Kennedy's great size stands out in contrast to the willowy figures of the three score and ten "Sunshine Widows."

Fox Delivery by Motorcycle.

Many New York exchanges were badly handicapped owing to the railroad strike by the delay in delivery of films to theatres. Louis Rosenbluh, who is the executive of the Fox sales exchange for New Jersey, utilized a motorcycle messenger service which he found to be quite effective.

Garsson Organizes Fine Arts Pictures; Exhibitors to Share in Gross Receipts

THE Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., has been formed to succeed the Foundation Film Company, of 1600 Broadway, New York. The new name is considered more suitable to the aims and policies of Murray W. Garsson, who was president and general manager of Foundation. Mr. Garsson will continue to act as president and general manager of the new company, while Charles Schwerin will be secretary, treasurer and sales manager.

Elaborate production plans are announced. Eight pictures a year are to be made and all of them are to be of five-reel length. The chief feature will be a contest picture, the details of which are now being worked out. It will be a sequel to the two-reel beauty contest picture, "A Dream of Fair Women," which is now being distributed by Messrs. Garsson and Schwerin in state rights territory.

The contest is being conducted by Eugene V. Brewster's three fan magazines, Motion Picture, Motion Picture Classic and Shadowland, which also held the contest in connection with "A Dream of Fair Women." The successful contestants will be featured in the leading roles of the picture, which will be produced as soon as the contest is ended.

The sales policy of Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., will be of special value and service to the exhibitor. It will include the selling of negatives at cost and a share of the gross receipts. Thus the exhibitor will be a co-producer with Fine Arts Pictures, Inc.

Other novelties are to be prepared, all of which will be of the five reel length. Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., in short, will endeavor to live up to its name.

Sawyer Describes New Company Offering Good Screen Stories

THE Authors' Stage and Screen Plays, Inc., has been formed recently to specialize solely in supplying material for screen plays. General Manager Arthur H. Sawyer has issued the following statement from the offices at 1476 Broadway, New York City:

"The dearth of suitable material for the screen today constitutes the chief worry of the average motion picture producer. That the demand exceeds the supply is shown in the number of stories and plays bought lately. Even this questionable field of 'nearly successful plays' and ordinary magazine stories is now practically exhausted and the producer is faced with the possibility of having to 'do over' plays produced years ago.

"This organization has been formed for the express purpose of assisting the producer in this unfortunate situation. The men in it know every angle of the motion picture business. They can differentiate between a poor stage play or a magazine story of questionable value, for which an enormous price is asked, and stories possessing the elements necessary for perfect picturization. Authors of international reputation will write these stories, always remembering that they are intended for filming.

"A special 'direct to the public' publicity campaign will be inaugurated with every story as well as a campaign publicizing the author. All plays or stories will be handled by us only under exclusive arrangements."

Guy Empey Officials See "Oil."

An opportunity to see Guy Empey's latest photoplay, "Oil," has been extended to the officials of the Guy Empey Pictures Corporation in a private showing. The screening was an invitation affair, and only officials of the company and their guests, members of the cast and a few friends were included in those present.

The negative is now being matched and cut from the working print and a trade announcement of distributing arrangements and release date will be made shortly.

Neilan Representative Plans European-Made Productions

HARRY HAM, Marshall Neilan's foreign representative, has just arrived in London to make advance arrangements for the production of European subjects made under Mr. Neilan's direction. Passage has been engaged for an entire producing unit which will accompany Mr. Neilan abroad and a large part of the boat will be reserved for the exclusive use of the film people. During the trip over the company will be busy going over the scripts of the pictures to be staged abroad and much of the preliminary work in conjunction with the actual shooting of scenes will be attended to en route.

Mr. Ham is most enthusiastic in his cable reports regarding conditions abroad and stated that the outlook for a number of very unusual productions staged in the exact locale of the stories is particularly promising.

In addition to his producing staff, Mr. Neilan will take over with him a complete outfit including several new machines in the way of electrical appliances on which he has been experimenting for the past six months.

Activities at the Neilan studio in Hollywood are being speeded up so that a third production following "Don't Ever Marry" will be completed before he leaves.

Baremore to Have His Own Offices.

R. W. Baremore, who for the past several months has been in charge of publicity and advertising for the United Picture Theatres of America and United Picture Productions Corporation, has resigned to accept several other offers. He has begun handling the advertising, publicity and exploitation for the Haring and Blumenthal Enterprises, for the time being concentrating his efforts on the New Jersey theatres of the firm.

Two well known stars, a prominent director and a new producing company also will avail themselves of Mr. Baremore's services within the next few weeks. Contracts already have been signed for this service. Until suitable offices are found Mr. Baremore temporarily will be situated at 1600 Broadway at United's headquarters.

Neely Edwards Takes New Partner.

Neely Edwards, who created the original team of moving picture "Hall Room Boys" which are being filmed by Jack and Harry Cohn, and released as "The Hall Room Boys Comedies," has taken a new partner and will continue starring in the comedies produced by the Cohns.

Hugh Fay is the new addition to Edwards' store of laughs. He is well known for his work in vaudeville and his genuine sense of humor and attractive looks.

Thomas Coming to New York.

H. M. Thomas, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Omaha, left on Sunday, April 11, to spend several weeks visiting theatres in eastern cities, garnering ideas to be considered for use in Omaha. He will be in New York City the week of April 19, stopping at the Astor.

LOS ANGELES

NEWS LETTER

BY A. H. GIEBLER

Cleremont Begins on First of Six Selznick Specials

CLEREMONT PHOTOPLAYS fired its first guns at the Bernstein studios when Lloyd Carleton Productions, under personal direction of Lloyd B. Carleton, began to film an adaptation of "Mountain Madness," Anna Alice Chapin's story of the Virginia hills. This is the first of six special productions to be made for Selznick for release through the Republic Distributing Corporation, and the Carleton company is the first of several units to get into actual production. Others will be added as soon as the Cleremont Corporation can secure a studio as a permanent home. A fully equipped studio is under consideration, but in case it cannot be purchased a new studio will be built and probably modeled as nearly as possible after the Clara Kimball Young studio in Edendale.

The technical force of the company includes John T. Carleton, as production manager; W. Bradley Ward, assistant director; Delbert L. Davis and Robert Carson, cinematographers.

Mignon Anderson, Ora Carew, Edna Pennington, Edward Coxen, Howard Miller, Richard Morris and Jack Lott comprise the cast for the first picture. It is to be the policy of Cleremont to feature its stories with all-star casts.

Tourneur Buys Hollywood Estate.

Maurice Tourneur, motion picture producer, has purchased a piece of property comprising thirteen acres, known as the William H. Hoegee estate, at the corner of Los Feliz and Commonwealth Boulevard, in the East Hollywood foothills district for the sum of $150,000.

Becker Returns from East.

Bruno J. Becker, general manager of the Gale Henry Comedy Company, has returned to Los Angeles after a two-months' visit in New York, having completed negotiations for a new series of two and five-reel comedies featuring Gale Henry. Toward the close of Mr. Becker's stay in New York, he was stricken with the "flu," from which he has not yet fully recovered.

The studio on Santa Monica Boulevard formerly used by the Gale Henry company has been sold, but a new plant will soon be under construction on the site purchased at Sunset and La Brea not long ago by the company.

Betty Bouton Married.

Betty Bouton, player of ingenue parts in the films, has announced her marriage, which took place several weeks ago, to Arthur Jackson, scenario writer. Miss Bouton will continue her picture career.

Hiram Abrams Arrives.

Hiram Abrams, president and manager of the United Artists Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles on April 6, to stay only a few days. Mr. Abrams intimated, however, that there might be some interesting announcements to make, even in that short a time. One of the chief objects of his visit was a conference with the three members of the United Artists, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, now on the Coast.

Helen Taft Visits Studio.

Helen Taft, daughter of former President William H. Taft, was a recent visitor at the Metro studio, and was taken on a personally conducted tour through the plant by May Allison. Miss Taft is in Southern California in the interests of the Bryn Mawr endowment fund.

Laemmle Has New Producing Policy.

One of the innovations instituted by President Carl Laemmle on his present visit to Universal City is that no production shall begin at that studio until all the necessary sets have been erected and are ready for the director's use. Heretofore, the policy at many film studios, according to Mr. Laemmle, has been to erect the sets as they are required, and this has often caused considerable delay. Mr. Laemmle contends that not only is there much time and money lost by these methods, but also much spontaneity and naturalness in the presentation of the story by the players, if, after having been rehearsed in the action of the play they have to wait several days, and sometimes weeks, for the sets to be erected. The vast space of Universal City will permit of entire settings for a dozen different productions to be built at the same time.

Ascher to Build Studio.

Sidney Ascher, head of the Ascher Enterprises, and a large stockholder in the Hallmark Distributing Corporation, announces that his company has purchased a site in Hollywood, within a stone's throw of the Lasky plant, which will be used for the purpose of building a modern studio to cost approximately $250,000. Two glass stages will be built immediately, and later two more will be built on the lot, which is commodious and large enough for big producing plant.

Hayakawa Company Incorporated.

The Hayakawa Feature Play Company, with several prominent business men of the State of California as directors, has filled out incorporation papers. The authorized capital stock of the company is $500,000, and the board of directors includes A. B. C. Dohrman, of San Francisco, and Vernon Goodwin, William J. Connery, Milton Gatzert, and Henry J. Aaron, of Los Angeles. The plans of the company include the building of a new studio in the near future and the extension of production activities.

Victory Closes for Repairs.

Christ Glimm, manager of the Victory Theatre, has announced that the Victory will be closed for two weeks while the theatre is being redecorated and refurbished, and while extensive alterations and improvements will be made inside and outside on the building.

Garrick To Be Remodeled.

The Garrick Theatre, at Eighth and Broadway, is not to be replaced by a large bank building, according to C. E. Halsell, lessee of the house, but will be improved and remodeled to the tune of about $20,000, making the house modern and up to the minute in every respect, besides increasing the seating capacity.

First National Exhibitors' Convention to Consider Eleven Particular Issues

STEPS significant to every independent exhibitor in the United States form the procedure for the general convention of First National Exhibitors' Circuit and Associated First National Pictures, Inc., to be held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, beginning April 26.

An examination of the issues compiled in the general outline of business to be brought before the convention reveals a greater number of new and revolutionary matters than have ever been considered by any one organization in the history of the motion picture industry. A close inspection of the subjects involved shows that in the brief under which the main topics are listed are eleven vital issues, standing problems before independent exhibitors today, and not particularly related to First National as a competitive organization. There are naturally several matters of policy concerning the organization exclusively, but the dominating subjects to be considered involve independent exhibitors to a far greater degree than they concern First National Exhibitors' Circuit, it is declared in a statement issued by First National.

Valuable Data Compiled.

Expediting the work of the convention, a committee representing First National franchise holders has for a period of weeks been in executive session gathering every bit of available data pertaining to the various subjects to be brought before the meeting. As a result the members assembled will be provided with an exhaustive assortment of memoranda embracing every topic listed in the brief which in itself includes the eleven different subjects of independent exhibitor interest.

Exhibitor franchise holders of the circuit in telegrams of April 11 cast a new light on the convention in view of the information that exhibitors from the north, south, east and west—representing independently owned and operated theatres—have made arrangements to be present at the convention. Upon th

Full Attendance Assured.

A check on the queries sent to First National exchange managers from the home office shows that every exchange manager will be in attendance at the convention. In only several instances is it doubtful that managers will be able to arrange their work in order to be present and in such instances it is assured that those managers will be represented by proxy.

Simultaneous with the announcement that Whitman Bennett, producer manager for Lionel Barrymore, the latest adjunct to the circuit's constellation, has evidenced his intention to address the convention, comes the prediction that Mr. Bennett's "remarks" to the convention will be of especial interest to exhibitors in general.

Of interest to showmen throughout the nation is the fact that nineteen volumes of exhibitor information, amounting to more than 2,000 pages of statistical compilation will be carried to Chicago for the opening sessions.

Educational to Distribute

Volcanic Eruption Pictures

DR. ROBERT F. GRIGGS, of Ohio State University and director of the various expeditions of the National Geographic Society sent to investigate the effects of the Mount Katmai, Alaska, eruption, has returned to Columbus after spending several days assisting Educational Films Corporation in editing and titling the pictures made by his expeditions, which it will distribute.

Although a disaster was avoided because the country was practically uninhabited, the eruption was probably the greatest locally in all history, and Dr. Griggs has had the privilege of heading several expeditions to that section and of being the first man to study the effects of the great upheaval.

One of the results of the eruption has been to create literally millions of smoking fissures and fumaroles through the valleys of the volcanic district. These are pictured in a film to be called "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes," the official name given the section by the National Geographic Society. In addition, there are other pictures showing Mount Katmai itself.

Release of these pictures will mark the first relations of the National Geographic Society with a motion picture organization.

Grace Wynden-Vail Is Now

Publicist for American Cinema

GRACE WYNDEN-VAILE, who recently completed the publicity for Numa Pictures Corporation's production of "The Return of Tarzan," is now associated with the American Cinema in like capacity. During this past week she has covered the activities of both companies, but severs her Numa affiliations Saturday, April 17. Mrs. Vail has had splendid training for her work, having served her apprenticeship work on dailies in Madison and Milwaukee, Wis.; Battle Creek, Mich., and Chicago. She handled publicity for the Crescent Amusement Company at Nashville, Tenn., for Tony Sudekun, for Jake Wells in Atlanta, for Gaumont at Jacksonville, and was publicity manager of the Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas offices of Southern Paramount and Arcraft prior to coming to New York. She is also motion picture editor of the New York American in conjunction with her publicity work.

Margaret Namara is the leading feminine player in American Cinema's picture, "A Moment's Madness," an adaptation of H. Thompson Rich's original story, "A Woman Strays." James Vincent is directing and the supporting cast includes Albert L. Barret and R. Valentino.

Mollie King, one of the corporation's most popular stars, is now working on her third photodrama for them, a play based on Catherine Gibbon's story, "The Stranger." Pierre Bodin, the husband of Madame Lubovska, is in the supporting cast.

George Fitzmaurice Finishes

Second Paramount-Arcraft

COMING at a time when the memory of "On With the Dance" is still fresh in the minds, the announcement that George Fitzmaurice has just completed his second production for Paramount-Arcraft is a matter of much interest to the trade and public. When, added to that, is the fact that the same quartet that was responsible for "On With the Dance"—Ouida Bergere, scenarist; Mae Murray and David Powell, featured players, and Director Fitzmaurice—co-operated on the second production, the weight of the announcement is increased.

Persons who have viewed the picture in the studio projection room are said to have been enraptured with the result Mr. Fitzmaurice has obtained.

The acting is some of the best seen in pictures recently, for, in addition to the featured cast, such names are included as Holmes E. Herbert, Macey Harlam, Alma Tell, Frank Losee, Lawrence Johnson.

The mere announcement that the locale of the story is in Turkey brings to the minds of those acquainted with Mr. Fitzmaurice's artistic personality an anticipation of beautiful, atmospheric, harmonious interiors.

Away Up North in the Cold and Bleek—Yes, Even There of Love They Speak.

Ralph Ince seen here in three excellent views taken from Republic's "Out of the Snows," and they certainly live up to the title. Zeena Keefe is included in the cast.

Grauman Uses Nice Display to Tell

About "My Lady's Garter," with Sample garter clasped while in the five column width the garter is shown open to mark the program from the feature. It is a nice study in making practically one design do for two spaces, and both show skillful treatment in the use of text, but the larger bank gives a funny effect. It is intended to get interest in the story by pausing at the critical moment with a to-be-continued effect, the line reading "A society girl in love with a poet planned a midnight elopement, but that very night—" The omission of the dash and the closeness of the type makes it read to the effect that "that very night Maurice Tourneur presents 'My Lady's Garter,'" which was not the effect intended. Reading the text apart from the design is probably responsible for the break.

We Have Already Said So

WILLIAM GANE, of the Belmont, Philadelphia, used the out of town postcard for "The Copperhead," mailing his cards from Atlantic City, which is the logical point of mailing for such a card for Philadelphia. Then Mr. Gane proudly postcards "How's this for an advertising novelty?" He should know what we think, for we expressed an opinion when we picked up the stunt from Phil Gersdorf, of Jacksonville, lately.

Made Its Own Book Hook-up

THE Ansonia Theatre, Butte, made its own hook-up for the Rupert Hughes "The Cup of Fury" by making a reproduction of the book, with its cover, the chief feature of a four fifteens. The advertisement is very effectively done with a black backing for the book, which apparently materializes in the smoke from an incense burner held in the lower right hand corner, the smoke streaming upward into the black. Butte advertisers seem to be batting a good average these days.

Here's a Good Argument These Days

A. L. MIDDLETON, of the Grand Theatre, De Queen, Ark., hits upon a valuable advertisement for these days of book and playwrights when he asks his patrons, "Why pay a dollar for a book and sit up nights to read it through when you can read an illustrated version of Rupert Hughes' 'The Cup of Fury' on the screen in 90 minutes at the Grand Theatre?"

That sort of argument would appeal to almost anyone except the book store hook-up man. For his regular advertising Mr. Middleton now uses a manila sheet 7 by 15 inches, printed on one side and folded into thirds to go through the mails with an address on the back. A paper clip holds it together. The self-mailer has dropped out of sight lately, but it is still good even if the war is over.

One Manager Uses His Regular Display

ADVERTISING for "Auction of Souls" is no novelty at this late day, but the film is still cleaning up in the back districts, and M. P. Using a composite cut at the left, he ran a bank of talk on the right and used the bottom for reading notices, solving the problem of how to use too much type and yet not have too much. Put into the body of the display, these three readers might not have gone over, but by cutting off from the rest of the space with rule and running them as reading notices the mind received them where a crowded advertisement might have lost the value of the entire space.

Mr. Myers is using a lot of text as it is, and more might have proved fatal but for this expedient, which is worth remembering. It gives a new form to an old idea. Mr. Myers gave a pre-showing to the clergy on the Saturday before the Monday opening, and as there was a Near East drive on at the time several of the ministers made pulpit mention of the subject. Most of Mr. Myers' advertisements were too full, but this idea is distinctly good.

Never Let a Lady Turn Her Back Upon an Attraction She Is to Advertise

HOWARD O. PIERCE, of the Kunsky enterprises in Detroit, turns out some excellent displays for the Adams and Madison, the star houses, but a recent pair are not quite up to his usual standard. What might be a very attractive cut of Anita Stewart defeats its possibilities because the artist has pasted it in so that she seems to turn her back upon the attraction she is advertising. It is a small matter, perhaps, but it is bad planning, for the first impulse will be to follow the eyes out of the space into the adjoining advertisement and there will be a mental jolt, slight, perhaps, yet definite enough to impair the selling value.

The best portrait for advertising purposes has the eyes looking straight out of the page. Where a cut of this sort is not available, the portrait should be so placed that the glance directs to

Big Lobby Displays Are Merely Large Little Ones

Milwaukee Manager Works Unique Lobby to Get Atmosphere for "Idol Dancer"

UNUSUALLY elaborate—and also unusually effective—is the lobby layout planned by George Fischer, of the Alhambra, Milwaukee, for "The Idol Dancer." Mr. Fischer has originated a number of decidedly good ideas in the past, but he extended himself for this First National-Griffith release and has set a new mark for himself.

The lobby display merely backed up an intelligent advertising campaign, but the beauty of the lobby effects undoubtedly drew hundreds to the theatre who went inside when they got the spirit of the display. It was beyond the average lobby dress up and attained the dignity of a production in itself.

Took Entire Lobby.

Mr. Fischer did not content himself with dressing up the front in the hope of drawing the transients. He started with the sidewalk line and ran the display right up to the entrance doors.

The basis of the display was a succession of thatched huts on both sides of the lobby just sufficiently removed from the wall to give an effect of depth to the interiors. Some of these huts were closed in and only the windows gave a glimpse of the interior, decorated with cutouts from the posters. Others were open across the front as shown in the second of the illustrations.

The idea was not to see how many cutouts they could stuff into the spaces, but so see how effectively they could dispose a few eye-catching attractors.

Used Beaver Board.

Beaver board was used for the sides of the huts, being painted to imitate the grass thatch. The eaves were slightly taller than a man's head and sloped sharply to the peak of the roof. Tanbark in six-inch strips was used to outline the doors and windows to suggest the log frames.

Between the huts palm trees of beaver board were constructed to jut slightly into the lobby and rising well above the peaks of the roofs. These were painted on both sides so that the effect was not spoiled if one turned back to look. The entrance doors were also treated to suggest the same effect. The entire display suggested a street in a native village in the South Seas island location of the story.

It did more than merely create an atmosphere for the pictures; it made talk and it brought many into the lobby with money in their hands.

The Advertising Idea.

Perhaps not many can make so elaborate a production, but a single thatched hut is within the reach of all, and in the south palm leaves can be made into real thatches with decidedly effective results.

But anyone can follow Mr. Fischer's newspaper campaign, which started in with the set of teasers from the press book. Probably you have seen these two-inch, single column displays in which the display of the dancing figure remains the same, but with the text changed daily for a week.

From this it went to a cross page eights; also based on the press material book, which was unusually rich in good selling talk. The dancing figure was used to hook up with the teasers. Hook-up was made with the fact that it was this picture which took Griffith to Nassau on his very nearly fatal trip, hooking up with the press association dispatches of some weeks ago.

Went Over Big.

Between the newspaper advertising, the lobby work and the stage production, the picture went over big. Probably the newspaper work alone, plus a perfunctory lobby display, would have put the production over to good results, but they wanted to get the limit, and they went to an expense which results proved to be amply justified.

The picture was not merely put over, it was put over big, and the crowds went out to advertise the story to others because they had been impressed by the magnitude of the handling as well as by the picture itself.

It is from this angle that lobby decoration and stage productions pay. Given the material to start with, the extra effects make the picture itself seem larger and more important.

Active Selznick Campaign

Got Denver All Stirred Up

SENDING an exploitation man all the way from Philadelphia to Denver to put over "His Wife's Money" and "Footlights and Shadows" brought big results. L. A. Young was the exploitation man sent out and his first stunt was to send an airplane over the city to drop thousands of heralds for "His Wife's Money" at the Rivoli. Another idea was to get out a special edition of the Denver Express. After the regular Saturday edition was printed a special first page plate was used and the extra edition run off and distributed by boys.

Half page ads were carried in all of the papers and the campaign included an almost complete tie-up with the Denver stores, reminiscent of the best working of the "Mickey" campaign. The best display was a hat in a millinery store trimmed with greenbacks.

Arrangements were also made for a fashion show in connection with the Olive Thomas picture.

Made Mystery of Twilight

Baby to Interest Patrons

MAKING a mystery of an occasional production is one way in which H. C. Plath, of the Temple, Texas, gets over a production. His latest film to be put over by this means was "A Twilight Baby." He used cutouts of the First National posters, built a cow and a pup and all the rest, fencing them in for a lobby display, but he did not tell anything informative about the story or the production. He did not even come out and say that it was a comedy, though the treatment left this to be inferred. It was a highly developed form of teaser treatment and it put the picture over for a three day run in a town none too large. It cannot be worked very often, but it is good for a now and then idea.

"I Will Be Waiting, My Love, for Thee 'Neath the Shade of the Sheltering Palm."

A vista effect and a detail of the unusually elaborate lobby devised by George Fischer, of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, to suggest the atmosphere of "The Idol Dancer," David W. Griffith's new First National release. It cost a lot of money, but the idea can be simplified for use in the smaller towns. Any Boy Scout can show you how to thatch a hut if you've forgotten what you used to know. Cut-outs will do the rest.

New Sennett Comedy Good for Hook-up Pages

Manager Vainly Sought Arrest, but His "Excuse My Dust" Got Over for All That

SOMETIMES you can't always tell. George E. Carpenter, of the Paramount-Empress, Salt Lake City, and N. K. Parkhurst, Paramount exploitation man for that territory, figured that someone would be arrested if they dressed up automobiles without the owners' permission. And because they figured on this additional publicity, the auto owners not only did not swear out warrants, but many of them actually asked for more.

Carpenter had "Excuse My Dust" and he figured out he could do something with penants, and he had five hundred printed up in imitation of the felt affairs cheap sports like to tie to the spare tire of their flivvers. They were done in gaudy colors on pasteboard and provided with tie strings.

Decorated the Lot.

Boys were sent through the downtown district out he could do something with penants, and he had five hundred printed up in imitation of the felt affairs cheap sports like to tie to the spare tire of their flivvers. They were done in gaudy colors on pasteboard and provided with tie strings.

There was no mention of the theatre on the cards; merely the title, but it was so clearly an advertising device that it was not long before the theatre was hooked up with the display and very little longer before auto owners began to stop before the house and ask for another card for some friend.

The Newspaper Angle.

There were plenty of boys out and in a few hours the entire 500 tags had been used and more could have been planted had they been prepared. A few particular owners ordered the signs destroyed, but a majority of the placards stuck for days and lasted beyond the engagement.

It was good for ample mention in all of the local papers and the Herald ran a three column cut with a humorous story describing the contrasts the signs were responsible for. It was a good chance for a special writer, and Carpenter had the photographs conveniently handy when a request was made for cut copy.

The net result was that every auto owner knew there was a play about cars at the Paramount-Empress, and this information was shared by the town generally, to the resultant benefit of business on the week.

But next time Carpenter wants to get arrested, he will arrange for a complaint in advance. This time it did not work.

Still Another New Angle to Popular Fashion Show

LOOKING around for something to combat the usual dullness of Holy Week, Jim Maddox, of the Southern, Columbus, Ohio, pulled a couple of good stunts.

He booked in Marion Davies in "April Folly." The nearness of April Fools Day suggested a contest for the best April Fool story. This was run by the Citizen as a circulation scheme. It was, of course, tied up with the play title, with ticket prizes. This ran the week before and three days during the engagement.

Next Mr. Maddox gave a new link to the style show. He arranged with F. & R. Lazarus to provide the modes, but the models were selected from the girls working their way through the Ohio State College. This got every college student interested, and the local men, as well. The rest of the women came merely to see the styles. Three shows were given daily, and the box office showed no trace of the usual Holy Week dullness.

Used Mounted Street Patrol for "The River's End" Stunt

BECAUSE of a reward offered for the best handling of "The River's End" the Brooklyn managers of the Keith & Proctor houses have been hustling. The best stunt is credited to the Prospect where Harry Crull had the streets near the theatre patrolled by four mounted six footers in the uniform of the Royal Canadian Police, the saddle cloths carrying the advertisement for the story. Pine and hemlock were used to give local color and odor, while an opium layout in one corner got attention, though it gave a wrong idea of the story. The hustling enabled the film to stay a full week at the Prospect instead of the usual three days, and it followed the run at the Strand, at that.

Now It Is a Comedy to Get a Successful Hook-up Page

HOOKE-UP pages are getting so common that even the comedies can get a page of space with a minimum for the attraction. The Strand, Fort Wayne, has hooked up five farm implement concerns, a seed company and a patent chicken feed with Mack Sennett's "Down on the Farm," his first five reel comedy under his United Artists contract. For good measure they throw in an auto agency, making eight hook-ups on the page. This was for the "premier presentation," which is even earlier than pre-release and a full page was taken in the other paper, partly display and partly reading notice. If this comedy craze keeps up we shall presently see the line "and a good five-part feature."

Interested With Hour Glass

GORDON WRIGHTER, of the Poli Theatre, Springfield, Mass., woke his town up to an interest in "Flame of the Desert" with a nine foot hour glass of the usual type except for its size. The hole for the passage of the sand was very small and the question "How long will it take the sand to pass into the lower glass?" crystalized interest. All sorts of guesses were hazarded and everyone who guessed came back to see how close they had come to the actual time, which was 33 hours, 24 minutes, 30 seconds. Having got them down to the lobby, Mr. Wrighter gave them a lot of lobby stills to look at, backing them with oriental rugs and completing the display with a cut out of Miss Farrar and Lou Tellegen propped up against a real palm tree.

Give Chaplin a Cigarette

MORE good ideas have been forgotten than the next five years will bring forth. Why not dig back into the past for reissue ideas as well as reissued films? For instance, do you remember the time when you could get a crowd around a Chaplin cut-out by sticking the end of a lighted Turkish cigarette into his mouth? Turkish cigarettes will keep on burning until they are consumed, and the idea is so old it is new again. Try it some time.

Carrying the Banner

In the palmy days of the drama meant something else, but George E. Carpenter had all Salt Lake City carrying the banner for this Paramount release.

Try These Stunts for "The Virgin of Stamboul"

Louisville "Everywoman" Exploitation Can Be Used for Any Other Attraction

LATELY we told how 20,000 advertisements for "Everywoman" were wrapped in as many loaves of bread in Louisville, but now Oscar A. Doob, of the Cincinnati office of the Famous Players-Lasky, comes through with the story of how George Maurer, manager of the Strand, Louisville; Joe Goldberg, his publicity man, and the Cincinnati hustler put the stunt over.

Doob went down to Louisville all full of the idea of a hook-up double decker. That was what he had been doing all over his territory. But Louisville was fed up on double deckers or single deckers or anything else, and Doob had to do some thinking.

Turned to Bread.

The Whiteside Bakery Company was making a drive on "Betsy Ross" bread, and Doob went over to see them. As a result he promised them fifty tickets to be used as prizes for a hook-up contest.

A box seating six was the first prize, four seats went to the second, three to the third, two to the fourth, and a ticket each to the next thirty-five replies.

To let the bakery get its share, the contest was hinged upon the bread and the questions were:

"How would you describe the 'Betsy Ross' bread's fine qualities in six words or less?"

"Why should every woman buy bread instead of baking it herself?"

"Which do you prefer, the ten or fifteen cent 'Betsy Ross' loaf, and why?"

How It Worked.

All of that sounds rather foolish, but it was figured that the scheme would work best if it appeared to be purely a baking company scheme in which they had selected ticket prizes because "Everywoman" offered the best value. It did not sound like a hook-up at all, and was doubly valuable on that account. More than this, it brought the company a chance to get hold of a worth-while slogan, a lot of good advertising phrases, and much light on the opinions on ten and fifteen cent loaves.

Under the original agreement, the company took one-half page and two quarter pages to exploit the contest. This made a full page of free publicity spread over three days. They played up "Everywoman" to get their readers enthused.

Then the Wagons.

Then Doob suggested that it might pay to get out some banners for the twenty-two delivery wagons. Maurer got them done for a dollar each, and they put them only on the right-hand side of each wagon because these wagons kept to the right and worked both sides of the street. They were all horse-drawn and so moved more slowly than autos, giving the signs a chance.

Building up on this, Mr. Doob suggested that a slip telling of the contest be wrapped in each loaf of bread for a day or two, and that is how the 20,000 slips were sent out. He got three distinct advertising angles out of the single idea and Miss Beattie, Mr. Harrington and Mr. Duffy, who represented the baking company, liked the idea so well that they tried to coax Doob off his job to come with them.

One more angle was worked. A placard was put into every grocery handling the bread telling about the contest.

Other Stunts.

Something of the same idea was worked by the Louisville Post, which offered a ticket to the play to every woman who sent in a letter deemed worthy of publication telling of her experiences with the Post's classified advertising service. This meant a two-column story each day in the classified section.

Then the Courier came in with an offer of a free ticket to every person who had seen "Miss Jerry" when this pre-motion picture was shown a quarter of a century ago. Those who had seen the first were to see the newest development of the idea. This was good for several columns.

Cut-outs were used freely, including some in the boxes not available for seating purposes. Spotlights were flashed on these characters.

But Maurer's best house bet was a "See Everywoman Next Week" in letters a foot high, made up of letters from the outside sign equipment. This was placed behind the picture screen, and when the house was dark the screen was flied and this sign blazed forth. It was a "just once" stunt, but it was startling in its punch.

Used a Sari to Advertise "The Virgin of Stamboul"

WILLIAM CUTTS, of the Kinema, Salt Lake City, took a hint from the New York stunt and brought a "Sari" to town to advertise "The Virgin of Stamboul." She registered at a leading hotel, was seen in all of the stores and stuck around until the advertising broke.

In Butte the film was kept in the bank in a bullion box and all house employees were bonded. The bank came in on the advertising, and helped to boom things.

May Interest Shriners.

In Toronto a showing for the benefit of the local Shriners was arranged, working in on the oriental atmosphere of the play. In towns where there is a temple of Mystic Shriners or a Shrine Club they can be interested, or at least the "Arab Patrol" can be induced to sell tickets or pull off a special night. Just now most of the patrols are hustling to get the money for a pilgrimage to the Imperial Council in June and are working all sorts of schemes.

This Is the Time of Year for Hook-ups with "Huck"

THIS is the time of year when fishing appeals, and even in a cross-roads town you can get a "Huckleberry Finn" window from everyone who sells fishing tackle. Eli M. Orowitz, of the Famous Players-Lasky Detroit office, got three big windows to precede the showing of Huck at the Broadway Strand, Detroit. The window shown is a hardware store, which also handled tackle, and in addition he linked up two of the large sporting goods stores. "Huckleberry Finn" with its atmosphere of outdoors, is just the sort of play to carry this hook-up, but it is by no means the only one, though the three sheets for this provide unusually good cut-outs to be made the foundation of each window scheme. If you have not yet had the film, start to plan for your window now. If it has been used, watch for the next outdoor picture.

Every time a local newspaper carries an advertisement concerning your theatre, have a "reading notice" go with it in another column. Get the full value of your investment. Reviews printed in Moving Picture World are valuable as "readers." Copy them when you play the film they refer to.

The Newest Style Bread Line.

How a Louisville bakery tied up with the "Everywoman" exploitation with their twenty-two delivery wagons and a contest.

"In the Spring the Young Man's Fancy"

Lightly turns to thoughts of fish, and a Detroit exploitation man got three big windows for "Huckleberry Finn."

Some Mystery Girls Have Their Own Troubles

Outside Host Proves Last Refinement in Handling an Orphans' Party for Theatre

RECENTLY there has been a run on theatre parties to orphans or other unfortunate children. Several plays lately issued have seemed to lend themselves particularly well to this form of exploitation and these matinees have become almost as common as hook-up pages and stand in need of some rejuvenation if their are to go over properly. Such a twist has been devised by the Broadway-Strand, Detroit, for "Huckleberry Finn" in the outside host.

Heretofore the party has been given either by the theatre or by some newspaper in search of a circulation feature. Both schemes had their angles of advantage. The theatre party appealed to all the papers, but brought less space than a single paper would give, though this space was better distributed. To put over "Huckleberry Finn" the Detroit-Strand felt the need of something new—and found it.

Picked a Host.

Sol E. Sallan, a leading jeweler, was given the chance to be the host, and he was quick to perceive the advantage accruing to him. Sallan occupies a store at the corner of Woodward and Gratiot avenues, said by experts to be the most valuable commercial location in the United States.

According to the plan it was Mr. Sallan and not the theatre who felt that it would be a shame did the orphans miss this chance. The first story told that he had offered to purchase a block of 600 seats if others would arrange the transportation.

This led to the second step. The auto agencies were quick to get in on the stunt. One company supplied twenty sedans and another ten. A department store and a motor truck concern each offered four trucks, making a fleet of thirty-eight cars.

Police Helped.

Then the police department was approached with a request for aid. To get the cars up to the theatre and away again would necessitate some change in the traffic regulations. The Chief took the shortest way out. No other cars were to be parked in the block in which the theatre was located during the performance. Eight traffic officers were sent down to see that the curb was cleared shortly before the time of the performance.

Presently the thirty-eight cars came up, and as each discharged its load, it took a position down the block. The cars were faced toward the road and as each car carried on its front a banner stating "We're going to see 'Huck Finn' at the Broadway-Strand," they formed a block long advertisement for two hours—which was another infraction of the traffic rules.

How It Worked Out.

As a finish to the show a confectioner who did not wish his name mentioned gave each child a half pound box of candy.

The chief value of the outside host was the moral effect. It was argued that if Sallan thought so well of the play as to buy a block of seats, it must be worth while. This suggestion is but lightly conveyed in a house party and not as strongly told in the newspaper hook-up, since most persons know that the theatre donates the seats. But when a leading merchant bought seats it sounded like something else again.

Window Displays Helped.

The auto companies and the stores as well as the jeweler gave window displays to back up their cooperation, and of course the newspapers took up the stunt because both the house and the jeweler were advertisers as well as because of the human interest angle. It worked better all the way around.

Goldwyn Mystery Girl Had to Double in Stage Showing

GETTING additional use out of a veiled lady, Stoffer and Sennett, managers of the Grand Theatre, Tiffin, Ohio, used a girl who was booked for the same time as Farrar in "The Stronger Vow." She got into town several days ahead, wearing a black mask and otherwise conducting herself as mysterious ladies should. Hook-ups were arranged with local merchants on an advertising campaign on the girl and feature stories were arranged in both of the local papers. Nothing was said about films until the eve of the showing when it was "discovered" that the girl was Leone Merriam, who would appear in person during the run of "The Stronger Vow." This cut both ways, for it helped the picture and it put a vaudeville act over to big interest. The stunt was suggested by C. C. Deardouff, the Goldwyn publicity man in Cleveland, who has worked a similar stunt in other sections of his territory, though without the personal appearance feature.

New Vitagraph Posters Show Snappy Pictorial Effects

TURNING over a new three-sheet, the Vitagraph is offering some unusual posters for forthcoming releases, as evidenced by this reproduction of the six sheet on "The Garter Girl," done from O. Henry's story of the once famous Charmion. Getting away from the solid effects which most poster artists seem to love, the drawing is open and attractive, and suggestive of the lightness of the story. A one sheet is along very similar lines, while a three sheet is along the same lines, the set forming a harmonious whole. A 24-sheet poster for Larry Semon is available for any production and offers a portrait, two character poses and six of his chorus, which is getting a lot onto a 24-sheet without crowding it. It is built to be available for any production.

Used Prize Ring to Tell of Jack Dempsey Serial Showing

USING a prize ring as a lobby attractor got a big play on the Jack Dempsey serial, "Daredevil Jack" at the Variety Theatre, Cincinnati. The ring was in miniature, but perfect in every detail and it stood right in front of the box office where everyone could see it. It could be stored and used for each showing of the serial to decidedly good effect. If it is wanted only for one time it would probably be possible to hook up with some dealer in boxing gloves and split the expense with a card telling that Blank has the best sporting goods. This would also pave the way to a borrowed window.

When you advertise in your local paper, "Clip and Paste" in Moving Picture World will supply you with ready-to-use photoplay items. Give them to the photoplay editor; ask him to use them every day you have an advertisement.

His Hat's in the Ring.

How one theatre advertised the coming of the Jack Dempsey serial in fifteen rounds with a miniature prize ring, with towels and everything.

Back to the Old Days for "The Copperhead"

United Artists Issues Five Folders to Help Exhibitors Put Over Comedy

CONTINUING its policy of helping exhibitors to help themselves, the United Artists Corporation has issued five folders on the first Mack Sennett five reeler, "Down on the Farm." These folders range from four to twelve each and severally handle the program and newspaper exploitation, newspaper advertising suggestions, newspaper publicity, lobby display and posters and the music and presentation. The five are issued in a single folder.

But perhaps the most radical departure from old methods is the continuance of the art copy, which was first used for "Pollyanna" and very generally taken up by the exhibitors all over the country. The supply of cuts and mats is ample, but in addition there are a number of drawn designs working in from two to four columns or larger, for the use of those larger houses which may wish to make their own displays.

Snappy Cuts.

There is not a piece of advertising, even in the single column width, which does not suggest the speed of the production, while the layouts are still better. About the best of the lot is a set of three streamers to be used for head or tail pieces, genuinely humorous in their drawing, and capable of being employed in a variety of ways, from a straight tail piece to a page border, as was recently shown in an advertisement for "The Lost City." They are so spaced that the cuts can be sawn apart, if desired, to get smaller pieces or joined to make a continuation. About the only objection to the material is the suggestion that the house name appear above the layout instead of within the border, but the drawings are so made that the signature can run within the cut with no alteration.

These drawings are supposed to be for the use of the larger houses, which can afford special cut work, but in the case of the "Pollyanna" designs even the smaller houses picked up the art work for special displays, working the designs into house layouts.

Dividing the book into sections makes it possible to distribute the folders to those who have each department of exploitation in charge instead of making it necessary to pass one book from hand to hand. The newspaper folder gives suggestions for newspaper stunts, and the music and production folder contains ideas along these lines, while lobby work comes as well provided with suggestions. There is something from every angle, and to suit every purse.

Press men are getting away from the idea that only the first run houses are worth while. Now it is realized that in the aggregate the smaller rentals received from the last run houses mean just as much when they are entered in the bank balance, and an efforts is now being made to appeal to the small town man and to get his money by helping him to make it.

Here's Another Puzzle for Plain Clothes Men and Cops

POLICE hook-ups seem to be growing fashionable. Not long ago the police and detectives were invited to puzzle their brains over "The Mystery of the Yellow Room." Now the Jans Pictures invites exhibitors to puzzle the "flatties" with "Love Without Question," and suggests a prize of a revolver to the officer who can guess the climax, the film being stopped before the denouement. It is a good stunt where it has not already been done, and offers a number of publicity angles.

Presswork the Camels

IF you play "The Virgin of Stamboul" play up the running camels used in the picture for one or more press stories. Ask your patrons if they ever saw a camel run. Most of them will be willing to so swear that they have, and a heading, "Did you ever see a camel run?" will get attention because it seems to sound so silly. All your lives your patrons have been reading about "the fleet ships of the desert," but few of them ever say any camel fleetier than a canal boat drawn by a lame mule. The circus camels are all caravan camels, trained to hold a slow walk for hours, but if they are compelled to go as rapidly as a man in a hurry they soon tire and go on strike. The running camel is as distinct from the caravan beast as a Rolls-Royce differs from a Ford. Most of the camels Americans have seen are the cheaper caravan animals and the running camels used in "The Virgin of Stamboul" are really curiosities in America. Some years ago the Hippodrome management loaned its camels for a Shrine parade in New York. The procession had not gone half a mile before the camels had to be sent back to the stables. They could not keep pace with a man walking in fast march time. The fact is so little known that you can probably get into the pure reading columns with a story and get a little side interest in this unusual story.

Better Get an O. K. for This

HARRY J. TROXELL, JR., of the Photoplay Theatre, Gettysburg, worked a purely local angle in his advertising for "The River's End." It will be recalled that the supposed murderer who comes back in the guise of the policeman is name John Keith. There is a prominent local resident of the same name and the newspapers flamed with the fact that John Keith was suspected of murder. They had to read on to discover that it was a fictitious John Keith, and by that time they were interested in the play.

The stunt works well in towns where leading citizens are well known, but it is best, to avoid trouble, to first obtain the consent of the person thus exploited. An injunction suit might prove costly.

Gane Took Seriously the Old Stage Coach Suggestion

PERHAPS you recall the good old days when about every third plan book suggested that you get an old stage coach and run it through the town, utterly ignoring the fact the coaches are scarce. The idea died out after a time, but William Gane, of the Belmont Theatre, Philadelphia, dug out an old coach; possibly the one the Lubin company used to employ, loaded it with men and women dressed in the period of the play and sent it through the streets properly tagged. And it worked, just as the press men used to say that it would. And if you can't get a coach you can get some old fashioned rig, perhaps. You can always find something in a pinch, and the costumes need not give much trouble if you keep your people in the rig.

It's Not on Account of the Railroad Strike.

William Gane thought this stunt out before a peeved switchman in Chicago made up his mind to cost the country half a billion dollars.

Among Busy Key City Exchangemen

Warner Film Attractions, of Cleveland, Increases Output

THE Warner Film Attractions of Cleveland has entered the ranks of independent exchanges, through purchases and amalgamation, and now has a great number of pictures and contracts for many months to come. This company is the outgrowth of the Dave Warner Films, which has been in existence about a year, having been organized by Dave Warner, brother of Abe and Harry of New York.

Dave Warner has increased the capital and enlarged his headquarters, which are now located on the second floor of the Erie Building, practically the whole floor being utilized. He has engaged Lou Gieger, well-known film man, to have charge of the sales force. Nate Fleisher, another live wire salesman, has resigned from the Universal and gone with the Warner exchange. They are engaging one of the best sales forces that ever covered Ohio and Kentucky, according to Mr. Gieger.

Mr. Warner announces that some of the pictures which he has are four serials, including King Baggot, in "The Hawk's Trail," and Francis Ford, in "The Mystery of 13"; Roy Stewart, in "The Lone Hand"; Kathryn Williams, in a series of sixteen two-reel pictures from the Selig studios; George Ovey, in a series of comedies; "Ham and Bud," in single-reel comedies; a series of Mack Sennett comedies, one and two reels, including Chaplin's; Exhibitor-Mutual releases, including the reissues.

He also has taken the releases of the Masterpiece Film Attractions of Cleveland and the C. C. Hite Attractions of Cincinnati, and he will also distribute the new Comedyart productions. "This list only begins to tell the story," said Mr. Warner. "I expect to make our exchange the biggest independent house in the Middle West."

Gotham Attracts Clevelanders.

New York seemed to be the Mecca for Cleveland exchange men during the first week in April. Among those who were in Gotham were Arthur S. Hyman, of Hy-Art Attractions; George Erdmann, of Famous Players-Lasky; Harry Charnas, of the Standard; Paul Gusdanovic, of Equity and also theatre owner; S. S. Webster, C. A. Thompson and Syd Rosenthal, of Select, Republic and National pictures.

Lou Saks has joined the forces of salesmen for the Equity Pictures, working out of Cleveland.

Another Independent Exchange.

The Exhibitors' Film Company has opened a branch office in Cleveland. It expects to release a two-reel comedy every week, in addition to other pictures. Sam Goodman, of Pittsburgh, is the manager.

"Farewell" to Bradley's "Batching."

Friends and business associates of Sam Bradley, of the Argus Enterprises, Cleveland, are planning a birthday and bachelor party for him for April 22, at 9 o'clock, at the Hotel Cleveland. Sam is to be married soon and this will be his "farewell."

San Francisco

Crank Returns from Convention.

W. A. Crank, the San Francisco representative of the Robertson-Cole Company, has returned from the convention of branch managers at New York filled with pep.

Griffith Gets Added Duties.

Beverly Griffith, of the Universal exchange, San Francisco, has been made supervising director of the Frolic Theatre, a position he will fill in addition to his film exchange work.

St. John Brings Home the Bacon.

Floyd St. John, who recently organized the Co-operative Film exchange at San Francisco and opened headquarters at 105 Golden Gate avenue, has returned from a trip to New York, made for the purpose of making purchases of film. He has secured the Facts and Follies Comedies, the Stecher-Caddock wrestling match, in three reels, and eighteen other productions for release during the year. He plans to take over more room locally at an early date and to open a branch at Los Angeles within the next couple of months.

J. A. Brehany Goes to Los Angeles.

Having put over "The Confession" in great shape at San Francisco, J. A. Brehany, of the Equity Pictures Corporation, has gone to Los Angeles to do the same thing there. This concern has sold the Australian and New Zealand rights to this picture to Mo. Getz, who is now here from the Antipodes. At Fresno it recently had "The Confession" and "Eyes of Youth" playing at the same time in the Liberty and Kinema theatres, rival houses.

Popular Exchange Worker Ill.

Miss Irene Cohn, cashier for the San Francisco office of Realart, and one of the most popular young ladies in the business, is ill with diphtheria, and her position is being filled temporarily by Mrs. Gertrude Kuckein, formerly with Triangle and now with the Coliseum Theatre.

Pittsburgh

Frank Hatch "Beats" Pneumonia.

Frank Hatch, well known film man, spent several days in Pittsburgh recently, coming here direct from Florida, whither he had gone to recuperate from an attack of pneumonia. Mr. Hatch says he had a close call and that it took the combined efforts of four physicians and two nurses to pull him through.

"The Boss" Visits John McAleer.

R. Nader, president of the Circle Film Attractions, was in Pittsburgh recently in conference with his local manager, John McAleer. He expressed himself as well pleased with the showing made here.

"Kelly" Wins Promotion.

C. C. Kellenberg, better known as "Kelly," for some time in charge of the advertising department of the Pittsburgh Fox exchange, has been promoted to the office force in the capacity of assistant booker.

Crandall Exchange Prosperous.

William Finkel, of the Crandall Film Company, Pittsburgh, is on the road in the State of Ohio, specializing on "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives." Milt Crandall, publicity man for the company, will spend the next few weeks at the home office in Pittsburgh, directing the activities of the various percentage shows which are playing Ohio on the Equity productions.

Grier Now Owns It All.

Jack Grier, of the Diamond Film Company, Pittsburgh, is now the sole owner of this thriving young exchange, through the purchase of the interests of his associates in this firm. Within a short time the Diamond will announce a road show attraction.

Plays "Spillers" on Percentage.

Harry Williams, of the Standard exchange, Pittsburgh, is having much success with "The Spillers," which is playing on percentage only. Harry's publicity matter and stunts are putting the picture over in great fashion.

Prinz Opens New Exchange.

J. J. Prinz, well known among film men and exhibitors, has opened an exchange at 100 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, and has an excellent line of feature subjects and single-reelers.

Buffalo

The "Come-Back" of Savage.

Daniel J. Savage, one of the veterans of the motion picture business and a man who blazed the trail in the Buffalo film game as manager of the old General Film exchange here, has "come back," after about a year's absence, as manager of the Buffalo office of the Empire State Film Company, of which Arthur J. White, formerly with the Paramount-Artcraft office in New York, is president. Dan is well known to film men in this state and his territory will extend as far east as Utica.

Lieut. Jim Anderson in Buffalo.

Lieut. Jim Anderson, First National exploitationist par excellence, has arrived in Buffalo to direct a series of campaigns in Western New York towns for the showing of "Auction of Souls," together with personal appearances of Aurora Mardiganian, the star of the picture. The first campaign was in Niagara Falls, the next in Lockport and the third in Lancaster. The lieutenant is placing some very snappy advertising copy in the home sheets.

Kahn and Holmes Tour.

Henry W. Kahn, manager of the Metro office, and Taylor Holmes, Metro star, toured week of April 5, appearing in Syracuse, Auburn, Utica, Schenectady and other towns. Mr. Kahn reports the signing of a contract for the presentation of Alice Lake in "Shore Acres" at Shea's Hippodrome soon. He also announces that Taylor Holmes is coming to Buffalo in person soon. The new building in Franklin street will be ready May 1.

Wilkinson Booming Wanda Hawley.

Henry E. Wilkinson, Realart manager, has returned from an extended conference with officials at the home office in New York with the announcement that no expense will be spared to put over the new Wanda Hawley features. Mr. Wilkinson has already commenced a whirlwind campaign on "Miss Hobbs." Mr. Wilkinson also announces the engagement of Harry Dixon, formerly with Pioneer, as city salesman, succeeding Maurice Cohen, who has been named branch manager for Republic in Albany. Mr. Dixon is securing Realart contracts in sheaves.

Gardiner State Right Office Busy.

F. M. Zimmerman, vice-president of Gardiner Pictures, booked Clara Kimball Young in "The Forbidden Woman" at Shea's Hippodrome week of April 5. The Gardiner company control the state rights on all the new Young features. Just now efforts are being centered on "A Dream of Fair Women" and "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives."

A weekly release of a one-reel hand colored scenic and "A Trip to Mars Ten Years from Now" will soon be ready. Charlie Chaplin and a 15-episode serial is planned for early release. Lee Langdon is representing Gardiner at Albany and Art Young is assisting Mr. Zimmerman in Buffalo. T. R. Gardiner, president, is now located in New York.

Stegel Passing Cigars.

Otto Siegel, assistant manager of the First National office, is passing the Pittsburgh stogies around. He is the father of "the most beautiful baby in the world." Mr. Siegel has not as yet decided whether he will star the addition to the family in motion pictures.

J. H. Greenwald Boosting Sales.

J. H. Greenwald, manager of the Fox office, reports his office stands fifth in the sales campaign now in progress. He must get into the first three to win big prizes, so he is bending every effort to gather in the contracts these last days of the offensive.

Mr. Exhibitor:

You should book
"The Luck of the Irish" because——

An eminent producer directed it.

A widely-read author wrote it.

A perfectly balanced cast played it.

And——

It is a story of triphammer action with a three-ply punch—— travel, adventure, love.

Takes Partner and Improves.

THEODORE MIKALOWSKY, of the Rex Theatre, Masontown, Pa., has sold a half interest in his business to R. B. Hayes, a prominent hotel man of that town, and will begin immediately to enlarge his house. Mr. Mikalowsky has been an exhibitor in Masontown for the past eight years. He conducted the Iris Theatre there for two years and six years ago built the Rex. He has been singularly successful, especially when it is considered that Masontown has a population of only about 900.

Dedicates Pittsburgh's Largest Screen.

The new Triangle Theatre, the latest theatre to be erected in the East Liberty section of Pittsburgh, had such a brilliant opening on Saturday, April 3, as to leave no doubt as to the future success of the venture. Nathan Friedberg, head of the Associated Theatres, operates the Triangle and is one of the most widely known Pittsburgh exhibitors. The capacity of the house is 1,000 and the plant represents an investment of $75,000, exclusive of the ground. The store-rooms are built in the front of the house, two to the east and one on the west side of the lobby.

The opening was a most auspicious event which attracted people not only from the immediate neighborhood but from every section of the city. Beautiful floral emblems adorned the lobby. These were from Pathe exchange, Vitagraph, Goldwyn, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Adler, the Blackstone Theatre, as well as a number of contractors who did work on the building.

Powers Cameragraphs, purchased of the Pittsburgh U. T. E., furnish the projection on the largest screen in Pittsburgh, installed by the Hollis, Smith, Morton Company. The screen measures 21½ feet across the top.

Death Takes Pittsburgh Operator.

William H. White, one of the most popular members of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, Local 171, Pittsburgh, passed away recently, a victim of pneumonia. Mr. White was fifty-five years old and for the past two years was chief projectionist at the Olympic Theatre, on Pittsburgh's "Avenue."

Wellsburg, W. Va.'s, New House.

N. G. Annas has broken ground for a new six-hundred seat house in Wellsburg, W. Va. It will be modern and up to date in every respect and will cost close to $75,000. It will be called the Strand.

Oil Attracts Film Man.

Frank L. France has succeeded his brother, Dan France, as manager of the Pittsburgh branch of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation. Dan France is going into the oil business with A. S. Davis, a former film man in Pittsburgh. Frank France has been with the U. T. E. the past six years and it is a foregone conclusion that he will make good as the new manager.

Veteran Showman Retiring.

John Wick, the veteran showman of Kittanning, Pa., is going to retire from the amusement business, having leased his Wick's Opera House to George E. Wentz, of Cincinnati, for a period of twenty years.

Mr. Wentz is a practical showman. Mr. Wick states that he has retired from the show business for good. He is going to New York to live, but will do considerable traveling with Mrs. Wick the coming summer, their itinerary taking them to California and Mexico and possibly the Philippine Islands.

Operator Today—Showman Tomorrow.

Jim Cavella, of the Alpine Theatre, Punxsutawney, Pa., has been sick the past few weeks with the "flu." His operator ran the house during his absence.

Bill Fielding, of Youngwood, has sold his Rex Theatre to Jules Naples. Mr. Naples formerly was operator for Oliver Kitchel at his Eagle Theatre, Jeannette, for a number of years.

Mr. Benson has resigned his position as manager of the Truett Theatre at Spangler, Pa. Mr. Mitchell, one of the stockholders in the company, has taken over the management.

Remodeling and Repairing.

Charles Feinler is remodeling his Colonial Theatre at Wheeling, W. Va. He has a large force of decorators at work and is also enlarging his booth to double its present size.

A sign on Mercer's Globe Theatre, Washington, Pa., says: "Close indefinitely for repairs."

J. F. Bedner, now owner of the Brockway Theatre, Brockwayville, Pa., has closed down for repairs. According to his plans, he will have a beautiful house to open to his patrons in a few weeks.

Theatres Change Managers.

Karl Frederick, of the Princess Theatre, Ford City, has gone to Sanborn, Wis., for the benefit of his health. His son, Karl Jr., is in charge of the theatre during his absence.

W. J. Fitzpatrick, well known Pittsburgh film salesman, has taken over the American Theatre, 1610 Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, which he purchased from M. Feltler, of the All-Star Exchange.

Operators Locate in New Quarters.

Owing to the need of more centrally located quarters, Local No. 171, of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, has packed up and moved to 1003 Forbes street.

San Francisco Siftings

Attractions April 11-17.

California: "The Woman in Room 13."
Portola: "Easy to Get."
Imperial: "Down on the Farm."
Strand: "Human Desire" and "The Lincoln Highwayman" (double bill).
Rialto—"The Silver Horde."
Tivoli: "The Idol Dancer."
Frolic: "The Phantom Melody."

Permit Issued for F. P.-L. Theatre.

THE Board of Public Works has issued a permit for the erection of a million dollar theatre at Market and Jones streets. The new house will be known as the Granada and will be erected by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of California. With two other large houses planned for this neighborhood, it will be a merry race to see which will be completed first.

Film's Long Run at the Imperial.

"Why Change Your Wife?" has enjoyed a four weeks' run at the Imperial Theatre and could have kept on longer but for the fact that way had to be made for the Mack Sennett comedy, "Down on the Farm." The receipts for the fourth week were about equal to those of the first.

Some novelties have been arranged for the presentation of "Down on the Farm," including a prologue in which barnyard fowls are much in evidence. Severi and his Hickville orchestra, garbed in ulsters and straw hats, will offer music such as has never been heard in the Imperial and a Harold Lloyd comedy will round out a bill of laughs.

Strand Orchestra Feature.

Guy Smith, manager of the Strand Theatre, has enlarged the orchestra to twenty-five members and Conductor William McKinney is now offering special afternoon and evening concerts. The music at this house is being featured as strongly in the advertising as the film attractions.

K-G Club Gives Dance.

The Kay-Gee Social Club, made up of employees of the Kahn & Greenfield Circuit, which operates five large moving picture houses, recently gave its fourth annual entertainment and ball, which was largely attended.

Power Agent Visits Los Angeles.

William W. Lewis, special representative of the Nicholas Power Company on the Pacific Coast, with headquarters in this city, recently visited Los Angeles on a business mission.

Savoy Showing Pictures Again.

The Savoy Theatre, on McAllister street, has been opened for a short run with moving pictures, the opening attraction being "Open Your Eyes," a film prepared under the direction of the United States Public Health Service. Following this engagement, the house will be turned over to Wallace Reid and company, who will offer the spoken drama, "The Rotters."

Film Notables Visit San Francisco.

Carl Laemmle spent several days here recently looking over his exchange and theatre holdings. During his stay Henry MacRae, with a company headed by Marie Walcamp, arrived from the Orient, where a Universal serial, "The Dragon's Net," was produced in its entirety. While away Miss Walcamp became the bride of her leading man, Harlan Tucker.

Mary Miles Minter, Realart star, and a company passed through this city early in April en route to Ukiah to secure scenes for a forthcoming release, the action in which is supposed to be in the Cumberland Mountains. Others in the company were Charles Maigne, director, and Monte Blue.

New Theatres and Changes.

Patrick Higgins is arranging to build a 1,500-seat moving picture house at Eighth avenue and Irving street from plans prepared by Architects Reid Brothers, 105 Montgomery street.

J. J. McNamara is preparing to erect a theatre at Martinez, Cal., with a seating capacity of 1,000. The estimated cost is $85,000.

J. Fermer has purchased the moving picture theatre at Calistoga, Cal., from E. L. Armstrong and will make improvements.

The Garden Theatre, Burlingame, Cal., recently purchased by Ellis Arkush from W. P. Archibald, is being conducted under the management of Ralph Smith, formerly a San Francisco film exchange man.

Brown & Lakeman have taken over the Strand Theatre at Napa, Cal.

The Eureka Theatre, Eureka, Nev., has been enlarged by the addition of a gallery.

Gus Germanus, of Salinas, Cal., was a recent visitor at San Francisco and placed an order with Walter Preddey for seating equipment for a new house he is opening.

Ground has been broken for the Hippodrome Theatre at Napa, Cal., which will be operated in conjunction with the Orpheus of San Rafael.

The Realart Theatre, recently opened at Dinuba, Cal., by Thomas Sullivan, is the second house of this name in the San Francisco territory, the other being located in the metropolis.

Buffalo Brieflets

Attractions April 11-17.

Shea's Hippodrome: "In Old Kentucky."
Empire: "Should a Woman Tell?"
Family: "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

Olympic: "Are You Legally Married?"
Lyric: "A Woman of Pleasure."

Sherry Resigns at Star.

A. R. SHERRY, former manager of Shea's Hippodrome and now manager of the Star Theatre, will resign his present position April 17 to enter into a private business proposition until August 1, when he will manage the Broadway Theatre, which was purchased by the Sherry Amusement Company on Friday, April 9. This company, capitalized at $100,000, will operate the Broadway. John G. Sattler, former owner, will also be interested in the new company. Mr. Sherry is president.

Winegar Invites Children.

The Coterie, an organization of Buffalo women who care for children of tubercular parents, received a large basket of flowers for Easter from Elmer C. Winegar, manager of the Central Park and Premier theatres, together with an invitation to entertain the children at either theatre at any time.

Beckeridge Is "Pinched."

Albert Beckeridge, manager of the Olympic Theatre, was found guilty by City Judge McLaughlin last week of violating the city ordinances in permitting persons to crowd the aisles and passageways of the theatre on Tuesday evening, April 6. Judge McLaughlin suspended sentence, but warned that if the practice was continued and another complaint made he would impose a heavy penalty.

Majestic Theatre Sold.

The Majestic Theatre, on East Perry street, owned by J. Black, has been sold to Jay Parmalee, owner of the Try-It Theatre, on Grant street. The Majestic is in the heart of a thickly populated section of the east side and enjoys a large neighborhood patronage.

Heacock Leaves Ellen Terry.

Arthur Heacock, manager of the Ellen Terry Theatre, has resigned to accept a position as chief test pilot with a mid-west airplane transportation company which it is said plans regular service between New York and Chicago in the near future. Jim Wallingford will succeed Mr. Heacock.

Soloists at Regent Theatre.

Manager J. H. Michael of the Regent and Victoria theatres has placed soloists in both houses, and the move has proven a popular one. Ben Fineberg appeared at the Victoria the week of April 5 and at the Regent the following week. "Oriental Moon" and "The Other Fellow's Girl" were among Fineberg's selections.

Hoosier Happenings

WORK IS PROGRESSING rapidly on the remodeling of the Princess Theatre, Rushville, Ind., and although no definite date has been set, W. F. Easley, manager, expects to hold a formal reopening about May 1. All of the interior is being rebuilt, a handsome, new front is being installed and a large amount of new equipment will be added.

May Have Clew to Robbery.

Part of the equipment used by the safe crackers who obtained $1,500 from a safe in the office of the Auditorium Theatre, Connersville, Ind., recently, was found this week hidden behind a radiator in the box office of the theatre by Joseph Schilling, manager, and was turned over to the police. The equipment consisted of copper plugs, insulated wire, skeleton keys and a number of dynamite caps. Private detectives have been working on the case, but so far as is known have been unable to find any clew that would lead to the identity of the robbers.

Big House for Evansville.

F. E. Gruneberg, Sr., and his son, F. E. Gruneberg, Jr., of the Victory Theatre and Hotel Company, were in Evansville, Ind., this week making arrangements to tear away the building on Main street, east of Sixth street, which is to be the site of the new six-story motion picture theatre building to be erected by the company. Work on the new building will start about April 15. The building will cost about $1,000,000 and the upper part will be used as a hotel.

Theatre Planned for Vincennes.

A handsome new theatre, to be known as the Pantheon, is to be erected at Fifth and Main streets, Vincennes, Ind., by a company formed by L. A. Wilkerson and Adler Lyons, two of the city's leading business men. The structure, which will have a frontage of 73 feet and a depth of 126 feet, will be built of brick, iron and concrete, with stone and terra cotta trimmings, and will be practically fireproof. There will be eleven exits.

Philadelphia Pointers

Free "Movies" for Charity.

FREE "movies" were shown in twenty-two of Philadelphia's leading motion picture theatres Sunday, April 10, afternoon and evening, as part of a campaign to raise $500,000 for the St. Agnes Hospital. Judge M. Patterson, chairman of the campaign committee, was given unlimited support by the Stanley Company and Nixon interests, who offered the use of all their theatres in the drive.

Film Men Shift About.

Two popular and well known film salesmen who recently have made changes are N. E. Milligan and Joe Pierce, who are both now with the Vitagraph. It matters not whence they came.

Sam Blatt, a well known local exhibitor, is now representing Republic pictures. Mr. Blatt is also vice-president of the Exhibitors' League.

John Flinn has returned to town and is now representing Selznick's Co-operative Organization.

Mrs. Nelson, for many years the successful manager of the Supreme Exchange, announces that she has resigned to extend her career in the exhibiting field.

Theatres and Changes.

W. Wisbord, of the Crystal Palace, South street, has reopened the old Royal Palace Theatre, at Twenty-seventh and Girard avenue, as the Elite Theatre. The house was remodeled at a cost of $20,000 and has been converted into a beautiful photoplay house. Overflow crowds attended the opening night last week.

Royal Pictures, Inc., at 1237 Vine street, is the latest exchange to open in the local field. Jay Emanuel, former manager of the Realart, and Dave Siegel, late head booker of the Paramount exchange, will operate the exchange.

Heads Exhibitors' Organization.

JACK WARD, manager of the Gaiety Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been elected secretary-treasurer of the Manitoba Exhibitors' Association, which is one of the substantial exhibitor organizations in the Dominion. Ward is only a recent arrival in Winnipeg and is a former newspaper man.

Personals Concerning Canadians.

Charles Brown has been appointed manager of the Liberty Theatre, Calgary, Alberta.

Thomas Stranatka has reopened the Mirror Theatre at Mirror, Alberta, performances being given on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

J. E. Archer, of Vancouver, B. C., has been appointed manager of the Vancouver office of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto.

L. H. Keller, formerly of Seattle, has been appointed manager of the Empire Theatre, North Vancouver, B. C.

Canadian Explosives, Limited, Vancouver, B. C., have arranged for the opening of a moving picture theatre on James Island for the entertainment of their employees.

With Opening of New Exchange System, Educational Offers Varied Attractions

WITH the opening of its new exchange system, Educational Films Corporation promises to offer exhibitors a large amount of new product. Practically all of this material is completed and in the offices of the company and the fullest sales and exploitation aids have been completed. None of the Educational product is more than two reels in length.

This accumulation of material has been planned by Vice-President and General Manager E. W. Hammons, so that a full amount of exploitation material may be ready for each exhibitor.

Variety as Well as Volume.

The product actually on hand supplies not only a volume but a great variety of material. Especially welcome to exhibitors will be the Robert C. Bruce Scenics which were made during a recent visit to the coast of British Columbia and Alaska. Mr. Bruce made the trip from Seattle in a schooner and obtained a large amount of action material. He then sought the tropics and has just returned from Cuba and Jamaica, where he is reported to have obtained a quantity of unusual material.

Eight of the Chester-Outings, which will hereafter be controlled by Educational, have been completed. These will be released weekly. The first half-dozen of the Chester Screenies have also been completed. There will be one of these every two weeks.

Thirty Reels of Travel Pictures.

In process of editing and titling there are some thirty reels of travel pictures, taken in almost every part of the world, that Educational promises will reveal a new artist among photographers. Various sections of Europe, Asia and Africa are shown in these pictures. Material is now en route from the two expeditions sent out by the Interchurch World Movement. It includes unusual sights in Mediterranean countries, India, Siam, Java, Sumatra and China.

Final work is being done on the pictures acquired through co-operation with the National Geographic Society. More of the product of the cameramen of the American Red Cross is on its way to this country, there being already on hand a number of reels that have not been completed. Other product that will be available for early release will be the pictures that have been secured in co-operation with the New York Conservation Commission. There also must be considered the large amount of material that has been acquired from independent cameramen.

Rapid Progress in Comedy Field.

Educational has recently expanded its operations further by entering the comedy field. Among the first of these acquisitions are the Chester Comedies. Already in the New York office is the first of another series of two-reel comedies which has not yet been announced, and the second of these has also been completed. Negotiations have practically been completed for two other series, units of which have already been finished, while Educational will also probably acquire the product of two companies established in the comedy field and far ahead on production.

In addition, several reels of the new product of the Stereospeed Camera have been completed.

Promise Release in May of New Alice Joyce Production

VITAGRAPH will release its next Alice Joyce production, "Dollars and the Woman," during May. Miss Joyce recently completed the final scenes at Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio and the finishing touches are now being put on the film. As in the case of "The Sporting Duchess," Miss Joyce's previous special production, the direction was by George Terwilliger. Robert Gordon will be seen as Miss Joyce's new leading man.

"Dollars and the Woman" is an adaptation of a story by Albert Payson Terhune. The scenario was written by Lucien Hubbard. The story revolves around the experiences of a young society pair whose original fortune dwindles rapidly from extravagance and who are compelled to use heroic methods to keep up appearances.

Canadian Traveling Film Show Affords Entertainment for Villages in Winter

THE residents of three villages in Northern Ontario have been enjoying the performances of a traveling film show which have been presented at regular intervals during the past few months. This "company" consists of a projectionist and a manager. A local pianist is engaged in each of the three places to provide musical accompaniment. The show has been spending two days of each week in each of the three centers and the town hall is the location in each instance.

The traveling show is conducted under the auspices of the Ottawa Valley Amusement Company, the headquarters of which are located in Renfrew, Ontario. The equipment of the show consists of a DeVry portable projection machine and film service is provided by the Canadian Universal Film Company. The three places on the circuit are Eganville, the population of which is 1,200; Carp, population 500, and Cobden, the population of which is not known.

Electric Service Was Only Difficulty.

The circuit was organized as an experiment for last winter and the plan was carried out successfully. The only difficulty seems to be, it is declared, to procure electric service in just the right quantity or proportion. On a number of occasions during the winter the lamp of the projection machine has been "blown" because the man in charge of the central station has permitted the voltage to jump, and the special bulb in the projection outfit could not bear the load. After a couple of experiences, the traveling film company car-

"Luck of Irish" Went Big.

At one of the Realert exchanges an exhibitor from a small house in the teeming East Side of New York City called to select some reels. The salesman urged "The Luck of the Irish" the Dwan production presented by Mayflower, as a big money-getter.

"Don't want an Irish reel," said the exhibitor. "There are no Irish in my neighborhood."

But the salesman persisted, and put it across. Much to the surprise of the exhibitor, his house was jammed at every presentation. He became curious as to the reason for the outflow and asked several of his patrons why they attended.

"Well, I wanted to find out how the Irish got the luck" was the invariable reply.

Character's New Florida Studio Ready.

The Character Pictures Corporation's new studios in Florida have been completed and work has commenced on its latest big special, "The Isle of Destiny," which is proving to be far over expectations by the directors in charge.

Ellis A. Wolff Joins Character.

The Character Pictures Corporation announces the appointment of Ellis A. Wolff as head of the New York offices. Mr. Wolff is thoroughly acquainted in the motion picture business having served in almost every branch of the industry.

ried around an extra supply of lamps to insure the completion of a performance.

From eight to ten reels of pictures make up the traveling program from week to week and the venture has been so successful, generally speaking, that other circuits may be organized for next winter or sooner. Local residents have patronized these shows faithfully.

The Ottawa Valley Amusement Company operates four real theatres in large centers of the district, including Renfrew, Pembroke, Almonte and Smith's Falls. A brand new house was recently opened at Almonte and it was not long ago that the company purchased a theatre at Smith's Falls. The two theatres at Pembroke and Renfrew are large enough to accommodate dramatic road shows, and these houses form a part of the Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., in so far as the booking of the stage companies is concerned.

The theatre at Renfrew is known as the O'Brien Opera House and Senator M. J. O'Brien, of Renfrew, is largely interested in the company. The manager of the Renfrew house is C. A. Cato and he books the pictures for all four theatres as well as the traveling film show.

Maeterlinck Finishes First Story.

Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian poet and playwright, who has been at the Goldwyn Studios since the middle of February, has completed his first story for Goldwyn and has left for New York from where he will sail for France. The title of the picture has not yet been decided upon. A few days before their departure, M. Maeterlinck and Madam Maeterlinck were the guests of honor at the annual banquet of the Belgian Society.

Complete Scenes at Port Henry.

After spending five weeks on location at Port Henry, N. Y., the company which is doing Rex Beach's "The North Wind's Malice" has returned to the Goldwyn studios in New York. Carl Harbaugh who with Paul Bern, is directing the picture, reported that despite eight days of rain all exteriors had been taken.

SIMPLE SOULS

Titling and Assembling Completed.

Titling and assembling of Mildred Harris Chaplin's second release through First National, "Polly of the Storm Country," has been completed and the negative is on the way to Rothacker's, where the prints will be made.

The picture was produced by Louis B. Mayer from the novel, "Storm Country Polly," by Grace Miller White.

It was directed by Arthur Rosson and in the cast supporting Mrs. Chaplin are Emory Johnson, Charlotte Burton, Bliss Chevalier, Harry Northrup, Maurice Valentin, Ruby Lafayette, Charles West, Micky Moore, Cora Drew, Cameron Coffey, Fred Kohler and Dick Rosson.

Bertram Directs "Hidden Dangers."

William Bertram is directing Vitagraph's new serial, "Hidden Dangers," on the West Coast. Joe Ryan and Jean Paige are co-starred in this serial.

Mr. Bertram produced "The Neglected Wife," starring Ruth Roland, and completed a large part of the Paramount serial, "Who Is Number One?" He also brought out Baby Marie Osborne. He then obtained a contract for twelve five-reel productions, all of which were directed by him. He also put on the Buck Parvin series from the stories by Charles E. Van Loan.

Louise Glaum in "Sex" Scores Success in Simultaneous Openings Everywhere

HARRY M. CRANDALL'S Washington, D. C., circuit has booked "Sex," released by W. W. Hodkinson, for all the Crandall houses with an immediate opening at his Metropolitan, and the entire Saenger circuit in Louisiana, Mississippi and Florida, embracing thirty-nine towns, has booked it through W. H. Gueringer, assistant general manager. In Spokane the big Liberty has contracted for "Sex," as has the Rivoli in Portland, Ore.; Andrew J. Cobe's successful Rialto in Lawrence, Mass.; the Alhambra in Pittsburgh; the Capitol in Macon, Ga., and Barton & Olsen's Colonial and Regent, Indianapolis.

Charles H. Miles' trio of big Detroit first runs have all booked "Sex" with full week engagements scheduled for the Majestic, Orpheum and Regent theatres. In San Francisco contracts are being closed with Turner and Dahnken's powerful Tivoli.

Many Theatres Named.

Among other important theatres in their respective regions where "Sex" has found immediate booking are these: the Alhambra, East End, Pittsburgh; Grand, Marshall, Tex.; Queen, Tyler, Tex.; Opera House, Laramie, Wyo.; Carson Bradford's Strand, Nashville, Tenn.; W. S. McLaren's Majestic, Jackson, Mich.; Opera House, New Brunswick, N. J.; Majestic, Rock Island; Avoy, Moline; Liberty, Davenport, Louisiana; Colonial, Galesburg; Washington, Richmond, Ind.; Victory, Kokomo; Starland, Anderson, Ind.; Fischer, Danville Ill.; Orpheum, Rockford; Majestic, Sheboygan, Wis.

One of the biggest contracts of the week on "Sex" was closed by H. H. Hurn, Hodkinson Cincinnati manager, with Joseph L. Steurle, managing director of the Walnut Theatre, Louisville, for a seven-day run at a rental higher than any previously paid for a week's engagement in the Kentucky metropolis.

"Sex" has closed a record-making run in its national premiere at Jacob Fabian's Garden Theatre, Paterson, N. J.; and has opened to turn-away business at Harry Moir's big first run Chicago house, the Boston, according to a telegram received by the

Pittsburgh Theatre Manager Declares Exhibitors Underestimate Film Song

EXHIBITOR value—intrinsic and extrinsic—in the proper use and cultivation of the motion picture song, is not being realized to its maximum extent, according to E. Harris, manager of the Blackstone Theatre, Pittsburgh, due to hesitancy on the part of showmen to "boost the other fellow's game."

Correctly used, according to Mr. Harris, the picture song is a means of exhibitor profit. And in the effort to bring to the attention of other exhibitors the picture-song policy of an exhibitor who has realized success therefrom, the following interview with Mr. Harris is offered exclusively to Moving Picture World readers:

"The new motion picture song is nothing more than a modernized version of the old illustrated song that met with enthusiasm in the picture shows of a few years ago," said Mr. Harris. "It will be remembered, however, that the illustrated song was used during an intermission of the main attraction and took the place of a special number on the program. Only the popular songs of the day had any place on the boards of the illustrated song, which was effectively used as a drawing card in the early motion picture houses. That didn't boost business for the exhibitor and it was discontinued.

Related to Illustrated Song.

"The motion picture song is closely related to the illustrated song, though its manner of working is exactly the opposite. In the motion picture song there is a specific benefit. The song is inexpensive exploitation. Its make-up and general working is in exact opposition with that of the old illustrated song. The one is exploited by the picture; the other serves to exploit the picture.

"The last time I had occasion to use the motion picture song, two or three months ago, proved to me that it is a promotion source that exhibitors should recognize. I played 'Back to God's Country,' First National Exhibitors' Circuit nature thriller. The motion picture song for this feature was written about and bore directly on the theme and general subject matter of the picture. The tune of the song was in accordance with the tone of the picture, which was inclined to be plaintive and sombre, rather than jazzy.

"When I played 'Back to God's Country' at the Blackstone I made a special effort to take full advantage of every means of legitimate exploitation that I could lay my hands on. The motion picture song, of the same name, was practically unknown—in Pittsburgh at least. But through a local store I managed to get possession of several copies and an orchestration. I tried to order about 300 copies of the sheet music, thinking that I could put it on sale in the lobby of the theatre.

"The song proper was not the only musical exploitation given 'Back to God's Country' at the Blackstone, for the original music score which I obtained was used as the musical accompaniment for the picture. I noticed that the score carried the main theme of the song at various inter-calls in the picture. This combination, I believe, added considerable tone and color to the presentation.

"During the intermission I resorted to the old 'illustrated song' idea and had a local singer to render the song from the stage to the accompaniment of the orchestra.

"But I believe the power of this practice lies not in its ability to be used for every picture, but in its quaint ability to be used and suited to only a few real, big, drawing attractions. I have not yet played 'A Daughter of Two Worlds,' Norma Talmadge's First National, but when I book this picture I am certain that I will make arrangements to put forth the motion picture song exploitation that I used on 'Back to God's Country.'

Growing Demand for Edgar Comedies.

The triumph of the first Booth Tarkington Edgar Comedy, "Edgar and Teacher's Pet" that has been welcomed at first run theatres in all parts of the country as one of the freshest and most entertaining photoplays ever brought to the screen, has led to a big demand for "Edgar's Hamlet," the second in the series of two-reel pictures produced by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. This production, which is said by those who have seen the completed print to surpass even the first release, will be distributed soon.

Ince Engages Lewis Stone.

Lewis Stone has been signed by Thomas H. Ince for the principal role in "Beau Revel," the first of a series of specials by Louis Joseph Vance, scheduled for early production at the Ince Studios on the West Coast.

Bookings Foreshadow Success of "Rio Grande," Pathe Film

GR^{EAT} success for the Edwin Carewe production, "Rio Grande," set for release on April 25, is foreshadowed in the steadily increasing number of bookings reported from all the Pathe branch offices throughout the country. The leading theatres in the Southwest, near the border country in which the action of the story is laid, all have booked the picture for exceptionally long runs, and the rest of the country is signing up the picture after pre-views and in appreciation of the many successes connected with the name of the author, Augustus Thomas.

Rio Grande a Vivid Melodrama.

"Rio Grande" is regarded by many as ranking with "The Witching Hour" in Mr. Thomas' achievements. Its melodrama and vivid action were far too great for the confines of the ordinary theatre and it really has taken the wide range covered by the motion picture camera to bring out its full value. Bigness and breadth of scenes, which could not be staged in the interior of a theatre, but were possible of construction for motion pictures, are seen to an impressive degree in the production.

"Down on the Farm" Opens in San Francisco to Big Houses

A TELEGRAM from E. M. Asher says that "Down on the Farm," the Sennett comedy, opened at the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, on Sunday, April 11, to tremendous business, "the picture proving to be a riot." The theatre's orchestra was in rube attire for the opening, the stage being set for a haymow. Preceding this there was an atmospheric prologue of a farmyard scene.

Mr. Asher declares the reception in San Francisco of "Down on the Farm" indicates the comedy will be one of the year's biggest attractions.

Harold Lloyd Comedy, "Haunted Spooks," Will Run Three Weeks in Single Theatre

ONE of the highest tributes yet paid to Harold Lloyd was accorded him by the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, when his "Haunted Spooks" opened at that house on Sunday, April 11, for a run of three weeks. The Imperial is one of San Francisco's best motion picture houses, and when the contract was made it agreed to give "Haunted Spooks" a fifty-fifty split in all billboard and newspaper advertising. No other comedian in the annals of the Imperial has possessed sufficient popularity with San Francisco audiences as to warrant retention for more than a week, Pathe points out.

"Haunted Spooks" is the last of the first series of Lloyd comedies distributed by Pathe. Likewise it is generally agreed to be the finest Lloyd comedy that Hal E. Roach has ever turned out, and the opinion of exhibitors who have played it is that it is easily one of the best ever seen on the screen.

When Jack Partington, who manages the Portola Theatre, San Francisco, and supervises the direction of the Imperial, looked at "Haunted Spooks," he immediately decided to move it to the Imperial. He felt the Portola would be insufficient to accommodate the audiences which would demand admission to the smaller house and that the Imperial was the only theatre in which to play the comedy.

It was after seeing it projected for a second time that Partington decided the latest Lloyd funmaker was deserving of an extended run. He realized he would have to upset all precedent to do this, but he knew the merit of the offering and he felt he was not even taking a chance in advertising that "Haunted Spooks" would run for three weeks at the Imperial.

Fox Film Engages A. H. Gibbs, War Correspondent's Brother

IT looks like a case of "the army and navy—and the marine corps—forever" as far as the personnel of the Fox Film Corporation is concerned. Hardly a day goes by without the addition of some soldier, sailor or marine to the various departments now located under the big roof of the new Fox studio on West Fifty-fifth street, New York City.

The latest acquisition is Major A. Hamilton Gibbs, who has been engaged by Mr. Fox to write special screen stories for the male stars of the Fox aggregation. This will be no little task, as the screen heroes now listed under this banner include such popular actors as William Farnum, William Russell, Tom Mix, Buck Jones and George Walsh.

A. Hamilton Gibbs comes of a distinguished family. He is the younger brother of Cosmo Hamilton, whose new play, "Scandal" has been a success of the Broadway theatrical season. Philip Gibbs, the famous war correspondent, is also his brother.

Cast Completed for King Feature.

With the signing of Madelyn Clare for the heavy role in "The Hidden Path," Burton King has completed the cast for his second independent production and will commence work on this feature at once. Grace Darling will be starred in this new King production. Rod La Rocque will have the leading role opposite Miss Darling. Others prominent in the cast are William H. Turner, James Cooley, William Corbett and John Nicholson.

Famous Players Picture Aids Army's Drive for Recruits

AIDING the national recruiting drive of the army, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will this week donate a print of the film of "Civilian Clothes," representing the scenes taken last week at Camp Meade, Md., through the courtesy of Major General Grote Hutcheson, commanding officer of the camp.

The film, bearing the sub-title announcing its presentation by Famous Players-Lasky, probably will be supplemented by film of the signal corps at Washington and pictures of the camp officers and will be presented to Camp Meade. Later it will be distributed by Captain Mims, who is in charge of motion picture publicity for the army, to the fifty-six main stations and 500 sub-stations of the army, covering nationwide territory for showing in theatres until the termination of the drive.

Announce Release Dates for Keenan and Henley Features

R^{ELEASE} dates on two big forthcoming Pathe features are announced for the first time this week by Pathe Exchange, Inc. Frank Keenan's next attraction, "Dollar for Dollar," will be released on May 2. The following week Hobert Henley's production, "The Miracle of Money," will make its first appearance.

"Dollar for Dollar" was adapted by Mr. Keenan from a well-known story by Ethel Watts Mumford, noted playwright and magazine writer. Prominent in the excellent supporting cast are Kathleen Kirkham, Harry Van Meter, Kate Van Buron, Jay Belasco and Gertrude Claire. During the last year Mr. Keenan has endeavored to give the public pictures not only a big central thought, but with more than the average amount of entertainment. His success is best judged by "The World Aflame," "Brothers Divided" and his most recent release, "Smoldering Embers," each of which has been successful from every point of view.

Leopold Sutto Sails for Paris.

Leopold Sutto, special representative for L. Gevaert & Co., Antwerp, Belgium, who has been in New York for the past few weeks, sailed for Paris on Saturday, April 10. He will remain there about one week, going then to his home office. During his absence from this country, the Gevaert company will be represented by Louis Destenay, who will stop at the Astor, and will be in a position to satisfy all inquirers as to the product and purposes of his company. Mr. Sutto will return to New York in six or eight weeks.

Edwin Mortimer Joins Metro.

Edwin Mortimer, for two years a director with Maurice Tourneur, has been placed on the general staff of the Metro studios in Hollywood. He takes up his new duties immediately.

Mr. Mortimer has been in motion pictures for a number of years, and before that was an actor on the legitimate stage for fourteen years.

THE GIFT SUPREME FOREIGN TERRITORIES NOW SELLING

Katherine MacDonald's Next Picture for First National Is "Passion's Playground"

WITH the completion of the finishing touches which represent cutting and assembling, Katherine MacDonald's latest attraction, "Passion's Playground," will be forwarded to First National Exhibitors' Circuit for distribution as provided by her contract with that organization. Produced with a care and diligence that has represented a period of months and a lavish outlay of money, "Passion's Playground" is turned over to First National with the full assurance that its delivery marks a new era of Katherine MacDonald pictures.

The large numbers of California exhibitors who have taken a personal interest in the various steps leading up to the production of this picture is definite evidence, according to Miss MacDonald and her studio associates, that "Passion's Playground," in addition to relating a story that maintains remarkable human interest, at the same time affords them unique chances for promotion. Scores of exhibitors have made personal visits to the MacDonald studios during the filming of the picture and their suggestions as to stills which may be made into attractive lobby novelties, newspaper ads and even into 24-sheets guided the studio manager and director in the shooting of stills.

Since the selection of a story for this production, which is an adaptation from the book, "The Guests of Hercules," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, this production has been a picture fostered by exhibitors. And as the first trial showings prove, J. A. Barry as director and Joseph Brotherton as cameraman have not missed a bet in attaining for every bit of artistry possible.

Tom Geraghty Signed to Write Scripts for Famous Players

THOMAS J. GERAGHTY, one of the best known scenario writers in the profession, has just signed a long-term contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, according to announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president.

He will be attached to the scenario staff of the company at the Lasky studio, and his first work will be the scenarioizing of "Burglar Proof" for Bryant Washburn, Paramount-Artcraft star, which picture will be made following "A Full House," on which Mr. Washburn is now engaged.

Thomas Geraghty has written a number of successful scripts for Famous Players-Lasky. One of the last was that of "Too Much Johnson," in which Mr. Washburn starred.

Pathe Campaign Books to Be Same Size as Trade Papers

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC., in the future will issue all campaign books in the same size as the trade papers and the Pathe Messenger. This will create a standard for the printing of matter designed for all three purposes, or for interchangeable use, and will also be of great value to exhibitors who keep files of campaign books and trade papers. Several other improvements are also being effected.

In the campaign books the advertising insert sheet is eliminated, but the advertisements will appear inside the book, bound, but so arranged that they can be taken out without injuring the rest of the matter. The reproductions of the posters all will be on one page, making it easy for the exhibitor to see at a glance the poster advertising that goes with each production.

The front cover cut will be available for the exhibitor to use as a four-column cut or mat suitable for advertising. The make-up will be simple and pleasing, with particular attention to the strict elimination of mere space-filling words, and each feature of the picture possibilities in advertising publicity, exploitation and presentation will be arranged in a place by itself.

Universal's Novelty Reel Will Give Insight Into the Ways of the "Spiritualists"

UNIVERSAL'S weekly novelty reel, being prepared for early release by Hal Hodes, editor the Universal New Screen Magazine, will contain a series of interesting subjects photographed during spiritualistic seances.

Due to the present interest in ouija boards, mediums and other occult phenomena, Hodes has arranged to give first hand insight into the ways of the "spiritualists."

The novelty reel will show the "inside" workings of well-known parlor spooks. It will include pictures showing how "fake" mediums produce "supernatural" effects and fool credulous believers. The mechanics of phoney spirit visitations is shown in detail, from ordinary rapping and table tipping to the visualization of spirit images and voice manifestations.

This series of moving picture subjects has been obtained through an arrangement with Waldemar Kaemfert, editor of the Popular Science Monthly. There will be a section in the novelty reel every week devoted to curious scientific subjects, supplied through the Popular Science Monthly.

Another series of unusual interest will be an expose of the various devices and dexterity used by professional gamblers to hoodwink their victims. The sleight-of-hand tricks of card-sharpers, crap-shooters and such crooks will be included, as will be the more ingenious tricks of card-marking, signals between confederates and other ruses of the high class gambling crook.

Tsuru Aoki in "Locked Lips" Heads Universal for April 28

A FIVE REEL Universal, "Locked Lips," special attraction featuring Tsuru Aoki, heads the list of releases for the week of April 28. The picture is based on "Blossom," written by Clifford Howard. Supporting Tsuru Aoki are Stanhope Wheatcroft and Magda Lane. The production was under the direction of William C. Dowlan.

The closing climax of "The Lion Man" with Kathleen O'Connor and Jack Perrin brings this issue to a close. Art Acord and Mildred Moore make their debut in a new Universal serial entitled "The Moon Riders." The first episode is entitled "Over the Precipice."

Elmo Lincoln is seen in the twelfth episode of "Elmo the Fearless" entitled "Crashing Through." An Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran comedy, "Pick Out Your Husband" and a Century lion comedy entitled "Lion Paws and Ladie Fingers" are the mirth provokers for the week. The program is rounded out with International News numbers 21 and 22, Universal New Screen Magazine No. 63 and a "western" labeled, "The Gun Game" with Bob Reeves and Josephine Hill.

"The New Henrietta" Is Retitled.

"The Saphead" has been selected as the release title for Loew-Metro's forthcoming production of Winchell Smith's and Victor Mape's play, "The New Henrietta." Winchell Smith, producer and playwright, who recently joined the staff of distinguished authors at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood, is personally supervising the picturization of "The Saphead," in which William H. Crane and Buster Keaton will be co-starred at the head of a notable ensemble.

Republic Shows Uniform Bookings.

Briton N. Busch, president of the Republic Distributing Corporation, of which Lewis J. Selznick is advisory director, announced this week that the bookings on six Republic productions are showing an unusual uniformity throughout the country. They are "One Way Trail," "Twelve-Ten," "Romany, Where Love Runs Wild," "Tribby," "The Blue Pearl" and "The Gift Supreme."

Selznick Makes Correction.

In announcing last week the authorship of "The Gilded Butterfly," purchased by Myron Selznick as a starring vehicle for Eugene O'Brien, mention was made to the effect that Earle H. Miller wrote the story. Bradley King, and not Earle H. Miller, is the author of the picture play.

Goodman Buys Romayne for Ohio.

Romayne comedies made by Romayne Super-Film Company of Culver City have been sold for Ohio to Sam Goodman, of the Exhibitors' Film Company of Ohio, with offices at 407 Sloan Building, Cleveland. Negotiations are pending for the remaining unsold territory.

American Film Cites Reviews to Prove Drawing Power of "Dangerous Talent"

EXHIBITORS and photoplay critics have glowingly described the Dangerous Talent," American Film Company's latest special feature in which Margarita Fisher is starred, says an announcement. Press, exhibitors and public unite in declaring that it is something new and decidedly worth while in the way of a play.

To mention a few of the comments on this latest "Flying A" release produced under the direction of George Cox, American cites the following:

Moving Picture World: "Satisfactory presentation of a story in which elements of melodrama play a prominent part. Atmosphere surrounding individual scenes is always correct. Margarita Fisher is attractive."

Wid's Daily: "Good play with unusual twists—interests because of its many surprise turns. Plot succeeds in maintaining interest. Star's work is consistent."

Dramatic Mirror: "In this day when so many film plays are sent out with just barely enough plot to get by with a critical public, it seems almost like extravagance for any one picture to have as much story as 'The Dangerous Talent' is endowed with. It is all intensely interesting, too, and, what is more, it is not in the least confusing."

of dramatic construction. Margarita Fisher has arrived. Not only is her work excellent, but that of all the cast. Harvey Clark deserves special mention."

Billboard: "There is a constant interest in the unfolding of this story. Miss Fisher proved quite an adept at emotional work, her role being quite a departure from her previous releases and proves her versatility."

Exhibitors' Trade Review: "The Dangerous Talent' is strong in suspense, offers plenty of quick action, perfect continuity and a cleverly devised and satisfactory climax. The plot is decidedly original, the photography excellent and viewed from any angle this production should prove a sterling attraction. Margarita Fisher possesses both physical beauty and emotional ability, and her 'Lelia' is a very alluring creature."

Exhibitors everywhere are reporting that Margarita Fisher is steadily growing in popularity, and each new release in which she is presented finds a greater demand on the part of the best theatres for an early booking.

"The Sowing of Alderson Cree."

"The Sowing of Alderson Cree," featuring Bernard Durning, will be the third production to be made for the Republic Distributing Corporation by Macauley Photoplays. The two previous pictures in which Bernard Durning was featured are "When Bearcat Went Dry" and "The Gift Supreme."

It is hinted that this third production deals with the West Virginia mountaineers.

Rivoli Heads List of Big Houses Booking "Miss Hobbs"

SOME are made stars and others just naturally are stars." That has been the sum and substance of exhibitor opinion on Wanda Hawley, the new Realartist, as she returns from contracts on "Miss Hobbs" have been gone over and tabulated this week at the Realart home offices.

Some of the outstanding facts in these returns, according to officials of the company, were unparalleled in the history of motion pictures. First of all, in less than a week first-run contracts have been closed in most of the country's important cities and playing dates set with the release date of the picture two months off.

The Rivoli Theatre, New York, heads the list of these houses. Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director, not only booked the picture "sight unseen," but set the week of June 6 as the date upon which the new "Queen of Beauty" is to be introduced to Broadway theatregoers. Tom Moore has also picked Wanda Hawley in "Miss Hobbs" for his Rialto Theatre in Washington, D. C., for a date in June.

Great Exploitation to Back All of Republic's Serials

DURING the course of the Selznick Pictures convention, held at the Hotel Astor, New York, Briton N. Busch, president of the Republic Distributing Corporation, announced that all the serials to be distributed through Republic will contain the most complete exploitation aids ever placed before exhibitors, in addition to the services of experienced exploitation men.

The first serial that will be shown throughout the country within a short time, backed by weeks of intensive advertising in all the prominent trade journals and newspapers, is "The Whirlwind." Charles Hutchison, the dare-devil, is the feature of the production.

At the convention the subject of exploitation was discussed and it was announced that all the Select exploitation men would bend every effort to drive all Republic serials to success. A series of talks on the subject were given by the Carrier brothers, of Cincinnati; Lon Young, of Philadelphia; Walter Merkle, of Boston; A. J. Sharrick, of Buffalo, and Ed Danforth, of Atlanta. Charles McClintock also made some very pointed remarks on the subject of exploitation.

"The Lone Wolf's Daughter" Sets New Attendance Mark

J. PARKER READ, JR.'S Louise Glaum production, "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," which, since its banner week presentation at the Capitol, New York, has proved one of the outstanding successes of the year, captured Philadelphia last week in its initial engagement on the Mastbaum and Nirdlinger chain of theatres.

Contracted originally by the Stanley Booking Company for presentation at the Victoria, the Mastbaum management shifted "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" to the Palace because of the larger seating capacity in the newer Stanley first-run house. Not since its opening has the Palace housed larger crowds than those that flocked to see Louise Glaum.

Griffith Gets Prize Villain.

Lowell Sherman, considered the prize villain of the New York stage, and at present appearing in "The Sign on the Door" at the Republic Theatre, has been engaged by D. W. Griffith for the character of Lennox Sanderson in the forthcoming Griffith screen version of "Way Down East."

SIMPLE SOULS

Realart Sales Forces Boom

Down Season's Home Stretch

THE field forces of Realart Pictures Corporation are striving hard to close out the first season's business with a new selling record established. Two big specials head the list of productions and five star productions are included in the schedule. "The Law of the Yukon," a Charles Miller production, and "The Deep Purple," an R. A. Walsh production, both presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, are two features. Two Mary Miles Minter pictures and one from each of Realart's other three stars will be released in the next three months.

These seven productions will round out a total of seventeen handled by Realart during the year. The company was organized for active business about the middle of last summer. The first picture was not released, however, until December 1, 1919, which reduces the actual time in which the seventeen productions were handled to about six months.

Sweden Ignorant of American Methods of Film Production

THAT the picture populace of Sweden is totally ignorant of even the simpler methods employed in the production of American films was expressed recently in a statement by Sten Wilkens, representative of a prominent Swedish motion picture magazine, who was a visitor at the Thomas H. Ince studios in Culver City.

Following a two months' analytical tour of the big studios on the West Coast, Mr. Wilkens will return to his native land to conduct a campaign intended to educate the Swedish film fans on the modern methods of film manufacturing and to strengthen their appreciation of the cinema art and the lengths to which producers go to attain the ultimate screen perfection.

An outstanding feature of Mr. Wilken's interview was his frank admission that foreigners in general, and Swedes in particular, labored under the false impression that natural light—the plentiful sunshine of California—was used exclusively in picture making. The artificial lighting systems and the high-powered kilowatts used for interior sets are unknown to the movie fans in Sweden, to say nothing of their non-belief in the presence of "make-up" and accompanying appendages to make the well-known heroes and heroines continually charming and heroic.

Inter-Ocean Gets West Coast Agency for Wohl Studio Lights

BECAUSE of the success which has attended Inter-Ocean Film Corporation's distribution of Wohl studio equipment in foreign territories, the company has been awarded the West Coast distributing agency of the well-known studio lights.

This is the gist of an announcement made by Eugene H. Kaufmann, manager of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation's accessory department. It is understood that Mr. Kaufmann will personally supervise the sales of Wohl studio equipment on the West Coast.

Selling Films in a Touring Car.

R. E. Nehls, representative for the American Film, will hereafter cover his territory out of Cincinnati in a touring car. He has some "Flying A" Specials going into Southern Ohio, West Virginia, a part of Indiana and Kentucky, which will not wait for train service. Nehls started his career in the motion picture business as an usher in a little theatre in Chicago in 1913.

When Producer Meets the Exhibitor.

"Big Four" Tells of Pathos and Humor to Pervade Next Mary Pickford Feature

IN the character of Amanda Afflick, a little cockney laundry drudge in "The Duchess of Suds," her next release through United Artists Corporation, Mary Pickford reaches the greatest height of her inimitable characterizations for the screen, it is said. Already a great part of the production has been finished and Hiram Abrams has announced this picture, the second which Mary has made for the "Big Four," for an early release.

What portions of the picture have already been shown to the members of the organization, and from the stills that already have been issued for exploitation, advertising and publicity, there is no reason to doubt but that the character Miss Pickford portrays gives her a particularly great opportunity to show her inimitable qualifications.

The character itself is an appealing one, effective and triumphant in its every degree of simplicity. There are many moments of cheerful fun and hilarious antics and others of tearful emotion. Yet, the story draws its line cleverly between the changes and its whole is filled with much action, heart interest and suspense, ending naturally with that ultimate justification that "sends 'em away" with "that grand and glorious feeling."

Pathos Alternates with Humor.

The role that Miss Pickford portrays is unique, demanding a make-up which in many of the slavey scenes makes her so unlike herself that she is almost unrecognizable, yet crediting her with an art for characterization that is almost beyond imitation. There is more pathos and human nature compressed into this character than is found anywhere else in the characters Miss Pickford has ever done, says a "Big Four" announcement, and she has been so carefully painstaking with this production that the predictions are that it will be her best.

This character of Amanda Afflick is that of a young English girl, born in a workhouse and apprenticed to a French laundry woman. She has read and re-read the cheap novels, the only literature that has come to her notice, all of which have dealt with the upper social strata, until her dreams and her life are composed of the most fanciful imaginings and invest her sordid surroundings with all sorts of potential greatness.

Many Big First-Run Houses Book "His Temporary Wife"

ALL the good things said in advance of release date by the Hodkinson organization concerning Joseph Levering's all-star production, "His Temporary Wife," featuring Rubye De Remer, Edmund Breese and Mary Boland, have ample corroboration in the steady stream of contract bookings, in the success achieved with this absorbing leap year romance by some of the big first-run houses and in the way picture showmen generally are advertising and exploiting it.

Following its big week engagement at Tom Moore's Strand Theatre, Washington, D. C., the production played to big business at fully fifty first-run theatres, including the Crystal, St. Louis; Capitol, Springfield, Ohio; Orpheum, Flint, Mich.; Lamb, Ranger, Tex.; Kenyon, Pittsburgh, and the Dreamland, Columbus, Ohio.

Robert Hichens, author of "The Garden of Allah," will take part in the latest American Red Cross film, "The Children of the Sahara," which will be produced in America. The film depicts the life of the children in the desert. Several scenes show what is being done by the White Nuns of the Sahara to combat the plague of blindness which is now sweeping the desert oasis towns. The author took part in several scenes, which were staged in the so-called Garden of Allah itself.

Geraldine Farrar Signs with Associated Exhibitors; Production to Begin in New York

GERALDINE FARRAR, internationally famed opera and screen star, has signed a contract with Associated Exhibitors, Inc. Production of the first picture will begin in New York as soon as every important arrangement connected with the making of a truly big attraction has been completed.

The signing of Miss Farrar is the opening gun in the Associated Exhibitors' announced campaign of endeavors to furnish exhibitors who are affiliated in the organization motion picture entertainment of such calibre as to assure the greatest possible patronage.

Every possible effort will be made by Associated Exhibitors to make Miss Farrar's initial Associated picture one of the biggest attractions of the year—and to make it an indication of the quality of the pictures to follow.

The steps leading up to actual production are being taken with extreme care, according to General Manager F. C. Quimby. One of the strongest stories written in years—and one particularly suited to the star—is being considered at present, Mr. Quimby says. He adds that nothing will be decided positively, however, until those most vitally concerned have agreed on the worth of story, director, support and other important elements of the initial drama.

Star Expresses Delight.

In signing the contract Miss Farrar expressed herself as delighted to know that she was to work with such an organization as Associated Exhibitors, Inc. She stated that she had signed up with Associated only after she had become convinced of the unlimited advantageous possibilities of such a connection.

The connection of Miss Farrar with Associated Exhibitors means that her productions immediately are assured first-run presentation in the finest theatres in every city and town in the country. This is true because the owners of the theatres are themselves affiliated in Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

Geraldine Farrar productions as well as every other picture of the Associated Exhibitors will be distributed through Pathe Exchanges.

American Salesmen Enter Home Stretch in Hutchinson Tribute Month Contest

A "FLYING A" contest as a tribute to President S. S. Hutchinson, instituted by C. A. Stimson, general sales manager, will close on April 30. Never before in the history of the American Film has there been such enthusiasm among the "Flying A" representatives and so much reason for honoring their president, than at present with the last eight photostories in the running.

Prizes will be awarded for the highest records in three classes: first, to salesmen who have the largest number of contracts on the following recent specials: "Six Feet Four," starring William Russell; "The Hellion," an emotional drama of love, mystery, hypnotism and intrigue; "Eve in Exile," a picturization of Cosmo Hamilton's famous novel, with an all star cast; "The Valley of Tomorrow," a Russell masterpiece of rapid action and virile acting filmed around Lake Tahoe; "The Dangerous Talent," a typical "Jim the Penman" type of story; "The Honey Bee," in which Mme. Marguerita Sylva plays the leading role in the picturization of a Samuel Merwin best seller; "Slam-Bang Jim," a daring comedy-drama, and "The Thirtieth Piece of Silver," a story by Albert Payson Terhune.

In case of a tie in any of the prizes an equal sum will be awarded to the contestants tying.

The second prize will be awarded to those doing the largest amount of business, and the third prize to those placing the largest month. Each man had his own territory. The contest started on April 5. There is everything from "Jazz to highbrow literature picturized," according to the general sales manager.

The "Flying A" has a crackerjack sales force of which it is justly proud, and the esprit de corps has been greatly stimulated by the bonus system which went into effect five months ago. Under this arrangement the production of each feature is prorated among the various branches. After each office has passed its quota, the bonus becomes operative and a percentage of all the rentals thereafter reverts to the representatives. This plan insures a wider presentation for many of the older features which have proved big box office successes, while the brand new specials go almost on their own impetus.

Another item which make the way of the representatives smooth in the present contest is the addition of many players of great popularity whom the American has been fortunate in securing. Among them are Mme. Marguerita Sylva, Charlotte Walker, Thomas Holding, Forrest Stanley, Seena Owen, Helen Jerome Eddy, George Hernandez, Albert Ray, Beatrice Van, Nigel Barrie and Pell Trenton, and also King Baggot and Kid McCoy by special arrangement.

L. J. Selznick Places Distribution in England with the Walturdaw Company

ONE of the outstanding features of the closing days of the second annual convention of Selznick Pictures, which was brought to a successful conclusion on April 9 at the Astor Hotel in New York, was the announcement by Lewis J. Selznick that he has made a new distributing arrangement for his product in the British Isles.

Mr. Selznick made known that he has entered into the contracts with the Walturdaw Company, Ltd., of London, whereby the latter is to take over the active distribution in the British Isles the product of the Selznick and Select producing companies to the minimum of seventy-eight pictures a year. This deal is said to involve a sum of more than $2,000,000.

Mr. Selznick considers himself fortunate in being able to place the distribution of his pictures in England with an organization that is one of the oldest and best known of all the distributing companies of London, and moreover the one that is held in highest esteem by the industry. The contract was closed with Colonel A. H. Brown, who especially came from London to New York to confer with Mr. Selznick. The contract contemplates the broadest reciprocity between the English distributors and exhibitors and the American producer. It is also the intention under the contract for Mr. Selznick to shortly begin active production work in England, the stories to be of a character for both American and English consumption.

"Buck" Taylor Resigns from Pathe.

Buffalo, N. Y., exchange and exhibitor circles received a surprise when on Monday, April 12, C. A. Taylor, better known as "Buck," resigned as manager of the local Pathe exchange and was succeeded by J. E. Kimberly, former manager of the World and Republic offices.

bara studios of the "Flying A" in time to put his O. K. on the completing of "The Blue Moon" and the assembling and preliminary cutting processes.

At the same time Mr. Nehls, together with studio manager Al Thompson and George L. Cox, are searching the field with a fine tooth comb to secure players best adapted to the roles required for the next big super-drama on the docket—"Whispering Smith."

Reports on Equity Picture Show Big Business

NO end of reports have been received by Sam Zierler, president of the Commonwealth Film Corporation which distributes the Equity Clara Kimball Young pictures in New York State, recently, telling of the success with which "The Forbidden Woman," Miss Young's second Equity production is meeting on its bookings throughout the Fox houses and Loew circuit. The Ridgwood, Audubon, Academy of Music and Crotona theatres have played to capacity houses and in many instances, the box office records have been broken. On the Loew circuit, more than sixty theatres situated between Fourteenth street and One Hundred and Eighty-first street are showing, or will show, "The Forbidden Woman" April 12 and 19.

"All the exhibitors tell me they are making money," said Mr. Zierler, "and my own observation confirms this. According to letters, telegrams and newspaper clippings received this week at Equity's New York offices, the production is breaking records throughout the country and has, in many instances, outdone the record made by "Eyes of Youth" in the same houses.

John Spargo Will Represent A. M. P. A. While Securing Co-operation with Press

THE most ambitious project of its three years of active existence was initiated by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., at its last regular meeting, when it unanimously voted to employ John S. Spargo, a well-known newspaper man, as its field secretary in a campaign to secure closer co-operation between daily newspapers and the motion picture interests.

For years there has been a condition existing in the exploitation of motion picture productions which has made it difficult for the newspaper publisher and the motion picture advertiser to meet each other half way. Each felt that the other wanted it all; each felt the other was giving all and getting little back. Mr. Advertiser felt lost in facing any kind of a country-wide newspaper campaign for the exploitation of films, while Mr. Publisher felt that his paper was just as much entitled to consideration as two thousand other similar publications. The result has been that neither has got anywhere. Co-operation there was none, with the exception of a very few brilliant instances. But these exceptions have proved the rule and have finally shown the way in which the two can be brought together, at a time when each needs the other more than ever before.

Mr. Spargo has for many years past held executive positions on many of the larger papers of the country. He recently discovered the key to the situation and came to New York to put the proposition up to the proper body.

The plan has been under discussion by the board of directors for several weeks and has everywhere met with enthusiastic support by the large and small interests alike as they are represented in the A. M. P. A.

Mr. Spargo begins work at once.

Educational Mails Booklet.

Educational Films Corporation is this week mailing to exhibitors a booklet announcing the enlarged activities of the company and its acquisition of new product for regular releases. Brief announcements in the trade papers have been responsible for so many inquiries for further details that Educational determined upon this method of explaining its future policies and so far as possible listing the material it will release. The booklet, however, explains that new series are constantly being acquired, and with the company's policy of attempting to distribute the cream of the short subject market, it will be necessary for the exhibitor to watch he trade press for current announcements.

Work on Two Big Goldwyn Productions Is Started at the Culver City Studios

WORK on two elaborate productions has been started at the Goldwyn Studios in Culver City, a Mary Roberts Rinehart Eminent Authors picture based on her story "Empire Builders," and an adaptation of the stage play, "Officer 666" by Augustin McHugh. With the beginning of the filming of these two pictures, all of the stages at Culver City were occupied.

Under the title of "Empire Builders," Mrs. Rinehart wrote a two-part Saturday Evening Post story dealing with life at a boys' preparatory school. The characters and atmosphere in the novelist's study of youthful impulses, soon to be published in book form by George Doran, suggest Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," although Mrs. Rinehart's handling of the subject is marked by individuality.

E. Mason Hopper has been assigned to the direction of Mrs. Rinehart's newest story, with a cast that includes Cullen Landis, Molly Malone and Ralph Bushman, son of Francis X. Bushman. This is Bushman Jr.'s first appearance in a Goldwyn production and he has been given a prominent role. Others in the company are Otto Hoffman, Howard Ralston, Tom Perrse and John Lynch.

Again working with Harry Beaumont, who has directed all but a few of Tom Moore's pictures since that young actor was made a star, Moore is now engaged in the filming of "Officer 666," the rapid-action farce that in play form scored a record-breaking run on Broadway under the management of Cohan & Harris. The supporting company is not yet complete, but thus far it includes Kate Lester, Jerome Patrick, Harry Dunkinson and George Kuwa.

Robertson-Cole to Release Christie's "So Long Letty," to Announce Cast Soon

IN line with its policy to obtain for distribution big pictures, Robertson-Cole has signed a contract with the Christie Film Company for "So Long Letty," the Morosco stage success, which was one of the most powerful box-office attractions during the four years in which it was seen.

"So Long Letty" won wide fame for Charlotte Greenwood, who played the leading role in it. It was produced on the Pacific Coast, in Los Angeles, in 1916, and only finished its long stage career a few months ago. "So Long Letty" on the stage was a musical comedy. It was written by Mr. Morosco himself, aided by Elmer Harris. It was laid in a strange colony near the city of Los Angeles, where old street cars, taken off their wheels were used for bungalows. In this fantastic suburb is set a story full of laughs and comical situations, which will go on the screen with even better effects than it went on the stage.

"So Long Letty" is filled with humorous characters for the portrayal of which screen types are now being engaged. Within a short time Robertson-Cole will be able to announce the cast for this picture.

graphic advises the artistic merit of its photography and the perfection of the cast, from the standpoint of acting and characterization, should make it one of the epochal productions of the year.

Has Authentic Settings.

Mr. Dwan took special pains to secure absolute fidelity of detail. Much of the action is centered in Corsica, the quaintly picturesque island on which Napoleon, the inspiration of the novel, was born, therefore there is fine opportunity for the exploitation of the haunting beauties of that historic isle.

In the work of convincingly reproducing those scenic effects, Mr. Dwan was very materially assisted by Mrs. Harold MacGrath, who had gone over the locations figuring in her husband's novel. She made many photographs of the scenic features, supplemented by a wealth of pictures of people, costumes and local customs, all of which were placed at the disposal of Mr. Dwan. A special musical score has been arranged by Louis F. Gottschalk.

The secret picture upon which Director Emile Chautard has been hard at work for several months has been completed. A competition among the personnel of the Mayflower Corporation is now in progress, the object of which is to select an appropriate title.

Reviews printed in Moving Picture World are based upon the production exactly as it will be shown upon your screen. And they are dependable, fair and honest in their expressions.

Print of "A Splendid Hazard" Arrives at Mayflower Office

Ray's "Casey" Comedies Will Be Released by Peter White

THE PETER H. WHITE COMPANY has perfected its plans to bring to the screen Johnny Ray, the widely known vaudeville, musical comedy and picture comedian, in a series of merry-makers under the brand title of "Casey Comedies." The first release will be "Casey the Wizard."

Wherever entertainment has been given in vaudeville, legitimate or pictures theatres for many years the name of Johnny Ray has been standard for laughter. He has been starred in musical comedy, featured in burlesque and has been lead comedian in numerous screen comedies. His specialty has always been "Irish," and in "Casey Comedies" he will play the same type of "Tad" that he has always been identified with.

The Peter H. White Company is well equipped to produce and circulate the "Casey Comedies."

New Almonte Theatre Opens.

The latest addition to the chain of theatres controlled by the Ottawa Valley Amusement Company is the new house at Almonte, Ontario, which was opened for the first time on Saturday, April 13. The construction of this theatre was delayed all winter because of the lack of building materials and supplies.

Warrilow Now Architectural Expert for William Farnum

IN line with his well-known policy to attain the proper atmosphere and originality in all his film productions, William Fox has engaged Thomas Warrilow, one of the finest technical men in the business, to design and execute architectural and decorative plans for William Farnum's forthcoming production, "The Joyous Trouble Maker," work upon which has started under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards at the Fox West Coast studios in Hollywood.

In announcing the engagement of Mr. Warrilow, Mr. Fox says the contract calls for the technical expert's exclusive services with the Farnum company. Mr. Warrilow, who has already joined the Farnum company, has shown rare artistic ability in his work, according to reports which preceded his coming to William Fox from Paris, where for the past several years he has been studying.

Contracts on Neilan Film Total $300,000 Since Release

MARSHALL NEILAN'S initial independent production, "The River's End," released through First National has reached the $300,000 mark on the forty-sixth day following its first public showing. Contracts totaling this amount have been approved by the New York offices of the Neilan organization.

It is stated that small-town exhibitors are finding the picture a particularly exceptional attraction. Little towns bordering metropolitan districts find that the success and publicity which has been given the picture in the big cities, especially the publicity in the big town newspapers which reach smaller communities, has made this Neilan film a most powerful drawing card.

Olive Thomas to Play "Jenny."

Following the completion of her forthcoming Selznick production of "The Flapper," Lewis J. Selznick will present Miss Olive Thomas in "Jenny," it is announced this week.

"Jenny" is from the pen of Roy Horniman, a noted British writer, and is said to be one of the most powerful stories ever written by this author. Laurence Trimble has been chosen by Myron Selznick to direct this production.

Danziger Transferred to New York.

William Danziger, a Cincinnati newspaperman, and who recently has been the Universal publicity representative in that city, has been brought to New York as a part of the home office publicity force under Joseph H. Mayer, director of publicity. Danziger will edit the Universal press bulletin and write feature stories.

Universal Recording Heavy Bookings on "Virgin of Stamboul" in Principal Cities

UNIVERSAL is scoring heavily with "The Virgin of Stamboul," Priscilla Dean's big oriental picture. Already first run houses in almost all of the principal cities have booked the production. In almost every city, elaborate exploitation "stunts" are being arranged to put it across.

Harry M. Berman, general manager of exchanges for Universal, says the sales campaign for the new picture is the biggest and fastest thing ever handled by that company.

"We did not get the prints into the hands of our branch exchanges until March 20," he said. "In three weeks, leading theatres in 90 per cent. of the big cities had contracted to run the picture, with play dates early in May.

Long Run on Broadway.

"The seventy-seven day booking over the Loew circuit in and around New York, has been followed by a forty-seven day booking over the Fox Circuit in the same territory. These two contracts alone, with the four weeks' run at B. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre will make one of the most complete New York City showings a Universal picture ever had. The showing at the Broadway Theatre has been a great surprise. Instead of dropping off during the third and fourth weeks, the attendance actually increased.

Crowding Houses in Washington.

"It has been shown already in several other theatres. In the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C., it crowded the house for the week of April 5. Tom Moore, of the Rialto, gave it the most expensive staging and the biggest exploitation ever undertaken by him for any picture.

"Another early showing of the picture, in the Ansonia Theatre, Butte, Mont., it broke all house records despite adverse conditions in that city—restaurants strikes, strikes in all building crafts and the most severe Easter weather on record in that locality.

"After several days of clever exploitation along the lines utilized in New York City, William Cutts of the Kinema Theatre, Salt Lake City, packed his doors during the week of April 5.

New Special Prizma Series Is Nearly Ready for Release

TOWARD the close of the highly successful and spirited convention of the Selznick Pictures Corporation, held at the Hotel Astor, New York, Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager, made known some interesting facts relative to the future distribution and production of Prizma productions.

Make Feature in Colors.

Several weeks ago Lewis J. Selznick announced through the trade press that in the future Prizma Color Pictures would be distributed through Select exchanges and that he aimed to produce in colors a series of five-reel features and short dramas. Mr. Morris' remarks brought to light that a special series of Prizma pictures will soon be ready.

"A new special series of twelve productions," said Mr. Morris, "will soon be ready for release. By next August or September a series of Prizma five-reel dramatic productions will be announced for the year 1921."

George Meeker, general manager of Prizma, stated that a release chart would be available for all exchanges by May 1 and that two styles of one sheets and lobby displays will be furnished all exhibitors booking Prizma productions.

Selznick Branch Managers Give Morris Diamond Links

AS a token of their esteem and appreciation of the ability and co-operation of Sam Morris, general manager of the Select and Republic organizations, the branch managers of the two companies presented Mr. Morris with a diamond studded platinum set of cufflinks and shirt studs at the April 6 meeting of the convention, held at the Hotel Astor, New York.

Charles C. Pettijohn, assistant to Lewis J. Selznick, made the presentation address, pointing out that the exchange managers who had been listening to the discussions of co-operation, wished to take advantage of the subject and endeavor to show Mr. Morris their appreciation of his co-operation as general manager. Mr. Pettijohn said: "It is the unanimous desire of the assembled members of the Selznick organization to express in some measure our admiration for your ability, our respect for your leadership, and our affection for your personality."

Elaine Hammerstein Renews Her Contract with Selznick

AT the close of the second annual convention of Selznick Pictures in New York on April 9, it was announced by Myron Selznick that he has re-engaged Elaine Hammerstein for a period covering seven years.

The previous good work of this star and her popularity among all lovers of screen drama, combined with her ability to portray and imbue all roles with artistic exactness, was of prime importance in securing her signature to a new contract.

Miss Hammerstein Popular.

According to Mr. Selznick, Miss Hammerstein has been one of the box-office attractions of the Selznick program. Her most recent picture, "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes," in which she has a dual role, is declared to bring out her screen personality and ability better than anything she has yet done. The two characters she portrays in this production are of such contrasting types as to tax the ability of an even more seasoned screen star than Miss Hammerstein.

"The Woman Game" is understood also to have done much in furthering the popularity of Miss Hammerstein.

New Blackton Film Completed.

J. Stuart Blackton has just pronounced as finished "Soul and Body," his new special feature, which was made under the working title of "The Soul Spinners." J. Herbert Rawlinson is starred in the play, which was written by Shannon Fife. This is the second picture J. E. Robbins, screen editor of the Blackton staff, has cut under Mr. Blackton's supervision.

SIMPLE SOULS

And "Doug" Says: "You'll See All of This in My Latest, 'The Mollycoddle.'"

At the left is the boat that was constructed on the desert for use in this picture, while at the right are a few of the Indians that support Douglas Fairbanks in this United Artists' thriller.

Strange Ship Sails Desert Sand Waves in Fairbanks' Feature, "Mollycoddle"

ONE of the strangest sights that ever cast a shadow over the Arizona desert was that introduced to that country some time ago when Douglas Fairbanks and his company of seventy-five people arrived near Polacco to film scenes in "The Mollycoddle," which will soon be released by United Artists Corporation. It was the spectacle of a sea-going yacht, all rigged out and ready to breast the billowy waves, so to speak. The yacht had been built in exact replica to palatial and luxurious sea-crafts.

A huge truck frame was utilized and the yacht was built solidly thereon. When it wended its way across the desert it presented the appearance of some great white bird skimming along near the ground, and when the purple shadows fell athwart the desert, the mesas in the distance looked like ocean waves and the illusion was almost complete, for the blending of colors with the yacht in the foreground lent a vivid impression of the ocean transferred to the driest spot in America—Arizona.

This strange craft plays an important part in the plot. It is used in this land of blistering sunshine by day and splashing cold by night by a diamond smuggler, whose mania is that of sailing the seas in just such crafts. When he becomes marooned on the desert, he has this yacht constructed and brought to him so that he can amuse himself and try to make believe he is out there on his favorite ocean sailing alone as of yore.

This is but one of the many things that are being utilized in "Doug's" next picture which has necessitated the Fairbanks company spending a large amount of money and causing the members of the cast to travel thousands of miles to get the proper scenes called for in the scenario. The action of the story swings from the Pacific Coast through Arizona and New York right into Europe and to that famous resort, Monte Carlo.

It was down with the Hopi Indians in Arizona that Doug succeeded in obtaining some of his most strenuous material. The stunts that he did there for the red-skins made him beloved by everyone of them, and on many occasions during recreation periods he would pull some of his inimitable stunts.

The scenic backgrounds that were secured for the filming of this production are beautiful and on one occasion the company ran into a hurricane, during all of which time they worked and obtained some wonderful material.

Louise Huff Is Engaged to Star in Selznick Pictures

THE engagement of Louise Huff, well-known motion picture star, as a stellar light of the Selznick organization, was announced after the second annual convention of Selznick Pictures in New York. The acquisition of Miss Huff brought two stars under the Selznick banner within one week, the other being William Collier, well-known comedian.

The engagement of Miss Huff as a Selznick star by Myron Selznick is considered further indication of the great progress being made in increasing the activities and output of Selznick. This contract with the newest addition to the Selznick star forces covers a period of five years, beginning immediately.

Mr. Selznick said: "A long and careful investigation concerning not alone her merits as an actress, but her appeal as a screen favorite, was made through a dozen different sources. First, the exhibitor was taken into consideration and inquiries were made of important managers in large and small cities. A host of letters were sent out to patrons of motion picture theatres, asking them what they thought of Miss Huff. Another strong factor in making a decision was the amount of mail received by her in the course of a month from picture fans."

"Civilian Clothes" Finished, Meighan Starts Buchanan Play

THOMAS MEIGHAN has returned to California upon completion of the filming of "Civilian Clothes," the Paramount-Artcraft production which he came East to make under the direction of Hugh Ford, and will start work at Hollywood immediately on "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," under the direction of William De Mille. Mr. Ford is now cutting "Civilian Clothes."

Adapted by Clara Beranger, who was responsible for the script of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," the screen version of "Civilian Clothes" is said to be a highly satisfactory pictorial story of Thompson Buchanan's play, which, earlier in the season, served so successfully for Thurston Hall and Olive Tell. The popularity of the play was so pronounced that it broke all records for a long run in California, and is at present doing profitable business on the road.

Hodkinson Branches to Have a Double Trade Showing

APRIL 25 is announced by the Hodkinson organization as the release date of Augustus Thomas' "The Harvest Moon," the Deitrich-Beck production starring Doris Kenyon which, along with "Cynthia-of-the-Minute," the Gibraltar-Louis Joseph Vance production, starring Leah Baird, will be the subject of a double trade showing at all Hodkinson exchanges the coming week.

"The Harvest Moon" has been booked for pre-release engagements at the Kenyon, Pittsburgh, Rex, Ottumwa, Iowa; Grand, Reading, Pa., and the Casino, Chester, Pa., where the artist's first Hodkinson release, "The Bandbox," played to crowded houses for a week. At two of these theatres other productions already contracted for will be either deferred or shelved.

Writes Satire on "Hamlet."

Robert Andersen has written a satire on "Hamlet" for Universal, which is considered a rare treat by the executives out at the Coast. He will make a two-reel comedy of it. "Hamlet" has always been a favorite role with Andersen, who made his first stage appearance in Denmark as one of the players in that tragedy, in support of Olaf Paulsen, the noted Danish dramatic star.

Tom Guise Has Big Part.

Tom Guise, the well known character actor of stage and screen, plays one of the principal parts in Marshall Neilan's second independent production which will be released by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit the end of this month.

Mr. Guise has the distinction of having appeared in every production of the famous English Grand Opera Company in the last thirty years. He has also been prominently cast in the stage successes, "The Man of the Hour" and "Madame X."

Early Release Showing of "Down on the Farm" Brings Praising Wires

THAT Mack Sennett was right when he wired Hiram Abrams of the United Artists Corporation some weeks ago that his big five reel production, "Down on the Farm" was the greatest thing he had ever accomplished, was indeed justified when Mr. Sennett in return for his efforts received two exceptionally complimentary telegrams from the Strand Theatre of Fort Wayne, Ind., where the production has had an early release, and from W. H. Cone, one of the patrons of the theatre in that city.

The wire from W. C. Quimby, of the Strand Theatre, to Mr. Sennett was as follows: "Opened 'Down on the Farm' Easter Sunday; compelled to turn away business despite severe snow storm raging which swept entire Middle West. Opposition very strong. On third day with miserable weather still standing them up. Using barn yard setting, prologue and rube orchestra and live animals. Expect tremendous week."

The wire from W. H. Cone to Mr. Sennett was as follows: "Happened to be in Strand Theatre, Fort Wayne, yesterday and saw 'Down on the Farm' picture. I want to say it is the greatest picture made as yet. Original and funny. The audience went wild over it. The place was packed. This picture ought to make you more famous than you now are."

Famous Players-Lasky Will Make New "Old Homestead"

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announces that a new version of Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead" will be made as a George Melford production for Paramount Artcraft with a specially selected cast with Theodore Roberts and Monte Blue in the leading roles. Work will be started as soon as Mr. Melford finishes "The Translation of a Savage," which he is now filming.

"The Old Homestead" first reached the screen as a Paramount picture in 1915 when it was presented with a cast headed by Frank Losee, Creighton Hale and Louise Huff. In 1918 it was revived out of Paramount's "Success Series." The original screen version, directed by James Kirkwood, was made with the co-operation of Thompson's family and the exterior scenes were taken at the Thompson farm in New Hampshire. The interiors were the first scenes to be taken at the present Fifty-sixth street, New York, studios of the corporation.

"The Old Homestead" was practically the first of the great dramas with a rural background and it served Denman Thompson as a starring vehicle for over thirty years.

Enid Bennett Not Injured.

The Thomas H. Ince publicity headquarters in Culver City, want it understood that Enid Bennett was not injured, nor ruffled, nor in any way forced into temporary retirement when the star was the central figure in a crash between a locomotive and an automobile, staged by Director Fred Niblo recently at LaMirada, Cal., for one of the closing scenes in Miss Bennett's latest production, "The Incubus."

"Harriet and the Piper."

"Harriet and the Piper" has been announced by Louis B. Mayer as the next starring vehicle for Anita Stewart. The story, by Kathleen Norris, has become popular through its presentation as a Pictorial Review serial. Bertram Bracken will direct the picture from the screen version by Monte M. Katterjohn.

McCormick Signs for Edgar Comedies.

With his usual good judgment, S. Barret McCormick, the managing director of the Circle Theatre at Indianapolis, signed up for Booth Tarkington's "Edgar Comedies," exactly five minutes after witnessing the screening of the first picture, "Edgar and Teacher's Pet." The "Edgar" Comedies are produced by Goldwyn.

Responsible for Pathe's "The Third Eye."

H. H. Van Loan, author; Eileen Percy, co-star; Warner Oland, co-star, and James W. Horne, director of the serial.

Put Finishing Touches on "Romance," to Be Released Next Month by "Big Four"

WITH plans to leave for Europe in a few weeks, Doris Keane is finishing the last scenes of her internationally famous stage success, "Romance," by Edward Sheldon, in which she will make her screen debut, her first picture to be released in May by United Artists Corporation. The final scenes are being shot by Chet Withey, her director, and it is predicted that this big love story will be one of the year's screen sensations.

"Romance" is indeed worthy of its title. From the outset to the end the story diffuses a rich and mellow charm. Mr. Sheldon has written a story that makes you look upon old passions through a mist of reminiscence and to that end he enclosed his picture within a prologue and an epilogue. By this expedient he has set his story at a distance that lends enchantment to the view.

The consistency of characterization in this production is no less remarkable than is its richness of emotion. There is no mere lyric dallying with love, but a sincere study of the reactions of strong characters under the sway of overpowering passion, and the picture diffuses the aroma of Romance, because of its reality, because beauty is truth, and truth beauty—and that is all that any story needs to have.

The settings of this production are wonderfully impressive and spectacular.

Carpentier Has Qualities of An Actor, According to Tests

GEORGES CARPENTIER, the famous French sportsman, gentleman, athlete and soldier, now at work at the Solax Studio, in New Jersey, on the production to be presented by Robertson-Cole, would be a success on the screen even without his many-sided fame, according to students of motion pictures who have been privileged to watch his work in the past few days.

"It can never be said that Carpentier is a freak of the studio," said John G. Adolphi, who is directing the picture in which the Frenchman will appear. "If nobody ever had heard of this young man he could still go in and win out as a motion picture actor. He has every necessary quality." Screen tests of Carpentier entirely bear out this estimate.

Work on the Carpentier picture is going steadily on in the Solax Studios day and night. Director Adolphi is giving the picture his undivided attention upward of twelve hours every day and putting into this production every ounce of strength and artistry of which he is capable.

While neither the name nor the synopsis of the Carpentier picture are at present being given out, it is understood the production will be an American society drama which will give Carpentier a romantic role.

"Schooldays" Is Next Semon Comedy.

Vitagraph announces that "Schooldays" is the title of its next Larry Semon feature. The production already is virtually completed and will be ready for the market at an early date. It is said to be entirely different in theme and action from this comedian's recent comedy successes, "The Fly Cop," "The Grocery Clerk" and "The Headwaiter." The supporting company is led by Lucille Carlisle.

Zukor on Homeward Journey.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who has been in Europe for the past four weeks, will sail from Liverpool Tuesday, April 13, on the S. S. Mauretania on his homeward journey.

Governor Goodrich of Indiana Favors Sunday Motion Pictures and Baseball

HEARTY approval of the Sunday motion picture was expressed by James P. Goodrich, governor of Indiana, in an address at the closing session of the state convention of the Indiana Board of Indorsers of Photoplays, which was held at the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis. He also praised the efforts of members of the board to obtain better pictures.

"The days of the old blue laws have gone forever," said Governor Goodrich in commenting on the Sunday opening question. "They have no place in our civilization. Under conditions of life today people are put to such a constant strain that they must have such recreations as motion pictures and outdoor sports to help them keep their mental balance.

"I admit that I have on a few occasions gone to see a motion picture show on a Sunday afternoon or evening. I can see no harm whatsoever in viewing a good picture on Sunday, for it may teach better ideals and a better Americanism to thousands of persons who would not get the same because they would not go to church."

Governor Goodrich's expression on the Sunday question was carried in nearly all of the Indiana newspapers and, coming from the state's chief executive, is believed by exchangemen to have a tendency to allay much of the opposition in Indiana to the Sunday shows.

Church organizations, welfare associations and other agencies interested in promoting the production of better motion pictures should take active steps by producing photoplays of their own choice, according to Orrin G. Cocks, of New York, secretary of the national committee for better films, in an address to members of the board. Among other addresses on the program was "How to Obtain Good Pictures," by Paul S. Allison, manager of the Doll-Van Film Company and chairman of the Indiana Board of Exchange Managers.

"Woman He Chose" Opens at Ziegfeld for Indefinite Run

THE Swedish Mary Pickford was introduced to the American photoplay public on Saturday, April 10, at the Ziegfeld Theatre, Chicago, when "The Woman He Chose" was shown. The production is in six reels and is founded on the widely read novel, "The Girl from the Marshcroft," by Sweden's illustrious creator of human fiction, Dr. Selma Lagerlof, who is one of the few women who has been honored by the award of the Nobel Prize for literature.

The scenery has a touch of newness in its beauty that is one of the outstanding spots of the picture. Again, the cast has been chosen, not for beauty or for the reason that they are extremely popular, but for the exactness with which they fitted into the roles assigned to them. The result is a picture that scarcely seems to be acted at all; rather, it seems that the person who sees the picture is looking directly into the daily and home life of the characters in the play.

The Mickey Film Corporation of Chicago has purchased the world rights to the picture. The picture opened at the Ziegfeld Theatre for an indefinite run.

Cosmopolitan Signs Albert Capellani to Direct Five Special Productions

ALBERT CAPELLANI has signed a contract to do five special screen productions for Cosmopolitan Productions. The first of the series will be Winston Churchill's famous novel, "The Inside of the Cup." Production preparations are now being made and the scenario is being put in shape by Mr. Capellani and George Dubois Proctor. There will be no individual star or featured player but the cast will be an all-star cast and will consist of some of the best known screen players. Settings will be done by Joseph Urban and magnificence and lavishness will characterize the production.

The signing up of Director Capellani by Cosmopolitan Productions is in line with its recently announced policy to acquire not only the best stories that are published in Cosmopolitan, Hearst's, Good Housekeeping and Harper's Bazaar, but also the best in players and directors.

Mr. Capellani is one of the screen's most successful directors. For a long time he was Nazimova's sole director and is responsible for such Nazimova productions as "Out of the Fog" and "The Red Lantern." For several years he has been identified only with unusual and special screen productions, and under his contract with Cosmopolitan Productions he will direct only big specials. The first will be Winston Churchill's "The Inside of the Cup," which he has wanted to do for a long time.

The other four stories which Capellani

Atherton's "Tower of Ivory" Named "Out of the Storm"

GERTRUDE ATHERTON'S first contribution to Goldwyn-Eminent Authors Pictures, an adaptation of her novel, "The Tower of Ivory," will go under the title "Out of the Storm," according to an announcement received from the Goldwyn offices this week. This title possesses good box office value and is particularly well suited to the picture, which includes a most spectacular shipwreck scene.

The photoplay version of Mrs. Atherton's novel makes a powerful drama replete with swift action and intense conflict. The characters created by the author are faithfully portrayed by the company of Goldwyn players under the direction of William Parke. In addition to Barbara Castleton and John Bowers, the leads, the cast includes Sydney Ainsworth, Doris Pawn, Elinor Hancock, Lawson Butt, Edythe Chapman and others.

will do are already picked and their titles and authors will be announced later. Each story is by a famous author and is well known in the reading world.

In addition to Albert Capellani, Cosmopolitan Productions' directorial staff consists of Robert G. Vignola, Frank Borzage and George D. Baker. Several famous directors are now being negotiated with and announcements regarding their acquisition will be made shortly, it is expected.

Peoria Buys No Less Than Sixteen Simplex Projectors

FROM the Chicago offices of the Exhibitors' Supply Company comes the news that during the past thirty days sixteen Simplex projectors were sold among the theatres of Peoria, Ill.

H. A. R. Dutton, president of the Exhibitors' Supply Company, is highly gratified with the results of the past month's activities in Peoria. The Lyceum, Princess, Apollo, Duchess, Hippodrome and Empress theatres are now equipped with the Simplex, while the New Madison and Asher's new Palace Theatre have also contracted for Simplex as a part of the projection room equipment.

Mr. Dutton also reports that the Indianapolis, St. Louis and Milwaukee offices of the Exhibitors' Supply Company are also working at top speed.

William S. Hart Certainly Collects His Toll of Love for Which He Battles in This New Paramount Play.
"The Toll Gate" is the name of his new Western thriller. The two end views give an idea of the intensity of the action.

Eltinge Film Now Released.

The Republic Distributing Corporation announces that the production, "An Adventure," featuring Julian Eltinge, the famous female impersonator, was released on April 10. Julian Eltinge enacts both a comedy and dramatic role.

"Don't Ever Marry" Has Novel Art Titles by Frank Currier

THE art titles of "Don't Ever Marry," Marshall Neilan's second independent production from his own studio, will introduce a new idea when the picture, which is soon to be released through First National, is presented on the screen.

The new titles were conceived by Marion Fairfax, Mr. Neilan's scenario writer, who adapted the story for the screen, and the interpretation of Miss Fairfax' novelty was cleverly handled by Frank Currier, a well-known New York artist, who was specially engaged for the work.

Instead of the much used straight drawings of the characters in the story, Mr. Currier has made cartoons of the principal players in a manner which will provide laughter as well as anticipation of the action of the scene to follow each title.

James Whitcomb Riley's Poems Will Be Made Into Photoplays by Charles Ray Company

FROM the Arthur S. Kane offices comes the news that Charles Ray has just completed the purchase in Los Angeles of four of James Whitcomb Riley's best known poems of American country life. The star has for a long time been anxious to annex these vehicles as eminently suited to his screen personality, and the conclusion of negotiations this week will give him stories for rural dramas whose titles are famous.

The Riley poems are "The Old Swimming Hole," "The Girl I Loved," "Home Again" and "Out to Old Aunt Mary." Charles Ray declares that the acquisition of these American classics represents the culmination of a long-time ambition to screen the works of the Hoosier bard.

Ray Gets What He Wanted.

"There is no other purchase that could have pleased me more at this time," said Mr. Ray, "than the Riley poems, for which we have just finished negotiations. Everyone knows these immortal pieces of verse and everybody loves them. Riley was a born vagabond, a character of very great human appeal, and he has written into his songs of the road all the joy and the romance of living.

"It has long been my desire to possess Riley's poems, for I feel that with such material I have the makings of stories with the heart and soul of the American countryside in them. I know that it is a real responsibility to make these poems into film plays, for they are perhaps better known and loved than any other similar national literature. But realizing the tremendous responsibility and possessing the very material that I understand and love,

Business Booms Tremendously in South, "Colonel Bill" Tells the Pathe Exchange

WITH oil, cotton and agricultural products reaching new high marks and with millions of dollars in new capital going into southern states for the financing of new factories, a great era of prosperity is at hand for the entire South, according to William Thomas Yoder, known throughout Texas as "Colonel Bill," who has just been placed in charge of the southern division for Pathe. After a brief survey of the territory Mr. Yoder has reported his observations to the Pathe home office.

Mr. Yoder is a man of long experience, his activities in the film business covering every angle of the industry. He started with Mutual in 1911 and has spent most of the time since then in the southern states. Edward W. Dustin, the St. Louis branch manager for Pathe, is also a showman of long experience in the South and he agrees with Mr. Yoder that an era of prosperity unlike anything before seen in the territory is beginning.

"Cities in the Southwest are doubling and trebling their populations," Mr. Yoder said, "and the first thing demanded is entertainment. More and more motion picture theatres are in demand and the people are looking for modern theatres with all the comforts. They have the money to pay for their entertainment and they expect it to be good.

"The great oil boom is of course in a measure responsible. That has brought great amounts of ready cash into circulation. But the farmers are also getting rich and with their children they are coming into the cities to spend. The farms are being run by machinery, greater profits are being taken and the old farmer with a mortgage to worry him is but a memory.

"Most important, however, from the viewpoint of the man in the show business is the continuous growth of the towns and cities. Of course, new factories are responsible for much of this increase.

"Exhibitors are meeting the change of standards and the demand for better pictures with every possible effort, but they must have the support of all producers. Help them in their effort to capture and hold the interest of the growing public with really good pictures. They will appreciate co-operation of that sort."

All that Mr. Yoder believes with reference to the entire South is approved by Mr. Dustin with respect to conditions in his territory about St. Louis. Mr. Dustin states that the exhibitors in his territory are doing their share toward the steady improvement of the theatres and the presentation of pictures, and in all fairness they must have the full co-operation of all the producing elements in the industry.

Schenck and Bennett Will Address Circuit Convention

THREE events of special significance are announced by First National Exhibitors' Circuit as a part of the program of activity at the convention of its exhibitor members to begin at the Hotel Congress, Chicago, on April 26.

Important speeches will be made by Joseph M. Schenck, president of both the Norma Talmadge Film Company and the Constance Talmadge Film Company, and by Whitman Bennett, formerly production manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Company and now an independent producer with a contract for the distribution, by First National, of a series of four special attractions starring Lionel Barrymore.

The third event, and of equal importance, will be the presence at the convention of Miss Norma Talmadge, who, for the first time, will appear publicly at a gathering of exhibitors to meet each of them personally.

The speeches by Mr. Schenck and Mr. Bennett are expected to treat with the matter of relationship between independent producers, independent stars and the independent exhibitors forces of the country.

Loughborough Acting Fox Publicity Head.

Captain J. M. Loughborough, for some time an assistant of Arthur James, is now acting supervisor of advertising and publicity for William Fox. Mr. James' resignation as chief of this important bureau of Fox activities became effective on Saturday, April 17. Already in his new offices he has been proffered several large accounts.

Filming of Dempsey Serial Completed.

Jack Dempsey has completed his work as star of Pathe's "Daredevil Jack." The serial was put into production December 8, and its completion on March 28 established a record of fifteen episodes of two reels each produced in ninety-six days.

Directors of Kane Pictures Corporation Elect John C. Ragland a Vice President

At a meeting of the directors of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation on Thursday, April 8, John C. Ragland was elected vice-president. Mr. Ragland resigned as general sales manager of Realart Pictures Corporation several weeks ago to become general manager and director in the Kane corporation.

The elevation of Mr. Ragland to a high post in the young producing company follows only a few weeks after his resignation from Realart Pictures and represents the confidence of the directors of the organization in the qualifications of Mr. Ragland to consummate with President Kane the contemporaneous projects of the corporation.

The meeting of the directors of the Kane corporation, which was held in the new offices of the concern at 25 West Forty-third street, was called especially to inaugurate Mr. Ragland into his new post in conjunction with the formal occupation of the permanent home of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation.

"It is a distinct pleasure for me to give out the news of the election on Thursday, April 8, of John C. Ragland to be vice-president of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation," said Mr. Kane, president of the company. "The election of Mr. Ragland took place at a meeting of directors called especially at the new and permanent offices of the company."

"Although Mr. Ragland has only recently become a member of our corporation, we have lost no time in acknowledging our confidence and faith in his ability to judiciously carry on the early work of organization. The past record of Mr. Ragland is well known to officials of this company. His conscientious insight and efficient grasp of company matters during his brief occupation of the general managership has induced the directors of the Kane company to place in Mr. Ragland's hands immediate authority as vice-president to proceed with numerous matters of importance in the business of the concern."

"We are now in a position to proceed with a program for the future which will require the co-operation of a man of Mr. Ragland's definite acquaintance with conditions in the field."

"The honor that has been conferred upon me by President Kane and our fellow directors in the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation comes as a total surprise to me," said Mr. Ragland. "It is gratifying beyond words to find that I enjoy the entire confidence of officials of this concern in the activities which are now in process of negotiation."

"We have in view at the present writing several large projects of considerable interest to exhibitors which we trust we will be able to announce in the near future. As vice-president of the Kane corporation it will be my privilege to uphold those high standards of honesty and plain dealing which have become so closely associated in the past with the name and activities of Arthur S. Kane."

Results of Two Directors on Love Story Pleases Callaghan

LOS ANGELES professional circles are watching the results now taking place at the Bessie Love Studios, where a star is having the benefits of two directors, male and female, in the supervision of her work. The directors of Bessie Love are Ida May Park and Joseph de Grasse. The Andrew J. Callaghan Productions, Inc., which is starring Bessie Love in a series of high standard photoplays, has already seen the initial results of the combined direction of Miss Park and Mr. de Grasse in the first scenes of "The Midlanders," the picture which Miss Love is adapting to the screen from the novel of Charles Tenny Jackson.

After having witnessed the screening of several studio scenes from the Bessie Love picture now in course of filming, Andrew J. Callaghan, head of the corporation backing the star, declared that in spite of a doubled expense in the cost of direction, the innovation has, to his mind, already more than justified itself.

Willie Collier, Jr., in Lasky Picture.

According to announcement from Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Willie Collier, Jr.—otherwise known as Buster Collier—son of the popular stage comedian, has been engaged for the Lasky stock company and will shortly arrive in Hollywood to play leading juvenile roles in Paramount-Artcraft Pictures.

"My Gal Josephine."

Busting bronchos in Universal Westerns is pretty Josephine Hill.

Max Linder Plays Millionaire Waiter in Pathe Special, "The Little Cafe"

WITH Max Linder, the great French comedian, in the stellar role, the famous stage success, "The Little Cafe," is to be released by Pathe Exchange, Inc., as a Pathe Special. The picture brings out some of the finest work of Linder's career, it is said, and those who witnessed the first showing of the completed film are unanimously of the opinion that it will be hailed by the public as one of the greatest screen comedies.

Although the original stage part was played by John E. Young at the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York City, and the story was not primarily intended for Mr. Linder in screen work, it is said that the star character fits the talents of the French comedian to perfection. His deft touches of humor throughout, his mannerisms and his eccentricities are all given full play in the part of a millionaire waiter who is compelled to remain at work in a restaurant by the terms of his contract, although he has been left 2,000,000 francs.

With the release of the production of a new female star peeps above the horizon in the person of Wanda Lyon, who plays the leading role opposite Linder. Miss Lyon will be remembered for her success at the Winter Garden in New York City, where she appeared in a few of the "Passing Shows." She also played an important part in Al Jolson's show, "Robinson Crusoe, Jr." Her stage comedy training makes itself evident in the manner in which her delightful personality gets into the Linder picture.

The success of the stage comedy augurs well for the screen version, for the former played in every city of importance in the country and was one of the really big financial successes. The play also gained great popularity in London and other leading cities. The many odd situations, necessarily confined to the limits of the stage settings, are expanded in the screen production so that they can be appreciated at their true value.

Alexander to Handle Special.

L. Thompson, of the Special Pictures Corporation has arranged with William Alexander of the Alexander Film Corporation, of 130 W. Forty-sixth street, whereby the latter will act as sales agent for the entire foreign rights of the Special Pictures Corporation's output.

The initial release for the market will be "Uneasy Feet," from the Comedyart program.

Vitagraph "Captures" Broadway.

Vitagraph declares that it has captured the entire "select section of Broadway." The report is based on the fact that this company has obtained bookings for twenty-four weeks ahead of all its ensuing feature output and Larry Semon feature comedies in all the Broadway theatres from Seventy-seventh street to 110th street.

The select section theatres comprise the following: the Adelphi, Olympia, Symphony, Keystone, Seventy-seventh Street Theatre and the Schuyler.

The Larry Semon comedies previously had been booked indefinitely at the Capitol Theatre.

Runs Entire Serial in Two Days.

J. E. Edwards, manager of the Freeborn Theatre, Edgerton, W. Va., recently tried the experiment of running an entire serial in two days. He booked Pathe's seven episode serial "The Terror of The Range" and ran half of it each day on what he advertised as a "two-day feature bill."

According to his report to Pathe the plan was a decided success. The success of the experiment is looked upon in exchange quarters as the possible opening up of an entirely new field for serials.

Campaign Book on "Blind Love" Ready.

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, who is handling the distribution of Gerald F. Bacon's six-reel production, "Blind Love," starring Lucy Cotton, received from the Brooks press this week a twelve page, publicity and campaign book on this picture. The campaign book contains short synopsis, cast of characters, newspaper cuts and music cue, and suggestions for exploitation.

Reviews printed in Moving Picture World are based upon the production exactly as it will be shown upon your screen. And they are dependable, fair and honest in their expressions.

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone" Is One of My Best Books," Says Curwood

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD, the famous author, has issued a statement pronouncing "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" one of the best stories he has ever written. Vitagraph has made this story into a big special production.

Mr. Curwood sent a telegram to President Albert E. Smith, who has been in California personally supervising the production of this picture, which included the following: "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" is one of my best books. I hope you make a million with it. All best wishes."

This statement is interesting in view of the high prominence now enjoyed by Mr. Curwood as a result of the success of "Back to God's Country," "Baree, Son of Kazan," "God's Country and the Woman" and "The River's End," which have already been released.

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone" is now on the eve of its release with a big exploitation campaign behind it. This production has been advertised as extensively, it is claimed, as any special production released during the past few years. The leading newspapers and magazines throughout the country have declared "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" to be one of the literary triumphs of the decade.

It is a story of the typical Curwood style, dealing with the wild country of the Northwest bordering on the Arctic. Its characters are rugged creatures who pit their courage and strength against ferocious animals and the rigors of blizzard and cold.

Story of Rough Northwest.

In order to reproduce in visual form the fascinating scenes of the story, Vitagraph sent its company into territory previously unscanned by the eye of the camera. David Smith, the director, induced his players to camp among the ridges of the Sierras in the very dead of winter and actually live for weeks the lives of Mr. Curwood's rugged characters. Pauline Starke has the title role and co-starring with her is Niles Welch.

The other notable characters are huge grizzly bears and an outlaw dog, these animals enacting clashes of tusk and claw against bone and flesh.

John M. Quinn, general manager of Vitagraph, Inc., reports that the film has arrived at the Brooklyn studio and that prints will be distributed to all Vitagraph exchanges throughout the United States and Canada within a week.

Bruce Returns from Cuba and Jamaica with New "Scenic Beautiful" Series

ROBERT C. BRUCE, whose "Scenics Beautiful" have so long been a feature of the releases of Educational Films Corporation, has returned from Cuba and Jamaica, where he has made a new series of pictures. He will remain in New York about a month to cut and title these pictures, since he gives this work his personal attention, the completed product representing entirely his own work.

Although Mr. Bruce has been making pictures for release through Educational for nearly five years, this is the first time he has left the North American continent for material. With the exception of a few pictures in Canada, his work has been entirely confined to the United States. However, when the work on the present series is completed, Mr. Bruce will go to Europe to remain for several months. He has outlined some original plans for productions aboard and promises that the pictures he makes there will be entirely different from the usual "travels" in foreign countries.

In a recent interview, Maurice Maeterlinck commented on the attention which the Bruce scenics have attracted in Europe, referring especially to the mountains of the West which Mr. Bruce has used as the background for so many of his works. "The cinema," said Mr. Maeterlinck, "has done more than anything else to acquaint Europeans with Americans. The cities, the land, and particularly the mountains of the West have thus been brought to Europe in the films."

"The Cost" and "Thou Art the Man" Are Listed as Artcraft Releases for April 30

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces as its Paramount-Artcraft releases for April 30 "The Cost," with Violet Heming, and Robert Warwick in "Thou Art the Man." Both are adaptations of well-known novels, the former being from the pen of David Graham Phillips and the latter having been written by F. E. Mills Young, an English author who has a considerable following in this country.

In addition to the fact that "The Cost" features Violet Heming, Famous Players-Lasky points out that the human note of the dramatic story will have a great appeal for patrons of the motion picture. "The Cost" is about real people of moderate means, and the situation worked out in the picture might happen to any family in any audience.

Background Is Varied.

The background of this photoplay, it is claimed, is varied enough to please anyone. There are scenes laid on a college campus, remarkable shots of the Stock Exchange and Wall street, the inside workings of a big political battle, brilliant settings of a Broadway cabaret and, in contrast, a small-town birthday party.

Playing the leading male role is Ralph Kellard, while Edwin Mordant and Edward Arnold have prominent roles. Others in the company are Carlotta Monterey, Warburton Gamble, Mrs. Jane Jennings, Clifford Gray, Eileen Savage, Florence McGuire and Mrs. Julia Hurley.

Harley Knoles was the director. The scenario was written by Clara Beranger.

"Thou Art the Man," in its original form as a work of fiction, was called by its author, "Myles Calthorpe, I. D. B." The initials stand for "Illicit Diamond Buyer," the story being about the illicit diamond traffic in South Africa. The adaptation was made by Margaret Turnbull, and Thomas Heffron directed.

In support of Mr. Warwick, Lois Wilson, heretofore a light comedy performer in pictures, shows unexpected talent as an emotional actress. J. M. Dumont, Clarence Burton and C. H. Geldart are also in the cast.

Universal-Marie Walcamp Party Returns After Six Months' Tour of the Orient

AFTER a six months' tour in the Orient, taking scenes for a new Universal serial, "The Dragon's Net," Marie Walcamp and her company have reached San Francisco. Miss Walcamp was met in person by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, who steamed out the harbor as guest of the collector of the port, and boarded the Japanese steamship bearing the Walcamp party long before it docked. After hearing the reports of Eleanor L. Fried, business manager of the touring company, and Henry McRae, the director, Mr. Laemmle announced that it had been the most successful expedition ever sent out by the Universal company.

The Walcamp party left Seattle for Japan last October, carrying a company of eighteen persons and many tons of baggage. This included a $15,000 electrical equipment, more than two tons of chemicals for the touring film laboratory, a battery of cameras and 175,000 feet of film. Miss Walcamp was welcomed as heartily as any war hero when she reached Japan. Crowds met her at the docks. Her every movement in Japan was attended by hundreds of Japanese film fans. Her hotel was the Mecca for enthusiastic throngs at all hours of the day.

After taking numerous scenes in Japan, including many in the sacred groves and on the slopes of Fujiyama, the party sailed for China, where two months were spent in getting scenes in and near Peking and Shanghai, and on the fringes of the Gobi desert, near the land of the Lamas, the mystic people who figure largely in the plot of the serial.

From China the party went to the Philippines, where the private yacht of the governor general was turned over to them. They cruised through and around the Archipelago for more than a month, getting location scenes of unusual splendor and interest.

"The Dragon's Net" is a drama of mysticism and the quest for scientific wonders of the ancient Chinese. The serial is complete except for a few interiors to be filmed at Universal City.

Pathe News in Record Time Shows Scenes of Recent German Revolution

SPEED records for the covering of big news events by motion pictures appear to have been shattered by the Pathe News, when, three weeks after the German revolution important incidents in connection with it were shown in issue No. 28 released April 7.

Pathe's representatives despatched three cameramen to Berlin and when the revolution hit that city on March 13, these cameramen are said to have put their lives at stake in filming the scenes which followed. The entrance of the reactionary troops into Berlin, through the Brandenburg gate was filmed among other details. The big problem, then, was to get the negative to Paris. This would have been virtually impossible for days, except for the fact that on the night of March 13 a special train was run by the French delegation from Berlin to Cologne, carrying French and other allied citizens out of the danger zone. A Pathe cameraman smuggled the film aboard. From Cologne a courier carried the films to Paris, where arrangements were made to forwarding them to London by aeroplane where the cameraman boarded a train for Liverpool. He arrived there in time to book passage on the steamer Belgic which arrived off New York on Tuesday April 6.

A launch met the Belgic off quarantine, and the films rushed to the Pathe studio in Jersey City, in time to be developed and included in the issue of the following day. The first views of the revolution issued by Pathe News on April 7 showed the machine gunners and tanks of the German socialist forces, opposing the reactionary troops who were under the flag of the former imperial government. The cameramen are receiving congratulations.

Reelcraft Starts National Advertising Campaign; Organizing Service Department

REELCRAFT PICTURES, recently formed to produce and distribute short subjects exclusively, has started a national advertising campaign listing thirty leading independent exchanges as the distributors of the Reelcraft releases. R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft, claims this distributing combination through independent exchanges, places the Reelcraft program within direct touch with ninety per cent. of the exhibitors.

Reelcraft has gone forward with the idea of co-operation with the independents, and the independents have approved the combination distributing plan of Reelcraft for the selling of its exclusive short subject program. In all national advertising a complete list of the independent exchanges will be carried. A service department is also being organized to assist the local exchanges with their direct advertising and selling campaigns.

More Ground Taken for Robertson-Cole Building; To Be 12 Stories in Height

ROBERTSON-COLE has made a quick shift in its building plans to include the addition of the northwest corner of Forty-eighth street and Seventh avenue, permitting the building of a much larger and more commodious structure than was intended in the original plans, announced two weeks ago.

With the addition of the corner lot the building will now include everything from the corner of Forty-eighth street along Seventh avenue to No. 725, affording a great deal more space on the ground floor and those above. The addition of the corner lot, which was obtained during the past week, will double the area of the building, as originally intended.

The original intention of Robertson-Cole was to erect a ten-story building. But with the purchase of the additional space it has abandoned this plan, and the building will now be made twelve stories in height, and of such construction that additional stories may be later added if they are needed.

Fire Tower in Rear of Building.

The plans for the building show that it will be entirely fireproof with cement arches and cement floors. Steel window frames will be used throughout and no wood will enter into the construction whatever. However, to make sure that it shall be as safe as possible, a special fire tower will be erected in the rear of the building on the Forty-eighth street side. This will contain a stairway leading from the top of the building down to the ground, and will be erected entirely separate from the rest of the building. In addition to these other safeguards, the building will be provided throughout with a complete sprinkler system. Another precaution to be taken will be the placing of all vaults for film, save only that which is for use by the New York exchange, which will be situated on the second and third floors, on the roof.

It is proposed to place on the top of the building an enormous electric sign which will be in the nature of an advertisement for the company and its motion pictures.

Miss Davies' "April Folly" Opens Big in Los Angeles

APRIL FOLLY," the latest Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies, opened at Clune's Broadway Theatre, Los Angeles, Sunday, March 22, with a rush that is seldom afforded a motion picture, and as a result the large house enjoyed one week's capacity business, according to A. A. Price, branch manager of exploitation of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at Los Angeles.

"Professional criticism spoke of 'April Folly' as 'A splendid drama with every conceivable element of entertainment,'" writes Mr. Price. "'A compound of thrills and laughs . . . Too much praise cannot be afforded Miss Davies' acting. She expressed finesse and power and the distinction of the role . . . The best vehicle this actress has had since the directors decided to give her a starring role . . . April Folly is a real production, an unusual picture with a tangling series of incidents and a beautiful star.'"

Hazel Hudson Is Signed by Character Pictures

CHARACTER PICTURES announces the signing of Hazel Hudson for one of the principal parts in "The Isle of Destiny" which will be the first Character picture featuring Paul Gilmore.

Though young in years Miss Hudson has had a long and varied career upon the stage, both in musical comedy and stock. She recently closed the season with "Maytime" and has also appeared in such well known successes as "La, La Lucille," "Canary Cottage" and "Going Up."

Miss Hudson gained her early training as a dancer and following this went into vaudeville for several months during which time she toured the principal cities throughout the country.

Later Miss Hudson went into stock appearing in such plays as "Within the Law," "The Girl of the Golden West," "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," etc., and gaining for herself the experience and ground work so necessary in dramatic expression.

The signing of Hazel Hudson is in line with the policy of Character Pictures to engage only the finest and most suitable players for their casts even though it may mean a slight delay in securing the talent.

Consensus of Trade Press Reviews

Here are extracts from available reviews printed in the five motion picture trade papers. It is the aim to present one sentence that will reflect the spirit of the writer's opinion. The papers are indicated as follows: Moving Picture World (M. P. W.); Motion Picture News (N.); Exhibitor's Trade Review (T. R.); Wid's (W.); Exhibitors' Herald (E. H.).

The Woman in Room 13

(Pauline Frederick—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—A splendid picturization of the stage play.

N.—One of those "straight-from-the-shoulder" mystery melodramas which reveals the star at her best.

T. R.—Scored a palpable hit as a stage melodrama and the film version promises to win equal favor with the movie fans.

W.—Splendidly played mystery melodrama holds attention constantly.

E. H.—Should please the followers of Pauline Frederick and the general public alike.

The Tong Man

(Sessue Hayakawa—Robertson-Cole)

M. P. W.—Possesses unusual merit and is based upon an intensely interesting story.

N.—Hayakawa in different role that scores.

T. R.—Will give the thrill-loving public its full share of excitement.

E. H.—Will doubtless be pronounced by many the best of the recent Sessue Hayakawa photoplays.

A Woman Who Understood

(Bessie Barriscale—Robertson-Cole)

M. P. W.—The production is pleasing and holds the interest from beginning to end.

N.—Domestic story is obvious but entertaining.

T. R.—The feature as a whole should prove a valuable program attraction.

E. H.—Lacks appeals on account of the weakness of its story structure.

The Deadlier Sex

(Blanche Sweet—Pathe)

M. P. W.—There is a unique combination of humorous plot and pictorial charm that will entertain any audience.

N.—Illogical story lacking in many points.

T. R.—The picture affords capital entertainment and can be listed as a stellar program attraction.

W.—Very pleasing light drama with many fine comedy touches.

Duds

(Tom Moore—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—There is a high sum of entertainment value in "Duds," and it should prove well worth while on any program.

N.—Mystery tale has interesting elements which should excite.

T. R.—Good, lively entertainment.

W.—Not enough complications here for the best in detective mystery pictures.

The Road to Divorce

(Mary MacLaren—Universal)

M. P. W.—Slight but artistic story of married life.

N.—An interesting picture which should give satisfaction.

T. R.—Should prove pleasing to fans who enjoy Mary MacLaren and the type of sweet, homey heroine she portrays.

W.—Very human little picture dealing with commonplaces in fascinating style.

Sex

(Louise Glaum—Hodkinson)

M. P. W.—Unsavory story. While the production does, in a sense, live up to the significance of its title, the spectator is at a loss to know exactly what was the object of the author in writing the story.

N.—Powerful theme, clever acting and rich production.

T. R.—Is what you would expect from title.

W.—Wonderful story, excellent stellar performance and extravagant production.

The Sporting Duchess

(Alice Joyce—Vitagraph)

M. P. W.—It might be justly estimated as a fair entertainment with good billboard possibilities.

N.—Entertaining picture made from Drury Lane melodrama.

T. R.—Should make a hit.

W.—Will probably go down as one of Vitagraph's most successful productions.

Silk Husbands and Calico Wives

(House Peters—Equity)

M. P. W.—Is one of the finest human interest dramas shown here in some time and will appeal especially to the older folks.

N.—Good production of familiar stage and screen story.

T. R.—Film with a moral.

W.—Very pleasing and sustaining story with weak ending.

Who's Your Servant?

(Lois Wilson—Robertson-Cole)

M. P. W.—In ordinary entertainment value it stands fairly well.

T. R.—Holds its interest well for the subject is an ever popular one with a certain contingent of movie fans who delight in a combination of patriotism, foreign spies, true lovers and thrills.

W.—May get over with crowds that like thrills.

E. H.—Is not standard screen drama. Fails to arouse great enthusiasm at this time because of its poor construction and lack of realism.

The Tattlers

(Madlaine Travers—Fox)

M. P. W.—The production as a whole is powerful and expertly made.

N.—Society melodrama too heavy for general entertainment.

T. R.—It is quite a whirlwind of a drama without much reality.

W.—Production and acting faults predominate throughout this.

E. H.—The picture has many dramatic moments.

The Idol Dancer

(Clarine Seymour and Richard Barthelmess—First National)

M. P. W.—Is a picturesque and fanciful story of a girl's spiritual regeneration, with some melodrama added for high suspense.

N.—Feature entertains, but will not impress.

T. R.—A magnificently photographed feature with a wealth of exotic color for background.

W.—Really a beautiful pictures poem, but weak in actual story material.

E. H.—General completeness of the whole makes this a very acceptable feature.

Love Without Question

(Olive Tell—Jans)

M. P. W.—Olive Tell is attractive heroine of murder mystery in six-reel Jans-Rolfe production.

N.—Crook melodrama, rich in mystery and suspense.

T. R.—It has startling situations, a remarkable atmosphere of mystery, careful direction and a fine cast of players.

W.—Wonderful mystery picture spoiled by trite climax.

E. H.—Is one of those mystery stories that hold the spectator's attention from the beginning to the end by reason of its complexities.

Sessue Hayakawa Seen Here in Three Entirely Different Moods in "The Devil's Claim."

The only way to determine the correct answer as to the claim is to see this new Robertson-Cole production.

Sidelights and Reflections

MAKERS of moving pictures are learning something new every day about how to improve their product. Most of them are familiar with the stage method of watching a play on the opening night for places to cut or to expand or to rewrite, and being guided in the matter by the way the piece is received by the audience. This process may extend over a period of several weeks, during which time every laugh, round of applause and the general attitude of the different audiences toward the play are carefully noted. That many a piece which did not look at all promising on the opening night has thus been whipped into shape and forced to record a substantial success is also known to the movie men. Believing that such a method was not possible for the screen and that after a picture had been photographed and assembled and passed upon by the experts of the producing company the last court of appeal had been reached, it was early found necessary to take several shots of the same scene and then discard thousands of feet of unused film.

The advantage in having the audiences themselves take part in the reshaping of a play and clearly indicate the points to discard and those to expand cannot be overestimated. It may even be applied by an author when arranging for the sale of one of his dramas. There is at last one well authenticated case in the history of the spoken stage. The dramatist is now an active worker for the screen, and has fashioned a film version of the play in question. When first completed, its creator arranged a reading of it for the benefit of a firm of stage producers that had already purchased several of his plays. The author had been an actor himself and knew how to read his lines with good dramatic effect. All went well until he reached the middle of the third act. His hearers were evidently deeply interested up to that point. But when he started into the big scene which closed the act, he felt that they were not satisfied with the situation. Pausing for a second, he again started to spout the lines of his play with redoubled vigor. When he reached the climax his audience expressed their strong liking for the drama and their willingness to sign contracts with him then and there. While one member of the firm discussed the terms, his partner picked up the third act of the play and turned to the last scene. Not a situation or line agreed with the scene to which he had just listened. The quick witted author had taken his cue from his hearers and reshaped his third act with the help of his audience.

This system has now reached the movies. Before releasing "Down on the Farm," the Mack Sennett five-reel comedy, its producer put it on, unannounced, for a single showing at several of the Los Angeles moving picture houses, and studied its effect upon the spectators. In this way the public itself took part in the reshaping of the picture precisely as it does in the final polishing of a stage play. Scenes were cut, new bits substituted and the laughs placed by the one and only sure method—at the dictation of the public. The limitations of this method for the screen have not been reached. "A Fool and His Money"

Selznick Production Starring Eugene O'Brien.

Reviewed by Herbert Caryl.

WITHIN the cold grim walls of a haunted castle the hero found a fair ghost behind an ancient suit of armor—and he won the ghost for his wife. Take this plot of George Barr McCutcheon popular story of love and adventure with its medieval settings, add the clever acting of Eugene O'Brien, and mix in some wonderful winter photography and you have the latest Selznick picture, "A Fool and His Money." It is one of the most artistic pictures of the year, and it stands as a monument to the work of Robert Ellis, the Selznick director. Mr. Ellis has cleverly utilized a great castle on a river's bank, its lofty tower, its deep, dark dungeon, its mysterious underground passages, and a beautiful, snow-clad countryside.

This is Eugene O'Brien's fifth Selznick picture, and his acting is still at par. He shifts from the gay work of light comedy to the seriousness of drama with the ability which has made him a favorite. Mr. O'Brien is ably supported by an excellent cast, headed by Rubye De Remer in the role of an American heiress who has kidnapped her little daughter and has fled from her divorced nobleman husband.

Besides the ghost and the love making and artistic settings there is plenty of action in "A Fool and His Money." A fight between the hero and the villainous nobleman on the marble floor of the castle and a chase by sleigh over the snow-capped highlands are the outstanding action scenes.

The Story.

A popular American novelist, John Belamy Smart, seeking peace and atmosphere for a new story, hires an ancient castle on the Danube. Walking about the old pile, Smart sees the silhouette of a beautiful woman in the window of the tower. Mr. and Mrs. Schmick, the castle caretakers, pretend the castle has a woman ghost. That night a voice disturbs the young author as he sits by the open fire. He traces the voice to a suit of armor. A white arm is extended. It throws down a key to the tower. Smart enters the tower and discovers a beautiful woman and her daughter, a child of four. She is the Countess Aline, divorced American wife of an Austrian. Aline has kidnapped her daughter and taken refuge in the castle, where she lived as a bride. Smart falls in love with her. She says she hopes to marry again. The Count arrives along with some of Smart's American friends. He sees a woman's figure in the tower and becomes suspicious. At the railroad station the count finds his mother-in-law and calls upon soldiers and police to go to the castle and get his child.

Aline's mother, who has come to aid her daughter to escape to the border with little Rosemary, the daughter of Aline, casts gloom upon Smart by telling him she hopes Aline can reach the home of a certain friend on the border. The Count and the police and soldiers surround the castle. The nobleman enters, insults the American and is given a thrashing. The Count is about to hurl a sabre at the American when Smart's colored servant, who has witnessed the fray makes a diving football tackle, bringing the Count to the floor. The Count is thrown into a dungeon, but escapes by a secret passageway just as Smart, Aline and Rosemary start off for the border in a four-horse sleigh. Smart outspeeds the Count and soldiers and crosses the border in time. Aline tells Smart that he is the man she is going to marry.

"Dangerous to Men"

Metro Presents Viola Dana in Pleasing Comedy-Drama Based on Story by H. V. Esmond.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

OPINIONS may differ on the merits of "Dangerous to Men," produced by Metro from the H. V. Esmond play, "Eliza Comes to Stay." The production features Viola Dana, is highly entertaining, and presents a strong comedy vein. Miss Dana has perhaps outgrown the requisites of the "small girl" role, and the picture is apt to meet with criticism on this score; but, judged from the box office angle, it is one that is likely to go over big. The cutting of one or two scenes in "Unkie's" apartment, which might bar it from a place in a list of "better films," will fit it to meet all requirements.

This picture has been directed with considerable skill, and it is a question whether the introductory scenes in the home of Sandy Verrall are slightly overdrawn, or whether audiences looking at the production supplemented by a musical setting, may find the star's performance a decidedly pleasing interpretation of a young woman's attempt to make her guardian tired of his contract by assuming to be a bad child. The fact remains that Viola Dana has done remarkably good work throughout the production.

Milton Sills, as Sandy Verrall, has rather a difficult role to handle, but gets away with it effectively. Helen Raymond as Vera, the vamp of the picture, acquits herself well. James Barrows, as Uncle Gregory, and Mollie McConnell will also be pleasantly remembered.

Story adapted from "Eliza Comes to Stay,"
by H. V. Esmond.
Scenario by A. P. Younger.
Direction by Edwin Carewe.
Length, Six Reels.

The Story.

Eliza Vandam, the heroine of "Dangerous to Men," is left an orphan when her father, John Vandam, is killed while on a scientific expedition in the Far East. Sandy Verrall, a young man who is also interested in scientific research, and has accompanied Vandam to Afghanistan, is appointed guardian to Eliza, who Vandam has always alluded to as "his baby girl."

In anticipation of the arrival of the "baby girl" at Sandy's home, the usual allotment of toys and elaborate nursery fittings are provided. Eliza, not in love with the idea of becoming the ward of one whom she believes to be an "old fossil," prepares herself and her wardrobe to play the part of the "baby girl." On her arrival she does everything possible to make Sandy sick of his bargain, in hopes that she will be sent back to school. In the course of affairs she discovers that Vera, Sandy's sweetheart, is untrue to him, and is trying to enlist his rich uncle among her admirers. The climax of the story occurs at a masque ball, which Eliza attends without permission. Here she unearths Vera's plan to shake Sandy and marry Uncle Gregory. At the same time Uncle Gregory acknowledges his own part in the conspiracy and Sandy learns that his love for Eliza is reciprocated by her.

"Desert Love"

Tom Mix Scores in Powerfully Developed Five-Reel Fox Subject of Melodramatic Appeal.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

CONSTANT suspense and thrills without number are found in this excellent five-reel Fox melodrama, produced under the direction of Jacques Jaccard. It provides Tom Mix with as powerful a theme as he has yet appeared in, and grips the interest from first to last.

The story is one of the "two-generation" type, Tom Mix first appearing as Buck Marston, sheriff of an Arizona border county. He is killed while endeavoring to rid the community of a lawless band known as the Wolf Pack. In later years the dead man's son, also played by Mix, is elected sheriff of the same county and amply avenges his father's death. The Wolf Pack survivors, and the progeny of its first members, are wiped out in a series of sanguinary conflicts, in which the hero repeatedly demonstrates his readiness and courage.

The tinted scenes at the beginning, picturing the wonders of the Arizona night and the raid on the desert town by the Wolf Pack, are very effective. In the matter of action and atmosphere the production excels all through. It is compact and developed with a breathless succession of stirring events. The plot is also better than usual.

The supporting cast is a strong one, with Francelia Billington and Eva Novak, both film favorites, in the feminine leads. The picture as a whole is one of the best of recent Westerns.

The Story.

Buck Marston, Sr., in "Desert Love," is sheriff of an Arizona county, and is making war on a band of desperadoes known as the Wolf Pack. During a raid of this aggregation of bad men, led by Wolf Kenyon, Marston and his wife are killed, but Marston's baby boy, known as "One-quarter Apache," is saved through the intelligent efforts of the family dog.

Tom Marston grows to manhood in the family of Jack Remington, a friend of his father. The youth is in love with Barbara Remington, who returns his affection. In the course of time young Marston is elected sheriff, and Jack Remington then tells him the tale of his parents' death at the hands of the Wolf Pack. The band still holds the country in terror.

The hero makes repeated raids on individual members of the Pack and eventually succeeds in capturing Wolf Kenyon himself. The Whelp, a ranch hand under an assumed name, who is really the son of Kenyon, releases his father. The Whelp has been making love to Dolly Remington, but her father believes he has wronged Barbara instead. He insists upon a speedy marriage. Marston returns from a second chase after Wolf Kenyon just in time to rescue Barbara from the Whelp.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"

Pioneer Film Corporation Presents Sheldon Lewis in a New American Version of the Famous Story.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE Pioneer version of Robert Louis Stevenson's great story of man's dual nature, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," shows that Sheldon Lewis has made a careful and intelligent study of his dual role. In his portrayal there is displayed an ability to get at the essence of nobility in Jekyll quite as well as the hideous perversion of Hyde. Most emotional actors are fascinated by the idea of interpreting the tragic side of human nature, even in its lowest manifestations, but they are apt to carry it too far for these times. Keenest appreciation of tragic roles is apt to come from those who have tragedy in their hearts. Hence an actor who carries his interpretation beyond the needs of contrast into an overdose of the hideous is liable to revolt his audience. The wisest thing Sheldon Lewis has done is to attempt to strike a balance.

It may be said that this new version is not consistent in mood at the end. Doctor Jekyll is made to completely survive his baser self. This sudden conversion from impending tragedy needs an inspired treatment it has not received, that of preserving the noble Jekyll for the noble purposes of his life. That alone might justify the change. The unhappy ending is not an essential characteristic of tragedy, but a happy one should be fully justified. Sheldon Lewis' work up to this point is of a high order. It will hold almost any audience. He is capably supported, and his settings are admirably chosen. Considering these values and the drawing power of a story so widely read, the Pioneer version of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde should prove a winner for both producer and exhibitor.

Cast.

Doctor Jekyll { Sheldon Lewis

Danvers Carew Leslie Austin

The Story.

Doctor Jekyll is a philanthropic London physician deeply engaged in experimental chemistry. His absorption in work at the laboratory and among poor patients causes him to neglect his fiancée, Beatrice Lanyon, until she is forced to seek the company of others. He promises to make good, but is detained by the singular disease of a child. He saves the child at the risk of losing his social friends. In the course of his experiments he comes upon a chemical compound which distorts human personality. The same chemical taken in the perverted personality proves an antidote, converting back to normal personality. Jekyll experiments on himself in proof of his theory that there is no such thing as a soul. Changed to Mr. Hyde, he becomes a destructive monster, committing arson and murder until he is the terror of London.

Bernice breaks the engagement, and Jekyll takes on his baser nature out of despair. Changing back and forth, he gains power to transform himself at will. Now his misdeeds become more terrible until, as Mr. Hyde, he is widely sought by the police. He has as Doctor Jekyll, provided for his security as Mr. Hyde, but, one by one, bits of circumstantial evidence lead to his arrest, trial and conviction. All the horrors and sufferings of remorse become his in jail when he is transformed to Doctor Jekyll. He is led to execution, when he wakes as from a trance to find that the worst of his experiences are but the baseless fabric of a dream. The subconscious experience through which he has passed, turns him from bitter atheism to human love and happiness.

Realistic Adaptation of the Famous Robert Louis Stevenson Story with Sheldon Lewis Appearing in the Dual Role of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Exploitation Angles: Play strong on the title, but be careful not to let this production get confounded with another version. Give emphasis to the star in all your advertising or the back kick may prove hurtful. The title should sell itself, but it might be well to offer this as a "new" version to excuse the changed ending.

"Blind Youth"

National Picture Production with Big Cast Is Satisfactory Entertainment.

Reviewed by Margaret I. Macdonald.

THE second of the National Pictures, "Blind Youth," is quite satisfactory from the standpoint of entertainment. It will prove a pleasing performance for the average audience. The scenario of "Blind Youth" is credited to Lou Tellegen and Willard Mack. Edward Sloman is the director. Provided with an unusually big cast the director has made the most of the material. However, the story has so many twists and turns that one is confused. The various threads are picked up in the last reel, and the plot worked out to good advantage.

The director has faithfully reproduced the settings and atmosphere that are required. Many fine allegorical titles help to carry out the story's theme. One particularly good set is the home of the artist after he has achieved fame. There are few out-door scenes, but they are in keeping with the interiors.

The cast deserves much credit. There is but one character which is carried right through the picture. That is Maurie Monnier, played by Walter McGrail. His work is of a fine, even tone. Leatrice Joy as the model also is to be commended. Claire McDowell, Ora Carew, Joseph Swickard, Clara Horton, Collin Kenny and Leo White contributed to the excellent acting, which really stands out as the feature of the picture.

Directed by Edward Sloman.
Length, about 5,600 feet.

The Story.

In New York live Pierre Monnier and his wife. They cannot get along, so a divorce follows. They have two boys, Maurie and Henry. One child is given to each. The father takes Maurie to Paris to study art. The boy later marries Clarice, who proves unfaithful. Although she loves him, she goes to another man, who is rich and able to provide her with the extravagances of life.

Maurie's father dies, and he returns to New York to see his mother. She is wrapped up in the social success of her son, Henry. Maurie's reception is not generous, so he goes to the park to commit suicide. Here he meets a model, Hope Martin, who persuades him to give up his rash idea. She takes him home, and during their conversation he sees in her an inspiration for an art statue which he calls "Blind Youth." Then he rents an old studio, and with her posing for him evenings makes the statue. It brings him fame and riches.

Meantime his brother Henry is playing with two loves but loses both. He then meets Clarice, who has come to America, having heard of Maurie's fame. He does not know who she is, but Maurie learns he is enamored of Clarice, and prepares to save him. He calls up his wife and invites her to his home, telling his brother to remain behind a door and listen. Henry, angered because of Maurie's interference, calls up the model and tells her to come to the house. Clarice does so. While she is embracing Maurie, the model walks in. Maurie, who has declared his love to Hope, then is forced to acknowledge that he cannot marry her because he has a wife. The situation is saved for Maurie and the model by Clarice giving the sculptor up, saying the man she ran away with was her first husband, whom she thought dead, and therefore her marriage to Maurie was not binding.

"The Honey Bee"

American Film Company Presents Marguerita Sylvia in a Drama of Woman's Longing for Motherhood.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE Honey Bee," produced by American Film Company, and derived from a novel by Samuel Mervin, touches a very large and live theme, the right of motherhood. The new woman, not the mannish and emancipated kind, is up against the question of taking some part in a life of work while preserving her charm of appearance and manner. Such is the character interpreted by Marguerita Sylvia in the American production. The very cleanliness of her soul insists that love's objectives shall be a husband of her instinctive selection and little children. This is clearly and effectively set forth in the action of the play, but it is confused by some vague and not altogether appropriate quotations from Maeterlinck. The purpose of "The Honey Bee" is powerfully felt at times, but far more from the action than from the conventional subtitles.

Marguerita Sylvia enacts her role with both grace and sympathetic dignity, though it is not an easy one to portray. Her support is generally good, notably in the two men of opposite types, Thomas Holding as Harris Doreyn and Nigel Barrie as Blink Moran. Albert Ray and George Hernandez are amusing in comedy relief, and Kid McCoy quite himself as a pugilist. The values of a live theme and a highly intelligent star help materially to make the whole a good entertainment.

From the novel by Samuel Mervin.
Directed by Rupert Julian.

Length, Six Reels.

The Story.

Of the busy "Honey Bee" type, Hilda Wilson cannot restrain a natural love in her heart for Harris Doreyn, for whom she has worked many happy years. It is accidentally revealed to his wife, and Hilda can no longer remain near him, lest the mutual affection should result in dishonor for both herself and Doreyn. Years later find her profitably employed in Paris. During a vacation she comes upon some American show people and is interested in the baby of one of them. Its father is dead, and its mother lies ill at the hospital. Hilda becomes strongly attached to the little one. It is heart-breaking for her to give the baby up when its mother recovers.

While taking care of the child, Hilda is affected by the kindness and devotion of Blink Moran, an American pugilist on the brink of a fight with the French champion. In response to his manly pleadings, she promises to give him an answer after the fight. She sits watching him in the arena, and is so overcome by the brutality shown in his nature that she has a revulsion of feeling. She flees to England on receipt of a telegram from Doreyn; though he does not expect her to visit him. He begs her not to compromise herself. She acclaims the right of natural selection and declares that they have lost their own happiness for the sake of convention. At this moment comes a telegram which gives them a legal as well as natural right to each other's love.

ONE of the most important of the new releases is a seven-reel adaptation of "Rio Grande," from the well-known stage play by Augustus Thomas. This has been given a powerfully developed presentation by Edwin Carewe, who personally directed the subject.

"Rio Grande" is perhaps the strongest up to the present of the many screen stories dealing with the unquiet territory along the Mexican border. It carries a story interest that catches up and interprets intelligently the feeling existing between Greaser and Gringo. It makes clear the sullen, ignorant hatreds that afflict the uneducated Mexicans, many of whom are at war with their own government as well as

CONDUCTED BY E.T. KEYSER

Buy All the Experience Possible When Planning the New House; It's an Asset

A WHILE ago, a statistically inclined party purchased a nice new map of the United States and Canada and, whenever he learned of the erection of a picture theatre proceeded to spear the location of the new house with a red-headed thumb-tack.

He soon gave it up as a bad job. Not by reason of any falling off in the thumb-tack supply but because many of them would have been so close together that only headless ones could be crowded in.

Which indicates that you exhibitors are right on the job when it comes to getting the building material and the real estate. But the question remains as to whether you are all getting the most for your money or nearly as much as you could secure for a little more of an initial expenditure.

This does not apply to the big fellow who, while he can afford to be careless, rarely is, and thoroughly realizes that within reason, it is not so much what one expends but what one receives for the expenditure that represents economy.

Justifies Larger Fee.

Take the architect end of the subject, for instance. How many of you builders of small to moderate size houses make sure that the architect whom you employ has had actual experience in the designing of successful picture theatres? It is easier and often seems cheaper to employ a local man who has planned satisfactory dwellings, stores or hotels and is not daunted by the prospect of tackling a show house.

Aside from the possible damage to projection, which Richardson has so aptly demonstrated is liable to occur in houses so planned, there is also to be considered the absence of improvements and refinements that modern theatre designing has proved to be of value. And it is with just such added attractions that the picture theatre architect is in constant touch. In fact, their incorporation into one's house would more than justify more than the difference between the fee of the experienced picture theatre designer and that of the local candidate.

Many stunts that have worked out well in the larger houses may be adapted to the requirements of the moderate sized or small theatre, and the architect who has a list of theatres to his credit is in a position to incorporate modifications of these ideas into the design of the little house, while the designer of dwellings never knew of their existence or their possibilities.

Distance No Barrier.

Distance of the architect from the field of operations is not an insurmountable barrier. By correspondence one may arrange the details of the structure and upon receipt of the plans the local man may be retained to supervise the work of construction, a method which combines the advantages of utilizing the experience of one and the proximity of the other.

The architects who advertise in the Moving Picture World are picture theatre architects. They know picture theatres from the ground up and they know what features you should or should not incorporate into your new house. They have the experience and ability to plan your house around projection as the chief motif and to so arrange it that your heating and ventilating systems will co-operate instead of nullifying each other. Let them serve you.

And do not stop with the architect's service. Let some competent decorator give you the benefit of his knowledge in making the interior attractive.

It costs but little more to create a pleasant homelike effect than to have something quite the reverse, and here is where the decorator can save one money and increase patronage from the start. It requires the experience to be gleaned only from the erection of many houses to teach an exhibitor what a difference in effect a variation of a tint here and a shade there produces and this is what a decorator who knows picture theatres can give in one's first house.

The moderate-sized house constitutes the backbone of the industry. It is the point from which the successful show magnate makes his start and it pays its owner well for every bit of specialized knowledge incorporated into its erection.

The Westinghouse-Krantz Switch Aids Studio Work

THE operation of the studio arc light demands the attention of experts and it is further necessary that these experts have efficient equipment at their disposal in order to obtain the best results. Progress in the electrical field has been reflected in better production on the screen and it follows that the practice of today is to give every attention to the electrical equipment of the studio.

The International Film Company of New York has installed in its thoroughly modern studio an elaborate lighting system capable of producing some remarkable effects. A typical part of this installation is a switchboard, combining mechanical efficiency and serviceability.

Portable Switchboard.

This Westinghouse-Krantz product aids studio work.

A Westinghouse-Krantz Product.

This switchboard is a Westinghouse-Krantz product and is specially designed for work of this nature. It consists of a slate panel on which are mounted six three-pole single throw 125-ampere knife switches. Each knife feeds to a three-point Kliegle receptacle is capable of taking care of one six-way Kliegle spider box. The switches, receptacles and plugs are contained in a No. 12 gauge steel box and two swinging doors permit access to the switches. The doors may be secured and contact with live parts thus made impossible.

Connection is made to the main line at the top of the switchboard and six circuits may be operated simultaneously if required.

The outstanding feature of this switchboard is its portability. It is mounted on four wheels and can be quickly and easily removed from one part of the studio to another. When it is stated that considerable shifting is required for even a minor piece of work, the time and labor saving value of this feature can be appreciated.

Wise Exhibitors Are Now Preparing for the Summer

EXHIBITORS throughout the country are realizing more and more as summer approaches, that it is absolutely necessary to have cool and well ventilated theatres. This is so not only among owners of large houses, but smaller ones as well.

There was a time a few years back, when the question of ventilation did not seem to bother the theatre owner but the keen competition of the present day, makes it necessary that every theatre owner put his house in proper shape for the approaching hot weather.

The Typhoon Fan Company continue to sell many Typhoon cooling systems throughout the country.

During the past week, contracts were closed for the following theatres:

Strand, Canton, N. C.; Burke, Kenosha, Wis.; Village, Wilmette, Ill.; Rivera, Chicago; Bleich, Owensburg, Ky.; Sun, Omaha; Grand, Newark, N. J., and a new theatre in the course of construction but not yet named at Savannah.

American Photoplayer Company Move.

The New York offices of the American Photoplayer Company, which have been situated for a long time at 62 West Forty-fifth street, have been moved temporarily to the Hotel Schuyler at 57 West Forty-fifth street, where all business of the company will be transacted as usual.

Vote in Favor of Sunday Shows.

Voters of Grand Island, Neb., decided, on April 6, in favor of Sunday shows by a vote of 2,613 for and 863 against the proposition.

This is a victory for the progressive people of the city, and the picture managers here deserve full credit for the aggressive campaign they made to retain Sunday amusements.

TYPHOON COOLING SYSTEM

EXHIBITORS HERALD VENTILATION
by MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

CERTAINLY there is nothing more fundamental in the business of an exhibitor than keeping his theatre in such a physical condition throughout that patrons have at least no good cause for complaint.

A surprisingly large number of exhibitors are not doing this. Many failures to provide agreeable physical surroundings occur in the matter of ventilation—a basic and indispensable requirement for every well ordered theatre.

Poor ventilation or no ventilation at all strikes at the very root of a theatre's success. The day has passed when patrons may be expected to tolerate for any considerable length of time a theatre where the air is foul and unhealthy.

Thousands of dollars may be expended in good pictures and exploitation, but if this basic requirement of good ventilation is absent it will be found impossible to build up and maintain a satisfied patronage.

—the thermometer should jump to 90 to-morrow

How about that special feature you've been advertising? Will it pull the business you counted on? Will it PAY?

Of course, you may not get that sudden jump in temperature tomorrow, or the next day, or even next week, BUT—

Some day it will hit you. And with it will come a smashing drop in box office receipts—a loss in real dollars and cents to you.

We want to save that loss for you—not for one hot day, but for every hot day—every summer, EVERY YEAR.

Our booklet, "A Better Summer Business" tells you how. Why not write us for a copy NOW, while it's fresh in your mind?

No Vibration in the De Vry!

YOU can balance a De Vry on a tea cup and it produces motion pictures as if shot from a stone wall.

You can put the De Vry on a table, a chair—on any non-rocking object with four legs or none, and it does perfect work. It's in a class by itself in this, as in all other respects. See it and know for yourself.

Preview with a De Vry!

A projector which stands up to that test is what professionals need for previewing.

To a Film Exchange, also, a De Vry is invaluable.

We ask that you let us give you a De Vry demonstration. Say the word and our representative from one of 60 cities will come and show you—in your own office.

There's nothing like the De Vry. So light! So handy! So compact! Remember, a poor projector kills a good film. So see the De Vry before you decide. It is endorsed by the best and most successful people in the motion-picture profession.

A letter, or the coupon below filled out and signed, lets you see for yourself. Why not send the coupon today?

Esprit de Corps!

WHICH is a French phrase with a potent meaning. It defines what might also be called "the RITCHEY spirit." It stands for that intangible something that pervades the RITCHEY plant, inspiring every one in it, from its greatest artist to its lowliest apprentice, to put into his work his best and most enthusiastic effort. It is the spirit of an ideal that fills the entire organization. It comes from the consciousness of power and superiority. It is an insistent urge, an ever present spur and it flows from the great faith that every one of them has in the RITCHEY poster! It is the spirit upon which the reputation of the RITCHEY poster is based.

It is inevitable that such a spirit should show in the work produced. And it does show, for the resultant RITCHEY poster is always a thing of luminous beauty, colorful and attractive, appealing and compelling. The most critical of exhibitors and the most casual of motion picture attendants all recognize and feel its charm. For the RITCHEY poster is the perfect expression of the RITCHEY spirit.

"Edgar's Hamlet," the second of the Booth Tarkington motion picture comedies, is at the Capitol this week. This time Edgar, having declared a truce with the Teacher's Pet, joins forces with him in a barn-loft production of "Hamlet." Edgar, of course, is the by no means melancholy Dane, and his friend serves alternately as Horatio and the King. A third boy does triple duty as Ophelia, stage-hand and orchestra, and another youthful actor, in complexion a natural Othello, is a decidedly unusual Ghost and startling Queen. The text used is a very much abridged and colloquial version of Lamb's Tale, only such essential scenes as those of the Ghost and tragic ending being included. The performance goes ahead without a hitch until Ophelia, to while away a Jew's-harp without realizing the inevitable effect of the music on the sensitive feet of the Ghost. Hamlet saves the situation, however, by savagely warning Ophelia, from the stage, that he will "bust up the show" if he doesn't stop, and the action moves on again as ordered until the fencing match, in which the King substitutes for the omitted Laertes, suddenly comes a fight. Just as those in the audience, realizing that they were getting more than their money's worth, are beginning to take sides in earnest, Ophelia rises from her watery grave in a washtub and shouts to the combatants to "quit fighting and act" and the fencing match is resumed. The real tragedy of the performance comes, however, when the mothers of the producers discover that their best hats and clothes have been badly used as costumes. As in the first of his Edgar comedies, Mr. Tarkington's facility with boys as a subject is a source of delight, and again E. Mason Hopper, the director, has skilfully translated the author's scenario into moving pictures. The same young actors, by being natural and interested, make the comedy genuine. The person who cannot enjoy Edgar and his friends is almost unimaginable. The photoplay at the Capitol is a STAR: Winsome Madge Kennedy, who has a large and devoted following wherever motion pictures are shown and genuine comedy is appreciated.

AUTHOR: Octavus Roy Cohen, whose delightful stories in the Saturday Evening Post are marked by a unique and highly fascinating tang of originality.

CAST: Kenneth Harlan, Willard Louis, Florence Deshon, Richard Tucker and other well-known performers.

DIRECTOR: Harry Beaumont.

STORY: Madge Kennedy is seen as Hazel Farron, a chorus girl, whose experience back stage has not yet served to rub the silver off her dreams.

Out of a job and desperately hungry, Hazel sees a sign outside a bakery: "Stale Buns, Two for a Cent."

She has just two cents left, and buys some buns—"for her pet pom."

The baker, young and warm-hearted, sees through her subterfuge, and slips a silver dollar into each bun.

Then begins a business partnership. Hazel works in the bakery and learns at last why holes are put in doughnuts. After a series of deliciously funny adventures in the bakery Hazel suddenly realizes that the young baker has stolen her heart.

She has to choose between poverty in the humble bakeshop and luxury under the protection of the wealthy Stanhope, a persistent admirer. The story works up to an indescribably tender climax, in which the young pair of lovers discover that honesty and a kind heart are still the most valuable assets in life.

The best of all Madge Kennedy pictures and a splendid attraction for any house.

To The Exhibitors Of America:

AT the start of the present season, six months ago, I announced that the American Film Company was through making program pictures and that in the future nothing but big special productions based on big novels or plays by big authors, with big casts of competent players, capably directed, would be made in the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., and that these productions would be made individually—as specials.

THAT was my promise to the exhibitors of America. Today we can look back upon our achievements and say that that promise has been truly fulfilled. Under this new policy the first of the big specials to issue from the American studios was "Six Feet Four," from the novel by Jackson Gregory, featuring William Russell. This production went forth to exhibitors as a new type of picture—a big special production, specially made, specially directed, specially produced in every sense of the word. It is today one of the most popular productions being played. It is being run in the largest houses throughout the land and is making good in a big way for exhibitors.

"SIX Feet Four" was followed by such special productions as "The Helion," by Daniel Whitcomb, featuring Margarita Fisher; "Eve in Exile," by Cosmo Hamilton, starring Charlotte Walker, Thomas Santschi and Wheeler Oakman; "The Valley of Tomorrow," by Stephen Fox, featuring William Russell; "The Dancerous Talent" with Margarita Fisher; Samuel Merwin's famous best seller, "The Honey Bee," featuring Margarita Sylva; and "Slam Bang Jim," starring William Russell.

ALL of these productions are now in the hands of exhibitors. They can best attest their value. Ask any exhibitor who has played these big specials what they have brought him in profits!

UNQUESTIONABLY my promise to the exhibitors of America to provide nothing but big special productions has been fulfilled in the truest sense of the word.

NOW for the future: I again state to the exhibitors of America that the American Film Company will produce nothing but big special features—each produced as a separate entity without regard to cost, length of time, etc. Each production made by the American Film Company in the future will be a special, based on the biggest books, stories, novels and plays we can purchase.

WITHIN the next few months we shall offer special feature productions from the pens of such novelists as Albert Payson Terhune, Henry Russell Miller, Cosmo Hamilton, P. G. Wodehouse, David Anderson, Lois Zellner and other prominent writers.

WE shall in the coming months produce such pictures as: "The Thirtieth Piece of Silver," "The House of Toys," "The Week End," "The Gamesters," "Their Mutual Child," "Payment Guaranteed," "The Blue Moon" and "Peggy Rebels." Each of these productions will be SPECIALLY made, SPECIALLY directed, SPECIALLY cast with stars of the greatest competency. They will be big specials in every sense. We shall devote to their making every facility of our ten year old organization.

THE exhibitors of America have a right to demand SPECIAL productions. The discriminating public is insistent upon having the BEST—and the best cannot be produced in grist-mill fashion. The best result can only be obtained by devoting to each subject INDIVIDUALLY that special ATTENTION, that special TIME, that special THOUGHT, which makes for perfection in big special productions.

THIS is my promise to the exhibitors of America for the months to come. I know that it will be welcomed by every enterprising, aggressive show man, who appreciates the box office possibilities of big things well done.

BOX OFFICE APPROVAL THE ONLY HONEST SEAL OF MERIT

The public verdict on "SEX" has been pronounced. The verdict was unanimous and read like this: "SEX" is one of the very few GREAT PICTURES. Nothing is more conclusive and convincing than the PUBLIC VERDICT. There is no higher authority than the message from the box office. It makes all argument and all praise unnecessary. IT REPRESENTS THE ELOQUENCE OF FACTS. In our recent announcement we told of big bookings in Chicago, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Boston, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Spokane, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Fort Wayne, Detroit, New Orleans, Dallas, Galveston, Nashville.

"SEX" rises above the average picture like a skyscraper tops a bungalow; it intoxicates the eye, satisfies the mind and carries its appeal right into the depths of your heart.

"SEX" will raise the fame and popularity of your house and impart a new dignity to your screen, it inspires your patrons with the desire for regular attendance at your theatre.

"SEX" embodies the combined triumph of a great actress—Louise Glaum—a great producer, J. Parker Read, Jr. and a great scenario writer, C. Gardner Sullivan and is worthy of your best showmanship.

Directed by Roy Clements

Life and Folks in the Giant Forests Mirrored in Masterful Fashion

ACTION is the keynote of "KING SPRUCE"—which often rises to great dramatic heights and leads to tense, gripping situations. Then, after a whirlwind of elemental passions, comes the sun smiling through the clouds and makes your audience share in the happiness so touchingly depicted on the screen.

"KING SPRUCE" has for its background the giant forests of the North.

THE STORY is woven out of the lives of the men and women who live in close communion with Nature through the changing seasons of the year; quiet folks capable of big passions and of big deeds.

"KING SPRUCE" the men and women of the forest called him because of his wealth, his power, his domineering ways. Unscrupulous as well as tyrannous he challenged the laws of God and man until the plain honesty and simple heart of one of Nature's noblemen led him into the light.

NATURE'S NOBLEMAN is Mitchell Lewis, the famous 'Poleon of "The Barrier" and here he is a second 'Poleon. A knight of the woods "without fear and without reproach."

The love story is woven deftly into the very heart of "KING SPRUCE," its course is rough but the end is full of pathos and tenderness.

Press Comments on James Oliver Curwood's Famous Story, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone"

The New York Tribune—

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' is a northwest classic. Mr. Curwood has given us a great treat and a great book in this latest volume of his. . . . This is a triumph in fiction of the Canadian Northwest."

The Philadelphia Press—

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' is a story that never flags, that abounds in unexpected incidents, that is rich in the deep colors of the glorious country in which its scenes are laid. If you want to read a story that travels straight on like a bird on the wing, with a swift series of unforeseen and thrilling episodes and all of it painted against the splendid hues of the wide, generous westland, read 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone.'"

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph—

"Those who like a story brimful of red-blooded adventure, who revel in the life of camp and trail, will enjoy 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone.'"

New York Times—

"There is plenty of incident, plenty of fighting, and some love-making in the book, with a heroine of that extraordinarily beautiful, courageous, innocent and trusting type."

Detroit Sunday News—

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' is a complicated thriller of North Canada. Breathlessness seems to be the order of the hour. We crave it in all lines of activity, and markedly so in our reading. . . . Adventure toppling on adventure may be found in 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone.'"

Oakland (Cal.) Tribune—

"A fighting tale. If you like strong, vigorous, red-blooded fighting stories, where blows and blood, hatred and murder show themselves together with the great wild wastes of the frozen north, grizzly bears, fierce malemutes, primitive men, and tender and beautiful women, you will like 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone.' . . . It is a graphic tale, stirring, thrilling and unusual."

Minneapolis Herald—

"Mr. Curwood has caught the very spirit of the vigorous life of the north woods, and never has he made that fact clearer than in this romance. . . . It is on the whole a 'rattling good story.'"

Cincinnati Enquirer—

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' is a stirring novel of the far Northwest. . . . It is a tale of mystery and of love, with a heroine unusual in fiction—young, brave, and very naive, as she has lived all her life away from civilization."

New York World—

"The romance is written with great spirit. Mr. Curwood obviously knows the forest, and his descriptions of it are very vivid. He is a dauntless fighter, too, and never fails to give some stirring scraps. . . . It is Mr. Curwood's best story . . . and hard to beat."

Daily Fresno Republican— (California)

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' fully justifies its name, for it would be hard to find a novel with more thrilling moments, hours, sacrifices and intensities."

The Times-Picayune— (New Orleans)

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' is a man's story full of fierce excitement and thrilling adventure."

Indianapolis Star—

"In 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone,' the author, James Oliver Curwood, presents to his readers a tale of romance and adventure depicting life on the Canadian frontier."

Salt Lake Telegram—

"Tis a book in which James Oliver Curwood proves himself a born story teller."

Express Advertiser— (Portland, Me.)

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone,' by James Oliver Curwood, is a masterly story which takes the reader into the fascinating life of the northern forests. . . . Swift, exhilarating, the story sweeps along to a climax which is a masterpiece of dramatic skill."

The Post Express— (Rochester, N. Y.)

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' is a fine story of life near Hudson's bay, far from what we call civilization. . . . The book is breezily and charmingly written, and as far as style goes, Mr. Curwood is far superior to Jack London, a writer who loved to deal with the same primitive types of humanity."

The Bridgeport Post— (Connecticut)

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone' opens in a snowbound train on an Arctic night, and ends with a night encampment and a strange meeting far from civilization. It is one of those gripping stories that holds one's attention from start to finish."

Los Angeles Tribune—

"Curwood has many stories of the north woods to his credit, but if he had never written anything except this latest of his novels, 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone,' his reputation would be assured."

Boston Herald and Journal—

"When James Oliver Curwood flies fancifully northward a live story results. 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone' is one of his characteristic narratives, rapid in action and of vigorous pulse."

The San Francisco Chronicle—

"In 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone' there is a stirring love story and plenty of excitement and heroism and adventure."

The Boston Post—

"Lovers of novels solid with adventure in the wilds will turn naturally to 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone.'"

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone"

It opens on a train snowbound on an Arctic night.

It ends with a night encampment and a strange meeting far, far from civilization.

Between beginning and ending are crowded exciting incidents in a land where heroism and danger are part of the daily routine.

Advertising Slides

THE complaint as to advertising slides and pictures which we print on another page is not wholly unexpected. It is perhaps the natural expression of the revolt aroused in the breast of the viewer of pictures when he believes the non-entertainment part of the program he has paid to see has been carried too far.

One item of the letter may have special interest for exhibitors—that where the correspondent insists a slide shown every day for 365 days is worth at least $3 a week, or $150 a year, the implication being that if organized picture showmen are charging less than that sum for their dues-paying card they are undercharging; in other words, the advertiser is getting the best of the bargain. If this proves to be the true situation it is a matter soon mended—the exhibitor will not “overlook any bets.”

If, however, the correspondent is exact in his statement that the slides are getting on patrons' nerves then it is a matter for serious consideration. One flash of a slide at a performance will hardly get on any one's nerves. That, as we understand the Cleveland-Pittsburgh plan, for instance, is the time required for the showing of the slide that represents the payment for membership of that house in its local organization.

After all it is not so much the use of slides that arouses antagonism; it is their abuse.

GERMANY has found use for one of its great airship hangars by transforming it into a motion picture studio. The structure at Johannisthal which now is undergoing the process of conversion is 200 by 450 feet in size, which gives a floor space of 90,000 square feet. A lot of pictures may be made in that area.

As One Minister Sees Us

CHESTER C. MARSHALL, the militant pastor of St. James' Methodist Church in New York City, is writing for the Christian Herald a series of articles in which he is considering the proper attitude as he sees it of Christian people and the church toward the motion picture. Mr. Marshall speaks with authority on his chosen topic; and he speaks for forty-one thousand ministers of his faith when he discusses a purely motion picture question. Personally, he is a fine type of the wholesome, up-to-date minister, enjoying nothing better than to sit in with a group of blase film men and “go to the mat” on a screen question of major importance. In his official position as head of the division of stereopticon, motion pictures and lectures of the Centenary Conservation Committee he came into contact with many officials of film companies—and the resulting regard seems to have been mutual.

In his opening article, Mr. Marshall, after inquiring if every member of a family is not better off for enjoying motion picture recreation, declares everything depends upon the kind of picture the family has chosen to see. “There have been trade-marks which in themselves have been a guarantee that every ideal of American home life and religion was flagrantly outraged,” says the minister. “There are also companies which have set forth their trade-mark as a guarantee of pure, wholesome entertainment. But if there is a single commercial company which has invariably adhered to that rule the writer does not know it. It is gladly conceded that a few have made vast strides in that direction.”

MR. MARSHALL believes much encouragement will be given producers if lay journals will each week publish brief reviews of pictures that have been approved. This would not mean that others were disapproved, he explains, but would merely be a guide to the interested seeker.

As to keeping hurtful films out of a neighborhood the writer says even the most democratic will falter before employing an autocratic form of censorship or any method as un-American as that. He takes as an illustration a widely heralded picture which proves to be objectionable in whole or in part. “Now if the producers hear nothing by way of criticism and the film has a good rental they infer that because the box office receipts are good the picture is a success,” continues Mr. Marshall. “If they therefore conclude that they have properly judged the demands of their public I do not know that we can blame them very severely. But I am decidedly of the opinion that we can blame ourselves for this situation.”

Mr. Marshall suggests when there is shown an objectionable picture bearing the name of a reputable producer that if fifty representative citizens were in a short letter to the exhibitor to express their disapproval the message would quickly be passed along to the producer. He predicts that significant “cuts” would follow the receipt of simultaneous complaints and adds that probably for some time to come the directing would be done with an eye to the great Christian public that stretches across three thousand miles of America rather than to the novelty-jaded crowd that haunts the white lights.

THE minister quotes a film distributor as complaining that rarely did he receive criticisms or suggestions from clergymen. He promised Mr. Marshall that if the minister found anything objectionable in the pictures and said so changes would be made. We have the word of the latter that the distributor made good.

“If pictures are not what we think they ought to be perhaps we share the responsibility by standing back with folded arms,” concludes Mr. Marshall. “There are many decent men in the industry who will welcome our suggestions and who will heed our criticisms. If some directors see Broadway instead of America, then let's help them to see America so big that they will know the public it pays best to please. Does this mean that the Christian people of America only want the wishy-washy kind of pictures they are sometimes charged with desiring? Not at all. When they go to the movies, the more they move the better they please; but they must move on a high and wholesome plane.”

Mr. Marshall approaches his subject from the viewpoint of the picture partisan, of the man who likes pictures, of the friendly rather than of the hostile critic. He is constructive, not destructive. And when a man speaks for forty-one thousand ministers his views are entitled to respect.

Opposes Salesmen's Request for Income Tax Reduction

THE treasury department has declined to indorse the bill recently introduced in the United States Congress by Congressman Jacoway to permit the expenses of traveling salesmen for food and lodging while on the road to constitute an exemption in the making out of income tax returns and the payment of such taxes. In a letter to the ways and means committee, Secretary Houston points out that the law specifically states that in computing net income no deduction shall be allowed in any case with respect to personal living or family expenses.

"It is obvious that expenses for meals and lodging are in the nature of personal or living expenses," the secretary says. "In my opinion, they frequently partake more of the character of personal expenses than business expenses. To allow traveling salesmen to deduct both personal credit and such expenses for meals and lodging would permit such taxpayers a double deduction."

He claims that the matter is one of a general character, involving a number of claims that might be made for expenses of a like nature, and does not think this particular feature should be considered without taking up the others.

Miss Dolly Spurr Re-opens Lyric Theatre on Sabbath

ANOTHER chapter is about to be added to the Sunday opening fight at Marion, Ind., it is understood. The Lyric Theatre, operated by the Mutual Theatre Company, of which Miss Dolly Spurr is president, was opened on Sunday, April 11, and those opposed to Sunday shows are again getting ready to start something.

Three members of the Marion police department were present at the theatre at the time it was opened but no arrests were made. It is said, however, that Marshall Williams, city attorney, intends to file charges against the theatre company as a corporation under an ordinance passed several months ago.

A similar case is now pending in the Grant county circuit court, having been appealed by the theatre company following an adverse decision by Judge Orlo Cline in the city court. Miss Spurr has been arrested several times for violating the state law pertaining to the subject and on each occasion has been freed by a jury. The operation of the Lyric Theatre last Sunday marks the first attempt to open the theatres there on April 11 in the last few months.

Governor Signs Sunday Bill.

The bill permitting moving picture theatres to be open on Sundays after 2 p. m. in Baltimore, which was introduced in the House when the Legislature was in session at Annapolis, Md., and passed both the House and the Senate after it was turned down and then reconsidered, was signed by Governor Albert C. Ritchie on April 16.

This bill had a referendum attached to it and the people of Baltimore will vote on it at the next regular election, which comes in November.

Film Shipments Handled by Express.

The transportation committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, in considering the shipping case situation and reviewing the complaints and reports made from various parts of the country, is of the opinion that much of the damage to film shipping cases and trouble caused by covers becoming unfastened is not entirely due to faulty fastening devices, but to a marked degree may be chargeable to the bad handling of shipments by exchange, exhibitor and express employees generally.

P. H. Stilson, chairman of the transportation committee, recommends that exchange managers and exhibitors train their employees with respect to the proper handling, opening and closing of film cases. It is also suggested that film clubs, exchange managers' associations, film boards of trade, etc., appoint sub-transportation committees to take this matter up with the express company's executives to see if some improvement may be secured.

British Columbia Would Force Showings of Government Film

PICTURE showmen in Canada are displaying much interest in the measure which has been introduced into the legislature of the province of British Columbia by the provincial government, which, if enacted into a law, would require all motion picture theatres in the province to devote fifteen minutes each day to the showing of films provided by the provincial government.

According to the sponsors of the measure, these films would be educative, to illustrate especially the natural resources, opportunities and economic and industrial problems of the province. Pictures dealing with Canadian affairs in general would also be prepared by a bureau, which it is proposed to create to handle the films.

The consensus of leading Canadian exhibitors is that the measure is reactionary, confiscatory and vicious. They do not deny that the showing of motion pictures such as are outlined in the bill might be a good thing, but they are bitterly opposed to the compulsory clause in the wording of the bill, which, they say, robs them absolutely of the power to say whether or not they care to run such films on their screens.

Missouri Valley Demands $2,500 Annual License Fee

AN example of to what lengths some people will go in legislating the motion picture industry is furnished Moving Picture World by Vice-President and General Manager K. Moreland, of the Moreland Amusement Company, Inc., of Missouri Valley, Iowa, in the form of a news clipping from the Missouri Valley Times of April 9.

An ordinance approved and adopted on May 8, signed by Mayor L. R. Pike and City Clerk D. McKinnon, practically prohibits the presentation of motion pictures in Missouri Valley. It fixes license fees for moving picture shows, theatres and other entertainments where an admission is charged, as follows: where the admission charge is 50 cents or more than 25 cents the license fee fixed is $50 a day, $200 a week, $400 a month, $1,000 for four months, $1,500 for six months, or $2,500 for a year. Somewhat lower fees are fixed for entertainments charging less than 25 cents.

Tokio Theatre Seats 7,500; Many Are Now Being Built

THAT large film studios are being built in Japan and immense theatres are under construction was disclosed recently when Dr. Iwaho Tsuchiya, physician to the Mikado, visited the Famous Players-Lasky studio at Hollywood for a conference with its executives.

"Two producing corporations of $10,000,000 each had just been formed when I left Japan," said Dr. Tsuchiya, "and Japanese capital is building hundreds of luxurious theatres, equal in every way to the best in America. The Imperial Theatre, just finished, in Tokio seats 7,500 people and in attractiveness rivals the pick of the New York playhouses. Moving pictures are very popular in Japan. There is no doubt that the new Japanese studios will be a big success."

Dr. Tsuchiya visited the Hollywood Famous Players-Lasky plant to secure ideas and suggestions for his government. While there he witnessed the taking of a Chinese street scene in a new Ethel Clayton production. But perhaps the eminent Japanese was most interested in scenes being taken by Director George Melford in his adaptation of "The Translation of a Savage." The American Indians used in the scene were the first he had ever seen.

Mrs. O'Grady Protests Bill Letting Children See Shows

MRS. ELLEN O'GRADY, Deputy Police Commissioner of New York City, was in Albany on April 14 protesting to various members of the Legislature against a bill which is now in the Rules Committee, and which, if enacted into a law, will allow unaccompanied children between the ages of 10 and 16 years to attend the motion picture theatres of the metropolis, with the understanding, however, that such children are to be segregated within the theatre and placed in charge of a matron.

Mrs. O'Grady had a long talk with Speaker Sweet, as well as with Lieutenant Governor Harry C. Walker, and with a number of other Senators and Assemblymen, each of whom she asked to vote against the bill should it be reported out of the Rules Committee.

"I am not in favor of any motion picture bill," said Mrs. O'Grady, "until the pictures themselves are made clean. Then let the exhibitors throw open their doors. I am in favor of a greater censorship of the motion picture. There are too many pictures being shown these days that are suggestive in many ways and detrimental to the interests not only of adults but also serving to tear down and undermine the moral structure of the child."

Motion Pictures as Evidence in Court.

One of the first instances of motion pictures being shown on a courtroom wall occurred in Rochester, when pictures were run off in order that the court might get a fair idea of the alleged lawlessness of members of a union.

The motion pictures were introduced by counsel for Michaels-Stern Company, one of the great clothing industries of Rochester, which is suing the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America for alleged interference with its business and employees.

When Embargo Is Lifted, Germany Will Eagerly Welcome American Productions

Commerce Bureau Reports Film Business Most Active Industry in Germany During Past Fourteen Months—Producers Study American Successes—Enormous Crowds Patronize the Country's 3,200 Screen Theatres

THE film business has been the most active industry in Germany during the past fourteen months, according to a report just received by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce from the American Commission in Berlin. The moving picture theatres in the larger cities handle enormous crowds every night, it is declared.

Few foreign films are shown because of the present law prohibiting their importation, but it is understood that after May, 1920, foreign films may be imported. It is reported that the president of the Universum Film Company, which is one of the largest in Europe, is proceeding to the United States to buy American films for exhibition in Central Europe.

The German Authors' League, whose membership included practically all reputable German authors and playwrights, has signed a contract with an American film concern giving it the sole right to film their stories and plays in America and to market them throughout the world, including Germany. These German authors and playwrights are to receive advance cash payments and subsequent royalties. This same American theatrical group has also contracted with certain famous German and Austrian composers and directors for work in this country.

Prejudice Against French Films.

Previous to the war and, in fact, during the first years of the war, American pictures were very popular in Germany, especially the cowboy and animal pictures. However, prior to the war the number of pictures sent to Germany from the United States was not particularly large, on account of producing conditions in this country and the large domestic demand.

The present law forbidding the importation of foreign-made films until May was passed at the instigation of the 200 or more film exchanges and producers of Germany, but the public demand for foreign films is such that it seems unlikely that the law will be extended beyond its original limit.

Previous to the war, Italian and French pictures were also popular in Germany, but none are now on exhibition, and German theatrical men say that public prejudice will prevent the exhibit of French-made pictures for a long time.

Theatres and Prices.

There are about 600 theatres in Germany and about 3,200 motion picture houses. Less than 3 per cent. of the old theatres have been converted so as to show films. Most of the picture theatres are divided roughly into three classes: Small family theatres in provincial towns, where the admission runs from 50 pfennigs to 1½ marks; second-class theatres, where the admission runs from 1½ marks to 6 and 8 marks, including a luxury tax of 20 to 25 per cent; the high-class playhouse of Berlin, Leipzig, etc., where the admission runs as high as 15 marks or more.

The moving picture theatres of Berlin are more comfortable than the average first-class moving picture house in America, it is claimed. For example, loges with four armchairs will occupy as much floor space in a German theatre as ten seats in the average American house. Much open space is also given over to aisles, promenades, lobbies, etc.; also larger and better orchestras are provided.

Taxes Don't Deter Crowds.

In the provincial towns many very small picture theatres are in operation, some with a seating capacity as low as 100; the larger picture houses in the city have a theatres turning away hundreds every night.

Berlin to Have Largest Studio.

According to recent press reports, Berlin will soon possess the largest film studio in the world. The Albatross Aircraft Works, Johannisthal, is transforming its airship hangar into a moving picture studio; this studio will be about 450 feet long and nearly 200 feet wide.

The studios in Germany are small and poorly equipped as compared with American studios, but they are improving. During the summer time the German studios enjoy practically the same conditions of sunlight for photography as prevail in America, but in winter conditions are more difficult.

The Ufa and Bioscop corporations have studios in Berlin (where there are eleven large studios in all) that are well built, lighted by electricity and operated throughout the season of poor sunlight. Certain German companies have been sent to the Mediterranean countries to make pictures, for the sake of better sunlight and different scenery. There are in all Germany about twenty-five big studios.

Three Principal Criticisms

The camera work is good, the costuming is very good, and the building of sets and decorations is excellent, but the criticisms of German-made films most often heard from American experts are: (1) Lack of action and speed; (2) titles are too long and the films themselves often run an interminable length of ten or twelve reels; (3) the use of an undue proportion of melodrama and tragedy. American moving picture investigators in Germany state that American comedy pictures would undoubtedly meet with enormous success.

The salaries paid stars and famous directors in Germany (considering the depreciated mark) are very small as compared with American salaries: Well-known directors receive from 40,000 to 200,000 marks a year. Average performers regularly employed by producing companies receive from 40,000 to 60,000 marks per annum; the highest priced stars are said to receive between 300,000 and 400,000 marks a year. Even at the normal rate of exchange, with a mark equal to 23.8 cents, these salaries do not compare with those paid in this country.

Watch American Progress.

Some of the best directors are also stockholders in the producing corporations. Bonuses are sometimes paid directors, provided they complete a picture within a specified time. A good director is at a premium in Germany as in the United States. The highest-priced cameramen receive 400 marks a day; 125 marks a day is about the average salary.

Some of the German performers work for two or three companies during the same day, going from one studio to another and playing various parts in widely differing productions. Nearly all the "movie" players in Germany, and especially the better ones, are still connected with the legitimate stage. Most of the stars are tied up on long contracts.

The German producers and the exhibitors

David P. Howells Hears of

New Nationalization Move

RUMORS of a movement in Germany to nationalize all moving picture houses for the purpose of buying foreign productions, come as a great surprise," says David P. Howells, the international film distributor. "It would seem that after practically six years of isolation from the rest of the world, the first attempt to be made by Germany would be to try and regain a friendly position. This, I am sure, was the hope of the Germans I met in Berlin and Vienna last summer.

"I give the Germans credit for not being so stupid and short-sighted as to deny entrance into Germany of motion pictures, books, music and literature produced by the outside world either at this time or during the past several years that she has been at war.

"The inevitable reaction in all countries would be to widen the gulf between them and Germany. The Germans themselves would be the greater sufferers. No American producing company has made any pictures or is now making pictures on the basis of receiving any revenue whatever from Germany. They have not received any during the era of greatest prosperity and advancement of the industry here, and can probably continue the prosperity without this revenue.

"If it is true that Germany has nationalized her moving picture houses for this purpose, it is inspired by a group of moving picture people whose sole purpose is selfish. I don't believe the German people will stand for such an imposition when they awake to a realization of its effect."

maximum seating capacity of 2,400. The estimated seating capacity of all the moving picture theatres in Germany is 1,000,000. When the average price a seat and the general crowded conditions of the theatres are considered, some idea of the enormous sum spent annually in Germany on moving picture tickets can be gained.

The method of taxing theatre tickets and making returns to the government authorities is about the same in Germany as in the United States, and notwithstanding the economic distress of Germany the crowds at the theatres seem to be increasing. One German economist states that this is due to the general "forget-the-war" feeling. An American investigator lately found nearly every picture house in Germany running to capacity and the Berlin keep close watch on the motion picture situation in the United States. They know all about the so-called American invasion and conquest of the moving picture field in England and they anticipate an American invasion of Germany. Practically all of the reputable American moving picture magazines and journals reach Germany. Many American moving picture men have also investigated this field lately, and through these and other sources the German producers are in close touch with the trend of film affairs in this country.

Study American Successes.

When a famous American picture arouses interest in Denmark or some nearby country, the German film interests send their observers up to watch its success and earning powers. It is reliably reported that in a very few instances negatives have been made from certain American positive films, originally sold for exhibition in neutral European countries, and that prints made from these negatives were later smuggled into Germany. Certain American stories have been adapted to the films in Germany, the same plot and characters being used, but the title being changed.

An American moving picture expert recently investigating conditions says that the influence of American "movie" art is most noticeable in Germany; that even within the past few months a marked improvement in plotting, costuming, action, photography, settings, and especially continuity, is very noticeable.

Inaugurate Trade Propaganda.

The Deutsches Lichtbild at Berlin is a German moving picture advertising concern, backed by the government and certain private corporations such as the Krupps, which produces and distributes industrial films. This concern has endeavored to advertise German industries in South America and other foreign countries by distributing such films. Within the last few months it also has begun industrial educational work in Germany. This concern has lately taken over the National Pictorial News Weekly, which corresponds to the former Hearst-Pathe News. An arrangement has been made between the Deutsches Lichtbild Company and an American company to exchange weekly news films, news films not being excluded under the embargo.

Germany is divided into six sections for the distribution of films by the big companies. The films are sent out by express, but are not insured by the companies, and their delivery to the subscribing theatres is less accurate and speedy than in the United States. There is a minimum price for the rental of films, but no maximum, the increase being in proportion to the attendance.

American Films Already Bought.

The larger producers and manufacturers have signed contracts with many theatres to use their films exclusively from now till 1921. Many of the smaller theatres have refused to sign these contracts, the owners declaring that they wish eventually to secure American pictures. The opinion is general among informed persons that, except for certain local producers and manufacturers, there exists throughout Germany a great demand for American films. This demand is realized, and it is said the Ufa Corporation has already bought and is now making payment on seventy-five American films, which it hopes to import after May when the embargo is lifted.

Films are not distributed on credit in Germany. The producer requires an initial deposit for the option on the territory, and when the film is delivered the balance in cash is collected.

Certain unions or organizations exist among theatrical employees in Germany. The actors are organized into the "Bühnengenossenschaft" and the musicians, stage hands, etc., are organized into what is known as the "Centralverband der Kino-undestellter." The musicians in the orchestras are further controlled by the German Musicians' Union. Theatrical ushers also belong to a union, but their wages are small, seldom running over 10 marks a day; they are expected to make up for this small salary by the sale of programs; also, as in other European theatres, the German ushers expect a tip for showing patrons to their seats.

A new film industry lately developed in Germany is the so-called "home film"; that is, the manufacture and distribution of a small, cheap apparatus for furnishing moving picture entertainment in private homes.

Neilan Flays Producers of Suggestive Films and Distributors of Morbid Paper

THERE are a few remaining producers who still think that motion pictures bordering on the sensuous are in public demand. Among those who have most recently attacked this practice as applied not only to motion pictures themselves but to the advertising matter prepared for these pictures is Marshall Neilan.

"There has always been good and bad in everything and perhaps always will be," said Mr. Neilan. "The motion picture industry is no exception and there seems to be keen competition among a few directors to see who can make the most suggestive photoplay and still keep within the law. The days of these producers are numbered professionally unless they change their type of work.

"The future will bring cleaner, more wholesome pictures than we have had in the past. Most producers have already realized the fact from a commercial standpoint. Pictures that are entirely free from suggestiveness are by far the most successful, and the same motives which prompted unclean pictures in the past will ultimately cause the great majority of directors to eliminate filth from their productions in the future.

"The day has arrived when exhibitors have given their support to keep the screen clean by refusing to permit the exhibition of films that might tend to encourage censorship fanatics. No exhibitor who expects to maintain a steady patronage from family audiences can afford to show any picture that he would not show his own children.

"Then again there are certain distributors who do the industry harm by the type of advertising material they use. Even if the picture is harmless, some seem to think by preparing paper that will appeal to the morbid element in human nature a great box office attraction is created. Sometimes this is done under the guise of 'art' and other times it is a bold illustration or a suggestive caption.

"A movement such as that started by the National Association some time ago to take steps to prevent the showing of unclean pictures should be encouraged and enlarged. Let us clean house from within and there will be less energy necessary to fight outside opposition. Exhibitors are the point of contact between producers and the public. They are in a position to control the class of entertainment the screen will offer."

Letting the Public Have the "Say"

Is How Tom Moore Plays Pictures

By WALTER K. HILL

TOM MOORE, of Washington, and Mrs. Moore were far above the noise of Broadway, in the only room they could coax away from the management of the Hotel Knickerbocker when Moving Picture World's representative called upon the Washington showman Wednesday morning, April 21, to ask him, among other things how he and Tom North were getting along in the National Capitol.

"That was a very happy engagement I made in getting Tom's services," said Mr. Moore. "After sixteen years in the film business I have reached the stage where I needed North to take the responsibilities of endless details off my hands and liberate me to concentrate on the last and finest theatre I shall ever build. I believe Tom is happy in his surroundings and I know I am happy to have him with me."

Mr. Moore said he was just back from a trip to the South where he went a few weeks ago for the rest he had needed. With Mrs. Moore he has been playing golf and resting among the pines—getting ready to plunge again into show business that so much concerns him.

To Chicago via New York.

Like a score of other showmen he discovered that the way to the Chicago convention of First National franchise holders led through New York. Mr. Moore will be here to attend the formal opening of First National's session that must begin in New York, to comply with the charter—even if it had been previously decided to adjourn to Chicago for the "big doings."

"My new theatre is going to be the culmination of my ambitions in show business," said Mr. Moore. "The name has not been decided upon and everything else waits upon conditions in the building trade that are now further complicated by transportation upsets."

"In the new house I will have room to seat twice as many patrons as I shall provide for—but 1,500 will be the capacity. There is room on the lot for a 3,000 seat house—but I am going to give to the stage much of the space that would ordinarily go into seating arrangements."

Will Play at One Dollar Top.

"My other theatres in Washington are equipped with all modern devices. Silks, and marble, and music, and lights—everything money can put into theatres as now conducted. With my determination to make the new house my greatest achievement came the purpose to have everything any other theatre can have for picture presentation—plus a stage for the special production of every feature."

"The stage will be 50 by 100, and every device that can be applied to stage presentations will be installed. No more than thirteen pictures will be presented in any year—and every picture will be given a separate production."

"Runs" Depend on Ticket Sales.

"In the Garden Theatre I have proved that my methods of playing films for all they are worth and only what they are worth is right. The public has the say about how long we shall run a feature. Starting with 'The Miracle Man' we have every feature from three to five weeks."

"We set the figure that will give the producer his proper reward; that will pay the house expenses plus a reasonable profit and we run the picture as long as the public keeps coming in numbers sufficient to turn the figure we have established. The percentage comes after this figure has been taken in and the excess is shared with the producer."

"And here is how it has worked out: We gave Famous Players-Lasky more money for the five weeks run of one of their features—more money for five weeks than an opposition house gave them for thirty-five weeks of film rentals. That's 7 to 1 in favor of percentage."

He Is Strong for Percentage.

It was easy to understand that Mr. Moore was in favor of percentage—playing pictures that are big enough to play on percentage. He favors it not alone for himself but for the producer—to encourage the creator to make super-features for the big houses in the big cities. The "program" doesn't seem to interest Mr. Moore any longer.

"Five years ago," said the Washingtonian, "I was through with 'programs' in my houses. I will play percentage attractions, picking them out myself and letting my public have the say as to how long they shall run."

"In my opinion—based on sixteen years of experience in the game—managers of the big theatres in big cities must turn to the percentage plan if they are going to continue in an improving, expanding and better business. The producer must have financial encouragement to make really big pictures—and the one sure and only way is percentage with the public establishing the length of runs."

Moore Lets the Public Fix His Policy.

"The house owner cannot set a fixed rule of 'policy' if the film business is to continue improving in future as in the past. Personally, I'm for runs as long as the public decides—and that means a 'production' with every feature. And by 'production' I mean living actors or physically moving scenes that blend, with continuity, into the story."

"By this I mean scenes like the race in 'Old Kentucky,' for instance. We put the 'tread-mill' effect into the 'picture' right at the proper scene in the film—blending the animals and riders into the film with a 'thrill' that brought the house to its feet every time. Great 'fight' scenes can be heightened by physical encounters at the instant the film calls for it; and there is opportunity to use the stage that I shall have in my new house to add to and heighten the effect of such features as I shall play."

Tom Moore has "the answer" to success in the exhibition game—showmanship. And his is the type of showmanship that does not "want it all" for himself. He sees in every opportunity he gives the producer to get his share, the return in benefit to the game. Tom Moore is a showman and not an accident.

Circuit to Build $3,000,000 Theatre in Los Angeles as Memorial to Ideals

AS a tribute to First National Exhibitors' Circuit, the spirit of equitable dealings with exhibitors, distributors and independent producers and the general furtherance and fostering of the motion picture, what promises to be the peer of any theatrical structure ever erected, will soon be started in Los Angeles.

Negotiations took tangible form in a series of conferences between Sol Lesser, owner of the First National franchise for

Los Angeles, and J. D. Williams, manager of First National, during his trip to the West Coast. Other First National franchise holders were represented through an agreement reached prior to Mr. Williams' western trip.

To Cost About $3,000,000.

The new house is to cost approximately $3,000,000. Its building expense will be borne by First National as an organization and it will represent a monument to the cause of First National and motion pictures. The best architectural brains in the world will collaborate on every detail surrounding its design.

The outstanding features of all First National theatres throughout the nation will be incorporated in its makeup. The theatre will be used as a non-competing house. First National attractions will be given their premier showings in it. For longer and extended runs the Kinema Theatre will be used. The theatre will be located in the downtown district of Los Angeles, the exact location to be announced later.

"Star's Box" a Feature.

An innovation will be a "star's box." This feature has been designed as an honor to the photoplay star or stars featured in any First National release that may be shown in the new theatre. Any star whose picture is being currently shown will be entitled to use of the box for the week.

In selecting the staff indications are that the entire exhibitor field will be combed for talent. At present First National has not made a decision as to its managing-director or even with regard to whether it will be humanly possible for one man to assume entire charge of the venture.

You Bet—She's a Daisy!

Ba, ba Pufflicist,
Have you any Bull?
Yes sir, yes sir,
Three briefcasesful.
One for my master,
One for the fan,
And one little bag
For the old ash can.

"Give Rest to the Wicked in Screen Production" advises Louella Parsons, editorially speaking.

Make 'em for "the tired yegg-man," eh wot?

"Sylvia Breamer Has Important Role in 'My Lady's Garter'."—Headline.

Why not be frank and truthful—important dual role!

Incidentally the First National Banks throughout the country should make good prospects for tie-ups with "My Lady's Garter."

Not Humoresque.

Two different pufflicists* have told us that tears came to their eyes the first time a certain film* was shown in the company projection room.

*Names given on request.

The play "that put the cock-tail in the Hall of Fame" is now more securely preserved in the movies.

Extra! Stop Press! Extra!

Another great film has broken another great record. And another great film will break another great record.

And another great film will—but what's the use?

Folks will go to see good pictures just as they will stay away from poor ones.

As an appropriate pufflicist for the story Shannon Fife has written for Commodore Blackton, we suggest Joe Drum—a fife and drum corps for exploitation.

"The Phantom Butler" (Republic).

He will, of course, serve the guests spirits.

If the print-paper famine continues Rambles Round Filmtown will finally be cut to the amount of space it merits.
How little? You said it!

"Detroit" Jake Smith Rids

Georges Carpentier has arrived in America ready, we suppose, to challenge Dempsey to an eight-reel film.

Down South they have special theatres, exclusively for the colored population.

We presume that the boys who operate the machines refer to the silver sheet in those houses as the "smoke screen."

At last the Bathing Girls are to experience real competition.

The Hula Hula girls have been filmed in their short grass costumes.

Producers say "vamping" hasn't the call with the public any more.

But that's no sign it isn't being done.

Some day a shark on statistics will figure out how many tons of dead chewing gum are left on the under side of theatre seats.

If they ever change title on "The Stream of Life" (Plymouth) we suggest "The River of Doubt."

What's the Answer to All the "Foolish Question" of Films?

"Should a Husband Forgive?" (Fox).

"What Becomes of the Children?"

"Why Change Your Wife?" (Paramount).

"Is Your Sweetheart False?" (Robertson-Cole).

"Why Go Home?" (Pathe).

"Are Honeymoons?" (Robertson-Cole).

"Would You Forgive?" (Fox).

"Should a Woman Tell?" (Metro).

"What's Your Husband Doing?" (Paramount).

Perhaps First National has the answer:

"Don't Ever Marry."

Flower of the Industry Gives Best Thought to Great Issues

To settle a general misunderstanding prevalent in the trade, I wish to advise you that "The Splendid Hazard" has nothing to do with the exhibitor in a ten thousand town who books a super-extra special at one thousand per.

Also that "The Deep Purple" doesn't refer to the color of the city editor's face, after he finds that his sensational story is only a press agent's plant.

Trust that this bit of information will make for bigger and better publicity.

PRESENTING "UNCLE TOM" TO THE CREAM OF FILM SOCIETY

(Via Epes Winthrop Sargent)
THE New Version Film Productions, Inc., (capital $20,000,000) is preparing a second edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" to match up with the latest happy ending versions of standard literature. According to the synopsis of the new film: Shelby arrives at the Legree plantation just as Uncle Tom has been beaten to death by Legree. His fight with Legree brings on the scene an itinerant vender of a patent liniment, who heals Uncle Tom.

Tom and Shelby go to New Orleans where they exhumate Little Eva, who has merely been in a trance. The three live happily ever after on the royalties from Uncle Tom's indorsement of the patent medicine.

To which the same author adds: If enterprising film directors continue to provide happy endings for standard plays and stories, it is suggested that some sort of gyroscope coffin will be required to permit authors to lie peacefully in their graves.

For Photoplay Editors and Theatre Programs

EDWARD CONNOLLY, Metro stock player, has been cast for an important part in "The Saphead," the first Winchell Smith production for Metro, in which William H. Crane and Buster Keaton are to be co-starred.

Mrs. De Wolf Hopper has the role opposite William Faversham in his first Selznick production, "The Man Who Lost Himself."

The J. Warren Kerrigan company has taken over the entire cast of the Jack Dempsey company, with the exception of Jack himself, for the picture, "The Coast of Opportunity."

Edwin Mortimer has been selected to direct the forthcoming Metro production, "Indiscreet Wives," from the play by Julie Herne, which will star Alice Lake.

Milton Sills will play in three Melford productions for Paramount, "The Translation of a Savage," "The Faith Healer" and "The Shulamite."

Marguerite Metivier, who came from France to act as secretary for Mme. Clemenceau Jacquemaire during the madame's recent American tour, is now playing in support of Pauline Frederick in "Madame X."

June Mathis is preparing the scenario for "Hearts Are Trumps," the third Drury Lane melodrama to be filmed at the Metro studios in Hollywood. Rex Ingram will direct.

"The Heart of Flame," by Robert Louis, is to be produced by Selznick at an early date.

Maurice Campbell will direct Bryant Washburn in "Burglar-Proof," his next offering on the Paramount program.

Ralph Ince is to direct and to appear in "The Man of Iron," a John Lynch scenario.

William Conklin is supporting Hobart Bosworth in his new production for J. Parker Read.

The Edgar Lewis picture, "Lahoma," in which Russell Simpson plays a leading role, is ready.

George Archainbaud, who recently directed Elaine Hammerstein in "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes," will direct "Marooned Hearts," in which Zena Keefe and Conway Tearle are featured.

Julanne Johnston is playing an important role in Wanda Hawley's first Realart picture, "Miss Hobbs."

Eileen Sedgwick and Joe Moore play the leading roles in "The White Rider," just completed at Universal City by Director William J. Craft.

George Bernard Shaw will personally assist in directing the filming of his "Pygmalion and Galatea," in which Edith Day is to be starred.

Annette Kellerman acted as auctioneer at a benefit at Riverside, Cal., recently and by promising a kiss to the highest bidder for a certain Kewpie doll, ran the bid up to $2,000. A wealthy western ranchman got the doll—and the kiss.

Gloria Swanson, whose contract with Famous Players-Lasky is up, is taking a vacation in San Francisco while making up her mind which of several offers from film producers to accept.

Helen and Casson Ferguson, who are not related and have not met before, are playing a pair of lovers in the C. E. Shurtleff picture at Metro, "The Mutiny of the Elsinore."

Englishman Frankly Admits Intention of Invading American Picture Market

WHILE American motion picture producers are making plans to dominate the British and other foreign markets with American films, a $5,000,000 British company has been organized with the avowed purpose of invading the American market with English-made motion pictures.

W. Walter Crotch, vice-president of the newly formed British film organization known as the Alliance Film Corporation, of England, left New York on Wednesday, April 14, for Los Angeles for a visit to the Western film center. He is in America studying American methods of production and distribution and for the frank purpose of discovering the best way to introduce English films to the American market. Mr. Crotch is a banker and a literary man who has gone into motion pictures, as he says, "because I want to see much better literature on the screen." He is a scholar and a writer of repute and is the greatest Dickensian authority in England, having written five or six books on that celebrated English author.

Producing Activities Begun.

The Alliance Film Corporation, of England, has under way the construction of a film city much like Universal City in California at Harrow Weald Park, just outside London. Work has been temporarily discontinued on these studios and laboratories because of labor conditions, and the company has started producing activities at the old London Film Company's studios at St. Margaret's-on-the-Thames. Gerald du Maurier, A. E. Mathew and Matheson Lang, prominent English actors, have been secured. Mr. Lang is now at work in "Carnival," which, it is said, as a play has taken London by storm.

"We must acknowledge the supremacy of American production methods and we are willing and anxious to learn them," says Mr. Crotch. "We are out to perfect our organization in such a way that our English stories in films shall be produced under the supervision of American directors, and our actors and actors trained to do the thing in the American way. We believe that Great Britain can supply stories and themes to the American people which will come to them with a fascinating freshness, but we are fully alive to the fact that such stories have got to be presented in the best possible way and must follow to a large extent American ideas and customs.

Distribution a Problem.

"The film can provide a real link between our two nations, between which there is already intercourse and sympathy. It will dissipate ignorance of each other's habits and thoughts and feelings; it will break down barriers and reunite us with a common, compelling bond of sympathy and mutual interest.

"I confess that I have not yet come to a final decision as to how our products will be the most effectively distributed so that our main object may be attained. For several weeks I have been in New York City garnering facts on trade conditions and American methods of exploitation, advertising and distribution. Later I hope to be able to say authoritatively whether we shall the more effectively pursue our purpose through one of your large distributing organizations or by the sale of territorial rights, or even by creating a distributing organization of our own. But in any case we are determined that our products shall be marketed here."

Mr. Crotch has already purchased in America over $80,000 worth of lighting and other studio equipment for the English studios in which the Alliance Corporation is at work.

In the directorate of this company, in addition to Mr. Crotch, are such well-known Englishmen as Sir Walter De Frece, M. P., prominent in affairs of the English theatre; Charles F. Highs, M. P., a leading advertising and publicity man; A. Baldwin Raper, M. P., a prominent merchant; Capt. John Hare, financier, and Walter Hutchinson, son of Sir George Hutchinson, the publisher.

Walter Kastner Killed.

Walter W. Kastner, manager of the Liberty and Gem theatres, Wenatchee, Wash., was killed on March 30, when he was crushed between an automobile and a truck. He was 28 years old and leaves a widow and two children. He had been in the picture business in Ballard for three years previous to going to Wenatchee.

Famous Players-Lasky Issues Report of Business Done for the Year 1919

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has issued its annual report for the year ended December 31, 1919, which contains for the first time a consolidated statement including the various subsidiary companies in which Famous Players-Lasky has an interest of 90 per cent. or more. There are other subsidiaries in which it has substantial interests, the earnings from which were included in the report.

Net earnings for the common stock, after allowing $1,000,000 for taxes and the proportion of earnings due to the new preferred, were $3,066,319, equal to $15.36 a share on the 199,675 shares of common stock. In the report $66,666 is set aside from earnings as the amount accruing to the $10,000,000 preferred stock for the thirty days in which it was outstanding in 1919.

The consolidated income account follows:

Gross income	$27,165,326
Operating expenses	23,032,341
	$4,132,985
Fed. Inc. and Ex. Prof. Taxes...	1,000,000
	$3,132,985
Earnings accruing to pfd.....	66,666
*Net profits for year.....	$3,066,319

* Equal to $15.36 a share on 199,675 shares of no-par value common stock.

The consolidated balance sheet shows the following assets as of December 31, 1919: Cash on hand, $8,282,800; bills receivable, $179,785; accounts receivable, $5,545,951; merchandise, $8,865,770; investments, $3,329,177; buildings, plant and equipment, $2,923,271; deferred charges, $866,202, and good will, $7,655,680, a total of $37,648,637. Liabilities shown are bills payable, $3,709,432; accounts payable, $1,185,161; advance payments, $1,281,636; federal income and excess profits taxes (estimated), $1,000,000; federal footage tax, $328,762; capital stock represented by $10,000,000 preferred and 199,675 shares of common, no par value, $26,013,780; preferred stock of Charles Frohman, Inc., not owned, $310,500; surplus, $3,119,366, a total of $37,648,637.

The statement indicates an increase of about 50 per cent. in gross income compared with the $18,090,500 reported for the year ended December 31, 1918. Tangible assets at the end of 1919 amounted to $37,648,637, against $10,886,750 at the close of 1918. This increase is accounted for by the sale of the $10,000,000 new preferred and the expansion in various lines of the motion picture industry.

Net current assets at the close of 1919 amounted to $23,580,558, which includes $706,252 of Liberty Bonds carried as investments. Current liabilities amounted to $8,204,991, leaving working capital of $15,375,567.

Novagraph in Larger Offices.

The Novagraph Film Corporation, producers of the "Analysis of Motion" pictures which appear weekly in the Pathe Review, in consequence of its rapidly increasing business, has found it necessary to establish executive and conference offices in 25 West Forty-fifth street, which offices pass to the possession of Novagraph May 1 next.

Charles Watson, president and general manager, has recently perfected a new camera which, when announcements of its details are made, will undoubtedly startle the industry. This newly invented camera, it is said, will revolutionize the use of motion pictures in scientific research.

Hutchison Serial to Start Soon.

The serial story in which Charles Hutchison will star for Pathe is now in preparation at the Robert Brunton Studios. The earlier episodes are rounding into shape in continuity form and it is expected that everything will be in readiness to start production within another week.

KEEPING IN PERSONAL TOUCH

By SAM SPEDON

ARTHUR JAMES has packed up and departed from the Fox studio on West Fifty-fifth street to 3 West Forty-fourth street, where he is now in business for himself. Miss Agatha McGovern followed in his train, leaving many sad hearts. Good luck to Mr. James in his new venture.

William Fox. Did you ever try to get in to see him at the new studios on West Fifty-fifth street, New York? And did you ever find out the name of that young gentleman who always holds you up politely yet firmly? Well, we found out. He is Henry K. Dunn. The right man in the right place.

Charles H. Rosenfeld has resigned his position as assistant branch manager of the New York office of Robertson-Cole to launch out for himself.

Jack O'Toole, of Chicago office of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, was in New York April 15. He said: "I am here on business, but I am going back to Chicago first of next week. Big doings are expected there at the exhibitors' and First National conventions."

Nate Dobson, formerly with Famous Players-Lasky as Buffalo representative, has resigned to go with Gardner Pictures at the New York end.

Ernest L. Ouimet, of Montreal, leaves for Los Angeles the latter part of April to bring his family back to their home in Montreal.

Holmes C. Walton, formerly associated with Backer & Baker, has been acting as an independent broker of plays, books and scripts for the past year. He expects to establish an office in the Guarantee Trust Building, on Fifth avenue, New York, in May.

William Robert (Bob) Daley, a popular member of the old Screen Club and at one time a Selig director, has been an invalid for the past three years or more at Los Angeles. His wife, Fritz Brunette, is his devoted companion.

Frank William Thring, managing director of the motion picture department of the J. C. Williamson, Ltd., of Australia and New Zealand, is at the Hotel Astor for a visit of several weeks. The J. C. Williamson, Ltd., is planning to build two large picture theatres, one in Melbourne and the other in Sydney, Australia, each to seat 3,000. Charles H. Ballantyne, one of the best known architects of Melbourne, is with Mr. Thring, and they are here to consult with American architects as to plans. The J. C. Williamson, Ltd., is one of the largest theatrical and motion picture enterprises in Australia and represents an investment of $3,500,000. From here they will go to San Francisco, where they will remain for several weeks prior to going to England and France for a lengthy visit.

Willard Mack is writing the continuity of "The Common Sin," his own story, for Burton King, who will use this Mack drama for his third independent feature.

Vincent Coleman has returned to the stage, after more than a year in motion pictures. Mr. Coleman opens in New York the week of April 26 in the leading male role of "Martini," a new Walter Hast production.

Major Gibbs, who was conspicuous with the British forces during the war, brother of Phillips Gibbs, celebrated war correspondent, has joined the Fox scenario staff.

Herbert Kaufman sailed for Europe on Saturday, April 17. Mr. Kaufman has been with the Selznick forces.

C. B. Frost, of the Universal Pittsburgh office, has resigned as publicity manager of that office, to take effect May 8.

T. R. Gardner, of Gardner Pictures, left for Albany and Buffalo on Monday, April 19, to be gone all week, just after booking "Tillie's Punctured Romance" at the New York Broadway Theatre—an eleventh hour request—for the week's program.

J. Le Roy has purchased the Garden Theatre at New Haven, Conn., from F. C. Karzanjian. Mr. Le Roy is the owner of the Auditorium Theatre at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Bill Raynor, manager of Pathe's New York office, is the proud father of a baby boy. All hands are doing well.

J. J. McCarthy, with his wife, sailed on the Baltic for Europe Saturday, April 17. Mr. McCarthy goes to look after the many European projects of Guy, Crosswell & Smith, Ltd., in connection with "Broken Blossoms" and Maurice Tourneur's latest production, "The County Fair." He will probably arrange for an early showing of "Broken Blossoms" in Paris. Mr. McCarthy will be away until August 1.

The Numa Productions, Inc., has disposed of "The Return of Tarzan" to Goldwyn, and through Goldwyn the rights for the United Kingdom have been sold to F. Stowell Company, of London, at a large figure.

Lee Beggs, an old-time Vitagraph player and director, is running the Great Kills Theatre at Great Kills, Staten Island, N. Y.

John McCay, formerly manager of distribution, has been made general manager of the Mayflower Pictures Corporation.

Maufred Feltler, of the All Star Features of Pittsburgh, was in New York the week of April 19 honeycombing filmdom for features and short subjects.

Herbert Yudkin left New York on April 19 for a trip to Chicago and the Middle West in the interests of "Screen Smiles," controlled by Victor Kremer for United States distribution.

Morris Fink, formerly sales manager of National Screen Service and brother of Herbert Lubin, of S. & L., has been engaged to manage the branch office at Tulsa, Okla., for the Peacock Productions, Inc.

W. K. Howard, who has been acting manager of Universal City studios, has resigned, it is reported.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Selznick, of Kansas City, are stopping at the Hotel Astor, New York, and will remain until April 26. Philip is a brother of Lewis J.

Phillip Rosenstein is now representative in the Connecticut territory for the Alexander Film Company, of which Harry Thomas, formerly of Fox, is general manager and William Alexander president.

Henry McMahon is doing publicity and heading the scenario department of Charles Urban's educational enterprises.

Tom Alexander, known in newspaper circles and political campaign motion pictures, is now with the Universal educational and industrial department.

Joe Brandt will leave the week of April 26 for a visit to the different film centers of the United States.

Leo Dwyer, of Cincinnati, president of Dwyer Brothers, Inc., manufacturers of the Cosmograph portable camera, was in New York week of April 12 visiting his New York representative, John A. Kent.

The Weiss brothers, who were connected with the Numa Pictures, Inc., have organized a new company under the title of Weiss Brothers, Inc. They will produce a series of two-reel animal pictures, comedies, and have engaged Al Santell, formerly director at Universal City, to direct them. Mr. Santell will reach New York May 1 and start producing May 15. Weiss Brothers are now possessors of twenty-three trained lions, a number of monkeys and several other wild species, to which they will add many others for use in their coming productions. In addition to using them themselves, they will rent them to other producers.

P. D. Cochrane, in charge of Universal poster department, who is a patient at the Radium Sanitarium, 203 West Seventieth street, New York, is rapidly mending from his protracted sickness. His sick-room looks like a conservatory of flowers, sent him by his numerous friends and associates in the industry.

Sam Harding, of the Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, was in New York week of April 12 calling on various offices of the industry and booked up all the Universal Jewels for the ensuing year.

A new organization has been formed in New York City, to be known as the Film Salesmen's Association, unaffiliated with the F. I. L. M. Club.

David G. Fisher, who directed and produced "When Bonds Are Loosed," is shortly to start another big production, to be announced in the near future.

Grace Davidson, star of the J.-G. picture, "Man's Plaything," for Republic, is to make another feature, written by Charles T. Horn.

Floyd Buckley, assistant director to B. A. Rolfe, producer of the eight-reel special, "Madonnas and Men," for Jans Pictures, Inc., had a narrow escape recently when a lion used in one of the old Roman scenes became ugly and tried to break things up about the studio.

Thomas Bandes, assistant manager of Select's New Haven office, is about to solve the H. C. L. problem by figuring $1 + 1 = 1$.

Jessie Levine, formerly assistant manager of Metro's New York exchange, is now manager of the Famous Pictures Sales Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City. Famous Pictures, besides handling other products, is in charge of the distribution of Tyrad features in the New York territory.

Frank Marion, one of the founders of Kalem Company, returned to New York from Florida on Monday, April 19, where he has been spending the winter.

Charles J. Giegerich, of the Robertson-Cole publicity staff, will accompany Jack Hurley's Georges Carpentier road show to exploit the R-C Carpentier feature and establish publicity representatives in different cities visited.

Leo Dennison, formerly representing United Theatre Picture Productions in Cleveland, and Harlan Star, manager of Tri-angle at Detroit, were in New York week of April 19. Mr. Dennison will return to Cleveland to handle some special productions.

M. Cohen, formerly with Realart, now in charge of the Republic exchange at Albany, was in New York during week of April 19.

To Announce Sub-Franchising Details at First National's Chicago Meeting

INDEPENDENT exhibitors in every territory, including all members of First National Exhibitors' Circuit, all branch managers, salesmen and exploitation men, the entire official staff at the home office in New York, editors and business representatives of all nationally circulated trade journals, and of all strictly territorial trade papers, together with producers and stars holding releasing contracts with the circuit, are busily making final preparations for attending the annual convention of the entire First National personnel, which begins at the Hotel Congress, Chicago, on Monday, April 26.

Matters of extreme moment to the entire industry, new methods which affect independent exhibitors, the present forms of film distribution, recently negotiated contracts between First National and stars and producers, and the official launching of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., with the full force of its radical and sweeping sub-franchising policy, will occupy the featured positions in the program of activities for the week.

Two special cars will leave New York on Sunday, attached to the Broadway Limited on the Pennsylvania Railroad, occupied by members, branch managers, salesmen, exploitation men, the editors of the trade journals, home office officials, stars and producers. Special First National cars will convey exhibitor members and branch office staffs from Atlanta, Washington, D. C., San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and Dallas, with stops at intermediate centers, including Louisville, Cincinnati, Denver, Salt Lake, Oklahoma City, Kansas City and St. Louis, where local members and exchange officials will join the several parties en route to Chicago. Timing of departures from both the East and West has been so arranged that the greater number of those who attend the meetings will reach Chicago early on Monday morning.

The Sub-Franchising Plan.

Probably the most important event of the week's sessions will be the assemblies of exhibitor members, exchange managers and salesmen wherein will be announced the complete details of the sub-franchising plan sponsored by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and on which it has employed a statistical department occupying an entire floor for the last four months. Inauguration of the rental system which is fixed, but the sub-franchising agreements, at a definite percentage of the exhibition value of each attraction for every theatre that is granted a franchise, brings one of the most radical and sweeping changes in years to the standard methods governing film distribution and introduces an entirely new arrangement between producers, stars and exhibitors.

It is this feature of the convention activities that is attracting scores of independent exhibitors to the meetings. Advices to the Exhibitors' Defense Committee of First National, according to the Circuit's announcement, include a great number of letters from independent theatre owners, requesting details on the sub-franchising plan, and stating their intention of attending the Chicago meeting to obtain the information first hand.

To Divide Convention Into Two Parts.

As at the 1919 convention, the Chicago meeting will consist of two branches or divisions—one of the exhibitor members in sessions to transact official First National business, and the other of exchange managers, salesmen and exploitation men, who will receive a series of instructions concerning the sub-franchise arrangement, so that they will be thoroughly versed in all its details and able to make their respective territorial announcements of franchise grants immediately upon their return to their several offices.

Two speeches of special significance are scheduled for the joint meetings of First National members and branch office personnel. The first will be made by Joseph M. Schenck, president of both the Norma Talmadge Film Company and the Constance Talmadge Film Company, and who, two weeks ago, publicly denied alleged statements that he has signed contracts for the distribution of Norma and Constance Talmadge attractions after their present arrangement with First National had been completed.

It is expected that Mr. Schenck will state clearly and finally his knowledge of the facts upon which these rumors have been based, and explain his position in a way that will leave no future opportunity for repetitions of what he terms "annoying competitive practices."

Bennett Promises "Explosion."

Whitman Bennett, who recently resigned his position as production manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Company to enter the ranks of independent producers with Lionel Barrymore as the star in a series of four special attractions which he will make for First National, has announced his intention of addressing the convention on a subject which he characterizes as nothing short of an "explosion."

"I've heard countless rumors in the last few weeks," he says, "to the effect that I am but temporarily active as an independent producer, that I represent interests other than my own, and reports of an equally ridiculous and erroneous color. First National has granted me the privilege of addressing its exhibitor members, and I am going to take advantage of the opportunity to 'explode' some real facts which will make it plain to the entire industry, after I have stated them publicly, that I can never again be other than an independent producer."

Miss Norma Talmadge will depart from her established rule against public appearances and invitations to attend exhibitor conventions, and be present at the First National gathering. It is probably that she will address the convention on the star's views of independent producers and independent exhibitors, and the obligations of co-operation and necessary mutual effort.

Those to Be Present.

Those who will attend the convention are: Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Williams, H. O. Schwalbe, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hammons, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Grant, S. F. and A. L. Jacobs, E. B. Johnson, David P. Howells, C. L. Yearsley, J. R. Grainger, Earl Hudson, J. C. Ragland, J. L. Hunter, P. Mooney, R. L. Giffen, Whitman Bennett, Joseph Klein, Mrs. Jane S. Johnson, Ernest Shipman, George Blaisdell, A. M. Fabian, L. W. Boynton, Robert Welsh, Fred Beecroft, J. H. Dannenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Schenck, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Fabina, all of New York City.

E. Mandelbaum, W. E. Lusk, Cleveland; R. H. Haines, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Moore, W. E. Richardson, B. C. Cunningham, Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ferrandini, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Senning, Richmond, Va.; James B. Clark, Joseph S. Skirboll, Pittsburgh; M. L. Finkelstein, J. F. Cubberley, H. Hilweg, Minneapolis; Jules E. Mastbaum, Philadelphia; L. L. Hall, Salt Lake City; Fred Dahnken, S. Y. Edwards, San Francisco; J. D. Von Herberg, F. V. Fisher, Seattle; Colonel Fred Levy, Lee L. Goldberg, Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Beacham, W. A. Saenger, Atlanta; E. E. Richards, N. J. Flynn,

Douglas Fairbanks is the star in this United Artists' production, which is said to be the most spectacular he has yet appeared in.

Kramer, Chas. Trimmer, B. Spry, Nathan H. Gordon, Boston; S. S. Schwartz, E. C. Rhoden, Des Moines; C. E. Holah, L. J. McCarty, Omaha; P. H. Smith, Buffalo, N. Y.; W. P. Dewees, Vancouver, B. C.

Constance Talmadge, on April 16, notified First National Exhibitors' Circuit that she would accompany her sister Norma and Joseph M. Schenck to the convention. This will mark the first time Constance Talmadge has ever made a personal appearance before a body of exhibitors. Speculation is rife as to whether she is going for the purpose of giving lessons in "virtuous vamping," "in search of a sinner," to find the counterpart of "a temperamental wife," or as "a love expert."

Highlights on the Circuit's

Convention Preparations

LIKE unto the advance steps prior to a mammoth family reunion are the preparations being made in the offices of the most prominent film centers in the United States this week in connection with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit convention to be held at Hotel Congress, Chicago, beginning Monday, April 26.

Despite the "outlaw" strike, the following bits of information have managed to filter through the mails and telegraph wires:

Sam Y. Edwards, of San Francisco, who'll sit in on the exchange managers' sessions by virtue of his connection with Turner & Dahnken, has wired his favorite supply agents in New York to reserve one bottle of green fountain-pen ink to guarantee his signature on hotel checks.

Jimmie Granger, New York manager for Marshall Neilan Productions, is having his left-hand sparkler renovated and shined preparatory to boarding the First National Special for Chicago, leaving April 25.

J. F. Cubberly, First National exchange manager at Minneapolis, is going to Chicago via New York. "I want to see if I can locate an old friend named 'Walker,'" J. F. wired.

A. H. Blank, First National franchise holder for the Des Moines territory, and Watterson R. Rothacker, of "there are reasons—come and see them," will shake hands at the First National convention for the first time in two long weeks.

Lee R. Goldberg, First National exchange manager at Louisville, has responded to requests and bluffs and will carry to the convention a gold-headed umbrella presented to him by Colonel Fred Levy.

C. E. Holah, First National exchange manager at Omaha, is utilizing the week in having new lenses fitted to his glasses. In this way he hopes to cope with Chi's smoke screens.

Also taking precautionary steps is C. R. Beacham, First National exchange manager at Atlanta, who has wired the Congress Hotel to provide a smoke screen for his bedroom.

J. D. Williams, manager First National Exhibitors' Circuit, en route home from California, passes himself at Cleveland en route to the convention at Chicago.

N. H. Gordon, First National franchise holder for Boston, was given his ticket for the Chicago convention early this week. Making a flying trip to Boston in time to return to Chicago, he attempted to use the convention ticket. He was forced to buy a "first run" engagement on a Boston train.

Joseph W. Skirboll, manager Pittsburgh's First National Exchange, has promised to provide Wheeling stogies for all in attendance at the convention. "There'll be plenty of 'kick' in the cigars if not in the stogies," says J. W.

Charles Ray Secures the First Scenario Written by Rob Wagner, Popular Author

ROB WAGNER, who for five years has been writing humorous and informative motion picture articles for the Saturday Evening Post, has at last turned to the screen and has made his first scenario for Charles Ray.

Although Mr. Ray, under his recent arrangement with Arthur S. Kane and the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, is appearing mainly in suitable stories adapted from plays of reputation and big novels, the star's admiration for the work of Mr. Wagner and for the latter's unusual popularity among millions of Post readers has led to the acceptance of two original scenarios from the pen of the humorous writer. The initial First National vehicle in which Arthur S. Kane will present the star is "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," adapted to the screen from the highly successful play of George M. Cohan.

Because of the stress laid by exhibitors on the value of vehicles that are known widely through the country, and not merely in certain localities, good story material from the Saturday Evening Post has long been considered particularly desirable by producing organizations. The value of the Saturday Evening Post stories, as attested to by showmen, is not to be doubted, with a circulation figure, according to the publishers, of 10,000,000 readers. A story by Mr. Wagner is therefore considered doubly valuable because his appeal in this national magazine has been entirely to the followers of motion pictures.

Not Signed as Editor for Ray.

Not only has Wagner created his scenarios with Charles Ray as the central motion picture figure, but the magazine writer is reversing the usual procedure and has already arranged for the appearance of both scripts and stories in prominent publications. This will insure the titles of Ray's films the utmost advance publicity in magazines of country-wide circulation.

This is the first time that Wagner has ever written directly for the screen, although he is possibly the best known author of pictures and picture folk. Mr. Wagner's first scenario work has proved profitable, not only because the price paid for his stories was larger than any figure he has ever received from the magazines, but because the news of his services to Ray are bringing many requests from western producers to fill other orders for scenarios. Mr. Wagner has always been a free lance writer and the report of his signing up with the First National star as editor is declared by the Ray Productions to be untrue.

Neither Mr. Ray, who concluded negotiations with the writer personally, nor Mr. Wagner himself, have revealed the subject matter of either of the Rob Wagner stories.

Inter-Ocean to Establish Offices in Western Cities

AN announcement of interest is embodied in a statement issued this week from the offices of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, according to which it plans to establish West Coast offices through which it will handle the distribution of motion picture accessories in that territory, and which offices will expedite shipments of motion pictures and accessory products to far eastern and Australian foreign countries.

"Owing to the large increase in business which has developed on the West Coast within the past year, and because of the increased trade balances in our favor in exports to the far eastern and Australian countries, Inter-Ocean Film Corporation has decided to open offices in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland, with western executive offices in Los Angeles," says the statement issued by Inter-Ocean.

"These offices will exploit motion picture accessories for which Inter-Ocean Film Corporation controls exclusive agencies in the Pacific Coast States; and will furthermore serve as depots to accelerate far eastern shipments of films and motion picture accessories.

"Our branches in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland will specialize in furnishing a number of accessory products, such as machines, carbons, screens, raw stock and studio equipment.

Kaufman Starts on Trip.

Eugene H. Kaufman, in charge of the accessory department of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, left Sunday, April 18, for an extended trip to the coast, where he will personally supervise the opening of the new branch offices. While on his way to the coast, Mr. Kaufman will make brief stop-overs at Cleveland, Chicago and Denver in the interests of products which Inter-Ocean controls for distribution.

"Mr. Kaufman will be in charge of the West Coast offices. Upon his return to New York he will operate Inter-Ocean's accessory department in conjunction with the western offices."

Cleveland Papers Continue to Attack Ohio Censorship

ONE of the most scathing criticisms of the work of the Ohio Board of Film Censorship was that printed recently in the Cleveland Press. This, however, is not a new thing, for every now and then an Ohio newspaper takes issue with the board. This editorial, however, was more severe than usual. It follows:

"Ohio's state censors continue to impose their tastes on the public by force of law, cutting movies according to rules which have no bearing on public morals. Month after month they eliminate scenes which disregard some ancient superstition, or which can be condemned only on the ground that they are inelegant. As if nicety and elegance had anything to do with the public interest!

"Snakes are exhibited in almost every zoo. A snake has no more to do with morals than a fish. But some censor dislikes snakes and the whole power of the state imposes this individual's taste on all the people of Ohio. Because someone on the board disapproves of women smoking, no picture of a woman with a cigarette may be shown, be she Carmen or the Queen of England.

"The Idol Dancer,' Griffith's newest, is cut. The board also finds it necessary to cut John Barrymore's representation of Hyde in 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.' Barrymore, by inference, is labeled a callous person from whom the public must be protected by law and the superior sensibility of the censors at Columbus.

"Treasure Island,' from the famous tale by R. L. Stevenson, is about pirates who were hard fellows, cruel and merciless cutthroats. But the vigorous and expressive language offends the censors and they issued an order, 'Cut out subtitle 'I'm going to slit his throat.'"

Washington Men Argue Convincingly at Congressional Hearing on Wheeler Bill

FOR the first time that a committee of motion picture men appeared before a Congressional committee to combat legislation, a good impression was made, for Harry M. Crandall, Charles Linkins and Tom Moore, representing the exhibitors, and Roland Robbins, representing the other theatre interests, presented very convincing arguments against the Wheeler bill.

The theatre men of Washington, D. C., have been somewhat perturbed over the possibility of the early enactment of legislation that would prohibit them from selling tickets unless there was a seat available for each ticketholder. A meeting of the exhibitors and vaudeville men was called and Messrs. Crandall, Robbins and Linkins selected as a committee to represent them.

The speakers were introduced to the members of the House Committee on the District of Columbia, which conducted the hearing, by Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. Mr. Connolly confined himself to the matter of introductions and did not attempt each time to acquaint the committeemen with what the next speaker would say. He was brief and to the point, and made a good impression.

Crandall Proves Eloquent.

Congressman Wheeler, author of the bill, was present at the hearing but made no attempt to support it. Without attempting to make a record for oratory, Harry M. Crandall proceeded to show the committeemen that the bill would work against the best interests of the general public instead of protecting it. The bill was aimed at the large crowds of people that congregate in the lobbies just before each show begins, awaiting the conclusion of the preceding show in order to secure seats. The charge made was that the exhibitors were substantially guilty of misrepresentation, selling admissions in excess of capacity.

Mr. Crandall pointed out that there is a District of Columbia regulation that compels the theatre builders to produce a lobby containing sufficient floor space to guarantee one and one-half feet for each person where the seating capacity exceeds 500. That is for the protection of the people. It permits them to get off the street and leave the sidewalks clear for pedestrians, prevents crowds congregating on the sidewalks in front of the theatres and blocking entrances to the stores, protects the people in inclement weather and makes theatre ingress and egress easier.

Quotes Instance During War.

He pointed out that when, during the war, he exhibited "Open Your Eyes" for the Public Health Service to segregated audiences, there was a double line in front of the building that extended for two long blocks, required four policemen to insure order, thirty-five to forty-five minutes to clear the streets and then there was only a three-quarter full house.

That occurrence was unusual, yet it would be an everyday affair following the passage of the bill, he claimed. The theatres are so built that present systems with regard to admitting and seating an audience cannot be changed effectively. The law also would discriminate against the exhibitor in the event that patrons were admitted when seats were available, which seats, however, were not desirable and after the patrons were ushered to them should refuse to accept them and demand permission to stand until other seats should become available.

Emphasis was laid on the fact that patrons select seats best suited to them from the standpoint of individual vision. If undesirable seats are first taken, the patron has the privilege of changing whenever other seats are available and as often as he wishes.

Would Oblige Increase in Prices.

If the exhibitors are deprived of this quick method of handling patrons a considerable loss of revenue would result. This would necessitate increasing admissions, a condition which the exhibitors are anxious to avoid. He pointed out that all during the war the admission charge to the Apollo and Avenue Grand was maintained at 10 cents despite increased operating costs, and it was not until last fall that this was advanced, and then only 3 cents, making admission, war tax included, 15 cents.

Physical protection of the public results from the strict observance of the police, fire and building regulations. From time to time the exhibitors hold meetings with the officials of the departments of the city government involved and every effort is made to insure a maximum protection by co-operation. Mr. Crandall invited the committeemen to permit him to conduct them on a trip of the houses to show conditions as they actually are.

The passage of the Wheeler bill and the reduced attendance would make necessary the discontinuance of the passes now given in large numbers to the army and navy hospitals and the orphanages of Washington. Several thousand men are taken care of weekly in Washington in this way.

Congressman Murphy Argues.

Mr. Crandall declared that the smaller houses would be put out of business, and Congressman Murphy, of Ohio, a prominent business man in Steubenville when in private life, was very much interested in the statement that the exhibitors are subjected to thirteen different taxes and innumerable regulations that directly affect profits. Mr. Murphy sympathized with the theatre men and assisted them greatly in bringing out salient points that operated against the proposed law.

"Is it not a fact that the prosperity of the moving picture business is based on courtesy to your patrons?" he asked. "If you did impose on the public by selling tickets when no seats were available it would become an abuse and your business would suffer."

By his questions and his statements made from time to time during the hearing he showed that existing conditions with regard to standing room are generally acceptable to the public. Reversing the condition, if the public was not satisfied, box office receipts would suffer.

Roland Robbins, manager of Keith's Theatre, made a great impression on the Congressmen following a rather gruelling experience with Congressman Focht, of Pennsylvania, during which the latter charged the witness with profiteering. That was rather an individual controversy and, on the whole, the proposed legislation would affect his interests less than those of the motion picture men.

The law would prove very drastic, he said. Many of the theatre men entered into leases for their houses with the understanding that the theatre had a certain amount of seating capacity and standing room, and the rentals were based on that understanding.

Congressman Clark Burdick, of Rhode Island, who has on previous occasions co-operated with the motion picture men of his state, suggested that the public throughout the United States knows that the individual patron may or may not get a seat right away and is perfectly willing to place its patronage on that basis. It would not be possible for the motion picture theatres to continue in business with a lack of service and the men running them are certainly disposed to give service and to meet the situation.

Believes Public Is Satisfied.

Congressman Stuart F. Reed, of West Virginia, told of his experience in seeking admission to Washington theatres and expressed a willingness to stand if seats are not available.

A. Julian Brylawski told how patrons are handled for admission to the Cosmos Theatre, of which he is the manager. He was followed by Tom Moore, who outlined his experience as a motion picture theatre operator covering a long period of years. He declared that the public is well satisfied. He predicted that prices would have to be doubled under the proposed law and he detailed for the benefit of the congressmen the huge investments represented by the large and gorgeous lobbies that were built in compliance with the building regulations.

Mr. Linkins explained in detail the effect of the proposed law on the smaller theatres, using as an example his own house, the Empire, in the northeast section of the city.

Attitude of Committee Favorable.

The meeting ended abruptly with a controversy between Tom Moore and Robert Long, manager of Moore's Rialto Theatre, on the one side, and one W. R. Scott, editor of a unique publication designed to combat commercial bribery and tipping, growing out of a personal dispute that resulted from the latter's inability to secure a seat during a performance at the theatre. He spoke from the public's viewpoint, he said. He had not read the bill, was not acquainted with its provisions and did not approve of it.

The committeemen held that the matter was strictly a personal one to be thrashed out in the courts or somewhere else and not in the committee room and an adjournment was taken.

The theatre men were well pleased with the fairness of the congressmen and the fair attitude taken by Chairman Carl Mapes.

It is the opinion of the Washington correspondent of Moving Picture World that the arguments set forth by the witnesses were so convincing that the members of the Congressional Committee will agree that no additional legislation is necessary at this time, and the bill will be laid on the shelf. On their part, the exhibitors will "clean house" to minimize complaints.

J. V. Houston Sells Theatres.

F. L. Terwilliger and F. U. Patrick have taken over the theatre properties of J. V. Houston in Klamath County, Oregon, with the exception of the Houston Opera House. They will operate the Star Theatre in Klamath Falls and the theatres at Merrill and Dorris. The Temple Theatre in Klamath Falls will be closed.

Warner Oland and Eileen Percy Stars of "Third Eye," Latest Pathe Serial

IT is not particularly hard to find a Warner at the Warner Brothers studio, because there are three of the five well-known Warners now in our midst, but it is sometimes difficult to find A. Warner, because A. Warner does not come out to the West Coast very often and when he does come he usually has so many things on the fire that he is exceedingly hard to locate.

So the third time I went down to the Warner plant on South Main street I was fortunate in finding Abe at home. He had been reviewing "Trouble," a comedy in which Al St. John stars, and was feeling fit because the audience had laughed at it. "When people laugh at trouble, it's a good sign, isn't it?" he said.

I began my cross-examination and this is what Abe told me about his plans:

"We are going to build a new studio. This studio here is all right but we want our own plant. We've already got the ground on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood.

Will Produce Features.

"We will keep on with the Al St. John films at the rate of twelve a year, and we will make twenty-six Monty Banks comedies a year. We are going to work a new plan on the Monty Banks films. We will use two directors. While one is directing Monty, the other will be getting his scenario in shape. As soon as the actual shooting is done on the first one, the first director will cut and edit his stuff, and the other one will start in filming the second picture, which he was getting ready while the first director was working. We feel sure that this will give better results than the usual manner of making comedies."

"How about the rumor that you are going in for the production of big features?" I asked.

"We are negotiating for two stars—big ones," replied Abe, "but I can't give out the names yet. We think we will get them, and that will mean that we will enter the big feature end of the business. We plan to make a series of strong dramas, something that we will be proud of—the kind of pictures that will be in the class that is now being demanded by exhibitors of the better type."

"Tell me about the Warner Brothers," I said.

Sam Started Family in Film Business.

"Well, there's Sam, Jack, Harry, Dave and myself. Harry is the oldest, I come next. Sam's in the middle, Dave's the kid of the family and Jack is between him and Sam. We are all in the film business. Sam and Jack are here; Harry's in New York, and Dave is in Cleveland. I make New York my headquarters."

"How did you all come to get in the film business?" I asked.

"I guess Sam started it, although I got the idea at about the same time. I started out in life as a soap salesman for Swift and Company of Chicago. I didn't care for the soap business, and while I was figuring around for something else, I saw a little show in Ohio that was making money.

"I investigated the business, and decided that I was going to be a picture show man. I quit the soap job and went home, where I found that Sam had bought a projecting machine, a calcium light outfit, and a copy of 'The Great Train Robbery.'"

"We organized a little company. I was manager, Sam was operator; our sister came along to play the piano, and Jack, who was always a pretty good comedian, blacked up and did a coon song-and-dance act.

S. R. O. for Odd Reason.

"That was the start. We didn't make much money with our road show, and I started out to locate a theatre. I found a place in a little town in Pennsylvania. After I got the place all fitted up, I didn't have enough money to buy seats, and so I rented ninety-eight folding chairs from an undertaker with the understanding that he was to have them when he needed them. When the undertaker had a funeral in the afternoon, we played to standing room only.

"That was long ago, of course. The formation of Warner's Features came after this. We were the first concern to go into the feature business, and we had exchanges in all of the big cities of the country at one time.

"We made 'The Perils of the Plains,' the first three-reel western ever filmed. It was a big money maker and was shown for years. We have had many ups and downs. One of our most successful ventures was with 'My Four Years in Germany.'"

"We are planning to go into the business of feature making on a big scale for two reasons we want to widen out and because we all believe that the best time the film business has ever seen is coming—in fact, it is here right now."

Cohen Writes Theatre Owners Urging National Organization

THE greatest evil confronting us today is the question of the producer-distributor trying to create a monopoly throughout the entire country, by securing and building theatres in direct competition with us, and if this practice is not stopped at once it may result in putting some of the independent exhibitors out of business. There may be today in your own locality representatives of producer-distributors making a close survey of the possibility of building a competitive theatre."

That is the warning sounded in a letter recently sent out to exhibitors by Sydney S. Cohen, temporary chairman of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Continuing, he declares it impossible to tell what channels producer-distributors may be using. It may be percentage booking, "which they are using now for the purpose of securing data necessary for them to promote a new theatre in your territory, or it may be through some so-called co-operative exhibitors' association," he writes.

Other matters which Mr. Cohen points to as needing immediate action by exhibitors are the deposit system, percentage, the order of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry regarding the use of posters, the prevailing form of contract, the refusal of exchanges to ship C. O. D., the withholding of pictures contracted for and the 5 per cent. tax, "which, with the increased film rental, is almost 15 per cent., or three times what Congress expected to receive from this source."

The letter urges the formation of a powerful national exhibitors' organization to have the backing of every stage organization or league as well as of every individual exhibitor. "Do not be discouraged by past failures to organize nationally or by any apparent dissension in your state organization," the letter concludes, "for so long as producers own theatres, discord is bound to exist."

Englishman Wants to Buy Here.

A. Heynes, representing Levetus & Co., of London, will be in New York City about May 8 seeking serials, comedies and special features for exclusive use for the markets of India, Burma and Ceylon. He also will get in touch with manufacturers of projectors, engines, generators, theatre chairs, screens and other accessories of a motion picture theatre. He asks manufacturers interested to write him in the care of Frank U. Davis & Co., 35 Warren street, New York City, and to mark the letters "to await arrival."

Lincoln Theatre Opens.

The Lincoln Theatre, Parkersburg, W. Va., was opened on Monday evening, April 12, by the Smoot Amusement Company, of which Charles S. Smoot is president. The other officers are F. C. Smoot, general manager; Frank J. Hassett, vice-president, and Julia Smoot Cotterman, secretary. The theatre is named after the great emancipator.

DIRECTORS representing more than 1,200 leading exhibitors holding franchises in National Picture Theatres, Inc., held their first convention in New York City recently and heard President Lewis J. Selznick assert it is his determination to push National Pictures to the utmost. The convention by a unanimous vote pledged itself to stand behind Mr. Selznick, founder of the organization, and give him its utmost support.

So interesting were the reports received from everyone and so rose were the plans outlined for the future that the sessions in the Hotel Astor were more like celebrations than a convention.

Plans for Big Specials.

Added zest was given when it was announced that a number of stars are under consideration for the National proposition and that plans are under way for several specials.

Complete control of the corporation was turned over to the exhibitors by President Selznick through the appointment of three leading exhibitors to frame the bylaws which will govern all operations of the organization.

"I believe it is essential to the best interests of National Picture Theatres, Inc., that all important matters of policy shall be decided by exhibitor-directors, and, as the bylaws are among the most important factors to our success, I want to carry out the principals of self-government to the limit," said Mr. Selznick.

Immediately afterward the following were appointed a committee on bylaws: George Giles, Boston, owner of several large theatres and identified with other large business interest; Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, St. Louis, a leading exhibitor; Ross D. Rogers, Wichita Falls, Tex., of the firm of Dye, Ford & Rogers, one of the largest exhibitor organizations in the Southwest.

More Directors Elected.

Before the convention the following directors had been chosen: Nat Ascher, Chicago; Aaron J. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago; Harry Lubliner, of Lubliner & Trinz, Chicago; Jules Mastbaum, of the Stanley Booking Company, Philadelphia; Tom Saxe, of Milwaukee. This board was enlarged at the convention by the election of Harry Bernstein, Richmond, Va.; W. H. Clune, Los Angeles; Harry Crandall, Washington; Fred Dolle, Louisville; George Giles, Boston; John P. Harris, Pittsburgh; Ike Libson, Cincinnati; Charles Olson, Indianapolis; Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, St. Louis; E. S. Renner, Youngstown, Ohio; Ross B. Rogers, Wichita Falls, Tex.; George Simpson, Rochester, and Jake Wells, Richmond.

It was also announced that at the next meeting William Swanson, of Salt Lake; Mike Shea, of Buffalo, and Ruben & Finkelstein, of Minneapolis, would be elected, together with directors from Kansas City, Seattle, Omaha, Des Moines, Charlotte, N. C., Oklahoma City, Newark, Atlantic City and New Orleans.

In supplementing his opening remarks, President Selznick told the convention that its membership was not only building for today's business, but for years to come. It was then that Mr. Selznick told the members that the unity of spirit and co-operation displayed since National Pictures was born had made him so enthusiastic concerning the future that he was contemplating a plan to pool his entire resources with the corporation. This would make all the output of the Selznick studios available to National on its profit-sharing basis.

Board to Govern Releases.

The question of the number of releases to be issued in the year by National Pictures was discussed, and left to the decision of the board of directors, who will take the matter up at its next meeting. The number will be governed solely by the wishes of the exhibitors. The board will meet soon.

While the franchise holders were in convention, the sales force met with C. R. Seelye, general manager, and attended the sessions of the governing body. It was reported that the quota of franchises set for each territory has been met or would be reached in a few weeks.

Among the managers present were Lloyd Willis, general sales manager; E. J. O'Donnell, general representative; Charles R. Gilman, western division manager; Stanley W. Hand, Boston; Milton Simon, Cincinnati; Syd Rosenthal, Cleveland; E. C. Reeves, Dallas; G. T. Landis, Indianapolis; Phil Selznick, Kansas City; Jack Levy, New York; Harvey B. Day, Philadelphia; Ira Aronson, Pittsburg; D. F. O'Donnell, Washington.

Zilelian Brings Print of Armenia Films' "Joseph"

HOVHANNES H. ZILELIAN, proprietor of the Armenia Films, Milan, accompanied by O. Cairo, is registered at the Commodore Hotel, New York. Mr. Zilelian has come to the United States bringing the negative and one positive film of his company's spectacular production of "Joseph and His Brethren," which it is his intention to sell. Available are all rights except those to France, England, Switzerland, Italy and Turkey. The picture runs in its present form about 7,700 feet. Giocondo Fino, a celebrated Italian master, has composed an accompanying music score.

The "Balking Scene" from Rom. & Jul.

As given by Hank Mann and Madge Kirby in Arrow's "A Roaming Romeo."

Many of the scenes of "Joseph" were taken in Egypt. The stills of the picture indicate that it was staged on an unusual scale, and that large numbers of men and women were engaged in its making. The company states that $75,000 was spent in the fourteen months devoted to the photographing of the production. Every attention is said to have been given to detail and to insure its acceptance by those of all creeds. Signor Devergillis plays Joseph and Mlle. Dedi is seen as Joseph's wife.

Miriam Cooper Leads in First Independent Walsh Picture

MIRIAM COOPER, playing the leading role in "The Deep Purple," the first of the R. A. Walsh independent productions, was discovered by D. W. Griffith. She played in many of the biggest photo-plays made by this producer, including "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

Before her debut in pictures, Miss Cooper was a student in one of the best known art academies in the country, and only left her studios when Mr. Griffith persuaded her that she could make good in the pictures.

Miss Cooper's screen career is unique if only for the fact that she was never obliged to act as an extra in any of the studios. Griffith started her with a small part, and since that time her success has been rapid. She was one of the old Biograph company, and it was in the old Biograph studio that she first played a part for Mr. Griffith.

Posed for Harrison Fisher.

Shortly after Miss Cooper began work in pictures, Harrison Fisher, the artist, saw her and asked her to pose for him. Though reluctant, she agreed, and later had the distinction of being claimed by Mr. Fisher as the model with the most perfectly formed head it had ever been his good fortune to paint.

In "The Deep Purple" Miriam Cooper portrays the difficult role of an innocent young country girl who finds herself being used as decoy by the most notorious gang of confidence men in New York City.

David Picker Sells Theatres to Marcus Loew Enterprises

THE Marcus Loew Enterprises have taken over the four theatres owned and operated in New York City by David Picker—the Rio, on upper Broadway, and the Spooner, Elmsmere and Victory in the Bronx. Mr. Loew last year acquired the Burland, which was formerly owned by Mr. Picker.

The deal is said to indicate an invasion by Mr. Loew of Moss, Fox and Sydney Cohen territory. Mr. Cohen has the Empire, Bronx Strand, McKinley Square and Tremont, and Mr. Moss has the Hamilton and the new one he is building at 181st street and Broadway. Fox runs the Audobon and the Washington in this neighborhood as well.

Members of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce are said to be indignant at Mr. Picker, charging that the sale of his houses to Mr. Loew was pending at the time he objected to the chamber's opposition regarding the use of Mr. Loew's name on Metro productions, and that his attitude at that time was assumed.

President Hutchinson of American Says Firm Will Release Bigger Pictures Soon

FROM President Samuel S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company, Inc., the Moving Picture World has obtained a semi-annual statement relating to the American's production achievements of the past and commenting on American's policy for the future. The statement which follows indicates that some exceptionally noteworthy offerings are to be looked forward to within the next few months.

Big stories by big authors, enacted by casts of well known players chosen for their competency, mark these forthcoming productions, and President Hutchinson is emphatic in his assertion that big and successful as have been the "Flying A" productions released in the past six months, still bigger and more successful attractions will be released in the next six months.

Promises Fulfilled.

"At the beginning of the present season, six months ago," said Mr. Hutchinson, in his Chicago office, "I made the statement that the American Film Company would in the future make only big special features and that it had ceased entirely the making of program pictures. I promised the exhibitors of America that American intended to handle each picture as a separate entity, working as though that production were the only one we expected to produce, and that our whole future success depended upon its making good 1000 per cent with the exhibitors. That was my promise to the exhibitors of the country. Now we have progressed to the point where we can look back over the past and recount the fulfillment of my promises.

"Our first release under the new policy was "Six Feet Four," made from Jackson Gregory's novel of the same title, a story that had been read by millions. William Russell was the star in it and seldom if ever appeared to better advantage. The picture was issued with numerous advertising aids and immediately made good all the promises concerning it. It has played in the foremost theatres in America. Every exhibitor who has shown it has made big money with it. It is still an attraction extraordinary, one which is playing to capacity business wherever it is being shown.

Future Pictures Will Be Bigger.

"The same sort of report can be made on the American specials which followed. I invite anyone to look up the records of the successes scored by such 'Flying A' pictures as 'The Hellion,' 'Eve in Exile,' 'The Valley of Tomorrow,' 'The Dangerous Talent,' 'The Honey Bee' and 'Slam Bang Jim.' You'll find that every last one of them is a big money maker. We are proud of them. The exhibitor has been pleased with the way they made good for him. The theatre patrons enjoyed them. They stand as a record of promises fulfilled.

"Now with reference to American's policy for the future," continued President Hutchinson. "I am happy to declare without reservation that our offerings for the next six months of the season will continue to be big specials—greater than ever. Our forthcoming attractions are based on the works of noted writers—stories which have been successes in fiction form, stories which are in every way suitable for presentation in films.

Stories by Well-known Authors.

"Just to mention a few names, we shall within the next few months offer big special features based on stories by such writers as Albert Payson Terhune, Henry Russell Miller, David Anderson, Cosmo Hamilton, P. G. Wodehouse, and some attractions the stories of which have been specially written for the screen by Lois Zellner.

"Capable directors and competent players have arranged and enacted these vehicles in such a manner that they will have an even more powerful appeal in their celluloid form than they had as fiction stories. One of our early releases will be 'The Thirtieth Piece of Silver,' from Albert Payson Terhune's novel of the same title. Included in the cast interpreting it are Margarita Fisher, King Baggot, Forrest Stanley, Lillian Leighton and many other favorites.

Owen and Trenton in "House of Toys."

"Seena Owen and Pell Trenton are the featured leads in 'The House of Toys' adapted from Henry Russell Miller's novel and in their support will be found such players as Helen Jerome Eddy, George Hernandez, Henry Barrows, Marian Skinner, Nanine Wright, Perry Banks, and Stanhope Wheatcroft. Milton Sills and Margareta Fisher appear in Cosmo Hamilton's 'The Week-End,' aided by Bertram Grasby, Harvey Clark, Alice Wilson and Mayme Kelso. In David Anderson's novel 'The Blue Moon,' one of Bobbs-Merrill Company's best selling books, are Eleanor Fields, Pell Trenton, Harry Northrup, Herbert Standing, Margaret McWade, James Gordon and Sidney Franklin. The same sort of competent casts appear in Lois Zellner's 'The Gamblers' and 'Payment Guaranteed,' in P. G. Wodehouse's 'Their Mutual Child' and in 'Peggy Rebels.'

I am proud that exhibitors everywhere today look upon 'Flying A' specials as 'sure-fire' hits and book our offerings as fast as they are released, with the advance certainty that they have picked another 'winner,' a picture that will really 'draw.' We are going to merit that confidence on the part of the exhibitor you may be sure, for such a record, once established, is too precious to endanger it by putting out any production of an inferior sort. American specials are going to grow better and better, as time goes on, going to make even more money and, consequently, be even more popular with the exhibitors of the nation."

Moving Picture World,
New York City.

Gentlemen: Inclosed you will find $3, in payment for yearly subscription to your valuable trade journal.

I have been a reader of your paper for the last thirteen years, and I can truthfully say that during that period I haven't missed more than a half-dozen numbers, and further wish to assure you that I couldn't remain in business and be without it.

Yours very truly,

J. H. BLAWITZ.

J. Kennedy Lewis to Aid Dr. Sutton.

J. Kennedy Lewis, former chief of the Naval Board of Review for the censorship of motion pictures for export, Third Naval District, national adjutant general and chief of staff of the United American War Veterans, will act in conjunction with Dr. McWalter B. Sutton, surgeon general, in directing the organization's membership drive to enroll 100,000 ex-service men residing in the metropolitan district.

The United American War Veterans have obtained from Adjutant General Harris the exclusive privilege of exhibiting "The Price of Peace," a motion picture produced during the war by the army Signal Corps, which depicts the American troops in action.

Change Title of First Collier Picture.

With the recent announcement of the acquisition of William Collier, one of the best known comedy actors on the American stage as a Selznick star, there was also made known the working title of the first Collier production for Selznick, "The New Butler."

Myron Selznick sponsored the statement this week that he has definitely decided to name the first Collier picture, "The Servant Question."

We Have With Us Today

Alec Lorimore, Who Wears the Croix de Foch, or Order of Generals-Who-Get-There

AS Abe Martin (not a press agent) says, "When you think of cigarettes think of Sweet Cleopatras." With this introductory bit of charity in the way of free advertising, we will get to the very heart—nay—the crux, nub, and center of our story, to wit: "When you think of Australia, think of Lorimore."

The stevedore captain up at the Bronx Zoo will protest this, publicly no doubt, calling it a heresy against the Kangaroo Doctrine, but he will forget that we infants write always and only of our own industry. Therefore, we repeat, "When you think of Australia, think of Lorimore."

Gets the Croix de Foch.

Three years ago when Alec Lorimore went to Australia as managing director of Feature Films, Ltd., distributors of Paramount-Artcraft in Australasia, the Famous Players-Lasky product comprised about 6 per cent. of the pictures shown in that territory. Today more than 60 per cent. of the film business in Australasia represents Paramount-Artcraft. Mr. Lorimore will step three paces forward and receive the Croix de Foch, the Order of the Generals Who Get There.

We talked with this curly-headed English specimen of film field marshal in the office of O. R. Geyer, who puts forth the publicity on the foreign activities of Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Lorimore had just put in from Sydney, N. S. W., his first visit to America since he sailed three years ago to enter the Australasian film lists with the Paramount-Artcraft trademark as the device on his shield.

When Mr. Lorimore, Columbuslike, raised his banner on Australian soil, a staff of four persons was sufficient to handle the business of Feature Films, Ltd. On coming to America on this trip, he left behind him a staff of one hundred men and women in the main office at Sydney and forces in the branches at Adelaide, Brisbane, Hobart, Melbourne, Perth, and Wellington. Mr. Lorimore is here for a series of conferences with E. E. Shauer, who directs the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky.

C'est l'Influenza, too.

The French have an expression which, punctuated with a shrug of the shoulders and properly accented with the eyes, fits more world conditions, including the high price of overalls and the continued Teuton arrogance than any other linguistic combination in existence. Said combination of consonants and vowels is "C'est la guerre," which, translated to the language of the king and Mayor Hylan is "It is the war"—accent on the THE. The French insist on the THE.

According to Mr. Lorimore, it is THE war which knocked several cross-sections from the expansion blue prints of Australasia. Not only the film business, but every industry collected some choice crimps. Then with the coming of peace, it was THE influenza which pinch-hit for THE war in the interference game and polished off the exhibitors with the thoroughness of the pennant winning Cincinnati Reds.

All of which colloquial language will furnish the impression that the exhibitors and everybody else in the Australasian film business went through the Hard Times. Mr. Lorimore will assure you that they did. War-time interference with shipping was a serious stumbling block, and if American exhibitors can imagine a combination influenza epidemic and railroad strike, they might be able to get the proper slant on Australian difficulties.

Prospering Now.

But without donning the rosy-hued glasses of the optimist for a look at the Island Continent, it is plain to see that Australian exhibitor today is enjoying some of the prosperity which, as the percentage boom indicates, is the joy of his

Alec Lorimore.

American brother. This on the authority of Mr. Lorimore.

"One result of this prosperity," said Mr. Lorimore, "is the inauguration of a theatre-building boom which will do much to relieve the industry of the handicap of the primitive houses to which the greater part of the population has been forced to go for amusement. When I left Sydney, thirty new houses of the larger and better type were under construction or projected for early building.

"Open Work" the Style.

"The average theatre in the smaller communities is a wooden shack or a wooden frame covered with sheet iron. Australia has about eight hundred theatres, the majority being of the 'sheet iron' type. Open air shows are numerous.

"It is quite common for the theatre to be a 'family affair.' The owner of the theatre, who often happens to be the local butcher or grocer, will sell tickets, his wife will take them at the door, the daughter will play the piano—if there is one—and the boys will act as ushers.

"Sometimes the motor for the projection machine can't be coaxed into starting, and it's nine o'clock before the show starts. Then if the theatre happens to be an open-air house, the moon gets in some light competition. The operator rushes through a lengthy show of from seventeen to twenty reels at the rate of nine minutes a reel. In one theatre the operator wound the six reels of a feature on one spool, burdening his machine to the limit. Under these circumstances film is often returned to the exchanges in junk condition.

Who Will Go Out?

"This is not true of the industry as a whole, however," went on Mr. Lorimore. "There are many progressive men in the exhibition business and they are co-operating with us in improving conditions. I should like to see some one go out from America with the power of painting a real word picture of the situations we have to cope with in the way of conservatism, primitive theatres, and lack of transportation facilities."

Mr. Lorimore, long in the film harness, started in with Gaumont, with which organization he functioned as the bone and sinew of the New York office, handling distribution. From Gaumont he went to Fox, exploited "Civilization" for Ince, and three years ago sailed for Australia for Famous Players.

Albert E. Fortoul Discovers New Screen Star by Chance

ALBERT E. FORTOUL, president of the Interstate Photoplays Company, will soon present "The Ninth Commandment," starring Fernando R. Elizondo, a new screen star discovered quite by chance, in Central Park, New York City, by Director E. Harder and Halina Bruzovna, the Russian artist, when the young man approached and begged for a chance to act in the picture. He was given a try-out on the spot and showed such true talent, it is said, that President Fortoul immediately signed him to a contract.

Mr. Elizondo is the inventor of several mechanical devices as well as an actor. Halina Bruzovna has had a notable success in European theatres.

Lyons Resigns from Miles.

John F. Lyons, who has been associated with Joseph R. Miles for the past nine years in his various organizations, and in charge of the Miles projecting rooms since their inception about seven years ago, has resigned to assume the management of the Simplex Studios' three projection rooms in the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second street, beginning May 1.

All Australia on List of Moving Picture World Was Goal of Lorimore

WHEN Alec Lorimore, went to Australia three years ago as managing director of Feature Films, Ltd., distributing Paramount-Artcraft in Australasia, he circularized the industry, advocating subscription to Moving Picture World.

"I did this voluntarily," said Mr. Lorimore, "not only because I knew Moving Picture World and what it stood for, but because I wanted the exhibitors of Australasia to catch the progressive spirit of their American brothers, to keep abreast of the best things in the industry, to educate themselves in their own business.

"I knew the trade paper, represented by the Moving Picture World, would do this. Therefore I did my best to have every exhibitor in Australia read Moving Picture World. And besides pushing the cause by mail, I had the World put in a prominent place in all the exchanges.

"I knew the trade paper would help me in my work. I backed it and it has not failed."

Tabor Is New Denver First Run House; to Show Leading First National Films

DENVER is to have another first-run motion picture house through the operation of a contract just closed whereby the Tabor Theatre has obtained virtually exclusive rights to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit attractions.

This contract went into force on Saturday, April 10, when the Tabor began its First National program with the showing of "The River's End," Marshall Neilan's spectacular production from James Oliver Curwood's book by the same name. "The River's End" will run for a week and changes will be made each Saturday, as at present arranged by the Tabor. Thomas G. Vick Roy is manager and the Vick Roy Amusement & Investment Company is the lessee of the Tabor Theatre.

Among the features to be released through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in the near future are two of David Wark Griffith's productions, six featuring Charles Ray, four each featuring Norma and Constance Talmadge, eight featuring Anita Stewart, four Marshall Neilan productions, most of the Katherine MacDonald and Mildred Harris Chaplin pictures and six "super-special features," such as "The Auction of Souls," recently shown.

Manager Vick Roy announces that he has booked full programs until the middle of July. Before that time he will have shown Griffith's "The Idol Dancer"; "Black Beach," another Griffith picture; "The Luck of the Irish" and other big features.

The William Fox Rivoli Theatre, which has been playing most of the First National releases in Denver, will continue to present features already contracted for, such as three of the Charles Ray pictures and several of the Norma Talmadge features. The America Theatre likewise will present several Constance Talmadge and Mildred Harris Chaplin pictures already engaged from the First National.

"Our lease on the Tabor runs for seventeen more months," said Manager Vick Roy, "and if present plans prove successful we intend to show the highest type of picture plays obtainable to Denver fans in that time."

At the expiration of the lease now held by the Vick Roy Amusement & Investment Company the theatre will be taken over by the Bishop-Cass Investment Company for remodeling. Later it will be opened as a Goldwyn theatre, showing that company's motion picture programs. The Bishop-Cass company is owner of the America Theatre, which also will become a Goldwyn program house, giving the Goldwyn people two big theatres in Denver.

The reviews printed in the Moving Picture World are written by expert craftsmen and can be depended upon.

Realart Responds to Exhibitor Demand with Release of Mayflower Features

UNUSUAL interest attaches to the announcement that Realart Pictures Corporation has two important Mayflower features which will be available to exhibitors in May. Realart thus has responded to the call of exhibitors for noteworthy attractions to carry the year's prosperous business through the warm months.

The two features are "The Law of the Yukon," a Charles Miller production which was inspired by Robert W. Service's poem, and "The Deep Purple," an R. A. Walsh production, founded on the stage success by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner.

Director Walsh has enlarged the original story of "The Deep Purple" to emphasize its spectacular phases. One of the largest casts ever assembled for a production was engaged to carry out these original ideas. There are seventeen players in the production.

One of the big features of the Mayflower picture is a spectacular cabaret scene in which Bird Millman, the aerial performer who has been a featured attraction at the Midnight Follies and is now performing for Barnum and Bailey's circus, is featured. The production is said to abound in spectacular and dramatic incidents developed in the manner for which Mr. Walsh has become famous.

Ince Buys Roe Story.

"The Boss of the Big Bonanza," a colorful Western story, has been purchased by Thomas H. Ince as the next starring vehicle for Enid Bennett. The new story, which is said to include every angle and phase of Western atmosphere and custom, is from the pen of Vingie E. Roe.

The picture will be directed by Fred Niblo and photographer by George Barnes.

Robert Ellis Returns from West Coast.

After directing Eugene O'Brien in "A Fool and His Money," and his forthcoming Selznick production, "The Figurehead," Director Robert Ellis has returned from the Selznick west coast studios. "A Fool and His Money," is a story from the novel of the same name written by George Barr McCutcheon.

terest story of life in the Canadian Northwest. Almost three months were required to make the picture. Charles Miller had a company of sixty-five at Port Henry, N. Y., taking advantage of the most severe winter in years to obtain his Yukon effects.

The theme of the story is based on the line from the poem, "surely the weak shall perish and only the strong survive." An entire Alaskan village was built by Director Miller for the production. Favored by the weather, he is said to have given the feature the many beautiful and artistic scenes to match the dramatic strength of the story. Mr. Miller declares that the coming production is, in his opinion, far superior to his former masterpiece of Yukon life, "The Flame of the Yukon."

Emmett J. Flynn to Direct

Tom Mix in "The Untamed"

AFTER completing "Big Jim O'Kane," the fifth feature in which he has directed William Russell on the Fox program Emmett J. Flynn has been assigned to direct Tom Mix, the daredevil, in what is declared to be the greatest story in which Russell has appeared—"The Untamed," by Max Brand.

The entire organization that has made a name for itself in the making of western pictures will be transferred to Tom Mix. When Flynn starts to direct "The Untamed" he will take with him as his assistant his brother, Ray Flynn, and his film cutter, C. R. Wallace.

The Mix-Flynn Company will leave Hollywood early next week for the California mountains. It is expected that six weeks will be spent there making the exteriors.

Single Release Basis for

William Faversham Pictures

IF every person in the United States and abroad who is an admirer of William Faversham does not have an opportunity of seeing him on the screen, it will not be the fault of Lewis J. Selznick. In order to provide this opportunity, it has been decided that the Faversham productions for Selznick Pictures will be rented only on a single release basis.

This is a decided departure in the booking of Selznick pictures, but the popularity of Mr. Faversham and his enviable international stage reputation warrants its. It will give every exhibitor a chance to book the Faversham productions whether they are showing other Selznick pictures or not. This applies to "The Man Who Lost Himself," the first Faversham release, and all future productions made by the eminent actor.

Discovery of New Illumination System Does Away with Dimly Lighted Theatre

In New Eastman National Academy of Motion Pictures Patrons Will Be Able to See Empty Seats Easily on Entering, to See Faces of People Nearby and to Read Newsprint and Programs without Eye-Strain

THE problem of lighting for motion picture theatres has been solved. No longer will it be necessary for pictures to be shown in a darkened auditorium. The attending inconveniences of groping about in a theatre that at the best is only dimly illuminated may be done away with, and the patron will even be able to read a program while a picture is being projected on the screen.

This most important announcement comes from the research laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y., where experiments have been conducted under the direction of Dr. C. E. Kenneth Mees, laboratory director, by Lloyd A. Jones, chief physicist, and Milton F. Fillius, his assistant. The National Academy of Motion Pictures to be built and endowed by George Eastman at Rochester will have this system of lighting as one of its chief features.

A summary of the results obtained so far shows that the comfort and convenience of the patron is to be one of the first objects in the National Academy. This summary states that sufficient illumination will be furnished by the system for the following:

The Results Obtained.

To enable the patron entering the auditorium to plainly see what seats are vacant and walk through the aisles to the desired seats without faltering, groping or hesitation.

To enable the patron to see without strain to the eye, faces of people near him and all objects in the auditorium, including decorations.

To enable the patron after entrance to read a newspaper or printed program.

To increase the comfort and safety of the patron.

To find articles dropped on the floor without the aid of other light.

When the system is installed the auditorium will be completely filled with a soft, subdued light, restful to the eye. At the same time it will be impossible for the patron to detect its source. The degree of illumination will be greatest near the ceilings, but even at the ceilings and high wall points there will be an entire absence of brightness sufficient to produce glare. In fact, the patron may gaze directly at the ceiling and then turn his eyes to the picture without experiencing the slightest optical discomfort or without appreciable loss of the visibility and quality of the picture. From the ceiling to the floor the degree of illumination will decrease, but at the table or reading level, thirty inches from the floor, it will be sufficient to read fine print with ease.

Best Adopted to Simply Decorated Houses.

The result of the experiments discovered by Mr. Jones is not announced as a "discovery," but is conservatively announced as "the logical evolution of the indirect lighting system—a marked step in advance."

"In other words," says Mr. Jones, "it was obtained by a further application of relatively new data on the characteristics of the human eye—data which has been known to scientists for several years. Working with this data we have been able to demonstrate that general room illumination sufficient to enable a person to read ordinary newsprint without discomfort reacts upon the eye by increasing its sensibility to such a degree that the apparent contrast, or quality of the picture on the screen, does not suffer.

"Our experiments have demonstrated beyond question the fundamental possibilities of such illumination, but its application to any particular theatre has to be worked out. I am convinced, however, that the system is the best adapted to theatres simple in architectural details and lacking in elaborate ornamental effect. Gilt surfaces, for instance, and elaborate carvings catch light and produce too many high lights to insure satisfactory results."

The Experiments Described.

About six months ago Mr. Eastman informed Dr. Mees that he would like to know how much light could be put into a theatre without impairing the quality of the picture on the screen. Dr. Mees immediately authorized Mr. Jones and Mr. Fillius to begin work on the problem.

An experimental lighting system was installed in the projection room in the laboratory. The lighting fixture used was constructed by mounting six 10 by 12 dark-room ceiling lamps on a light wooden frame work, and in order that the position of the fixture could be adjusted to give various distributions of the light, it was suspended.

Complete diffusion of the light from the incandescent lamps mounted in the fixture was obtained by the use of the opal glass. A projection machine of the ordinary type and an arc current of 25 amperes were used throughout the tests. The projection screen was of the metallic type. After several preliminary trials it was decided that the best result was obtained by placing 60 watt lamps in the four central elements of the fixture and 40 watt lamps in each of the end boxes, the entire 10 by 12 surface of the diffusing glass being uncovered and used as an effective source area.

Drape Black Frame With White Mill Net.

As the trials proceeded various changes were made and devices used until it was conclusively demonstrated that it was possible to illuminate a picture theatre sufficiently to enable the reading of ordinary news print without lessening the quality of the picture.

Several less important but interesting conclusions were reached as the result of the experiments. One was that the picture screen should not be surrounded by the black velvet frame now so generally in use. By covering the black velvet with a draping of white mill net, the contrast between the frame and the high light of the projected picture which gives rise to a certain feeling of visual fatigue and discomfort, was considerably reduced.

Non-Visible Music Sheets.

Another conclusion was that arrangements should be made, which, while providing adequate illumination for the musicians in the orchestra, will prevent the music sheets from being visible to the audience, experiments showing that a sheet of music illuminated by a 25-watt lamp at a distance of twelve inches has sufficient brightness to appear as a glare to those who look at it, causing visual discomfort.

A third conclusion justified by the experiments was that the lighting of lobby and vestibules of the motion picture auditorium should be so arranged that the transition from the brightness level of the exterior to that of the interior or vice versa, is accomplished by a series of small differences rather than by a single large one. Such an arrangement would to a great extent eliminate the visual shock which always occurs when a person passes from brightness into darkness or vice versa.

Benefits Perhaps Underestimated.

A final conclusion that may be borne out when the new Eastman auditorium is built, is that the use of a projection screen set well back on the stage and thus shielded to a great extent from the light reflected from ceiling and walls, would probably permit the use of even greater room illumination than was used in the experiments. If that should prove to be the case, the foregoing estimate of benefits has been understated.

Current Paramount Artcraft Releases Are "Terror Island" and "The False Road"

ONE of the real high spots of the Paramount-Artcraft schedule, it is declared, is "Terror Island," Houdini's second feature production, which, along with "The False Road," a Thomas H. Ince production, starring Enid Bennett, is set for release on April 18.

Arthur B. Reeve and John W. Grey, who wrote Houdini's successful Paramount-Artcraft thriller, "The Grim Game," are the authors of "Terror Island." The latter, moreover, is said to be a unique creation of its kind, in that it not only fits the peculiar talents of Houdini like a glove—even better than did "The Grim Game"—but it also involves a thoroughly romantic story in which the love element is uppermost.

Woods Wrote Scenario.

The writing of the scenario was entrusted to Walter Woods, one of the most experienced of the Famous Players-Lasky staff scenarists, who won perhaps his highest honors when he put "The Grim Game" into screen form. James Cruze, who has won distinction with his production starring Wallace Reid, was the director, and it is said that "Terror Island" made unusual demands upon his talents. Several novel locations had to be dug up, at least 500 extras were used and the action throughout was of the lightning speed, dangerous type that taxes the nerves and ingenuity of a director to the utmost.

The story of "Terror Island" presents Houdini as the inventor of a secret submarine device with which he hopes to salvage the cargoes of wrecked ships. However, through his meeting with a girl whose father is held captive on a South Sea island, he is forced to put his invention to work sooner than he anticipated.

Lila Lee Supports Houdini.

Lila Lee makes an appealing leading woman and one worthy of Houdini's strenuous efforts. Others in supporting roles are Jack Brammall, Rosemary Theby, Wilton Taylor, Eugene Paulette, Edward Brady, Frank Bonner and Fred Turner.

C. Gardner Sullivan was the author and Fred Noble the director of "The False Road," the Thomas H. Ince production which serves as a starring vehicle for Enid Bennett. It is a crook play and it is said that the author and director have evolved some remarkably true-to-life scenes of New York's underworld.

In her portrayal of the girl crook Miss Bennett departs far from the beaten path which she has been traveling. Her leading man is Lloyd Hughes, who played the lead in Mr. Ince's special production, "Dangerous Hours," and Wade Boteler, Lucille Young, Charles Smiley, Edith Yorke and Gordon Mullen complete the cast.

Northwest Company Is Formed.

The Northwest Theatre Company, of Missoula, has been organized in Montana to control picture theatres in Missoula and several Idaho cities. The organizers are W. A. Simons, W. H. Smead, F. F. Moe, James A. Walsh, Henry Turner, J. H.

Toole, H. F. Forbes and Fred R. Angevine. It is capitalized at $250,000.

Kirkland Plans Trip to Europe.

David Kirkland, director for Constance Talmadge in the John Emerson-Anita Loos comedies, has announced that he will sail to Europe on May 15. On that date he will have finished work upon the new Talmadge picture, "The Perfect Woman." Mr. Kirkland will take with him a compact "traveling camera" to secure pictures of famous European locales for reproduction in American studios.

King Buys Willard Mack Play.

Burton King, who has recently completed "The Road to Arcady," his first picture as an independent producer, announces that he has acquired the screen rights to "The Common Sin," a new dramatic story by Willard Mack. Mr. Mack, who has a number of well-known screen successes to his credit, is writing the continuity of this story.

Rita Weiman, Author of "Acquittal," and William De Mille Prepare Feature

ANNOUNCEMENT that Rita Weiman, author of the Broadway stage success, "The Acquittal," as well as other stage plays and magazine stories, is busily engaged at the Lasky studios in Hollywood on a big special feature, is made by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production.

Miss Weiman is writing the story in close association with William DeMille, who will produce it as a William DeMille special production. The name and nature of the production was not disclosed by Mr. Lasky beyond the fact that it has to do with a big vital theme which comes in close relation with the lives of everybody.

In making the announcement Mr. Lasky again gave evidence of his policy of having author, scenarist and director work in close association toward the end that all problems of story and production are ironed out in the script.

"Experience has shown," said Mr. Lasky,

"that the best results are obtained when the author of a play or novel works closely with the scenario writer and director. In this way, the ideas which the author seeks to express in his work are best adjusted to the requirements of the screen and, on the other hand, the scenarist and director have the benefit of the author's advice as to the handling of the plot and the development of characters along the lines of the author's original ideas.

"Aside from the actor, the three vital elements in the translation of a story to the screen are the author, scenarist and the director. Unless these three units work in harmony, the work of one is bound to suffer, and consequently the finished work, the picture itself, suffers.

"We have found that this policy of joint effort is extremely helpful. Cosmo Hamilton, Salisbury Field, Mrs. William Vaughn Moody and Elmer Harris are some of the authors already at work in the Lasky studio at Hollywood."

Capital Film Company "Strikes Oil" in "Witch's Gold," Starring Davide

THE Capital Film Company has just closed a contract through General Manager B. Herbert Milligan for the world distribution of "Witch's Gold," the first of a series of pictures made in the atmosphere of and based on the stirring life and dramatic environment of the Texas oil fields.

Throughout the picture, it is said, runs a romantic story full of thrills and heart interest, and which is appropriately centered in an interesting young woman star—a new personality with the new name of Davide, not Miss Davide nor Mrs. Davide, but just plain "Davide," as she prefers to be known.

Moving picture men who have viewed "Witch's Gold" state that it is a tale of the modern Argonauts who are heading in endless procession toward the great stretches of oil-bearing lands in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

The new star has been a student of dramatic art for several years, and for three years studied for grand opera in Paris under Cappelleni, but has given up all her ambitions in this direction to devote herself to the newest branch of the dramatic arts. Her dramatic training makes her unusually responsive to the delicately romantic situations called for in the new play, it is said.

In the production of "Witch's Gold" the company was taken to the Northern Texas oil fields on two trips, to complete the exterior scenes. This necessitated traveling from the California studios to the oil fields. The picture was personally directed by M. A. Dodge, of the M. A. Dodge Film Company, producers of the new series.

Inquiries received by the Capital Film Company's offices from the different exchange units throughout the United States and Canada indicate that the demand for novelty in moving pictures will be met in the production of "Witch's Gold."

Ezell Made Southern Division.

C. C. Ezell, former branch manager of the Dallas office for Select Pictures, has been appointed southern division manager with headquarters at that city, according to Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager of Select.

Mr. Ezell's supervision will extend over Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta, and, it is said, eventually the new office to be opened in Oklahoma City. The promotion gives Mr. Ezell jurisdiction of both Select and Republic business affairs.

Charleston Awaits 15,000 More People, Business Booms in Florida and Georgia

By NAT BREGSTEIN

Traveling Representative, Moving Picture World

THE Charleston, S. C., of 1920 vintage is not the same Charleston of yore, for it is in the throes of a boom. There are about twenty banks in town—perhaps a record for a city of less than 100,000 population—which ultimately receive the dollars spent by scores of tourists, and the local folks are eagerly awaiting definite news of a big plant which, dopesters have it, will soon arrive and increase the population of 15,000 "at one lick."

One of those most interested in the rumor is Albert Soietelle, who controls most of the local theatres. He is as interested in systems as the early robin is in angleworms. No guess work for Soietelle, say his friends; he does everything on the card index system. And they do not wonder that he is making good.

The following theatres are under his supervision: the Victory, seating 1,800; Academy of Music, one of the oldest landmarks in the entire state; Garden, seating 1,500; Princess, seating 600, and the Palace and Majestic each seating 600. All have an admission price of 10, 20 and 30 cents.

All Comedies Money-Makers.

Nothing spicy or suggestive goes in his theatres, says Mr. Soietelle. He finds all sorts of comedies to be money-makers. As for percentage, he says he tried it once or twice and is mighty glad he did, because it showed the film companies just how it panned out, and in the future there will be no arguments about the way it should be played in his town. Mr. Soietelle is planning a 2,500 seat theatre, to be built soon.

J. A. May & Brother run the Lyric Theatre, seating 250, with a straight admission price of 20 cents, and they are making good. They use short subjects and are on the open market. Charleston also supports a couple of colored houses. One of them is the Dixieland, seating 450, operated by J. J. Miller. Mr. Miller claims a good business for his house and is planning a new one to seat 2,200. Another colored house, the Lincoln, seating 450 and charging 20 cents admission, is managed by E. N. Rose. It has been open since January 29 and has been doing well and now Mr. Rose plans a 1,600-seat house.

A. N. Petit, long a subscriber of Moving Picture World, runs the Elco Theatre, 551 King street, a 300-seat house. His letter-head reads: "The most up-to-date, fire-proof picture house in the city."

Odeon Has Summery Aspect.

Savannah, Ga., has a population of 70,000. The Odeon Theatre, seating 800 and charging 10 and 20 cents, is now owned by Arthur Lucas, of Atlanta, and is under the supervision of John Evans. A. Woolfe formerly owned it. It is one of the prettiest decorated little houses in the entire South, its creton draperies giving it a very summery setting. Mr. Evans is also manager of the Folly, which seats 350 and charges 6 and 11 cents, and told me of a 2,500-seat house, to cost about $350,000, planned for Savannah.

Abe S. Guckenheimer's stationery reads: "Arcadia Theatre owned and operated by Savannah Picture Plays Company—the Photoplays of Tone," which means he owns the Arcadia, seating 757. He also owns the Star Theatre, which seats 1,000. Mr. Guckenheimer says that a colored house will be erected soon which will seat 1,000 and cost about $75,000.

Tourists innumerable fly through Florida in their automobiles, many carrying camping outfits in anticipation of S. R. O. signs on hotels. Jacksonville is the stopping point of travel through the state and is quite a motion picture center.

Lynch Controls Jacksonville.

Mark Dittenfass is still cuckooing around his studio making Cuckoo Comedies with Jobyna Rawlston as the juvenile lead. Jack Sherill and company are working at the Klutho studios on a serial called "The Invisible Ray." I heard Jack's college cry of "Kameera," and judging from what I saw of the work of William Tooker and Ruth Clifford, the leads, it will be a brilliant ray. Jack and cast are stopping at the Hotel Mason, the rendezvous for all players.

The Lynch Enterprises control nearly everything in Jacksonville in the way of theatres. The Palace, seating 2,000 and charging 25 to 60 cents, runs vaudeville and pictures. The Imperial charges 10 and 25 cents, the Rialto 10 and 20 cents, the Arcade 20 and 30 cents and the Savoy 5 and 15 cents.

The movies cater to a big cosmopolitan crowd. People come from everywhere and therefore the theatre programs are diversified. The Arcade recently tried a full week run and it panned out satisfactorily.

Merrymaking in St. Augustine.

St. Augustine is a few miles from Jacksonville and is one of the prettiest towns in Florida. The Jefferson, seating 900, and the Orpheum, seating 450, are managed by J. B. Carroll and owned by the Southern Enterprises Corporation. The population is about 6,000. Everything runs along at full speed. "Tis a merry life, mates; nothing to do but eat, sleep and dance to music."

Orlando is positively one of the prettiest towns in the country, if not in the world. It has a dozen lakes worth the attention of any producer. The Lynch Enterprises practically control the motion picture situation, with W. J. Melvin as local representative. He has charge of the Grand, seating 533 and charging 15 to 50 cents; the Philipa, seating 789, and having a varying charge, and the Lucern, which runs road shows. The population is 20,000 in the winter and 10,000 in the summer. Mr. Melvin reports that the Philipa was the first theatre in the state to show Cecil De Mille's "Why Change Your Wife?" He broke all records with it.

From Orlando to Lakewood is another bus ride. B. F. Garner runs the Cosmo Theatre, which seats 450, charges 25 cents and does a good business. George Hoffman runs the Auditorium, seating 1,700. He acquired it recently and put it on a paying basis in a short time. He is interested in state exhibitor organization work. The population is about 7,200.

Many Amusements in Tampa.

Tampa is a "Pollyanna" town. Lynch controls three theatres—the Grand, a first-run house, seating 300 and charging 10 and 20 cents; the Alcazar, seating 300 and charging 50 cents and running big attractions, and the Prince, running vaudeville and "tab" shows and charging 35 cents. All are under the supervision of W. L. Jones and do a good business.

C. D. Cooley owns the Strand, seating 800 and charging 10 and 25 cents. His Bonita seats 350 and charges 10 and 20 cents. He soon will open the Victory Theatre, which, it is said, will be one of the finest in the entire South. It will seat 1,800 and charge from 15 to 50 cents.

"This town has a population of 68,000," Mr. Cooley told me. "About 18,000 of them are Latins and about 14,000 negroes, who have their own theatres. My business is about double that of last year."

Clearwater's Exhibitor's "Kick."

In the colored section is the Maceo Theatre, seating 600 and charging 10 to 25 cents. The Palace seats 500 and charges 15 to 25 cents. Edward Kane runs both houses and does an excellent business, especially on serial nights, when he cleans up.

Ybor is a suburb of Tampa. Its population is about 8,000. The three theatres are the Casino, seating 850 and charging 10 and 20 cents; the National, seating 415 and charging 5 and 15 cents, and the Rivoli, seating 640 and charging 5 and 15 cents. E. J. Walton, general manager, says he has recently bought them from the Lynch Enterprises and that he is doing a good business.

Clearwater is a little town with one exhibitor, a reader of Moving Picture World, like the others. He has a "kick" coming.

"A Tampa theatre runs a production and charges 10 and 25 cents. The chances are it will play to more than 2,000 a day. Yours truly, with a house seating only 350 and charging 10, 20 and 35 cents, does not play to capacity. Now where do I come in, a small exhibitor in a small town a short distance from Tampa, when Mr. and Mrs. Movie Fan can say, 'I saw the picture in Tampa for 10 cents?' I have to charge 35 cents to get even, on account of the rental price of the production. For instance, I'll pay $50 for a well-known star and Tampa will pay nothing like it in proportion. Isn't that argument enough for anybody?"

Reports Sales of "The Jumps."

M. J. Mintz, territorial sales manager of Celebrated Film Corporation, reports the sales of the cartoons, "The Jumps," to the Merit Film Corporation for the state of New York and northern New Jersey, and to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of New England, for New England.

D. M. Thomas.

Eastern Division Manager of the Special Pictures Corporation.

Mrs. Cobb Goes on Tour.

Agnes Egan Cobb, as special sales representative for the Schomer-Ross Productions, Inc., as well as in the interest of Joe Brandt Productions, goes across the continent on Saturday, April 24. Mrs. Cobb will attend the exhibitors' convention at Chicago, April 26, on her way West.

Clarine Seymour Very Ill.

Clarine Seymour, the young woman who made so notable a hit in D. W. Griffith's "The Idol Dancer," was reported on Thursday, April 22, to be very low. She was operated on at Misericordia Hospital, New York, on the morning of that day for an intestinal trouble. She had a part in "Way Down East," the work in which is unfinished.

Small Town Showmen Giving Much Attention to Presentation Question, Says Realart Man

EXHIBITORS in the small towns are wide awake to the problem of presenting their programs attractively along the lines adopted by men in the large cities, according to reports brought in from the field by Melville E. Maxwell, special representative for Realart, who has returned from an extended trip through Middle Western territory.

Mr. Maxwell visited the Chicago, St. Louis and Omaha branch offices and met and talked with a large number of exhibitors both in those cities and others on his itinerary. In every locality he found business to be in an exceedingly prosperous condition and said that exhibitors expressed the strongest optimism on the outlook for the future.

"There is no question that exhibitors in the Middle West are enjoying the greatest prosperity in their history," said Mr. Maxwell. "New houses are building and opening up and the old ones are doing a capacity business every day in the week. The future looks rosy to all of them and apparently all they ask is that the supply of attractive pictures keep up."

"The outstanding fact of interest in my trip was the noticeable eagerness with which small town exhibitors discussed problems of presentation and exploitation. They are wide awake to the need for improvement in this direction and, if one may judge by their conversation, the small town men are going soon to be doing things that will make the bigger fellows sit up and take notice."

"Most of the small exhibitors I met seem to realize that the methods they had been using for the last few years were out of date. The trade papers with their live exploitation departments have done considerably in bringing this change about."

"Of course, the small town men have been studying the methods in the big towns for some time, but on the whole most of the ideas brought forward were too elaborate or expensive for their houses. Big prologues and exceptional music features are in most cases out of the question for the 300 and 400 seat house."

"But the small town man is realizing pretty strongly that if he is going to play the big features and the splendid productions he is now able to book, he has got to put it in an attractive setting. He is dressing up the outside of his theatre to conform to the more advanced notions of the big houses. You notice that everywhere."

Stanley in Leading Male Role.

Forrest Stanley has been signed to play the leading male role opposite Alice Lake, in Metro's forthcoming production of "The Misfit Wife," in which Miss Lake will be featured at the head of a noteworthy cast. "The Misfit Wife" is a picturization of a play of modern life by Julie Herne, daughter of the late James A. Herne, whose "Shore Acres" is Alice Lake's current release.

Exhibitors Win Eleventh Hour Victory When Legislature Passes Cotillo Bill

THE New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, with a half dozen or more of its officers on the firing line, won a victory in Albany on April 21 of interest to the entire motion picture industry, defeating the best efforts on the part of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, represented by Royal K. Fuller, when the Cotillo bill was reported out of rules and passed in the Assembly without a dissenting voice, the Senate concurring on its amendments. It now goes to Governor Smith.

The bill up until the previous day was commonly supposed to be buried in rules committee. Sydney S. Cohen, president of the state association, together with S. I. Berman, Charles L. O'Reilly and others, arrived on the scene of action and started to throttle the efforts which had been made by Mr. Fuller to keep the bill in committee until the legislature closes on April 24.

According to reports, Mr. Fuller met with a rebuff from Speaker Sweet, and later on the bill went through the Assembly, over which Mr. Sweet presides, without so much as a single voice being raised in opposition.

The bill reads as follows:

"Whenever money shall be deposited or advanced on a contract for the use or rental of personal property as security for performance of a contract or to be applied to payments upon such contract when due, such money, with interest accruing thereon, if any, until repaid or so applied, shall continue to be the money of the person making such deposit or advance and shall be a trust fund in the possession of the person with whom such deposit or advance shall be made, and shall be deposited in a bank or trust company and shall not be mingled with other funds or become an asset of such trustee."

The Kelley bill was also passed in the Senate on April 21. This bill allows the parent to designate the adult who shall accompany the child under 16 years, after school hours, to the motion picture theatre.

Goodside's Capitol Theatre, Springfield, Mass., Is Dedicated by "Everywoman" with Ceremony

IN the Capitol Theatre, dedicated by an invitation showing of "Everywoman" Sunday evening, April 18, Springfield, Mass., may be congratulated upon having one of the most beautiful picture palaces in the country. Those who have seen many of America's most beautiful photograph theatres declare the Capitol to rank with the most renowned in the matter of construction and equipment.

A. Goodside is owner of the Springfield Capitol and his manager is Mr. Kavanaugh, an experienced showman. Following the private performance Sunday evening there was a dinner and dancing at the Hotel Worthy, where the guests of Mr. Goodside enjoyed the climax of his hospitality.

Film Folk Flocked to the Opening.

Monday, April 19, the new theatre was thrown open to the public and capacity business has ruled. A Harold Lloyd comedy, Topics of the Day and the Capitol news reel augmented "Everywoman" in supplying the picture entertainment. Harold Marsh was soloist and Carleton Kelsey's orchestra played the pictures and furnished music for Marie Kavanaugh and J. Paul Everett's dancing interludes. Howard Collins is the organist.

The invitation performance attracted film folk from Boston and New York, including Jesse Lasky, Arthur Friend, Walter Green, "Smiling Jimmy" Kelly, of Triangle, Boston, and Mrs. Kelly; Mr. Rogers, of Select; Emmett Weakley, Republic; Stanley Hand, National; Abe Penn, Metro; A. Donaghy and Ralph Pinckham, Triangle, and A. Boucher, manager of Mr. Goodside's Empire Theatre, Portland.

Others Attending.

There was also in attendance George Mernick and the Misses Russell and Lieberman, of Triangle; R. Berchy, United Pictures; Miss Mittenthal, of First National, New Haven; Miss Isen, of Community Pictures; William Jenner, United Artists; Walter Scates, Realart; W. E. Foster, Metro, and many others active in New England film organizations.

Simone to Re-enter Producing Field.

Charles Simone, who after seven years of successful producing and directorial work put in three years managing exchanges, expects to give up distributing and go back to his first love. He is in touch with a number of companies and it is not unlikely that his first production will be under way within three weeks. Mr. Simone is giving up his home in Albany, N. Y., and will establish his future residence in the environs of Manhattan in order to be closer to the hub of the picture industry.

Scenario Writer Gives His Views on Moving Pictures Both Long and Short

Editor Moving Picture World:

WILL you permit a mere pen mechanic and sometime moving picture author to butt into this talk about subjects short and long?

In your current issue you quote D. W. Griffith as stating that the ideal evening's entertainment is eight to twelve reels made up of one complete picture: an editor of another publication as saying that the short subject is an indispensable adjunct to every program, while you yourself contend that patrons don't give a tinker's dam how long or short a picture is; they care only how good it is.

In my view of the matter, you are all three wrong—and yet you are all three right. Every picture producer and theatre man is wrong who labors under the delusion that audiences like to sit continuously through five reels of even a D. W. Griffith masterpiece. It is altogether too long a period to clamp one's self down in a single spot, to sit crowded in between two other people—both of them perhaps fat and fussy.

Who would care to sit through an entire evening's play, even one of the best, with no intermission or drop of the curtain between the acts? It would be altogether too irksome, too much of a nerve strain, yet a film drama, with its absence of descriptive dialogue, requires many times the brain and sight concentration that a spoken play does.

The true dramatic form, the ideal play split, is into three acts—a musical comedy may need two in order to hang together, but the average musical comedy is apt to be pure and unadulterated mush, entertaining, if unstimulating mush, I agree, and mush requires very little teeth action or digestive power. Nevertheless, I have yet to see many two-act musical shows that would not have benefited by being split into three or even four acts.

By the same token, I believe that few greater single improvements could be made in pictures than by splitting the five reels into three sections with two five or ten minute intermissions, and the six and eight reels into four sections. Also, if D. W. Griffith desires to produce twelve reel photoplays, let him split them as were the Drury Lane-melos, into many acts, and rest assured that, if they are good, they'll both hold patrons and please them.

But, and that little word cannot be too strongly emphasized, if we are to have photoplays in three acts, they must be written and produced to fit that form, two minor climaxes and one grand climax. Otherwise it will not be to stretch their legs the audience will arise between the acts; it will be to get out and get home, because there has been nothing to hold their interest.

Why this has not been generally done before I do not know, unless it is because producers believe the paramount desire of the picture houses is to rush through their five reels and get them over and done with as soon as possible, and have their continuity writers prepare them accordingly.

I've talked this over with many picture patrons, and I've yet to find one who did not agree that two or three short intermissions would be an appreciated relief. Myself, I've always written my film synopses in that form, but the continuity writers never seemed to think it worth while to develop the idea.

Faithfully yours,

STANLEY SHAW.

Camp Wildwood, South Hanson, Mass.

April 1, 1920.

The long and short of the matter is that the subject referred to in Stanley Shaw's letter is well worth discussing, and his own point of view is ingeniously stated—even if we do not agree with him. But first let us set him right on a serious subject: he has misquoted this publication and made it appear that the expression "don't give a tinker's dam" had been used by us in the article that inspired his communication. Such is not the case. We merely quoted from the article which inspired our editorial, but took the liberty to change the profanely vigorous "damn" of our esteemed contemporary to the milder but correct "dam" of the original expression. There are times when a good honest cuss word is a great relief to the feelings, but that is no excuse for wilfully or unknowingly helping along the mistaken belief that a tinker's profane condemnation is any more worthless than that of a scenario writer or the editor of a secular trade journal.

We admit that our brother editor's mistake was a natural one and that we also always used the profane version until informed by one of those chaps who know everything that the tinker's "dam" meant the little mound of bread crumbs which the artisan built around the hole in a tin pan to hold the solder in place while mending the utensil. When the solder cooled sufficiently to stay where it was put the traveling mechanic either brushed off the crumbs with his coat sleeve or blew them away at one smart puff. The deduction is plain: nothing could be more worthless than a tinker's dam after being once used. This may seem a trivial matter; but it is quite otherwise: It will enable the entire film industry to use the expression with the assurance that it is not inviting the charge of employing bad language from the enemies of the screen.

Now as to Mr. Shaw's three act screen drama: it will be welcome for its novelty—if it be technically correct. But it will not put the other and earlier forms of photo fiction out of business. Each will continue to have its following. The division of a film drama into acts is not an untried experiment. D. W. Griffith's eight to twelve reel pictures have always been shown in two parts. The climax as it is understood in stage drama has been used on the screen; not often, but enough times to prove that the thing is practicable. Long and short subjects, photoplays and photo-novels of all kinds, screen comedies and screen farces of various sorts, everything that may be classed under the head of film fiction are in the game to stay. There will be an improvement in technic all along the line as the makers of the several classes of moving picture fiction become better acquainted with the dividing lines between the different forms.

Mr. Shaw's dictum that "if we are to have photoplays in three acts, they must be written and produced to fit that form" is obviously true. But he is just as obviously wrong when he implies that the three-act photoplay is to be the sole survivor in a competition for screen supremacy.

"Black Beach" Griffith's Next.

"Black Beach" will be David Wark Griffith's next production, to be released on or about May 15, by the First National Exhibitor's Circuit. Among the prominent Griffith players who will be seen are Richard Barthelmess, Carol Dempster, George MacQuarrie and Anders Randolph.

"Come, Pensive Maiden! Why Are You Not Smiling?" Asks Rod La Roque of the Star, Corinne Griffith. Some pretty "shots" taken from "The Garter Girl," made by Vitagraph. See how the star captivates in her new role?

Noah Beery's Role in "The Sea Wolf" Recalls Brutal San Francisco Skipper

WHEN audiences see "The Sea Wolf," produced by George Melford for Paramount-Artcraft and scheduled for release early in May, they will watch the portrayal of a role taken from an actual character known on the San Francisco waterfront in the days when Jack London was gathering material for his remarkable works.

"The Wolf," according to the talk among seamen, was an old sea captain who was virtually a modern pirate. Many a strange tale of that individual has been going the rounds along the San Francisco waterfront for years. According to a favorite story, he inserted advertisements in the San Francisco dailies offering an unusual opportunity to men who wanted a long sea voyage, with large remuneration, but stipulating that each applicant must advance the sum of $500 to show good faith and pay the expenses of the trip, though immense returns on the investment were promised.

Promised Wives and Treasures.

Strange specimens responded, so the story goes. There were invalids, dope fiends and crooks, and there were some with healthy minds and healthy bodies, lured by the call of romance. The tale the captain told them was weird. They were to visit a "Manless Island" somewhere in the Pacific. There were to be found much treasure and many beautiful girls. The voyage started, and with it a campaign of cruel treatment seldom equaled. Bucko-mates kicked, beat and whipped the men. Everything was done to break their spirit. As soon as the vessel touched Honolulu every man deserted. The skipper's plans had worked and he sailed back to this country with the money that had been deposited.

Such are the stories told concerning the original of "Wolf Larsen." The part in the Paramount-Artcraft picture is taken by Noah Beery. Others in the strong cast are Mabel Julienne Scott, Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, Walter Long, Eddie Sutherland and Fred Huntley.

Thomas Heffron Signed by Fox to Direct Buck Jones

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Fox Film Corporation that Thomas Heffron, one of the screen's veteran directors, who recently concluded his contract with Jesse B. Hampton Productions, has been signed to direct Buck Jones in Charles Alden Seltzer's "Firebrand Trevison." Mr. Heffron is well known as a director of pictures of Western life. This is the second Charles Alden Seltzer story to be used as a starring vehicle for Buck Jones by Fox.

In 1911 Heffron directed his first picture for the Thanhouser company, and he served that organization for a year. He then transferred his energies to the old Biograph company, remaining there eighteen months. Later he served as a director for Famous Players, the American, the Triangle company and more recently with the Jesse D. Hampton Productions.

Work on the new Buck Jones feature will start immediately at the Hollywood studio.

Charlie Ray Helps Rialto Observe Its Fourth Anniversary by Showing "Paris Green"

THE Rialto Theatre celebrates its fourth anniversary this week with a program especially prepared for the occasion. Besides the extra little touches that Hugo Riesenfeld has put on, it is interesting to note that there is a Charlie Ray picture as the feature of the bill. Four years ago, on April 22, the Rialto opened with a Douglas Fairbanks film. It celebrates its fourth birthday with what it regards as the most popular star today.

Mr. Riesenfeld points with pride to the development of the theatre—and the Rivali as well—since that day four years ago when as conductor of the orchestra he waved the baton that started the first performance. The orchestra had twenty-eight musicians then; it has fifty now. To make possible proper music accompaniments for the pictures a music library of 20,000 pieces

New Jersey Legislature May Not Vote on Sunday Measure

THE Smith bill, which would allow Sunday motion pictures and amusements in New Jersey, has been sidetracked in the state senate because of the lack of votes to pass it, and the present session of the legislature is scheduled to end next week.

Senator W. A. Stevens, of Monmouth, a Republican, representing seashore resorts, will not vote for the measure, it is said, because it does not legalize Sunday bathing. There are nine senators opposed to the bill and nine in favor of it. It is said to be possible that two members of the opposition may be won over.

has been built up, a model of its kind.

In the scoring of pictures there has been a similar growth. Originally Mr. Riesenfeld did all the work himself. Today Emanuel Baer attends to the routine part of the scoring and two other musicians assist. Josiah Zuro, head of the new school of opera and ensemble, prepares a large part of the solo work at the Rialto as well as the Rivoli. William S. Humiston, assistant conductor of the Philharmonic, and Edward Falck, former assistant conductor of the Metropolitan Opera, also lend their aid in making the Rialto program attractive from the music side.

"Two million persons a year see the shows at the Rialto," Mr. Riesenfeld said, "and that is proof enough for me that New York likes music, likes pictures more, and likes clean entertainment most."

Pathe Schedules Four Big Pictures for Release in May; "Sherry" an Extra Special

ENCOURAGED by reports from branch managers all over the country to the effect that motion picture attendance will reach greater levels than ever before, the Pathe Exchange has arranged for the release of four new productions of the first magnitude during May. Frank Keenan will be seen in "Dollar for Dollar"; Hobart Henley will present "The Miracle of Money"; and "Sherry," an extra special feature, comes from Edgar Lewis. In addition to these three productions, another Pathe extra special will be released, the details of which will be announced shortly.

"Dollar for Dollar," to be released on May 2, is a Keenan drama of high finance, society, and politics. The cast includes Kathleen Kirkham, Harry Van Meter, Kate Van Buren, Jay Belasco and Gertrude Clair.

"Sherry," the latest Edgar Lewis production, will be released as a Pathe Extra Special on May 30. It is the story of a man's regeneration, of his battle for his own soul, and it is unfolded on the screen with all the strength that has characterized the work of Edgar Lewis in his several recent successes. A strong cast headed by Pat O'Malley effectively carries the theme.

In "The Miracle of Money" Hobart Henley has produced a picture with a strong appeal. The story is from "Marrying Off Emmy," by Beulah Poynter, and it is a quaint tale rich in philosophy. The types are strong and deep, and in casting the picture this feature of the story was well handled.

Progress on Serials at Seitz Studio.

Both Bertram Millhauser, who is directing Juanita Hansen in the serial in which she is to star for Pathe, and George B. Seitz, directing and starring in another episode thriller in production at the same studio in New York, have reached the ninth episode of their respective productions.

Priscilla Dean Sports Her Royal Earring as Goddess of the Grape (Juice).

Navy Cameramen Must Be Flying Men and Here Is a Word Picture of Their Deeds

By LOGAN E. RUGGLES

United States Navy

SINCE the sound of the cannon has died away and some 2,000,000 men have been returned to their loved ones by ships operated by Uncle Sam's sailormen, the navy has turned to showing the public some very interesting things which were accomplished during the great struggle. In order to place this picture before the public in an intelligent light and to convey to them just what their navy did, it was necessary to adopt motion pictures.

It is not generally known that the navy operates its own photographic division, its own publicity bureau and its own great printing plant. New York is the headquarters for this great enterprise, but the field is being largely developed and stations and motion picture operators are being stationed throughout the United States and at all foreign bases. Aside from the New York headquarters there is a photographic division in Washington, where all of the "stuff" is passed upon.

Some of the most interesting pictures, as to educational value, that have ever been released are now being shown to the public. "A Sailor's Letter to His Mother," which was recently released by the photographic division, and which was written and photographed by navalmen, was one of the biggest "scoops" ever put across.

This picture depicts the life of a sailor-man from the time he enlists to the time he is discharged—four years later. It is not the old flowery picture, the kind that leads American youths to believe that the navy is all honey and pie; indeed, it gives every phase of naval life.

"The Making of a Sailor," one of the recent navy releases, is drawing crowded houses, as the following news item from the Providence Journal will verify:

"Various aspects of naval life and training and a history of the navy from its earliest days through the present war were shown on the screen to a crowded house at Fay's Theatre yesterday afternoon at a free patriotic entertainment given by the Providence naval recruiting station."

Cruise of NC Planes.

The article goes on to explain the object of the picture, and states that it is to enlighten the public on things pertaining to their "first line of defense." The picture in question makes the rounds of the United States and is shown to crowded houses everywhere. It is not merely for recruiting purposes that these pictures are released, but to show the public that they really have a navy, and that that navy has never suffered defeat; that the boys who have manned our ships from the time of John Paul Jones to the present time have never struck their flag and have never cried for quarter!

The picture which will shortly be released, "The Cruise of the Nifty Nancies," is hailed as one of the greatest pictures ever made. It depicts the cruise of the NC planes to the Azores and the finish of the flight at Plymouth, England. Some of this picture was released by the different weekly news syndicates, but there is a lot of it that has never been shown.

California Coast Shown.

The "Cruise of the Pacific Fleet to the Golden Gate" is another picture which has been released in part, but which is now being worked up by the navy photographic division to be shown to the public. The picture was taken in the most part from navy planes by navy photographers and is reckoned without a peer in naval photography. It is an educational picture, for it gives the most complete idea of the Panama Canal ever witnessed.

Another picture which will shortly be released and which is creating much interest in all motion picture circles is the "Flight of Three Navy Sea-planes from San Diego to San Francisco, Cal." To those of us who have never had the good fortune to view the beautiful California coast, to see it as it really is, this picture lends an impression which cannot be gained from reading.

Cameramen Are Flying Men Also.

The navy photographic division and the flying corps of the navy are closely related, in view of the fact that where the photomen go there are always navy flying machines on the job, also. The navy trains its own pilots, cameramen and observers. What these two branches accomplished in the war needs no mention here, as their deeds of valor are recorded in the histories now being written.

Navy cameramen are flying men, also. They must be qualified pilots, and as other men of the motion picture industry will testify it is no job for the weaklings. It requires a great deal of nerve, as the cameramen are riders of the fuselage, the nose of the machine, the wings, the "roof" and many other "outlandish" positions.

Great plans are being laid for the summer months for our flying corps and their co-workers, the photographic division. It has recently been given out that a trip is being planned to South America, touching at every important city on the east coast and "making" the Straits of Magellan their destination. Navy planes will make the entire distance in flight along the eastern coast. Navy publicity men will accompany the expedition, and the entire trip will not only be recorded in pictures, but also in newspaper style.

Motion pictures have helped the navy in diverse ways. They have ever assisted in recruiting, and since recruiting is one of the fundamentals of the navy it is plain that a great deal of good is being accomplished. Motion pictures and publicity can do more for the navy, as regards filling its ships for peace time as well as war time activities, than any other form of advertising.

Kromer Tells of Co-operation.

The cruise of the navy sea-planes and photo division to the South American country will be heralded as great as the flight of the NC planes across the Atlantic, in that it will establish a new field of endeavor for the commercial industries—and it will be a boost for the motion picture industry as well.

C. R. Kromer, one of the foremost cameramen of the photographic division of the navy, says that the motion picture industry in civil life has assisted materially in producing good pictures for the navy. He tells of many instances where the different studios have lent valuable help.

"Flying A" Helped "Boys."

One case in particular that will not be amiss here happened when Mr. Kromer was "getting" the flight of the three sea-planes from San Diego to San Francisco. At Santa Barbara, where the party stopped for a rest and a visit with civilian colleagues, some very important "canned scenes" would have perished had it not been for the kindness and thoughtfulness of the American Film Company—better known as the "Flying A." These good folks turned over their entire studio to the "boys," developed their pictures and forwarded them on to San Francisco free of charge.

Barring one accident the party made the trip in good shape and in record time. This was one of the most unique accidents ever recorded in the motion picture industry, and can best be told by a newspaper report:

Ducks Ducked Them.

"A flock of ducks flying south over the ocean off San Louis Obispo collided with the Pacific Fleet's sea-plane SD-1, breaking the struts and forcing a landing in the water.

"Radio appeal for help called a destroyer from the fleet at Monterey to the rescue. The crew of the plane, which consisted of Ensign Berkeley, who was driving; Ensign Newhouse and C. R. Kromer, the cameraman, was taxied into the surf at San Simon and beached. No one was injured."

The New York publicity bureau and photographic divisions are under the direction of Captain O. P. Jackson and Commander W. S. Anderson; the Washington divisions are under the command of Lieutenant W. L. Richardson. Every air station in the navy works in conjunction with the above mentioned divisions and their commanders, and co-operation is the secret of their success.

Bacon to Produce Three Plays.

Gerald F. Bacon, producer for both stage and screen, announces that early in June he will start production on three popular stage plays, including a screen version of "The Girl from Rectors." His late production, "Blind Love," starring Lucy Cotton, is now booking on the independent market.

Howard Selznick Marriage Announced.

A romance which concerns the son of a prominent motion picture producer came to light recently when Lewis J. Selznick announced the marriage of his eldest son, Howard, to Mildred Schneider, aged eighteen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schneider of Brooklyn, New York.

The marriage took place last January but was kept secret. It took place just before Howard went to California for his father to attend to certain phases of work connected with the Selznick studios in Los Angeles. After his return to New York a short time ago, Howard told of his marriage.

At present Howard, who is only 22, is at the Selznick Fort Lee studio, studying to be a director in his father's studio.

Sennett's "Down on the Farm"

Proves to Be a Smashing Hit

MACK SENNETT'S "Down on the Farm," his new, big, five-reel comedy which is being released by United Artists Corporation, made a tremendous hit with the critics of San Francisco, upon its first showing in this country at the Imperial Theatre.

The Imperial Theatre set aside the week as its comedy week for the year and presented "Down on the Farm" in a lavish manner, bringing to the theatre capacity business during the entire week.

Thomas Nunan of the San Francisco Examiner in his review of the production said: "This is funny week at the Imperial Theatre and if your doctor says it will kill you to laugh, be sure that you stay away from the Imperial. Mack Sennett's 'Down on the Farm' is the funniest comedy I have ever seen on the screen."

Thomas W. Baily of the San Francisco Chronicle had this to say in his review: "When Mack Sennett conceived 'Down on the Farm,' he must have carefully measured the actions in the scenario, because for every foot of celluloid he has injected a hearty laugh."

George C. Warren of the San Francisco Daily News had this to say: "Everybody laughs, even a critic, at the funny photoplay 'Down on the Farm,' Mack Sennett's ambitious five reel comedy which yesterday began a limited engagement at the Imperial Theatre. The picture brings tears—but they are tears of laughter."

Edward Boland of the San Francisco Bulletin said: "Laugh week at the Imperial! No bunk about this announcement! If you go to the playhouse you can figure on leaving dull care at the door and if you assume it on emerging, it is your own fault."

Sennett Comedy Smashes Records.

Los Angeles, April 20.

Editor, Moving Picture World:

"Down on the Farm" played to 3,230 at the Kinema Theatre here on Sunday, 2,110 on Monday and 2,033 on Tuesday, which breaks the house record by 700 on Sunday and 600 on Monday. The Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, seating 1,400, played 12,000 last week and started a second week on Sunday. These receipts are absolutely authentic. If you wish to confirm the same, will gladly show the records to your local representative.

Cutting "Yellow Typhoon."

The cutting and titling of "The Yellow Typhoon," Anita Stewart's latest Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, has been completed and the negative has been sent east to be printed. The story, by Harold MacGrath, originally ran as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post.

Andrew J. Callaghan to Visit New York for Starring Vehicles for Bessie Love

ANDREW J. CALLAGHAN, head of the producing company recently organized with Bessie Love as its star, is about to leave Los Angeles for New York City, where he will confer with his eastern representatives on additional screen vehicles of reputation for his star. His eastern offices are located at 25 West Forty-third street.

Mr. Callaghan represents a group of Chicago capitalists who are sparing no expense in surrounding Miss Love with high-class materials and direction in her new era of production, and his journey across the continent is being made in the belief that the choice of suitable stories amply warrants the expenditure of time and money to come to the New York market. With production on Miss Love's initial Callaghan picture, "The Midlanders," in full swing and the first results justifying in every respect the glowing prophecy of Ida May Park and Joseph de Grasse, her directors, Mr. Callaghan is taking advan-

and shall take all the time necessary in New York City to get a wealth of good material."

Frederick Mercy Opens His

New Yakima, Wash., Theatre

THE Mercy Theatre, seating 1,800 and costing $250,000, was opened at Yakima, Wash., on April 5 by President Frederick Mercy. It is said to be the largest theatre playing road shows in the states of Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Washington, as well as British Columbia, in point of seating capacity and stage room, and to be the largest in the country playing a combination of vaudeville, road shows and motion pictures. The population of Yakima is 20,000.

Mr. Mercy went to Yakima eight years ago and opened a twenty-five-foot-wide theatre. Among pictures he will show soon will be Douglas Fairbanks' "When the Clouds Roll By," Mary Pickford's "Pollyanna," Harold Lloyd's "Bumping Into Broadway," "The Fall of Babylon," and Constance Talmadge's "A Temperamental Wife."

The theatre staff is composed of the following: manager, A. J. Bartholet; floor manager, William Hervey; assistant floor manager, Frederick Mercy, Jr., son of the president; musical director, A. P. Freimuth; cashier, Lyla Aumiller; assistant cashier, Camille Fagalde; doorkeeper, William Russell; stage manager, Richard Crist; electrician, E. Johnson; property master, J. Ridgway; flyman, Fred Kelly; second hand, H. Tattersall; chief projectionist, Guy Hill; building superintendent, W. W. Lilley.

Urban Claims to Have Solved the One-Reel Film Problem

CHARLES URBAN, president of the Kineto Company of America, has devised a new kind of screen entertainment, the distribution of which in the United States and Canada will shortly be announced. Mr. Urban says of his Movie Chats:

"The aim is to offer pictorial information in the chatty, informal style of one who has traveled and observed much. A number of different subjects are taken up in each series, but each subject is characterized by a permanent worth-whileness that distinguishes it from the daily topical or the vaudeville wheeze.

"Science, industry, art, the animal world, travel in little-known lands, the civilized and the primitive, are pleasingly and truthfully treated. They are intended to gratify the average movie patron's appetite for knowledge.

"The personnel aiding me in the work itself and in the extension exploitation include Norris Wilcox, general manager; Carl Horton Pierce, in charge of distribution, and Henry MacMahon, research expert and title editor."

Goldwyn Exchanges to Handle Buddy Post-Capitol Comedies

BUDDY POST in two-reel Capitol Comedies, to be produced by the National Film Corporation, will be distributed through Goldwyn exchanges, beginning at an early date, according to an announcement issued by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

The first of the pictures starring the giant comedian is being completed at the coast studios of the National Corporation. Whether or not the working title of the initial comedy will be retained, "Love and Loot," is undetermined.

Andrew J. Callaghan.

Coming to Manhattan to purchase additional stories for Callaghan productions, starring Bessie Love.

tage of the general favorable situation to visit the metropolis.

Miss Love's Progress Pleases.

In a statement issued from the Bessie Love studios in Los Angeles concerning his plans on the coming trip to New York, Mr. Callaghan says:

"Our purpose as outlined in the initial announcements of this company, call for a high standard of production on every count for the charming star who has become associated with us in the making of superior photoplays. Therefore it becomes imperative for me to take advantage of a generally favorable situation to seek the best there is in the abundant New York market.

"The story of 'The Midlanders' suits Miss Love admirably, giving her not alone opportunities to display her sweet simplicity, but allowing her the full expression of emotional acting in a strong love story of the Mississippi Valley.

"It is because we have become convinced of the absolute importance of the story in the making of our pictures that I am taking the trip across the continent. After having conferred at some length with Miss Love, Miss Park and Mr. de Grasse, on the type of narrative suitable for the uses of our star, I know definitely what I want

A SOMEWHAT lively week. Ralph Proctor came to town. John D. Tippet, of international film fame and headquarters in London, arrived for a short stay. Olive Thomas and her director, Larry Timble, came in to start work on "Jenny," at Harry Rapf's west coast Selznick studio.

Jackie Saunders and little Jacqueline are here. Tom Meighan blew in for his big part in William De Mille's "Conrad in Search of His Youth." Governor Stephens, of the sovereign and sunkissed state of California, paid a visit to the Goldwyn studios, and was entertained with a luncheon and a trip through the plant by Vice-President Abraham Lehr.

Sol Lesser, of the Greater Lesser Enterprises, and Dave Bershon, manager of the First National Exchange, started for Chicago to sit in at a meeting of First National franchise holders.

Maurice Maeterlinck, prominent scenario writer for Jesse D. Hampton, departed for New York in search of stories.

Part of a Lively Week.

Bebe Daniels was chased by bandits on a lonely road and had to step on the gas to get away. Edna Purviance went to the horse show in Santa Barbara and got in an automobile smash-up coming back. Mildred Harris Chaplin returned from San Diego, where she was one of the party that welcomed and entertained the Prince of Wales. And on top of all that, Harry Reichenbach is here stirring things up for Equity Pictures, and Mary and Doug are getting ready to start honeymooning next month.

Bennie Zeidman has got something big up his sleeve in the production line that he won't tell about. Mahlon Hamilton is raising a set of whiskers, and Eddie O'Hara, Micky Neilan's publicity dopest, who neglected to take his course of sulphur and molasses this spring, has got a fierce boil on his neck.

Leah Baird Talks of "The Heart Line."

I had a very pleasant little talk with Leah Baird, who has come out to the coast with her husband, Arthur Beck, and one of the producing companies of the Gibraltar Films.

Miss Baird told me about "The Heart Line," a story by Gelett Burgess that will be used as her first vehicle for Gibraltar.

"I am putting the story into continuity now," said Miss Baird. "It is a wonderful piece of work—a story that will make people think, and talk, and argue, and maybe even quarrel. But it is the kind of story they will remember and advise their friends to see."

Miss Baird told me the plot of "The Heart Line," and she is right in her opinion that it will cause discussion. It is the kind of story that will give the person who is inclined to scoff at other people's beliefs a chance to say: "I told you so. Haven't I been telling you all along that it was all bunk?" That is, it will please the scoffers for something over four thousand five hundred feet of the film. Then there is a sudden twist in the plot that gives it a totally unexpected ending.

A Film to Please Two Knights.

When Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir Conan Doyle see the film, which they will because it is right in their line, they will be pained at first—they will think they are sitting in on an expose of their pet belief, but when the final smash comes, the unexpected thing that overturns all that has gone before, they will be highly pleased.

I did a little stepping around this week—stopped in at the Hollywood studios, Jack Casper's community movie foundry, and saw Wesley Barry trying out the automatic buckboard that Micky Neilan gave him as a present for having arrived at his thirteenth birthday with all his freckles intact.

Wesley was pumping up the tires, and Watterson Rothacker, Wesley Smith, Bennie Zeidman, Harry Leonhardt, Jack Jasper and Senor Luigi Montagna, sometimes yclept Bull Montana, were standing around offering advice and looking as if they all wished they were kids again.

Eddie O'Hara got out a brand new Graflex camera and made everybody think he was going to take pictures of the celebrated throng, which I'm satisfied he would have done if he had known how to work the darn thing.

Fearing that Eddie might get the camera to working and that I might get caught in the picture, which might afterward find its way into the papers, I excused myself and went over to the D. N. Schwab studio, where Dave Butler is working on his second production, "Smilin' All the Way," a story of a New England country boy who managed a restaurant in Greenwich Village and who fed the villagers on New England mince pies and country sausage.

Fred Butler, who is Dave's dad, was directing the picture, and Leatrice Joy as leading woman, Parker J. McConnell as heavy, Lydia Yeamans Titus as a grande dame, Helen Scott and Rhea Haines as Washington Square artists, Paul Scofield, Billy Duval, Frances Raymond and little Arthur Redden, a clever kid, were in the cast.

The Schwab organization was all jazzed up with excitement. Fred Butler wore a smile a yard long, and Dave was as skittish as a two-year-old. Martin V. Merle, the scenario dopest, was jumping up and cracking his heels together. The reason for all this glad stuff was the fact that the first David Butler production, "Sitting on the World," has received the unqualified praise of all who looked at it the other night at the Iris Theatre in Hollywood.

Everybody Sitting on the World.

"We've put Dave over," said Dore Schwab. "We've put him over big, and we are all sitting on the world—right on top of it! Whoop! and couple more whoops!"

I left them to their joy and stepped over on another stage and right into the insides of a Mississippi River house-boat that King Vidor was using for the filming of Ellis Parker Butler's story, "The Jack Knife Man."

"I don't know whether you were ever in a Mississippi River house-boat or not," said King Vidor, "but we think this is the real atmosphere."

I know a lot about house-boats. Once when I was a young chap I went river rattin' and stayed with it until I was so full of "yaller janders" and malaria fever from drinking "tadpole water" that I looked like a Chink, but I didn't say a word to Vidor until I had gone into the cabin of the boat and looked around. I thought I might find some glaring mistake and have the pleasure of airing my wonderful knowledge.

The Seal of Approval.

There was nothing to criticise, however, the boat was as perfect as could be, and almost a duplicate of old Dave Dixon's boat that used to float down the river just ahead of the ice every fall, and get towed up the river just after the ice broke up in the spring.

Old Dave Dixon was as tough as whit leather, a fountain of tobacco juice and profanity, full of rough words and rougher deeds, but an angel of gentleness and kindness to the blind wife who had not been ashore for five years and sat in her own special cabin in the bow of the craft and picked out tunes in a tinkling piano while Old Dave traded in booze and catfish and muskrat hides with the riffraff of the little river towns where he tied up.

Well, well, I've drifted clear off. You'd think I was Rubbernecking the Father of Waters instead of a movie studio, but it was all so real that it brought the old river days back to me. All the set needed was a few Arkansas "skeeters" and some willow gnats to make it absolutely perfect.

Combines Pathos and Humor.

I believe "The Jack Knife Man" is going to be a film that people will like. Aside from the romantic atmosphere of the Mississippi, there is a story full of pathetic moments and quaint characterizations and lots of humor.

Frederick A. Turner, who has the part of the Jack Knife man, a kindly old chap who makes his living by whittling out wooden toys and selling them to the people along the river; Harry Todd, who plays "Boogie," a river tramp; Willis Marks as "Old Briggles," a sanctimonious official of a childrens' home, were all at the studio when I was there, and so was Bobby Kelso, a four and a half year old kid who is taking his first part in the movies and is proud of it.

Bobby plays the part of "Buddy," who is taken to live on the houseboat by the Jack Knife man until Briggles takes him away to a childrens' home.

Montgomery Back from the Coast.

George N. Montgomery, general sales manager of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, following a tour of all branches throughout the country, has returned to New York from Los Angeles, where he has spent sometime with the Hallmark producing companies on the Coast. Mr. Montgomery reports that "The Evil Eye," Frank G. Hall's serial starring Benny Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, is nearing completion under supervision of Wally Van. The Hallmark Exchanges throughout the country are experiencing an era of prosperity with business reported aggregating several hundred per cent. over that of a few months past. In addition to Hallmark's present eighteen distributing centers, new and independent offices were opened at Kansas City, St. Louis, Salt Lake City, etc.

Sprightly Torchy Henceforth to Gambol in Two Reel Comedies for Educational TORCHY has become a member of the Educational Films Corporation's family. E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager, has announced that his company had just acquired the "Torchy" Comedies, produced by Master Films, Inc., and that the contract calls for thirteen of these two reel comedies, from the stories by Sewell Ford and starring Johnny Hines, to be supplied in a year. They will be released every four weeks, the first to be available with the opening of Educational's new exchanges.

First of these comedies, titled simply as "Torchy," was recently given a pre-release showing at the Strand theatres in Manhattan and Brooklyn, where it was given enthusiastic receptions by the fans and won praise from the daily newspaper and trade press critics. President Charles C. Burr, of Master Films, has been able to give Mr. Hammons ample assurance that the other comedies to be produced will be fully up to the same standard.

Work has been started on the second of the series at the Cliffside studios. It has the working title of "A Knight for a Night." Great care has been taken in casting the picture, beauty and freshness among the women and youth and cleverness on the part of many of the male support being required. Certain of the characters will probably be carried through the series.

Promise Elaborate Publicity.

"Torchy" Comedies are expected to have an unusual appeal to the exhibitor not only on account of the worth of the productions themselves, but because of the widespread popularity of the star and because there are few series of stories so well known as the Ford creations concerning the red-headed and active-brained office boy. These stories have been appearing in leading magazines and newspapers for several years and already seven volumes of the stories have been published by N. J. Clode, who is one of the officials of the producing company.

The newest series of stories is now being carried in leading newspapers of the country through the McClure Newspaper Syndicate. These stories will continue to so appear, affording the exhibitor a constant local co-operation. In addition, plans are being made for special photoplay editions of the stories, illustrated with scenes from the different comedies.

However, despite this large amount of publicity, Educational promises elaborate campaigns on these pictures. Already the advertising and exploitation departments are at work on the first of the series and full material for advertising will be ready for exhibitors before the first release.

Acquisition of the "Torchy" series gives Educational a two reel comedy release for three weeks out of each four. Mr. Hammons stated that he expects to announce the fourth series within a few days. This will complete the original plan, but it is possible that others will be added since the facilities of Educational for distribution and specialization in short subjects are so great.

Four New Northwest Houses Will Cost About $438,000

PLANS for three new Northwest motion picture houses were announced this week. In addition, plans for a movie theatre valued at $138,000 are nearing completion and another is undergoing remodeling estimated at $25,000.

S. C. Thompson, president of the Tri-State Film Exchange and one of the veteran motion picture men of the Northwest, will build a motion picture theatre at Snelling and Sherburne avenues, Midway, St. Paul, with a 1,000-seat capacity and costing $200,000. The house will be modern in every particular and will draw from a territory without competition for a distance of twelve blocks in every direction.

In addition, Mr. Thompson is preparing to construct another theatre with the same seating capacity and to cost $138,000, at Prior and St. Anthony avenues, St. Paul. Construction will start May 1.

Vondra & Lovchik are preparing to build at Mahanomen, Minn., a $35,000 movie house. It will have a seating capacity of 600. Work is scheduled to begin shortly.

One of the most pretentious houses on the Iron Range of Minnesota will be built by Charles H. Taylor at Crosby, Minn. The building will accommodate 1,000 persons and will cost $65,000. It will draw from seven tributary towns within a mile and a quarter of it, in which there are no motion picture houses.

Famous Players Sign Wanger as Special Representative

THE engagement of Walter Wanger, one of the youngest producing managers on Broadway, as special representative of the production department, was announced by Famous Players-Lasky.

As special representative Mr. Wanger will keep in close touch with Paramount Artcraft artists and all other phases of production.

Mr. Wanger's experience, although covering a short number of years, has been varied. His first position was with Granville Barker, the well-known English producer. In 1917 he presented, with Charles Bryant, the Nazimova season, which included "Ception Shoals," which later became the motion picture, "Out of the Fog." The Nazimova season was cut short by the war, Mr. Wanger enlisting in 1917 and serving in the air service abroad for eighteen months, most of the time in Italy.

On his discharge from the army Mr. Wanger, by agreement with the Theatre Guild, presented two companies of "John Ferguson" on tour, and produced Frank Bacon's play, "Five O'Clock," at the Fulton Theatre.

Richard Travers Heads Cast of Stoll's "Determination"

AS an indication of what exhibitors and the general public may expect of "Determination," to be produced by Captain F. F. Stoll at the E. K. Lincoln studio at Grantwood, N. J., the cast is announced in full.

Vitagraph Soon to Release "Courage of Marge O'Doone"

VITAGRAPH'S special production, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," is about to be placed on the market with a fanfare of advance publicity and prestige which bids fair to set aside all rules. The name of its author, James Oliver Curwood, has attained magic charm from his other recent novels and the films that have been made of them.

In its original form, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" has been making a literary sensation for more than a year. The locale is the region that borders on the Arctic circle. There are scenes of blizzards, bear fights and man fights of extreme heroism and hardship.

David Smith directed this special feature. Pauline Starke and Niles Welch have the leading roles. It is announced that the film has been received at the Brooklyn studio of Vitagraph, where it is receiving its final editing.

Carl Laemmle Welcomes Marie Walcamp on Her Return from Japan.

The president of Universal went out to Quarantine to meet Miss Walcamp's company. The serial star is seen here presenting her husband, Harland Tucker, whom she married in the Orient, to Mr. Laemmle.

Rothacker Film Aids Detroit Voters in Deciding on Bond Issue for New Car Lines

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, who was largely instrumental in swinging the Detroit bond issue of $15,000,000, to build new street car lines in that city, during the recent election, has received numerous congratulations by letter from pleased citizens of Detroit. It all came about by the showing of a Rothacker-made picture to the voters of Detroit. This picture, which is largely in cartoon form, visualizes the present street car conditions in that city. Tiny street cars flitting over the screen show the roundabout way in which workers are now obliged to travel to and from their work. Special attention is drawn to the time wasted and to the number of needless transfers made during the journey.

At psychological intervals the film shows flashes of busy street scenes and corners as the tiny cars pass, crowded to the uttermost, forcing weary workers to wait still longer for mere hanging-on space.

Then the film flashes on the screen the many new lines which $15,000,000 could build, and the ease with which a passenger—no matter in what section his home may be located, could rapidly make the trip to and from his work, in most cases without a single transfer.

Fifteen prints of the Rothacker picture were exhibited all over the city, just before the election, and they accomplished what many speeches and editorials had failed to do. The voters decided that they wanted a street car system like the one they saw on the screen, and the $15,000,000 bond issue for which they cast their votes, will give it to them.

New Fox Chicago Quarters Assured Says Lewis Levin

LEWIS S. LEVIN, on the staff of the New York office of Fox Film Corporation, who came on to Chicago to take the place of Manager Eckhardt, while the latter visited the South to recuperate, is at present engaged in solving the difficult problem of securing temporary quarters for the Chicago force. When seen, recently, he stated that he was not then in a position to give out anything definite in this respect, but was confident that satisfactory arrangements would be made so as to move out of the quarters in the Mallers Building before the expiration of the lease, on April 30.

Mr. Levin informed the writer that the Chicago office is just winding up, most successfully, the recent, national sales drive in this territory, and that business is exceptionally good in the Chicago office. He will remain in Chicago until the new quarters are occupied, thus lifting that burden from Manager Eckhardt's shoulders.

Section 187 of the amended city ordinance, passed June 28, 1918, and to go in effect May 1, 1920, has made it difficult for exchanges seeking new offices to secure suitable quarters. Section 187 reads, in part, as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, co-partnership or corporation to keep or store within the city of Chicago any motion picture films, whether in the form of positives or negatives, whether new or used, or discarded scraps of same, in any building or structure of wood, or in any other building or structure exceeding two stories in height, unless such building is of fireproof construction as defined in chapter XVI of the Chicago code of 1911, as amended," etc., etc.

In such fireproof buildings all vaults containing films must be directly connected with the outside air, at the top story of the building, by means of perpendicular air vents leading directly from such film vaults.

Many Are Turned Away When Barbee Opens Loop Theatre

NO longer will the popular slur about Chicago's dearth of loop theatres de luxe be substantiated. The opening of Barbee's Loop Theatre, on Monroe at Dearborn, Saturday evening, April 10, was a revelation.

Expressive of the interest that has been centered on this theatre for the past eight months during the period of its construction, hundreds of fans stood in line an hour before its opening and kept the lobby packed for the entire evening. Over 2,000 were turned away. The theatre seats 1,000.

W. S. Barbee had made sure that the feature for the opening night was one worthy of such an occasion, by booking Norma Talmadge in "She Loves and Lies," a Select picture shown for the first time in Chicago. Likewise, George E. F. Koehler, musical director of Barbee's Loop Orchestra of twenty pieces, had arranged a charming program. The program was unusually long and included Selznick News, a Prizma scenic, Literary Digest, a soprano solo, a comic number from "The Gumps."

During the overture the full beauty of the lighting system was displayed. Twenty-one different colors, merging, flickering, disappearing, were reflected about the house and on the screen by an indirect cove system.

Another wise move on the part of Mr. Barbee is the securing of J. P. Kopple as manager. Mr. Kopple formerly served at the Riviera Theatre in this capacity and won there a flattering reputation for his capability and personality.

Unusual Setting for "Bargain Day."

During the final week of "The Million Dollar Drive" to boost Chicago, Mr. Ireland, vice president and supervising director of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, who was appointed chairman of the film division, in aid of the "Drive" fund, took advantage of the occasion to use Marshall Field's dry goods establishment as a setting for a scene in "Bargain Day," a coming Reelcraft film, in which Alice Howell is the star.

This is the first time the palatial store was ever used for such a purpose and most probably will be the last; so that Miss Howell, in days to come, can refer to it as an unusual distinction.

A Mistake Corrected.

In the issue of April 17, in the Chicago News Letter, the writer mistakenly stated concerning "The Woman He Chose" that F. O. Nielsen owns the sole rights to that picture in the United States and Canada. The sole rights in the territory mentioned are owned by the Mickey Film Corporation, which is owned by Ludwig Schindler and Arthur Lowy.

Wesley Barry and Matt Moore on the exchange mart in Marshall Neilan's First National, "Don't Ever Marry."

Neilan to Star Wesley Barry in an Original Boy Story

MARSHALL NEILAN announces plans in connection with starring little Wesley Barry, the freckle-faced youth who appears with notable success in "Don't Ever Marry," "Daddy Long Legs" and other Neilan-directed pictures.

"The story in which Wesley will be featured is an adaptation from an original boy story by Mr. Neilan and Reed Heustis. No title has as yet been selected but it will be the first of a number of kid pictures in which Mr. Neilan plans to star young Barry during the coming year. Among the subjects in which Wesley will be seen on the screen for Mr. Neilan, will be an adaptation of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod."

Although only twelve years of age, Wesley Barry is one of the most popular players in motion pictures. For the past year little Barry has been studying for stardom under Mr. Neilan's tuition.

To co-direct the initial Wesley Barry story, Marshall Neilan has just engaged Jack McDermott. Mr. McDermott has been a director with the Christie company and prior to that with Universal.

New Elmo Lincoln Serial.

A new serial is projected for Elmo Lincoln, star in "Elmo the Mighty" and "Elmo the Fearless," the two Universal serials which followed his work in "Tarzan of the Apes." It will be called "The Lightning's Eye." The story and scenario are by Phillip Hubbard and A. H. Gooden, who wrote "Elmo the Fearless." The first episode, "The Radium Ray," already is in production.

He will be supported by Louise Lorraine who was his heroine in "Elmo the Fearless." In the cast there will be Roy Watson, A. C. Torr, Fred Hamer, G. A. Williams and Fay Holderman. Robert Hill will direct. In the new serial, Lincoln will double, playing both the powerful hero and the gigantic villain.

Martha Mansfield with American Cinema.

Martha Mansfield, most recently seen in support of John Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," has been engaged by the American Cinema Corporation for the leading feminine role in that company's new picture to be started soon under the direction of Wilfred North. The story is an original script by N. Brewster Morse.

"Carpentier a Great Actor and Is Going to Surprise the Public," Says Adolphi

THE world knows that Georges Carpentier is a great boxer; I know he is a great actor," declares John G. Adolphi. As Mr. Adolphi is directing Carpentier's first American picture, he ought to know. "I am working night and day to complete the picture as I understand Robertson-Cole is announcing the pre-release date for Decoration Day, May 30."

According to the home office, the Robertson-Cole exchanges are being literally swamped with applications and inquiries from exhibitors. From Maine to California, the popularity of the Frenchman has brought demands to the best and biggest exhibitors that they provide the opportunity for their patrons to see Carpentier. Hundreds of exhibitors have been holding dates open for the picture and they are making provision for extended dates.

"Carpentier is an artist of repose, a marvel of magnetism and his smile is contagious," continued Mr. Adolphi when he was

Carpentier to Make Fight

Scene in the Solax Studio

For the first time since his arrival in America, Georges Carpentier, "the idol of France," will fight in ring costume, on the evening of Monday, April 26, in the Solax Studio, Fort Lee, N. J. The appearance will be a part of Carpentier's American society drama which is being directed by John G. Adolphi, and which is to be distributed by Robertson-Cole.

To the fight 500 well known New Yorkers, sporting editors, trade paper and newspaper writers, sporting writers and critics have been invited.

Carpentier will be matched against a real fighter, so that those who are lucky enough to see the battle will witness a bout which will contain all the elements of a genuine ring encounter.

seen at the Solax Studio in Fort Lee where the production is being made.

"Georges Carpentier is going to surprise the American public. If he were a veteran of the screen he could not be more pliable in the hands of the director. He never has to be told twice and in fact he has given me splendid co-operation by making suggestions that will do much to emphasize his screen personality.

"The public is going to admire Carpentier's smile. It is the smile of a strong man. Carpentier does not indulge in that smile always. He is not grinning all the time. As a matter of fact, he is rather a serious-minded young man. It is the smile of a man who has just enough of the boy left in him to make youth stand out. The man who is always smiling is, to my mind, as obnoxious as the perpetually gloomy individual. Carpentier has such an engaging personality that he nicely shades his expressible face at all times, whether he is before the camera or not."

Ship's Passengers See Jewels.

James V. Bryson, formerly manager of the Universal branch exchange in Minneapolis, and now on his way to Australia to establish a Universal branch on that continent, has broken all precedents of the Steamship Sonoma, in which he is sailing, by setting up and operating a moving picture theatre en route. Three times a week he is giving a free show of Universal Jewels, features, comedies, westerns and serials to the entire passenger list and crew.

The Sonoma is carrying $250,000 worth of Universal films to Australia. Mr. Bryson has been assured that every passenger will be a booster for Universal's new venture in the Antipodes. The first show given a few days out from San Francisco, was "Blind Husbands" and a Lyons and Moran comedy.

New Poli Theatres Going Up Despite High Prices

DESPITE the high cost of material and labor Sylvester Z. Poli, the New England theatrical magnate who is perhaps the greatest individual owner of theatres in New England, Pennsylvania and in Washington, is not hesitating a bit in his construction work.

At the present time he is completing the new Poli Capitol Theatre in Hartford, a positive million dollar proposition, has just broken ground in Waterbury for an even larger and more expensive theatre and is working on the plans for the new duplex theatre in Bridgeport, work on which will soon start. Mr. Poli owns the most central plot in the city of Bridgeport just one block from the Stratfield Hotel and the acreage is such that it can house two theatres and Mr. Poli intends to build them. The theatres now under construction and under way by Mr. Poli aggregate an expenditure for five million dollars. Thomas W. Lamb, theatrical architect, plans and builds all of Mr. Poli's houses.

Boston Simplex Agent Leases Space Formerly Used by Select

HARRY ASHER, head of the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company, at 54 Broadway, was at the Simplex factory this week conferring with E. M. Porter, Simplex general manager, on matters that will eventually find their expression in a well organized drive covering the southern section of New England.

Mr. Asher reports that not only is Boston being thoroughly Simplexized but Fall River, Lawrence, Lowell and New Bedford are beginning to answer the call for Simplex.

The Boston company has leased the corner location formerly occupied by the Select Picture Corporation at the corner of Church and Shawmut streets to take care of increased business.

Engagements by American Cinema.

Two recent additions of interest to the executive force at American Cinema Corporation, include the engagement of Roy Davis, formerly of the advertising department of the Western Electric, as assistant to Walter Niebuhr, president of the American Cinema, and the addition of the services of A. R. Rhodes, who is now assistant to James R. Sheehan, production manager. Mr. Rhodes recently completed his government work, having been in charge of the laboratories in Washington during the period immediately following the war.

Falls City Theatres Booming.

Frank Creely is now operating the Empress Theatre, Falls City, Neb., and is presenting a program that pleases his patrons. Powell and Mullen are running the Electric Theatre and featuring Paramount-Artcraft and Fox programs. They have recently bought some new power equipment and also are enjoying a banner business.

NEWS of the INDEPENDENT FIELD

DISTRIBUTION

Kohn Enters Scenic Field; Also Revives Role of "Sheriff Nell" for Polly Moran

MARION H. KOHN announces he will enter the scenic field. He will head an expedition to Death Valley and film the many historical spots and freaks of nature which abound there. Furnace Creek, the famous borax beds, Dry Lake, Funeral Range and the Panamint Mountains will also be filmed, while the party will ascend Mount Whitney.

The film will be edited by geographers and the pictures released as a two-reeler, by Joe Brandt, eastern representative of the Kohn Productions.

Marion H. Kohn has decided to revive for Polly Moran, the character, "Sheriff Nell," which she portrayed for Keystone. The new comedies will be directed by Warde Hayes and written by Harry Wulze. The first will be "Sheriff Nell on the Job."

Six beautiful girls, among them Lillian Webster, formerly leading woman for Neal Burns, have been signed for the "Smiling Bill" Jones Comedies. Will Rogers, by arrangement with Goldwyn, is providing shots to be interspersed with his sayings in "The Illiterate Digest," while Grace Cunard has finished her third picture, "A Daughter of the Law," and is starting on the next.

Crane Is Writing for Screen His Conception of Democracy

THE well-known newspaper and magazine philosopher, Dr. Frank Crane, is preparing a story which will present his conception of "Democracy," and which will be presented in motion picture form by Lester Park and Edward Whiteside.

This picture will be directed by Frank Reicher, who also directed "Empty Arms" for Messrs. Park and Whiteside. This will be Dr. Crane's first contribution to the screen, and he will co-operate with Mr. Reicher in filming the story. Charles D. Isaacson, another well-known newspaper and magazine writer, will collaborate with Dr. Crane in preparing the story.

Pioneer Inaugurates Big Campaign of Exploitation

In accordance with Pioneer's plan for country-wide exploitation through the medium of outdoor advertising, two illuminated signs have recently been installed on Broadway. One is for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" featuring Sheldon Lewis and the other for Mary Anderson in "Bubbles." This has been supplemented by a billboard campaign throughout the city.

Arrangements are being made for similar displays in other territories in which the Pioneer co-operative exchanges operate. It is also announced that in accordance with decision at the recent Pioneer convention of exchange executives a plan is being prepared for additional trade paper advertising on Pioneer productions.

There have been several changes in the publicity department, however. Southard Brown still remains in charge, and Zillah Goldstein has been appointed his chief assistant.

Records of Pittsburgh Theatre Broken by "Blindness of Youth"

"The Blindness of Youth" enjoyed a very successful run at the Fifth Avenue Minerva Theatre, Pittsburgh, and Manager Demas declares the house records were broken. The first-night crowds and press gave the picture high praise. The Pittsburgh Bulletin says: "The theatre will be packed during the entire showing, the picture has an appeal that is all its own. The story is one that will please all lovers of the silent drama."

According to Sales Manager Schwerin, this record is being duplicated in many other places. T. L. Gardiner has booked this picture through the United Booking Offices for more than sixty days, while Savini Films has booked it over the entire S. A. Lynch circuit.

Two Buyers at Hotel Astor Desire to Purchase Films

Thomas W. Dooley, general manager, and George E. Scherrer, president, of Dooley Exchange, Inc., will be at the Hotel Astor, New York, April 27 to 30, inclusive, to purchase features, serials and other material for New York State. They announce they will be pleased to have independent producers and other parties having material open for this territory to get in touch with them on the above dates.

Big Foreign Sales on Hank Mann Comedies

The Paris office of the Arrow Film Corporation has sold the rights for the Hank Mann series of two-reel comedies for France, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Spain and Portugal. This series has also been sold for South America, New Zealand, South Africa, India, Burma and Ceylon, which practically completes the sale of foreign territory. The current release is "Z Romaine Romeo," which is the sixth of the series.

"Tillie" Sold for Iowa and Nebraska.

Sterling Film Corporation of Omaha has purchased from Tower Film Corporation Iowa and Nebraska rights on "Tillie's Punctured Romance" and announce they will launch an elaborate publicity and exploitation campaign on this production, including special stunts which will prove real box office boosters.

Lybarger's "Democracy" May Be Shown as Theatrical Attraction

Democracy Photoplay Company reports many inquiries from distributors, buyers and exhibitors regarding "Democracy, the Vision Restored." The producer, Francis Lee Lybarger, states while the state right market appears to be the logical avenue of release, he is in no hurry to make contracts for territory as he is considering an excellent offer for the presentation of this picture as a theatre attraction in New York and other large cities, with a symphony orchestra and special music.

This production is described as a "world vision of the new order which is to come wherein lies the solution of humanity's greatest problem—the elimination of class hatred."

Agnes Egan Cobb Back from Trip in Interest of "Sacred Flame"

Agnes Egan Cobb, sales and publicity manager for Schomer Ross Productions, has returned from a motor trip to Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, during which she visited the exchanges in that territory in the interest of "The Sacred Flame," featuring Emily Stevens, which she is exploiting.

This picture is being handled in Philadelphia territory by the Screen Art Pictures Corporation, who are arranging for week runs at the Standard, Palace and Victoria theatres.

Oh, No, Not a Murder. Just a Little Dance—the "Malarious Mexican Maul."

Mary Anderson about to be put under lock and key (not city) in Canyon Pictures' "Vanishing Trails," a Selig production, offered on the state right market.

"Trouble" First Al St. John Comedy; Warners Report Many Territory Sales

WARNER BROTHERS announce the first Al St. John comedy released on the independent market will be entitled "Trouble." These comedies made by Warner Brothers has heretofore been released by Famous Players-Lasky, but with the discontinuance of many of its short subjects will henceforth be released on state right market, one each month.

The following sales of territory have been made: Georgia, Alabama, Florida and North and South Carolina to Criterion Film Service, Atlanta; Illinois to First National Exhibitors' Exchange, Chicago; Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to First National Exhibitors' Exchange, Pittsburgh; Kentucky and Tennessee to First National Exhibitors' Exchange, Louisville; Eastern Missouri to Grand Central Film Company, St. Louis.

Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas to A. H. Blank Enterprises, Des Moines; Indiana to H. Leiber Company, Indianapolis; Arizona and Southern California to First National Exhibitors' Exchange, Los Angeles; Nevada, Hawaii and northern California to All Star Feature Distributors, San Francisco; Upper New York State to Robbins Film Company, Utica; Ohio to First National Exchange, Cleveland; Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia to Electric Theatre Supply Company, Philadelphia.

Al St. John was for a long time associated with Fatty Arbuckle and has been featured in other productions. He was one of the original Keystone company.

Canyon Preparing to Present

Franklyn Farnum in More Films

Canyon Pictures Corporation is at work on a big exploitation campaign for "Vanishing Trails," the Selig serial featuring William Farnum and Mary Anderson. Jack Weinberg, president of the company is visiting prominent state right buyers in the interest of their serials, while en route to Los Angeles to confer with William N. Selig regarding future productions starring Franklyn Farnum, while J. M. Goldstein, secretary and treasurer of the company, will handle other sales from the New York office.

It was because of the success of the two-reel Farnum pictures that the serial was made, and Mr. Weinberg is taking several new stories with him. In addition, there is a regular contributing staff including such writers as Frederic Chapin, William E. Wing,

E. M. Bower and Bertram Sinclair. Leon DeLaMothe will direct the new Farnum productions, and Maurie Meyers is handling the publicity, and preparing an attractive press book. A screening of the serial will be announced shortly.

Warners Announce Another Serial with Helen Holmes

AFTER seven weeks at the Warner Studios in Los Angeles, where Warner Brothers are producing the Al St. John comedies and "The Tiger Band" serial, Albert Warner has returned to New York. He brought the first three episodes of this fifteen episode serial, starring Helen Holmes.

The release date of "The Tiger Band" will be announced soon, to be followed by a big advertising campaign. It is claimed that this serial will rival "The Lost City" as a box office attraction.

National Will Use Large Number of Monkeys for "Tarzan" Serial

Harry Revler, the director, and Roy Somerville, the scenarist, have reached Los Angeles and will immediately start work on the National Film Corporation serial, "The Son of Tarzan." Joe Brandt, the Chester general, also expects to reach California within a short time.

It is announced that live animals will be used for this serial in which Jack Hoxie and Lucille Rubey will play the leading roles, and for this purpose over three hundred monkeys, gorillas and chimpanzees have been contracted for to make the production realistic. It is understood that in addition to a royalty, $20,000 was paid for the rights to this book by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Chaplin's "The Champion" Booked for Two-Week Showing at Graumans

Victor Kremer reports that arrangements have been consummated by which Sid Grauman will present the revival of Charlie Chaplin's "The Champion" for two weeks at Grauman's Theatre in Los Angeles, beginning April 26.

Mr. Grauman will give this two-reel picture big exploitation and feature it in his publicity as well as on electric signs. In order to have the print arrive in Los Angeles on time, Mr. Kremer despatched it from his New York office by special messenger.

Pioneer Gets "Empty Arms" for Two States

Pioneer Film Corporation announces the securing of New York and northern New Jersey rights for the Park-Whiteside production, "Empty Arms" in which Gail Kane is featured, and that at the first private showing Sidney Cohen booked it for his circuit, including the North Star, Empire, Tremont and McKinley Square theatres. Both the New York and Buffalo offices of Pioneer are now screening the picture and anticipate from the interest shown that it will be a big success.

Kremer Pictures Active in Sales and Bookings

VICTOR KREMER, now touring the country in the interest of the Chaplin releases he is handling, reports sale of the four short length subjects to Standard Film Corporation of St. Louis for that territory, and this exchange has secured over one hundred days on these pictures for that city alone.

The combination stage and screen attraction presented in connection with "A Burlesque on Carmen" will be brought to New York within the next few weeks. At the present time the principals are being transported from town to town on account of the railroad situation, and additional publicity is secured by having them drive through the principal streets at each point.

Account of increased interest on the Chaplin productions, New York Independent Masterfilms have increased its sales force. Ira H. Simmons, manager of the exchange, has appointed Sam Farber to cover Brooklyn, and Israel Cobe as representative in upper New York. Mr. Farber was formerly with V. L. S. E. and Mr. Cobe with Universal and Pioneer.

Reelcraft to Become Allied with Independent Exchanges

R. C. CROPPER, who has just returned from a trip through the Middle West, reports that many independent exchange owners are anxious to ally themselves with the independent producer and are seeking an alliance with Reelcraft Pictures Corporation.

In view of this, Reelcraft announces it has partially abandoned the original plan of opening numerous exchanges, and will ally themselves with independent exchanging, devoting more efforts to production rather than to the distribution end. Six companies are now at work, and it is planned to offer all types of short subjects, including comedies, westerns, serials, scenics and novelties.

Blazed Trail Making Features Which Arrow Will Distribute

BLAZED TRAIL PRODUCTIONS, INC., releasing through the Arrow, has announced its plan to produce a series of five reel productions. This company has completed a series of twelve two-reel subjects, based upon the adventures of a member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

John Lowell and Dakota Lawrence, featured in the short subjects, have been placed under contract for the five reels, and actual production will have been started, it is believed, within a month. A new studio is being erected on the shores of Canada Lake, and nearby a complete village will be built, for the taking of northwestern material.

"Screen Snapshots" Issued Bi-Weekly.

"Screen Snapshots," which Jack Cohn has announced ready for release, will be issued every other week and will be the only all-star one-reeler produced, according to Mr. Cohn. It features the work of stars off duty, at play and behind the scenes and answers questions movie fans like to ask.

Miller Arrives in Los Angeles.

A. Lincoln Miller has arrived in Los Angeles, and is making preparations for the production of "The Weekly Indigestion," the single reel burlesque of current events which is being distributed by Radin Pictures. Mr. Miller has signed several comedians and is reported as negotiating with others.

Q.—Why Doesn't the Man in the Gray Suit Look Too? A.—He's Married. And wife is leading him away from a million dollars' worth of beauty. Annette Kellerman making her modern comedy-drama for Sol Lesser.

Pioneer's "Dr. Jekyll" Goes Big in Newark.

Pioneer is in receipt of advice from Nathan Matchet, manager of the Savoy Theatre, Newark, N. J., that the receipts from the engagement of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" featuring Sheldon Lewis have broken all records in spite of bad weather and strong opposition. It is also reported by Pioneer officials that this success is being duplicated in other parts of the country.

Elaborate Exploitation for Fine Arts Five Reel Comedy

FINE ARTS PICTURES, Inc., announces that the comedy "Up in Mary's Attic" will receive more exploitation than any other five-reel comedy. An order has already been placed with Ritchey Lithograph Company for a large quantity of posters, printed matter and other accessories, and an extended advertising campaign will be started soon.

This comedy featuring Harry Gribbon and Eva Novak will be ready for showing in about six weeks. Elmer J. McGovern, who edited "Mickey," is cutting the picture, and has sixty thousand feet to work on. An interesting feature of this comedy will be the bathing beauties who appear in many of the important scenes.

No release date has been set, but Charles F. Schwerin, in charge of sales, has received many requests for information, and bids for rights. Don Walk has been placed in charge of publicity and advertising, and he will co-operate with Mr. Schwerin.

Lesser Will Attend Circuit Conclave on Way to New York

SOL LESSER, who with the Gore Brothers, recently purchased First National franchise for Southern California, in addition to a chain of theatres, will attend the First National Convention in Chicago, beginning April 26, and expects to come immediately to New York for a short stay.

It is expected that while here he will announce his distribution policy for the George Beban picture, "One Man in a Million," which he is producing.

Before leaving California, Mr. Lesser and J. D. Williams, general manager of First National, visited the Lesser studios at Riverside to see the making of underwater scenes for the Annette Kellerman picture. A negative was rushed through the laboratory and the same evening a test print shown at Lesser's Kinema Theatre to a few guests.

Hall Room Boys Comedies Are True to Life, Says Jack Cohn

THE reason for the popularity of Hall Room Boys comedies," says Jack Cohn, "is that they are not only funny, but are true to life. When a picture shows a phase of life enacted daily, it means audiences will not only laugh, but be entertained and interested in seeing the tricks of the trade of 'Hall Room' life.

"These comedies have the experiences of thousands of poor but ambitious 'sports' to draw on. There is plot to them. The worries and terrors of putting up the front of an embryo millionaire on an eight-a-week income lend themselves admirably to the filming of funny situations."

According to Mr. Cohn, the Hall Room Boys comedies are now being booked on the Loew, and Fox circuits, and at the New York Strand, and in houses of similar standing throughout the country.

Unique Publicity for Second Jans Film.

Special exploitation and publicity is being prepared for the second Jans picture starring Olive Tell, "A Woman's Business." A campaign book containing out-of-the-ordinary features is being prepared, particular attention being given to tie-ups with merchants and local organizations and also to newspaper advertisements, which will advertise the theatre and remainder of the program in connection with this feature picture. In addition, the home office of the company will co-operate actively with the exhibitor.

Many Out-of-Town Buyers Visit Arrow Company; Also Presents Big Six-Reelers

ARROW FILM CORPORATION reports that during the past week the following out-of-town buyers who visited New York bought territory on Arrow pictures: A. Samuels, of Southeastern Pictures Corp., Atlanta; Sam Grand, of Arrow Film Company, Boston; Ben Amsterdam, of Arrow Film Company, Philadelphia; Harry Charnas, of Standard Film Service, Cleveland; Cincinnati and Detroit; W. W. Aechtler, of Major Film Company, Boston, and Mr. Burman, of Philadelphia.

These buyers express confidence in the future of the independent market and report they are able to secure bigger and better productions than ever before. Their confidence is due to the flourishing condition of their exchange, and is reflected in signing up for independent productions that are now in the making.

The Arrow Film Corporation is distributing a six-reel feature, "The Daughter of the Don." It is announced as a big spectacular story dealing with the feuds between the Californians and Mexicans in the early days, having many thrilling scenes and a charming love story.

Two sales are reported as having been made during the first twenty-four hours that the print was in the Arrow office: one for Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, California, Arizona and Nevada, and the other for the New England states.

Expect to Realize $200,000 from Sale of "Empty Arms"

ESTER PARK and Edward Whiteside, producers of "Empty Arms," distributed by Photoplay Libraries, Inc., announce that indications point to a total of $200,000 for the territorial rights to this production. General Manager Byron Park says: "It is remarkable the interest exhibitors and buyers have shown in 'Empty Arms,' many wishing options on the picture without even seeing it.

"The territory already sold, including the Far West, Middle East, the Metropolis and some of the Eastern states, average up to the quota they must bring to produce $200,000 for the United States alone. Figuring that perhaps the remaining territory, together with Canada and Europe do not reach their quota, it will be impossible for 'Empty Arms' to sell for less than this amount on the entire world market.

"Many will recall our statement that we have refused $100,000 for world rights. We, however, knew what we were doing. Recent results show that we were not wrong."

Hall Room Boys Presented in First "Ouija" Picture

JACK and Harry Cohn claim credit for producing the first "Ouija" picture on record. It is the latest Hall Room Boys Comedy, and is titled "Tell Us, Ouija." Neely Edwards and Hugh Fay, the featured players confer with the spirits by means of the ouija board to discover the ways and means of putting up a front without financial backing.

An extensive exploitation program is being prepared, including hook-ups, with stores handling these boards, and announce that already several stores have announced their desire to tie-up on this exploitation.

Thrilling Duel in "Kentucky Colonel."

One of the thrilling incidents in the National Film Corporation's latest feature is a duel between the colonel, portrayed by Joseph J. Dowling, and his best friend, portrayed by Frederick Vroom. Both show their true feelings by firing into the air. Elinor Field, Francis MacDonald and Lloyd Bacon are among the other players of prominence. Joe Brandt is handling the releasing arrangements.

All Domestic Rights on "Confession" Sold.

George H. Davis, owner of "Confession," the National production featuring Henry D. Walthall, has sold the Tennessee and Kentucky rights to Big Feature Rights Corporation, Louisville, and Ohio rights to Crandall Film Company, Pittsburgh. This closes out all territory with the exception of Continental Europe.

Radin Reports Sales on Two-Reelers.

Radin Pictures have sold rights to the series of "Real Star Dramas" to Eastern Film Company, Atlanta, for Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina. These are two-reelers and feature Violet Mersereau, Francis Ford, Ruth Stonehouse, Mary Fuller and Grace Cunard.

"She's 'The Daughter of the Law' That You Must Live Up To."

Wilson Contract Closed.

THE Willard Harn Company, Inc., was given the contract for building the New Wilson Theatre on the site of the Church of the Messiah on April 14, when George C. Wilson and J. W. Hoover, president and secretary, respectively, of the Wilson Amusement Company, of which Guy L. Wonders, is managing director, were in Baltimore. Title was taken to the property recently by that company, the consideration being $195,000. The seating capacity will be 2,500. Work will start immediately.

To Show Traffic Dangers.

Traffic dangers and violations, which are encountered every day will be graphically shown in a moving picture drama to be taken by Ziegfeld & Tate, Baltimore moving picture men, for the State Automobile Commissioner's office of Maryland. The star part will be played by Col. E. Austin Baughman, Automobile Commissioner of Maryland, in the play which has been written by Herman E. Tate. In order to get in all the violations that pedestrians are subject to, two crooks are shown getting a license and then they make away with a car and change the license tags. It is when they make their getaway that several of the accidents happen, one of which is running over a little girl. There is a hero and in the end the crooks are foiled and the end is happy. It is the plan of the commissioner's office to show the film throughout Maryland to aid the safety first movement.

Sale of New Wizard Reported.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is reported to have purchased the New Wizard Theatre. This playhouse is now under the management of Bernard Depkin, Jr., one of the most capable managers in Baltimore. When questioned regarding the sale of the Wizard, Mr. Depkin would not confirm it. That the Wizard has been purchased to guarantee a first run theatre for Paramount-Artcraft pictures in Baltimore is reported to be the reason back of the purchase.

Scouts See Scout Pictures.

A moving picture titled "The Oath of a Boy Scout," was one of the features on the program of a rally which was held by the Baltimore branch of the Boy Scouts in the auditorium at the Baltimore City College April 16. About 1,000 scouts and officials attended the event. The rally was held in honor of Major Telusanu, commander-in-chief of the Roumanian Boy Scouts, who was present and made an address, illustrated with lantern slides.

Tampa Victory Opens May 17.

THE Victory Theatre, Tampa's new $200,000 playhouse, one of the most modern in the South, will be opened to the public either May 17 or 18, it was announced by C. D. Copley, manager of the Strand Amusement Company, upon his return from New York, where he has been negotiating with grand opera stars. After the opera engagement it is probable moving pictures will be shown during the summer. Arrangements already have been made and contract, it is said, closed for the opening of Keith vaudeville here this fall.

Gilmore at Anna Maria Beach.

Paul Gilmore, well-known actor of the legitimate stage, who starred several years ago with his own company in "Captain Alvarez," "At Yale" and other high class plays, will shortly be starred in moving pictures. The title of the first one will be "The Isle of Adventure"—at least that is the working title. The exterior scenes will be made at Mr. Gilmore's summer home, Anna Maria Beach, a famous fishing resort, which furnishes first class jungle scenery and other accessories. The interiors will be made in the studios of the Pandora Film Company in this city.

Hire Him as Your Press Agent.

Jack Noble, director for Vivian Martin, who recently was in the city with Miss Martin making exteriors for a new picture, declared he believed many new moving picture companies were coming to this city. Mr. Noble states that the quality of sunlight here is the best he has found anywhere, while the excellence of the weather causes little loss of time in outdoor work.

Showmen Will Dine and Dance.

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Cleveland have made elaborate preparations for its dinner and dance to be held April 26, and indications point to its being one of the biggest events in the history of Cleveland's film business. The program calls for dancing to start in the Hotel Winston ball room at 10 p. m., to be continued until 11 o'clock, when the dinner will be given in the Rainbow Room at the hotel. The big dining room revue, which is now playing at that hotel will be given as an extra show for this event. The committee in charge of the affair are Meyer Fine, Samuel Bradley, Ernest Schwartz, Max Schrachtel and M. B. Horwitz, chairman.

Long Run at Good Price.

All records for business in any motion picture theatre in Cleveland were broken by Loew's Euclid on the opening week of "Why Change Your Wife?" This picture is now in its third week and the management anticipates that it will be continued at least five weeks. The prices charged are 35 cents afternoons and 55 cents at night.

Salt Lake Siftings

Associated Exhibitors in Salt Lake.

THE Ackerman & Harris Circuit, which operates a chain of theatres, including the Casino in Salt Lake City, has completed negotiations for the Salt Lake City franchise of the Associated Exhibitors, a Pathe enterprise.

Orphans See "Brute Breaker."

More than 100 orphans—the inmates of the two orphanages of Salt Lake City, were guests this week of Manager William Cutts, of the Kinema Theatre for a special matinee of "The Brute Breaker." Each child was given a box of candy. A special juvenile film was added to the program.

The Clawson Brothers Register.

Elliott Clawson, formerly of Salt Lake and a brother of Kingsley Clawson, assistant manager of Lowe's Casino, has signed a six months' contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation as a scenario writer. Mr. Clawson adapted "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" to films.

Safety First Films Shown.

A special exhibition of the safety first films of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company was given last week at the Strand Theatre. The films were shown under the auspices of the Utah Industrial Commission and the Utah chapter of the American Mining Congress.

Famous Organist Playing Films.

Gordon Bretland, one of the best known theatre organists in the West and formerly connected with the Tivoli Opera House, San Francisco, has been engaged by W. H. Swanson as organist at the American Theatre in Salt Lake City. He was for months known as San Francisco's favorite organist.

Presiding at the console of the American organ he has at his disposal one of the largest and most complete pipe organs and unit orchestras to be found in any moving picture theatre in America. His masterly performances have created a genuine impression in Salt Lake.

In addition to rendering three concerts on the great organ daily, Mr. Bretland plays interpretations for the pictures. Possessed of a voice of exceptional tone quality, he adds greatly to the performances by vocal selections several times a week.

"River's End" Does Great Business.

Exhibition of Marshall Neilan's initial independent production, "The River's End," last week broke all house records for the American Theatre. It has the distinction of being the first picture which has ever been booked for a week's run at the American and it played to capacity business afternoon and evening for each of the seven consecutive days.

The opening day, Sunday, it is estimated that in the neighborhood of 2,000 patrons were turned away, and this in spite of rainy weather. The management urged patrons to attend matinees to relieve the evening crowds during the entirety of the week.

The exhibition of the picture was widely advertised and the management used a slogan which is believed to be entirely new and original. Each advertisement bore the words at the bottom, "You will be glad you bought a ticket." And the patrons praise of the production signified that the management was not mistaken. They were glad.

"The River's End" was followed by "The Sporting Duchess," featuring Alice Joyce. This also did a record business and the management found itself justified in a slight increase of admission prices for this feature." Alan Dwan's production, "The Luck of the Irish," plays four days next week.

Film Actress Walking to New York.

Eve Montaldo, erstwhile moving picture actress, reached Salt Lake last week on her hike from Hollywood to New York, which place she expects to reach in August. While in Salt Lake she expects to diverge from her hobo jaunt for a time by staging a film drama under the auspices of the American Legion's "Spring Frolic and Mardi Gras," to be held April 24 to May 1.

Asks Receiver for Elkhart Orpheum.

CHARGING that the Orpheum Theatre Company, operating the Orpheum Theatre, Elkhart, is insolvent, George J. Hoffman, of South Bend, has brought suit against the Orpheum company, C. J. Allardt and Ezra Rhodes, for judgment of $6,600 and asks that a receiver be appointed for the company. Rhodes operates the Orpheum and Family theatres, Elkhart, and the La Salle and Castle theatres, South Bend.

Hoffman alleges that a note for $5,000 was given to him by the company in part payment for the construction of the Orpheum Theatre building. This note was renewed in 1916, he avers, and is still unpaid. Other charges brought against the company are that bonds amounting to $20,000 are outstanding and that the only assets are the building and property of the theatre in Elkhart, valued at $15,000.

Rembusch Names Publicity Man.

Robert M. Eichelsdorfer, of Shelbyville, Ind., formerly engaged in newspaper work in Indianapolis and a lieutenant in the army during the war, has been appointed advertising and publicity director for the Frank J. Rembusch Motion Picture Enterprises. Mr. Rembusch has a chain of theatres in Indiana and his move in employing a publicity and advertising director is in keeping with the constant growth of his business.

Advertising Films Incorporated.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the county recorder at Lafayette, Ind., by the National Advertising Film Corporation, a newly organized concern composed entirely of Lafayette citizens. The company is incorporated for $100,000 and the principal business is to prepare illustrative advertising for motion picture theatres, newspapers and other periodicals. Headquarters of the company will be maintained at Fort Wayne.

More Theatres in Steel Town.

The Gary Amusement Company, which will operate a motion picture theatre at Gary, has filed incorporation papers with the Secretary of State at Indianapolis. The capital stock is $5,000 and the incorporators are Edwin Clifford, John P. Barrett and Nellie Wyckoff.

San Francisco Siftings

Daylight Saving Killed.

THE Board of Supervisors of San Francisco has put an end to the agitation for a daylight savings measure by refusing to adopt an ordinance along this line. At a recent public hearing theatre owners and labor interests went on record as being opposed to the change.

Change in Licenses Scheduled.

An increase in license fees is facing exhibitors and film exchange men of San Francisco and it is expected that the new rates will go into effect the first of July. It is proposed to make a substantial increase in the licenses paid by exhibitors, placing this on a sliding scale, and to add moving picture film exchanges to the list.

George Eastman Pays a Visit.

George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Company, was a recent visitor at San Francisco on his way to Japan, where he will tour that country with a party of American financiers. The purpose of the trip is to investigate trade conditions.

Producers Work in San Francisco.

George Melford, director for the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., was in San Francisco recently with a company of forty-five headed by Mabel Julienne Scott, making scenes for "The Savage," a Sir Gilbert Parker story.

An advance guard of a Metro company has arrived here from Los Angeles to secure water front scenes, including J. P. Whalen, Guy L. Pulley, Myron G. Browne and E. J. Shulter.

Frolic Improves Orchestra.

Ben Goodman, manager of the Frolic Theatre, San Francisco, recently enlarged the orchestra and made arrangements whereby it would play at matinee performances, as well as in the evening. He has now secured the services of Conductor Michael Francocardio.

Widely Known Exhibitor Dies.

Joseph B. Sawyer, of Placerville, Cal., better known by his name of Travelle, passed away at his home there recently following an extended illness. Mr. Travelle was widely known in the moving picture business, having been connected with the industry almost since its inception. After serving as manager for Selig's Polyscope Theatre, Chicago, he came to San Francisco, his native city, and engaged in business. Later he removed to Placerville and opened the Elite Theatre, afterwards taking over Sigworth's Opera House there, which he renamed the Elite. He is survived by his widow, a daughter and a stepson.

House Planned for Madera.

A. C. H. Chamberlin, who has been engaged in business as an exhibitor at Madera, Cal., for many years, has announced his intention of erecting a new theatre at an estimated cost of $100,000. The new house will have a seating capacity of 1,200.

Lorin Theatre to Be Enlarged.

The Lorin Theatre, Berkeley, Cal., conducted by the Beach-Krahn Amusement Co., is to be enlarged at an estimated cost of $50,000. The capacity of this house was increased two or three years ago, but it has again proved to be too small.

Thousands View Propaganda Pictures.

Director Leon J. Richardson, of the University of California Extension Division, announces that during the month of March 37,642 persons viewed the moving pictures sent out by the film section. This is more than double the record of the corresponding month last year.

News Briefs.

The Grogg Amusement Company is erecting a fine theatre at Bakersfield, Cal., to be known as the California. Special attention is being paid to the ventilating system that is being installed to make the house cool during the summer months.

C. A. Roscoe, of San Bruno, Cal., has opened a small theatre at Campbell.

E. Lion has purchased the interests of his partner, J. J. Lawrence, in the Rex Theatre, Santa Clara, Cal., and is now the sole owner.

Philadelphia Pointers

Invites Everybody and Their Motor.

A DANCE to which all those identified in the motion picture industry who own automobiles will be invited, will be held at Langhorn, Pa., on Wednesday night. Arrangements have been completed under the direction of Alice, of Lewis M. Swaab.

News in Brief Paragraphs.

A new motion picture theatre to be known as the Penn Treaty, will shortly be erected in Kensington, by the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests.

The Stanley Theatre will celebrate its sixth anniversary during the week of April 19.

Marcus Benn, of the Benn Theatre, is contemplating the erection of a new theatre in the near future in West Philadelphia.

"Stuffed Zoo" as Side Line.

Bob Lynch, manager of the Metro, has quite a large menagerie of stuffed animals of the jungle always on hand which he is renting out at reasonable rates.

Theatre Notes.

The new Capitol Theatre in Wilkesbarre now under construction is reported to be rapidly nearing completion.

The Strand Theatre in Scranton is about to be equipped with new electric signs.

Will Build Largest Theatre.

NATE FRIEDBERG, of the Associated Theatres, announces the purchase of a plot of ground 60x240 feet on Federal street, North Side, near the Carnegie Library, on which his company will erect the largest picture theatre in Pittsburgh. The plot is built up with a two-story building, in which there are seventeen tenants. This building will be remodeled into an up-to-date picture theatre.

Belle Vernon to Have New House.

Thomas Bello states that he is going to erect a new theatre in Belle Vernon, Pa. The ground has already been purchased and work will begin at once. The cost will be between $40,000 and $45,000, and the building will be ready for the public on or before August 1. Bello has been operating the Bijou for the last ten years and has contracted a large following in that time.

Sells New House Before Opening.

Samuel Pollack, contractor and architect of the new Strand Theatre being erected at McKees Rocks, Pa., has sold the house to Max Engleberg, brother of Ben Engleberg, of the Elmore Theatre, Pittsburgh. The opening is slated for May 15. The Hollis, Smith, Morton Co. will furnish the equipment.

New Parkersburg Theatre Open.

The new Lincoln Theatre, Parkersburg, W. Va., owned by the Smoot Amusement Company, owners also of the Camden Theatre in the same town, was opened April 12. Among the Pittsburgh film men who attended the opening were Carlos Moore and Joseph S. Skirooll. Mrs. Moore was also present.

B. & C. Erie House "A Dandy."

Jerome Casper has returned from Erie, where he superintended the redecorating of the Strand Theatre there, which has recently been taken over by the Rowland & Clark interests. Cass says it's the prettiest house in the R & C chain.

David Adler Back to Pittsburgh.

It is entirely likely that Dave Adler, a prominent exhibitor of Cleveland, will sell his interests there and return to Pittsburgh and affiliate himself with the Associated Theatres, of which Nate Friedberg is the directing head. Friedberg and Adler were formerly in business together, conducting houses in Pittsburgh and Cleveland, but two years ago they separated, Nate taking the Pittsburgh interests and Adler assuming full ownership of the theatres in the Forest City.

Standard Books "Lost City."

Phil Charnas, of the Standard Film Service Company's office road staff, was a visitor in Cleveland last week, reporting number of Southern Ohio bookings of "The Lost City," Standard's wild animal serial.

Goldwyn Exchange Moving.

Resident Manager Oscar Bower of the Goldwyn office is preparing to move into the new headquarters in the Film Building, Piano street and Broadway. Mr. Bower says the transfer will be made in such a manner as not to interfere with business.

Important Move by Independents.

Harry L. Charnes, general manager of the Standard Film Service Company, has just returned from New York City, where he attended sessions of the newly organized Federated Film Exchanges of America. Mr. Charnes said some important announcement will be made shortly as to the product to be released by the Federated.

Made Exchange Club President.

I. W. McMahan, president of the McMahan & Jackson Film Exchange, has been chosen chairman of the State Executive Committee of the Exchange Clubs of Ohio.

Piqua Officials Fight Screen.

The town of Piqua, Ohio, is suffering from an acute attack of anti-movies. Recently Harry Kress, an exhibitor, was arrested for keeping his theatre open on Sunday. He lost and appealed to a higher court. Now the mayor, J. H. Smith, has ordered that every picture to be shown in the town shall be first passed by a local board of censors. Their duty is to cut out all scenes of crime, because when two boys were arrested for a series of thefts, they said they were led into committing these acts by seeing pictures of crimes in moving picture shows.

Consistory Plans Shows.

BUFFALO CONSISTORY, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masons, is planning to install a projection machine in a big tent on the extensive lawn on Delaware avenue, in which motion picture shows will be given during the summer months, with Elmer C. Winegar, manager of the Central Park and Premier theatres, in charge. Elmer is a member of the consistory. The stunt should prove a popular one with members and visitors.

Spang Making Pictures.

Harry J. Spang, former camera reporter for the News-Strand Local Events, is now engaged in business for himself. "Motion Pictures Made to Order" is the banner now carried by Harry. He is kept busy making films of local industrial plants and their various operations.

Smith Buys Crescent.

Phil Smith, of Buck & Smith, Syracuse, has taken over the Crescent Theatre in the Salt City. He will operate the theatre as a second run motion picture house.

Star Theatre Reorganization.

A. A. Fennyvessy, organizer of the present Star Theatre Company and big theatre owner of Rochester, was in Buffalo the week of April 12 trying to iron out matters at the Star Theatre, rumors of the close of which were current in the city. It is reported that an attempt is being made to reorganize the house. Al Sherry, manager of the Star, resigned Saturday evening, April 17.

Empire Theatre Success.

The Empire Theatre, formerly the Garden burlesque house, seems to be going over O. Keh. Week runs accompanied by big advertising campaign is the policy and excellent audiences are usually in attendance. "The Shepherd of the Hills" was the feature for the week of April 18 and large ads were used in the local newspapers for a week in advance and during the run of the picture.

Dismisses Vohwinkle Complaint.

Mayor George S. Buck has dismissed the complaint made against Bernard Vohwinkle, owner of a motion picture theatre at 1604 Genesee street. It was alleged that he had been operating a projection machine without a license. Vohwinkle claimed that he only operated the machine during a period when his regular operator was ill. He had formerly held a license, he said, but had failed to renew it.

Celoron Auditorium Burned.

The Auditorium at Celoron, near Jamestown, owned by the Celoron Amusement Company, was burned Monday evening, April 12. The total loss is estimated at $40,000 to $50,000, which is partly covered by insurance. The building was totally destroyed, as was the contents.

Flirt Picks Up Wrong Woman.

August Wehlen, 220 North Division street, entered the Happy Hour Theatre, on Main street, near Genesee. Next to him sat a woman. He began to flirt with her, it is alleged. The woman proved to be Mrs. Lillian Morrison, a policewoman. "Six months in the pen," said City Judge Woltz when Wehlen was arraigned before him on a disorderly conduct charge. A number of complaints have been received by the police of women and children being annoyed in picture houses. A few more sentences like the above and the annoyance will undoubtedly cease.

Buy Canandaigua Theatre.

George E. Bachmah, of Seneca Falls, and John Acker, of Auburn, have taken over the Fisher Theatre at Canandaigua and have renamed it the Temple. The lease was purchased from F. C. Fisher.

Series Cards for Free Admissions Are Material Aids to Good Business

SOMEONE down in the Pittsburgh district has started a new free admission series card for the launching of the new Elmo Lincoln serial and now the entire section is working the stunt. The cards are self explanatory as to their text, and the manner of getting them into circulation can be worked to suit the management.

They can be given wide distribution on the street to everyone, or they can be distributed through the house on the days the serial just closing is being shown, or they can be handed out every serial day during the week. They can be given out one a week for four weeks, in regular order for four days, or can be given in assorted lots.

Jumble Them Up.

This last is perhaps the best way, and this scheme started years ago in Chambersburg, not far from Pittsburgh. Under the original scheme on certain days the Star theatre issued double tickets. One portion gained admission and the other contained one of the four letters of the house name. On dull days free admission was given anyone who could present the complete set spelling the name. As many persons obtained two tickets of one letter and lacked some other essential the trading was brisk and it reached the point where at least one enterprising cigar store set up a clearing house for the tickets. It would take tickets of one letter and replace them with the letters desired and it won no little trade for its cigars through this accommodation.

All letters were distributed in equal numbers, so there was no scarce letter, as is the case when the number of free distribution is limited by the number of tickets of a certain letter issued.

Makes Talk and Business.

Under the simpler scheme, the distribution is so simple that it is practically assured that everyone will have the set, but the trading element makes a good selling stunt if the idea lasts long enough.

In the present instance the idea is to give a value to a free ticket to a serial that the recipient may become interested in the fourteen episodes to follow. For this reason it is better to make the distribution so simple that anyone can collect the necessary four slips. No matter how it is done, the distribution of free tickets too lavishly is viewed with suspicion. To make the collection of four cards an essential to the free ticket gives to the courtesy a value out of proportion to the value of the ticket, but if the accumulation of these cards is made too difficult, the object aimed at may be defeated.

And It Sinks In.

The first three cards must be carried for at least several days, and this drives home the interest. It is pretty safe to say that no one who saves the first two cards is going to be able to forget "Elmo the Fearless." And it will not be the children alone who will save these. The bump of curiosity does not disappear with advancing years and no one who gets one of the cards will be content until the mystery is solved.

The idea is not wholly new, but the adaptation to serials is, but this is only a single angle. It can also be used to build up matinee business, to get over some special play and, by limiting one of the cards of the set, it can get a large amount of attention without seriously taxing the seating capacity. With one or two thousand cards of each of three of the series and perhaps a hundred "M" cards, the free admission can be limited to the hundred or any other regulation made.

Other Uses.

There was a time when these free admission cards in various forms were widely used, but they seem to have been forgotten of late. Included in the lot was the card issued to evening patrons good for a matinee admission if presented before a certain early hour the following afternoon, the noon hour card good for a return in the evening if the shortness of the nooning did not permit the entire program to be seen, the "ten cards good for one free admission Friday" idea and a score of other forms.

All of these were good business builders in the past. There is no reason why they cannot do as well now. This E-L-M-O set is going strong in and around Pittsburgh. Try these and perhaps you will find a use for some of the others.

What Have YOU Been Doing Lately?

Hula Dancers Follow Kentucky Jazz Bands

Used Troupe of Hawaiian Dancers to Get Atmosphere for Big Griffith Play

HAVING flooded the country with jazz bands to boom "In Old Kentucky," it is probable that the Griffith First National attraction, "The Idol Dancer," will now give work to a horde of more or less genuine Hawaiian troupes. The ice was broken by Ned Finlay, of the Broadway, Richmond, who engaged a troupe of Hawaiians for the run of "The Idol Dancer" at his house, and played the dance across the boards.

He went a little further than this and made the engagement the basis for an "in person" announcement, though he did not definitely announce the personal appearance of Miss Seymour, the banner reading "Here in Person, The Idol Dancer, Vierra's Hawaiians." It probably would have been better to have dropped the "Here in person" to boom the Hawaiians for what they were.

Played Up the Dancing.

In the newspaper work the emphasis was all laid upon the dancing, using the slogan, "Oh, how she can dance!" from the press book, in every display. In the early announcements the Hawaiians were merely announced in a line, a time table being added just before the opening. For the rest the advertising ran for Miss Seymour and her accomplishments, and to give added value to this phase large type was given to the statement that no one would be seated during the dancing scenes.

In the lobby the chief decoration was a pair of cutouts of the dancer, and this was backed up by lithographs showing the dance. The two cutouts towered above the rest, however, and dominated the space. The greater reliance was placed upon the newspaper work, and this was heavy throughout the week.

Worked Inside.

The Hawaiians were not used for a ballyhoo as the cut would suggest. They were merely posed for this picture for the press work, but their performances were all inside. The hula dancer's grass skirt looked enough like Miss Seymour's grass skirt to get by, and most of the crowd were too busy to institute facial comparisons, so the "in person" stuff was not harmful.

The troupe made four appearances daily, skipping the six o'clock showing, but though this fact was well advertised, it seemed to have little effect upon the attendance. People who could not get in at the dance showings were content to come in for the celluloid wriggles, and the bridge over business was almost as good as the matinee and night shows. This might argue that the troupe was without value, since the house was filled without them, but the fact remains that the swing performance ran on the general interest aroused by their appearance.

Boosted Prices.

A thirty-cent top was used for matinees, with fifty cents in the evening, but the slight increase in prices did not affect the business. Lines formed before each showing and the cameraman was kept busy shooting the crowds, for it was the same story at each performance. The line ran down the block and around the corner and there was no row over the refusal of the management to seat incoming patrons during the dance scenes because the seats were filled and the standing room all taken up long before the picture had run that far. The line was purely ornamental, save that it helped to give emphasis to the dance angle.

Liberal use of the press book copy was made throughout the week, for it could not well be bettered.

If your local paper will not give you space for photoplay items, use part of your display for that purpose. "Clip and Paste" in Moving Picture World supplies "shorts" ready-to-use. They will make your advertising more attractive.

Another Good Idea for Cartoon Comedy Ads

USING the regular cartoon strips to advertise cartoon comedies is a new idea put forward by the Campbell Theatre, Hazleton, Pa. The house is using the "Bringing Up Father" series, and the Standard-Sentinel takes the strip service, with the result that the house borrowed from the newspaper a sufficient number of cuts to frame an attractive display page, making the cartoon announcement the chief feature of the space. Nothing can more definitely establish the cartoon connection than the use of the cartoons themselves, and this page is unusually good. Once they are used as a strip, the cuts are good only for old metal, and the paper will be glad to loan them for use in a page or half page.

An Attractive Use of Cartoon Frame.

No effort is made to show complete strips. It is better to take an assortment than to use the consecutive strips, for the reason that if the complete showing is made there is danger that the reader will become more interested in the cartoon than the advertising story. Where the sketches merely give the general suggestion of the cartoons the effect is better.

Now that the idea has been sprung it will probably be widely adopted, but it took the Campbell to think it up.

Hooking Goldwyn Pictures to Church Fairs a Help

LATELY the Goldwyn Philadelphia exchange got valuable publicity through hooking in with church fairs. The most profitable booth at the fair of the Narbeth Women's Community Club was that at which signed photographs of the Goldwyn players were offered for sale, and at a Sunday School event at Bethany Temple, John Wanamaker's church, one of the chief entertainments was a guessing contest in which the class was asked to identify the Goldwyn star and stock players. In both instances the interest in the players extended to the coming of those stars in plays to the nearby theatres, and the Goldwyn representatives were there with inside information for all who asked.

"Oh, HOW She Can Dance," Said Ralph Ruffner.

In the First National press sheet for "The Idol Dancer," and the crowds at the Broadway, Richmond, agreed that he was right. She not only could, but she did.

Scrapping Back Made Opposition Pull Out Competing Title Second Day of Run

MAKING the opposition pull its show after the second day was the achievement of B. I. Van Dyke, of the Royal, Des Moines, when he had Louise Glaum in "Sex" recently. He and C. D. Hill, manager of the Hodgkinson Des Moines office, put their heads together to put "Sex" over as big as they recently worked "Desert Gold." They started off with a half page splash worked from a more local angle than the press book stuff, and the big point was that this production was neither kith nor kin to "The Inferior Sex" which the opposition had booked in.

Capitalizing Opposition.

Somehow the management had gotten hold of the fact that the similar title had been booked for the other house and they made this title the big objective in their advertising. By making it appear that the other title was an effort to ride on the merits of "Sex" they made opposition the talking point of the advertisement and successful so well that the other house pulled its show on Tuesday and substituted Violet Heming in "The Cost."

The attempt to run up on the title was turned to an advantage for the moral effect of the suggestion was strong and after that it would not have been possible to keep the public out with a club.

A Unique Ballyhoo.

But no clubs were used in an effort to keep the public out. Instead every effort was made to get them in, and to entertain the waiting line it was announced that a musical act had been engaged to give a free concert in the lobby for twenty minutes before each showing. An accordion and banjo team was engaged and they not only served as a ballyhoo, but they kept the waiting crowds quiet while the previous house was disposed of.

The Royal lobby is small, which prevents elaborate lobby shows, but painted signs were employed to replace set effects, the best one reading:

No man ever lived who did not like to be babied.

Tie a pink ribbon in your nightie and he will sit up and take notice.

Similar signs were run out around the corners of the lobby to draw the attention of the reader inside, and did much to gain interest for the picture.

Signs Won Out.

These signs did a lot of the selling. They were short and pithy, and they were readable. They got away from the usual one sheet appeal and by giving something new got the prospect from a fresh angle of appeal.

No matter how good lithographs may be, if they are not unlike the lithographs of the week before, they lack the novelty of something different. Mr. Van Dyke knew this and he spread himself on the announcements—and brought in the coin.

Make Appeal to Campers with This Fire Warning

ABOUT the time the sap begins to run a lot of people start to think about camping and the woods. Now is a good time to pick up a single scene from "The River's End" for a bit of special press work. In one of the scenes Conniston, breaking camp, carefully pours water upon the camp fire to make certain that it is extinct. It is a little touch of naturalness put in by a director who knows the woods, but it has brought out a letter of approval from C. H. Morse, district inspector of Forest Reserve, in the Canadian service. He writes: "Permit me to say that your action in working out details of this kind, which have a very decided effect in the direction of forest conservation, meets with our very warm approval." Pull this up for your program or press work and get the editor interested, for camp fires have often done millions of dollars worth of damage and the subject is important as well as interesting.

Bettered Original Stunt

Some time ago we showed a cut of a cutout of Gloria Swanson climbing the piano in the cabin scene in "Male and Female." The figure on the lithograph is about life size and can be so placed as to suggest that she is climbing upon an actual piano. The Rialto Theatre, Aurora, Ill., picked up the idea and improved upon it by hanging a pair of curtains above the piano and draping them so that it appears that Miss Swanson is grasping these to assist her in escaping the flood. It is just a little touch, but it helps wonderfully. The window card states that the piano is the duplicate of the one used in the production of "Male and Female." It doesn't mean anything, but it helps to get interest none the less.

Used Rube Street Worker for "Virgin of Stamboul"

PERHAPS a rural old lady is not the most appropriate street worker for a picture with an Arabic locale, but Herman Stern, of the Universal's Pittsburgh office, was looking for something to boom the opening of Priscilla Dean in "The Virgin of Stamboul" at the Columbia and he found he could get Mrs. Fleischer, who is a professional "Rube," and he sent her out with a generous-sized carpet sack, which every now and then she unfolded to display the advertisement of the attraction. She did not confine her attention to the streets, but promenaded through the department and other stores and made her presence generally felt.

The supposed gripsack was merely a strip of carpet with the inner side faced with an oilcloth sign. It was held together by double handles, and by merely dropping one handle and raising the other high enough a one sheet was effectively displayed.

A Universal Street Worker.

The idea is so simple that it can be easily copied, but it must be remembered that something more than a woman in rural dress is required for a proper Rube effect. To do it right requires native wit or considerable experience.

Banjoist Plunked in the Plunks in Des Moines.

Putting over Hodgkinson's "Sex," with Louise Glaum, led to the engagement of a vaudeville team for a twenty-minute concert before each showing.

Made Extensive Use of Indorsements Gained at Private Showing of Feature

FOUR uses of the indorsements gained from a private showing of "The Copperhead" at the Starland Theatre, Anderson, Ind., seems to be about the most intensive use of this stunt to date, though this by no means exhausts the possibilities of the personal testimonial.

Frank Heller took the feature and arranged for a private showing to city officials, educators and others, including—for this picture—the members of the G. A. R. who could be reached. The G. A. R. men were invited because some of them had seen Lincoln during their military service and they were asked to pass upon the fidelity of the likeness. Naturally there was some discussion, for the veterans were not wholly in agreement. No two men receive the same mental impression, and while the majority were agreed that the impersonation of the actor was remarkable, there was just sufficient opposition to make the discussion interesting and grip the attention of the others present.

Getting the Opinions.

This discussion undoubtedly helped to bring out the opinions of the younger men on the play. It roused them to an appreciation of the fact that "The Copperhead" is something more than a motion picture, and this was reflected in their replies to the questionnaire with which each guest was supplied as he entered. The questions were so framed so as to make it possible to get out material for publicity use, and yet they were also planned to make it easy for the spectator to fill in his replies without too much of an effort, which would have defeated the scheme.

As it was the leading questions yielded a number of strong, terse paragraphs of praise which were signed by most of the leading men and women of the town.

For the opening gun these replies were copied off and rushed to the Herald for use in the news story of the showing, having for its lead the G. A. R. discussion. The opinions were germane to the story and added almost a column to the news item.

Before the stuff was in print slides had been prepared for use the following day, and these were flashed at each performance. Then the same extracts were made into scatter advertisements for the paper and later they were all assembled into a larger display prior to the opening.

This completed the use of the endorsements, but would have been possible to have framed the questionnaires for lobby use, still further extending their value.

Endorsements Work.

The value of these local endorsements cannot be exaggerated. It gives the opinion of a man known to the town and carries infinitely more weight than the opinion of the outside press or others. Mr. Heller knows that and made the stuff work to the limit.

But he did not content himself with this. He arranged for a prologue. A high school boy was found who could be made up to look something like Lincoln, and with the aid of the manager of a theatrical company a fairly good likeness was achieved. He was placed on a dark stage and while the orchestra played the national air the spot light was gradually brought up through the dimmer. Anderson is not yet blasé to prologue and this made a tremendous hit.

One or two of the window displays were the direct result of the special showing, for the owners came to Mr. Heller and offered to take in displays, so strongly did they appreciate the educational and patriotic value of the film. This angle is something new, but there is a long list of successes to the credit of the special showing, with never a failure. It costs time, if not always money, to arrange for an advance show, but it pays in ticket sales and prestige, particularly if the special is run a week or ten days in advance of the public showing, that proper presswork may be done, though in a pinch it will work the following night.

Got Use of Fashion Show Without Giving the Stunt

SEEKING for some method of booming the gowns in the Clara Kimball Young "Forbidden Woman," J. W. Sayre, of the Coliseum, Seattle, picked on a new one. He knew that merely telling about the gorgeous gowns would not do the trick. That angle had been overworked. He felt that even a special stress on the costuming would not pull.

Now and then the house has given fashion shows with road models, and so he announced a fashion show as coming. Then he took an extra single ten inch space for a special notice to women patrons announcing that the fashion show had been postponed because the Young gowns were so gorgeous that no show could compete.

This did the trick. The women came in droves and brought the men with them. They argued that if Miss Young's gowns were good enough to put a fashion show out of business, they were worth seeing, and Mr. Sayre received no complaints that they were not.

That man Sayre certainly does seem to be sitting up nights thinking out ideas and we do not think it was wholly accidental that the two tens for the attraction and the special ten for the "postponement" ran either side of the first column of the dramatic story where every theatregoer would be certain to see it.

Used Broken-Down Car to Get Laughs for Auto Play

WORKING in with the Howard Automobile Company, John D. Howard, Paramount's exploitation man in San Francisco, got a big laugh for "Excuse My Dust." Mr. Howard, who is not interested in the auto company, borrowed a Buick of the model of 1905 and sent it through the streets with a big sign asking the passerby to "Excuse My Dust," though the decrepit old two-cylinder machine raised very little dust.

It was old enough to be the grandfather of the 1920 models and to many it was a genuine curio. It made more noise than a second-hand Ford car, while the driver ran a risk of being arrested every time he cranked the machine, which he managed should be necessary very often when a crowd was in sight. The car was painted in aluminum and had more brass work than manufacturers can afford to put on cars these days. It made a splendid advertisement for the California, and it was surrounded by crowds wherever it stopped.

The photograph shows the head of Wallace Reid pasted over that of the actual driver, which accounts for the seemingly deformed chauffeur. This pasting was done for the newspaper advertising done by the Howard Company, which got its own share of publicity from the stunt, and in this form it will be used in the Buick house organ.

Almost any town can produce some auto wreck. Dig it out and start it off with a banner. It will work as well for you.

Wallace Reid Is Not Hunchbacked.

The peculiar effect is due to pasting his picture over the face of the pilot of this 1905 Buick, which raised more laughs than dust.

Local Prizes Help in Hope Hampton Contest

Fake Tickets Work When They Are Properly Framed

ALTHOUGH some authorities contend that the fake tickets always react against the house using them, it would seem that much depends upon the way the ticket is framed up. Fred W. Postle, of the Victor, Columbus, Ohio, got away with it recently for "Eve in Exile." The big display read "Free Ticket. Admit one." But the entire text read "This is not a free ticket, but you will be willing to admit one thing about 'Eve in Exile'—that it is the best acted as well as the most fascinating dramatic and artistic seven-reel picture you have seen this year." Because the wording is ingenious the stunt got a laugh, which offsets the ill effect of any disappointment.

Just Painted the Town Green

Booming "The Luck of the Irish," W. L. Jones, of the Alcazar, Tampa, painted Tampa green instead of red. He framed the posters in small green incandescents, used green bulbs and shades for the rest of the lights, added green streamers and sent a green perambulator around town. But he didn't put a green cashier in the box office. He needed an experienced ticket seller for the business he got.

Simple Window Hook-up Makes Money for Store and Theatre

HERE is an example of a simple hook-up possible to any theatre in any town. Elaborate cutouts and decorations are dispensed with and merely the photograph of Pauline Frederick and a few stills of "The Loves of Letty" are used to scatter through the window and give something in addition to the display of hats and gowns. The pictures help to gain attention for the window and the window display draws attention to the pictures and both store and theatre make money with scarcely an effort. The best window hook-up is not always the most elaborate. This display was shown in Ahman's Ladies Shop, Hamilton, Ohio.

What Woman Could Pass This Window?

We're willing to leave it to you. It just goes to show that you don't have to build a new store in order to get a good window display.

The Hooded Terrors Ride to Jazz Accompaniment.

Jazz bands to boom "In Old Kentucky" lack novelty now, so D. M. Bain, of the Victoria, Wilmington, N. C., added a band of night riders and had to use four ticket sellers.

Added Band of Night Riders to "In Old Kentucky"

ALTHOUGH it is the closed season on "In Old Kentucky" stories band, the stunt worked by D. M. Bain, of the Victoria, Wilmington, N. C., is worth the space. Mr. Bain knew of a local negro band of more than usual ability, and even before he read in the papers of the hook-up with the Whangdoodle bands, he had the boys signed up to help put the picture over. When the picture came he put the boys on a horse drawn float and sent them out with a band of masked night riders to give concerts at the principal street corners. Wherever the band stopped the cavalcade drew up, and the sight of a band of masked men on blooded horses was almost as much of an attraction as the playing.

The parade was routed to get to the house just before each show to play the crowds in and it took four ticket sellers to handle the crowds. That tells the story. The lobby was decorated with streamers and litho cutouts, but the band did the trick with fifty-five cent top.

Local Prizes to Augment the Hope Hampton Contest

SEVERAL managers have successfully hooked into the national Hope Hampton $3,000 prize contest with the offer of local awards. The scheme is virtually a local contest with a national contest in back. Many feel that they stand small chance in a big contest who would be willing to go ahead in a local event, and this hook-up gives the necessary local angle.

H. C. McCourt, of the Family, Jackson, Mich., offered ten prizes for local entrants. The essays were to be submitted to a jury of local men and the prizes awarded before the replies were sent on to Metro; all of the essays and not merely the winners being sent on. He got a two-page hook-up to launch the idea and made that angle work as well.

In Cleveland the Plain Dealer gave two big announcements to the national contest supplemented by the offer of Thomas Carroll, of the Standard for a special contest. The local prize was $50, the second a season pass, the third twenty pairs of seats for consecutive weeks, the next ten got ten pairs of seats each, the next five, five pairs each, and all other contributors received a pair of seats good for any week.

This supporting contest works both for the house and the big contest and gives the latter a value to the house the original contest could not hold, since it connects the house directly with the contest. As it is not necessary to see the film in order to compete, the local angle materially aids the hook-up.

Many newspapers are now using criticisms of photoplays the day after they are first seen at your theatre. Reviews written by Moving Picture World reviewers may be cut out or copied and handed to your local newspaper. They are written by qualified reviewers and deal with salient points in both story and production.

Try the Sunday Concert; It Pays in Many Ways

For Second Weeks It Is Well Not to Bother About the Cut

RUNNING a display two weeks does not necessarily mean that you have to use poor cuts. This cut attractor from a Pittsburgh advertisement does not seem to belong to "In Old Kentucky" at all. It looks like a pick-up from some bygone attraction slipped in merely because it has a horse and rider. For a second week it is not really necessary to use a cut attractor. It is to be supposed that the play was sold the first week, else it would not be held over and a big type "Second Big Week" is about the best sales argument you can use.

Certainly it is better than a poor cut, and this night rider stuff is all strange to the people who know the play but have not seen the picture with its night riders addition. For a second week the use of cuts should be dropped and the fact that it is the second week should be driven home in type.

Sunday Concerts Help Even Where Sunday Shows Can Run

HOUSES making much of their music are overlooking a good bet unless they make the most of their music, and the California Theatre, San Francisco, goes to the top with a series of Sunday morning concerts which run in on the end of the regular musical season. The first concert was launched by the use of nearly four inches of an extra long three column display. The regular space was taken for the house and this special built in between the house signature and the feature.

At the California the house opens at half-past ten and scenic and travel pictures are run until eleven, when an hour concert is given with a program not too heavy, yet composed of sound musical offerings. The success of such an enterprise depends almost wholly upon the program building. Herman Heller seems to have the trick of getting together a program which will please those who know music and at the same time appeal to those who do not care for classical composition.

The Sunday concert serves two purposes. It not only provides a musical treat for Sunday mornings, but it gives greater emphasis to the music used on the regular program. Years ago a house in St. Joseph, which was not permitted to open on Sunday, gave a series of free organ recitals. Since then a number of efforts have been made to popularize the music, but we think that too little use is made of music even yet. Music is a distinct asset and too much cannot be made of the orchestra if you are reasonably certain that the booming will not lead the director to take his men over to some rival house.

Good Advertising Means

More Than a Muddy Cut

SOMETHING more than a cut is needed to make a good advertisement. Sometimes a cut does not make a good advertising display, particularly if it is not a good cut. The Grand Central, St. Louis, wasted more than half of a three eights on a cut that will not sell many tickets. It had "The River's End" for a second week and possibly had exhausted its cut supply the first week. In any event they used a very poor cut, poor in design, in workmanship and in appeal. Only one of the three components of the cut will arouse much interest, the standing figures of the Chinaman and the girl. The other two will not attract. More than this the cut prints badly and the outlines are not clear.

People will look at the cut and dislike it. It is but natural that they will argue that the picture with so poor a cut is in itself a poor picture, and so they will not be sold. If they know all about the picture—and they should in a second week, then the cut is not needed and the "second week" and "four more days" now set on either side of the cut, should have been played up instead. It is a mistake to suppose that a large advertisement is incomplete without a cut. It is not complete if the cut is poorly done, and strong type is always better than type crowded by a badly done cut.

This does not seem to be a press book cut but suggests local origin. If it was locally made it should have been sized to run to the edges of the display instead of requiring to be wedged in with the letter lines on either side. Those letter lines are additionally poor in that the up and down letter cannot be read with ease. This is a good example of money needlessly spent. Half the space with a strong type announcement would have been both better and cheaper.

Among Busy Exchangemen

Minneapolis

Tri-State Gets Experienced Head.

John C. Moore, for the last year salesman for the Minneapolis Pathe Exchange, has been appointed sales manager for the Tri-State Film Exchange, Minneapolis, it was announced this week. Mr. Moore is the veteran film salesman of the northwest, his experience extending back over a period of fourteen years. At one time he was manager of the Metropolitan and the Majestic theatres, Rochester, Minn. After several years as a state rights buyer, he became connected with the San Francisco Universal office, managed the Universal's Phoenix, Ariz., exchange and the Los Angeles Sunset Film Co., offices, coming from Los Angeles to Minneapolis.

Richard H. Fox Now American Manager.

Richard H. Fox, of Chicago, has been appointed manager of the Minneapolis American Film Company exchange to succeed E. Nelson. Mr. Fox was with First National three years at Chicago. Prior to that he managed the Orpheum Theatre, Quincy, Ill. The whole Fox family is in the amusement business. Mrs. Fox is a member of Fred Stone's company, and the daughter, Josephine, has appeared in pictures.

Pathe Gets Three Experts.

Appointment of three special representatives was announced this week by the Minneapolis Pathe Exchange. George C. Schafer, of New York, has been made a special salesman. Gerald Meyer, formerly of the Cleveland Pathe office, has been made feature salesman for Minneapolis. F. O. Peters, whose selling experience has been gained with Detroit Vitagraph and Minneapolis First National, has been made city salesman of short subjects.

Reisman Specializing in "Sex."

Phil Reisman, manager of the Minneapolis Hodgkinson office, left last week for a ten-day tour of South Dakota, to put over the sale of "Sex." The picture has been sold to open the Minneapolis Blue Mouse. It will appear coincidentally next month at the St. Paul Blue Mouse.

Old Timers Get Together.

Minneapolis old timers in the film business had a reunion last week with A. McMillan, of Chicago, representative of the American Projecting Company, of that city, who is one of the oldest men in the industry. Mr. McMillan, with his brother Frank, invented the optigraph, a contrivance to put over the lense of a stereopticon, twenty-four years ago.

Exhibitors' League Signs Universals.

Signing of an agreement between the Exhibitors' Protective League, an organization of the leading exhibitors of the northwest, and the Universal Film Company, providing for direct compensation to the league for all advertising matter used in films, has been announced by H. L. Mitchell, executive secretary of the league.

The first pictures to be distributed under the agreement will be "Heads Win" and "Good Roads"—both educational films—according to the announcement. The agreement was signed by a representative of the industrial department of Universal, and Charles W. Gates, Aberdeen, S. D., president of the league.

Dominion of Canada

Hodkinson's Canadian Outlet.

Announcement has been made by the Canadian Exhibitors' Exchange, Limited, Toronto and Montreal, that the Canadian rights for releases of the W. W. Hodgkinson Corporation of New York had been secured by the exchange. This will bring approximately forty new subjects to Canada during the present year, it is declared.

The Canadian Exhibitors' Exchange is operated as a subsidiary corporation of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, with headquarters at 34 Richmond street east, Toronto.

Cohn Doing F. P.-L. Exploitation.

S. W. B. Cohn, formerly at the Metro studio in Los Angeles, has become publicity director of the Famous Players' Film Service, Limited, Toronto, and other cities, which is controlled by Jule and J. J. Allen. Mr. Cohn was an exhibitor in the Western States for twelve years before he joined the Realart forces.

H. R. Worden, for a time the advertising man for Allen Theatre Enterprises at Toronto, is now out on the road with "The End of the Road," the special propaganda feature handled by the Famous Players' Film Service.

Harry Price with Famous Players.

Harry Price, of Toronto, has been appointed special representative in Eastern Canada for the Famous Players' Film Service. Price has had long experience in the film business in Canada. Some time ago he was with Famous Players, after which he was associated with Regal Films, Limited. He has been the manager of both the Montreal and St. John offices of the Famous Players and knows the Eastern Canadian territory like a book.

Crown Features, a new Toronto, Ontario, distributing organization, has secured the rights for Comedyart productions which are made by the Special Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles. One of the principal men with Crown Features is Mr. Irwin Unger, a veteran exchange man.

Distributing Film of Turf Classic.

L. E. Outmet, of Montreal, president and general manager of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, has secured the Canadian distribution of the 1,000-foot picture of the British Grand National Steeplechase race of 1920. The exclusive privilege of taking moving pictures of the event was secured by Barker Company, of London, the Canadian rights for whose releases are controlled by the Anglo-Canadian Picture Plays, Limited. The Specialty Film Import, Limited, in turn distributes the releases in Canada.

Kansas City

Newman Has Larry Seeman Full Week.

Forest Nine, of the Vitagraph, reports business booming. The special comedies are going bigger and better. Vitagraph has special offers to make on them to smaller towns on the club plan. April 18, the Newman began a week's engagement of "The Fly Cop," featuring Larry Seeman.

Two Shows Given Before 11 A. M.

The freight strike has effected the Pathe office according to Manager Samuel Taylor in that they have been having some difficulty in getting return films. The Kansas City Post gave a special morning performance of "Bringing Up Father" at the Liberty Theatre, April 17, at 7.30 in the morning, 500 people were waiting to get into the houses. Two showings were given at 8 o'clock, and two at 9.15, and each time crowds of people had to be turned away.

Balsdon Visiting Vitagraph Branches.

George Balsdon, division manager of the Vitagraph, visited Kansas City while on the tour of the branches of his division. Mr. Balsdon has succeeded T. W. Chatburn, who was formerly division manager of this section, and who is now in business for himself in Los Angeles. Vitagraph is going to move shortly to the Kansas City Film Exchange Building, where they will have the entire third floor.

Film Salesman Injured.

R. H. Fairchild, salesman for the Vitagraph Exchange, was injured last week, at Connors Hotel, Joplin, Mo., when he slipped on a piece of a broken pitcher and cut a deep gash in his leg. Five stitches had to be taken in the cut, and Mr. Fairchild is laid up for a week or two because of it.

K. C. Film Personals.

General Representative of the Fox Exchange C. P. Sheehan visited in Kansas City a week.

L. B. Balsley has resigned from his connection with the A. H. Blank enterprise of Kansas City and is now with the Pathe in the capacity of special feature representative.

C. A. (Red) Jones, of the Pathe, is ill with grip. His condition is not serious, however, and he expects to soon return to work.

The Equitable Film Corporation has been selected by Special Pictures Corporation to distribute their productions in Kansas City territory. The field consists of Southeastern Nebraska, Southwestern Iowa, Western Missouri and the State of Kansas. W. T. Coleman, the direct representative of Special Pictures Corporation, is making his headquarters in the Equitable exchange.

The All-Star exchange, managed by M. Feitler, and which handles the Brady and Warwick releases, will move on May 1 to 1010 Forbes street.

Max W. Herring, of the Exhibitors' Film Company, has added the following subjects to his releases: Texas Guinan, in "The She Wolf"; "Reclaimed," and eighteen two-reel Westerns.

The Quality Film Corporation has secured the Western Pennsylvania-West Virginia state rights on the Lillian Walker serial, "$1,000,000 Reward."

Alexander Parke, well-known film salesman, has resigned his position with the First National and affiliated himself with the Metro exchange.

Pittsburg Film Personalities.

Harry Williams, of the Standard exchange, is playing a number of engagements on "The Spoilers" throughout West Virginia at the present time.

Mike Hughes, formerly manager of the Pittsburgh Universal and now connected with the Triangle in New York, spent a day at the local office recently.

Sam Fleischman is the new assistant cashier at the Pathe exchange. Mr. Fleischman was formerly with the New York Pathe.

Mr. Livingston, of the U. T. E. home office, spent a few days in Pittsburgh early in April breaking in the new manager of the local office, Frank L. France.

Eddie Wheeler, salesman for the Penn Film Service, is making an extended trip through West Virginia.

Personal Mention in Paragraphs.

Fred Lacey, for some time shipper at the Triangle exchange, is now managing Professor Gerechter's Oakland Theatre.

Frank Swartwood, formerly on the road with the Paramount in Cincinnati, has joined the forces of the Crandall Film Company.

Herbert James, formerly of the Apex exchange, is now on the sales force of the Triangle.

Buffalo

Exchange Building Opens May 1.

The big film exchange building in Franklin street, just above Chippewa, will have a formal opening on May 1, according to an announcement by Henry W. Kahn, Metro manager. This building will house Metro, Universal, Vitagraph, Republic and United. The building is one of the finest exchange structures in the state. Mr. Kahn was the recipient last week of a bonus from the Metro home office for excellent business.

Jack Kelly Exploitation Man.

Jack Kelly, former member of the Evening Times editorial staff, has resigned to accept a position as exploitation man at the local Robertson-Cole office, according to an announcement by E. J. Hayes, Buffalo manager. Mr. Hayes and Mr. Kelly are planning a big campaign on Carpenter, who will appear in Buffalo at the Broadway Auditorium on May 7. The name of the film feature in which he will appear will be announced from the ring, says Mr. Hayes. Esther Fettes, who was with the local World office for five years, has succeeded L. P. Murphy as chief clerk and booker at Robertson-Cole. Murphy becomes a salesman and goes on the road, starting the week of April 19.

Hoy Addresses Exchange Men.

Mr. Hoy, of the Hoy Reporting Agency, New York, was the principal speaker at the meeting and dinner of the Buffalo Exchange Managers' Association in the Hotel Iroquois April 17. The local managers recently engaged this service to adjust complaints from exhibitors. Mr. Hoy explained the work of the agency. Allan S. Moritz, president, presided at the meeting.

Sharick "Going Up."

"Andy" Sharick, exploitation manager of the Buffalo Select office, is going up in the film world. As a result of his excellent work in this territory he was personally complimented by L. J. Selznick on the convention floor in New York, where, with five other publicity men, he was appointed a special representative to cover the country at large under the banner of "Selznick's Flying Squadron." Mr. Sharick will have his headquarters in Buffalo, but will be ready to tackle a job anywhere in this country or Canada.

Weiss Quits Select.

Jerome Weiss has resigned as assistant manager of the Buffalo Select office. Mr. Weiss contemplates dashing into business for himself. He has the good wishes of hosts of friends in local film circles.

Gardiner Bookings Big.

Bookings at the local office of Gardiner Films, Inc., continue to come in in excellent manner. "Eyes of Youth" was shown for a week at the Family Theatre, following its first run at Shea's Hippodrome several weeks ago. "The Lost Battalion" is going big in the towns of Western New York, this feature with its Overseas Jazz Revue being shown for four days recently at the Bijou Theatre, Jamestown, with unusual success.

Florine Tours State.

O. E. Florine, assistant manager at the Republic office, went on tour of the state the week of April 12, visiting Olean, Jamestown, Hornell and Elmira. Mr. Florine reports business booming in the towns visited and exhibitors taking very kindly to Charles Hutchinson in "The Whirlwind."

Cleveland

First Nationals of Ohio Meet.

The First National Exhibitors Circuit of Ohio held a meeting of directors in Cleveland April 14, when matters to be taken up at the annual meeting of the First National Circuit in Chicago the last of April were decided upon. E. Mandelbaum, president, and W. E. Lusk, general manager, will attend from Ohio.

Phil Selznick, formerly a Cleveland exchange man, now in Kansas City, was in Cleveland last week visiting friends.

E. J. Smith, Cleveland manager for Universal, is at Mt. Clemens, Mich., taking the baths in an effort to get rid of an attack of neuritis.

The B & B Film Company, Cleveland, has opened a Cincinnati branch, sending E. A. McAuliffe, of Cleveland, to manage it.

Booker Becomes Salesman.

Joe Kremitz, for many years a booker in Cleveland exchanges, has been promoted from booker to salesman at the Universal.

W. F. Seymour, Cleveland representative for Hodkinson, is in New York attending a managers' conference.

Dick Roche, of Cincinnati, has been engaged by the Cleveland office of B & B Film Distributors as Ohio salesman.

San Francisco

Co-operatives in New Quarters.

The Co-operative Film Exchange, San Francisco, has moved to 107 Golden Gate avenue, to the quarters occupied for several years by the M. & R. Feature Film Exchange. It is now handling Pioneer pictures, formerly handled by the latter concern, this also being true in the Southern California territory. Sam W. Whitehead, manager of the branch at Los Angeles, made a flying trip to San Francisco recently to confer with Manager Floyd St. John, of the Co-operative Exchange, in regard to future policies. The M. & R. Feature Film Exchange has moved to 94 Golden Gate avenue, where quarters have been taken over with the Peerless Film Service, and independent features will be handled. R. A. Hazel has been added to the Co-operative Exchange staff and is covering the Sacramento Valley.

Attending First National Convention.

Fred Dahnken, Jr., president of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, leaves this week for Chicago to attend the convention of the First National Exhibitors' Association. Sam Y. Edwards, manager of the film exchange interests of Turner & Dahnken, will also attend this gathering. Before leaving for the East promotions were made in the staff at the San Francisco office, N. H. Brower being made assistant manager and V. Preston superintendent of the advertising and shipping department.

Baron Visits Los Angeles.

Edward Baron, manager of the San Francisco branch of the United Artists Corporation, recently made a flying trip to Los Angeles and while there conferred with Hiram Abrams, head of the organization. Ralph O. Proctor, assistant general manager, is paying the San Francisco exchange a visit.

Peerless Gets a Live Wire.

E. H. Emmick, of the Peerless Film Service, Inc., San Francisco and Los Angeles, has appointed Maurice F. Lowery manager of the San Francisco exchange. Mr. Lowery is one of the best known film men in this territory, having been with Triangle in its best days, and since returning from France has been with Hodkinson and Realart. A Peerless office is to be established at Seattle at an early date, and other parts of the country will also be invaded.

Vitagraph Happenings.

Walter Cree, for some time with National Pictures, San Francisco, has left for Denver to become manager for Vitagraph.

Bernard Skinner, booker for Vitagraph at San Francisco, is visiting the Denver branch to install a booking system and will return home by way of Los Angeles.

Manager Frank C. Burhans of the San Francisco branch of Vitagraph is wearing a smile that is getting broader every day. During the past sixty days 125 towns in this territory have been added to the list where Larry Semon comedies are shown.

Brehany Returns to Headquarters.

Jack Brehany, manager of the Equity Pictures Corporation, has returned to San Francisco from Los Angeles, where he started "The Confession" off on what promises to be a long extended run.

James Dunn, representing the Louis B. Mayer Enterprises, is covering the San Francisco territory in the interests of Anita Stewart productions, making his headquarters with Turner & Dahnken.

J. L. Day is now on the road with the Circle Film Attractions, Pittsburgh.

B. F. Hubbard is the new feature representative of the Pathe exchange in the Pittsburgh territory.

Sing a Song of Sing-Sing.

Bert Lytell favors in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," his Metro feature, from the famous Armstrong drama.

Neilan Denies Rumored Intention of Ignoring Present Releasing Contract

MARSHALL NEILAN has denied the story that he will not release his European-made pictures through First National Exhibitors' Circuit. Mr. Neilan also has expressed himself emphatically as regards the status of his new producing affiliations with Albert A. Kaufman, who is now in New York.

"In the first place," said Mr. Neilan, "I wish to deny most emphatically the story which has been printed in certain papers that the productions which I will make abroad will go to a releasing concern other than the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

To Use Exact Locales.

"I have under way plans involving the production of some very unusual pictures, staged in the exact locales of the various plots, involving some of the most famous landmarks in England, France, Ireland, Belgium and Spain. These productions will, I feel, fill a long-felt want not only in this country but all over the world, due to the fact that for the past four or five years practically nothing but American-made—and chiefly California-made—pictures have been available to the motion picture public. These pictures will be distributed via the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

"Another matter concerns the producing alliance entered into recently by Albert Kaufman and myself. In this regard I wish to repeat the fact as originally announced, that neither Mr. Kaufman nor myself are interested in each other's financial or distributing arrangements. Marshall Neilan Productions will be produced and distributed via First National just as in the past, and the only effect on these productions as a result of the affiliation with Mr. Kaufman will involve the physical staging of these pictures.

Use Same Studio.

"Properties and producing personnel of both Marshall Neilan Productions and Albert Kaufman Productions will be merged and shared by both organizations. A large studio will be occupied by both producing companies, the expense of which will be shared by each. The alliance is solely a producing combination and in the execution of the plans concerning this alliance there will be experienced on the part of each organization a material saving in producing costs."

At Least 2,000 Exhibitors Will Attend Theatre Owners' Cleveland Convention

MEETING in Albany, N. Y., on April 20 with the executive committee of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, Sydney S. Cohen of New York, president of the league, announced plans that have so far materialized in connection with the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which is scheduled to be held in Cleveland during the second week in June. Mr. Cohen has been selected as temporary chairman of the national organization of theatre owners, and together with Samuel Bullock, of Cleveland, selected as temporary secretary, many of the details incidental to the coming convention are being settled.

Mr. Cohen stated today that assurances have already been received of exhibitors from thirty-two states in addition to New York State, and that in all probability the gathering will attract not less than 2,000 exhibitors from all sections.

The states which will be represented at Cleveland will combine themselves into a national organization with the state as the unit of representation. According to Mr. Cohen, a program of much importance to exhibitors is now being worked out. There will be a national drive in an effort to remove certain of the present burdensome taxes, primarily the 5 per cent. film tax.

A national move will also be launched to keep manufacturers and producers from acquiring theatres in competition with exhibitors. Every effort will be devoted towards bringing about the elimination of the present deposit system, which, according to Mr. Cohen, is supplying much of the money that is being used these days in making pictures or in the erection of competitive houses.

Up to the present time no arrangement has yet been completed for the hall in which the national convention is to be held.

J. Frank Brockliss in Town.

J. Frank Brockliss, the well-known English film distributor and the head of the house of J. Frank Brockliss, Ltd., of Wardour street, London, has just completed another round trip across the Atlantic and comes back this time bubbling over with enthusiasm concerning the many sales of Simplex Projectors, for which machine the Brockliss company is exclusive distributors in Great Britain.

"Our only distress is found in the fact that we can not get Simplexes in sufficient numbers to supply the demand," said Mr. Brockliss, "but I believe that the arrangements just negotiated with E. M. Porter, general manager of the Simplex plant, will result in the satisfying of many of our customers."

Harry Levey Reports Signing of Contracts with Exhibitors

HARRY LEVEY, general manager of the industrial and educational department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has returned from a hurried trip to Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Chicago, where he was called for conferences with the officers of the leading motion picture exhibitors' associations of the West.

The conference with western exhibitors at the Hotel Winton, Cleveland, resulted in a complete and satisfactory understanding between Mr. Levey and the exhibitors in regard to Universal industrial and educational motion picture distribution. In the future these Universal pictures will be booked to the members of all the associations represented in the conference on the Universal's direct payment to exhibitor plan, the payments being made through the association officers upon report that the pictures have been properly exhibited.

The associations represented at the Cleveland conference and who become parties to the Universal-exhibitor agreement were:

Miami Valley Exhibitors' Association, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Indiana; John Seifert, president; A. W. Kinzler, treasurer.

Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association; H. H. Lustig, president; Sam Bullock, secretary; W. J. Slimm, treasurer.

American Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Fred J. Herrington, Kansas City Exhibitors' Association, Michigan Exhibitors' Association, St. Louis Exhibitors' Association, Northwest Exhibitors' Circuit.

Margaret Loomis Signs Up with Famous Players-Lasky

MARGARET LOOMIS, whose work in numerous Paramount Arctcraft pictures has proved her ability as a screen actress, has signed a five-year contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, according to announcement made by that company. Miss Loomis' first work under her new contract will be in William DeMille's special production adapted from Leonard Merrick's story, "Conrad in Quest of His Youth." She and Kathlyn Williams will have the leading feminine roles, while Thomas Meighan will play the name part.

Before entering motion pictures three years ago, Miss Loomis was a classical dancer of note. After taking dancing lessons for a single month, she was selected by Ruth St. Denis as a member of her road company in 1915. Following a month's rehearsal, she made her first professional appearance on the stage.

In This Land of Opportunity Even the Picture Field Opens Road to Deliver "The Goods"

MAX COOPER, chief usher at the Rivoli Theatre, has been appointed resident manager of the Criterion Theatre, which will open as a motion picture-music house Saturday noon, April 24. He will be one of the youngest theatrical managers on Broadway and his rise to the position reads like a Horatio Alger novel.

Cooper came to the Rivoli little more than two years ago as a page boy, from which he graduated to usher, then to chief usher. When Hugo Riesenfeld used the Sixty-third street music hall as a Children's Theatre he sent Cooper there as acting manager.

His unflinching courtesy at that time—especially in dealing with children—won him the first managerial opening, which is the Criterion. Others on the house staff are: James Nimmo, property man; Ben Kelly, carpenter; Harry Livingston, electrician and Leslie Reed, chief operator.

LOS ANGELES

NEWS LETTER

BY A. H. GIEBLER

Vidor Building Studio on Santa Monica Boulevard

KING VIDOR, producing features for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, is building a new studio on Santa Monica Boulevard, next to the Jesse D. Hampton plant, which, to be in keeping with the stories he is filming, will be built after the fashion of a New England village.

The buildings will be substantial and will be utilized for administration purposes, dressing rooms, etc. The courthouse, for instance, will be the big stage, and will be at one end of the street. The country hotel will house the dressing rooms. The schoolhouse and the church will be used for props, wardrobe or business offices, and the cottages on each side of the village street will be real and be used for various technical and business purposes.

Mr. Vidor states positively that he will allow no palms to be planted in his New England village. He has had too much difficulty in finding locations for his New England stories in California. Practically every cottage in California boasts a beautiful wide-spreading palm tree in its front yard, he says.

The new studio will be ready for occupancy in about six weeks, and production will start on a new Vidor picture in about that time at the new plant even if the buildings are not all completed.

Artists to Produce.

An artists' colony at Laguna Beach has organized a film company to produce big, clean pictures which will be artistic from every standpoint—story, acting, direction and presentation. Hedda Nova has been engaged as star. Paul Hurst will direct for the new company.

The first picture to be filmed by the Laguna Del Rey Art Film Corporation will be from Lolita Perrine's story, "Byrd of the Dawn," a story dealing with the romantic history of early California.

The personnel of the new producing company includes Lolita Perrine, author; Gayne Peak, lecturer for the New York Board of Education and an authority on astrology; Frederick Palmer, of the Palmer Photoplay Company, and Paul Hurst.

Files Incorporation Articles.

Articles of incorporation have been granted to the Marion H. Kohn Productions, Inc., of San Francisco, by the State of California to produce motion pictures. The Kohn enterprises are capitalized at $200,000, fully paid in, and the officers are Marion H. Kohn, president; D. J. Chatkin, vice-president; J. D. Letterman, secretary, and George A. Oppenheimer, treasurer. The company is producing short subjects only, and the stars featured in these pictures are Grace Cunard, Polly Moran, Smiling Bill Jones and "The Illiterate Digest" by Will Rogers.

Oakman Becomes Star-Producer.

Wheeler Oakman, who has finished his work in the Annette Kellerman comedy-drama which she has just completed for Sol Lesser, has been signed by Lesser on a long term contract, in conjunction with Harry P. Caulfield, to star in his own productions. Oakman has played the leading masculine role in "The Ne'er-Do-Well," "Mickey," "The Virgin of Stamboul" and other notable pictures.

While a new studio is being built for the Oakman productions and while preparation on story and other preliminary details are being made Oakman will work in two other productions to be made by western producers.

Polo to Produce Own Pictures.

Eddy Polo, at present a serial star for Universal, is to produce his own pictures upon completing "The Vanishing Dagger," his current screen novel. Under the new arrangement Polo will continue to work on the Universal lot, and all his future pictures, whether serials, two-reelers or features, will be released through Universal. This was the agreement reached when the recent contract was made between Polo and Universal. Except as to the releasing arrangements, however, Polo will be an independent star. A certain section of Universal City will be set aside for him and he will select his own stories, choose his own staff and cut and assemble each film.

Under the agreement with Universal, Polo is to be paid a certain sum over the cost of each production, and, according to plans, two serials will be made each year. With the assistance of an experienced director, Polo will direct his own pictures.

New Company at Work.

A new company has been organized to produce two-reel comedies by E. E. Reynolds and G. J. Taylor. The films will be offered to the distributing trade under the name of Taylor Made Comedies. One film has already been finished.

New Company to Film Bible.

A new company, formed by capitalists of Pasadena, to be known as the San Gabriel Film Corporation, has been organized to produce two-reel subjects from the Bible. The company plans to take over the old San Gabriel Hotel, now being used as a Masonic Orphans' Home, for a studio. A. L. Hamilton, of the Pasadena City Commission; Charles N. Post, of the National Bank and Trust Company; F. De Witt Smith, R. C. Kumler and A. L. Phillips are officials of the new company. C. S. Taylor is secretary and treasurer.

Sheehan in Los Angeles.

Howard Sheehan, western manager for Fox Films, with general offices in San Francisco, has arrived in Los Angeles on the last leg of a trip that covered Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Nevada, California and Arizona, all of the territory under his supervision with the exception of Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. Sheehan says this is the big year for films and that he has Fox pictures represented in every town of over 500 inhabitants in his jurisdiction.

Arizona Exhibitor in Town.

George A. Mauk, a prominent exhibitor of Phoenix, Ariz., who has been in Los Angeles for a week, reports that business is very good in his territory. Mr. Mauk controls the Columbia, one of the leading theatres of Phoenix, as well as eight other houses in the state, and is building a new theatre in Phoenix that will seat 2,000 persons and be the best equipped amusement house in the state when it is finished.

Atkinson Off to New York.

W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro, has left for New York, after a few days' visit at Metro's West Coast studio in Hollywood.

Edna Purviance Injured.

Edna Purviance, leading woman for Charles Chaplin, was seriously injured at Wilshire and South Harvard boulevards when the automobile in which she was riding was struck by a machine driven by two unidentified negroes. Miss Purviance was the only one injured. She sustained a deep laceration on the right side of her face, extending from her nose to her cheek, caused by the broken glass of the machine.

The machine in which Miss Purviance rode was turned around and around several times by the impact with the other car and came to a stop 150 feet from where it was struck. The car was badly damaged and the smaller car driven by the negroes was a total wreck.

Studio Shots

Jane Novak has filed suit for divorce from Frank A. Newburg, to whom she was married five years ago.

John H. Blackwood, who has been ill for the past six weeks, has returned to his desk in the Ince scenario department.

Mary Pickford has recovered sufficiently from her nervous breakdown of last week to resume work on "Hop o' My Thumb."

Pell Trenton has returned from the American studio at Santa Barbara, where he has been working in "The Money Moon" for the past six weeks.

Director Webster Cullison has taken the Antonio Moreno and Pauline Curley serial company to Balboa Beach to make the first scenes for "The Veiled Woman."

Edward Dillon, film director, has been divorced by his wife, Frances Dillon, on the grounds of desertion.

Marshall Neilan presented Wesley Barry, the freckled boy actor, with a motor-propelled buckboard on Wesley's thirteenth birthday. You can't make Wesley believe that 13 is unlucky.

Ted Taylor, director of publicity at Metro's western studio, has resigned to take up other publicity lines.

Bobby Harron came out to the coast to spend his birthday with his family, but he says he's going right back to New York immediately after the party.

Clara Kimball Young has returned from Chicago and is making preparations to begin on a new production, "Mid-Channel," within a few days.

Oliver Thomas has arrived to make her next Selznick picture on the West Coast under Director Larry Trimble.

Clarke Irvine is back in the publicity department at Goldwyn.

W. K. Howard is temporary manager of U. City, pending the appointment of a permanent general manager.

Gee! He's Lost His Dimples!

Nevertheless, Robert Gordon will star in boy characterizations for his own company.

Robert Gordon Photoplays In Preparation With Star Who Has Worked Way to Fame

RISE," to quote Noah Webster: "To ascend, begin to stir, grow upward" and, among other meanings, "to appear above the horizon." The latter definition has a peculiar significance to Robert Gordon, whose rapid ascent from an extra to a co-star in less than five years has begun to stir not only his admirers among the followers of motion pictures, but exhibitors, and now, producers.

There is no doubting that Bob has "grown upward," since his introduction to the silver sheet, in size, ability and possibility, for a producing company now under formation has negotiated for his services as the star of its offerings to be christened the Robert Gordon Photoplays.

So it would appear, would it not, that the young man whose characterization of "Huck Finn" in "Tom Sawyer" and the sequel photoplay, "Huck and Tom," is destined to "rise above the horizon?"

The plays will be carefully selected as suitable material for Mr. Gordon's boy characterizations. It will come as welcome news to the exhibitor who feels the need of a supply of wholesome, heart-interesting productions exploiting the American boy.

Hammons and Skinner Attend Dinner to British Notable

SIR ROBERT KINDERSLEY, G. B. E., governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, was the guest at a dinner given recently at the Hotel Biltmore by the New York staff of the company. Sir Robert is one of the outstanding figures among British business men today, and a notable assemblage of New Yorkers, including the British and French consuls, were present to meet him. Motion picture interests were represented by Messrs. E. W. Hammons and G. A. Skinner, of the Educational Films Corporation.

Celebrate 250th Anniversary.

Sir Robert's visit to this country is to attend the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Company. This celebration will be held in Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgary, Victoria and Vancouver in May. One of the features will be the exhibition of motion pictures of the Hudson Bay territory in leading theatres which have been leased by the company for the occasion. These pictures were made by the Educational Films Corporation.

Hudson's Bay Company is heavily interested in Educational Films Corporation, these arrangements having been completed by Mr. Hammons on his recent visits to England.

Charlotte Merriam in "The Honey Bee."

Charlotte Merriam is a pretty little actress of seventeen who is seen in the vivacious role of "Blondie" in "The Honey Bee," with Mme. Marguerita Sylva. During her two years' motion picture career she has made an enviable reputation for herself in comedy parts. However, like many other artists whose youth and beauty have given them a start in pictures via the comedy route, little Miss Merriam has a decided preference for dramatic work and is working toward that end.

Chinese Tourists Interested in Films.

C. H. Chu, consul general for China, and Judge Peter Hing, of Canton, China, came to Los Angeles on a tour of investigation of Southern California industries. The visitors are especially interested in the manufacture of motion pictures and—motor trucks!

Eleven Big, New Picture Theatre Projects are Planned or in Operation in Country

ONE of the best motion picture theatres of the Penn Amusement Company is the Venango Theatre, which has been opened recently at Oil City, Pa. Located in the old Parsons block, between the I. O. O. F. and the Veach buildings, it is doing a volume of business that augurs well for its future. The main auditorium has 613 seats and the second floor has 302 seats. The theatre opened with Douglas Fairbanks in "When the Clouds Roll By." The owners are W. A. McCartney, H. A. Tuller and R. B. Taft. Max C. Bridewell is organist. The house has many beautiful features.

The Majestic Theatre, of Benicia, Cal., is another new theatre of especial attractiveness. It cost $75,000 and seats 550. The stage is large enough to handle small shows and musical acts. The organ cost $14,000 and is played by Frank Horback. The house abounds in growing ferns, potted plants and artificial flowers. The color scheme is mulberry, blue and gold. Manager W. B. Crooks is considering the erection of a theatre in either Sacramento or Oakland.

On or about May 1, Manager C. M. Cooper, Jr., will complete the Riggan Opera House in Henderson, N. C., which will cost $175,000 and, it is said, will have the largest stage between Washington, D. C., and Atlanta. There will be 1,300 seats, including four boxes, making it quite a theatre for a town with a population of 5,000. A $15,000 pipe organ will be installed.

Raymond Pfeiffer, formerly a film salesman in Wisconsin for the Mid-West Distributing Company, of Milwaukee, is operating the Princess Theatre at Chilton and building up the patronage through the presentation of big features. He has also been running the Elite Theatre in New Holstein.

Two new pictures theatres, each to seat 600, are planned for Winona, Minn. These will increase the number of local houses to eight.

The Kent Construction Company will build a picture theatre to seat 1,100 in Duluth. It is hoped to open it by August 1. The house will cost $60,000.

A. H. Blank, of Des Moines, will build a $100,000 picture theatre in Ames, Iowa, this summer. It will be called the Rialto.

W. F. Sweet and F. Kelly are building a $20,000 community theatre in Seattle. It will seat 425 and will be located at Greenwood avenue and Seventy-ninth street.

The Southern Enterprises, Inc., has work well under way on its new theatre at Sixth and Main streets, Little Rock, Ark., and it is hoped to have the house completed early in August. The cost will be about $450,000.

The new American Theatre, recently opened in Noblesville, Ind., is proving popular. It cost $40,000 and seats 1,500.

Harrison Ford Picked as Lead for Wanda Hawley

HARRISON FORD has been selected as Wanda Hawley's leading man in "Miss Hobbs," Jerome K. Jerome's comedy, which was recently announced as the new Realartist's first starring vehicle. In addition, a cast of well-known players that includes Jack Mulhall, Lila Lee and Helen Jerome Eddy, has been assembled to support the star. The production is now under way at the Realart studios in Hollywood under the direction of Donald Crisp. Mr. Ford has acted with Miss Hawley several times previously and they are well acquainted with each other's methods.

Particular care in casting was required for this production by the story itself. Wanda Hawley plays the role of Henrietta Hobbs, the part originated on the stage by Annie Russel. Miss Hobbs is an advanced type of woman. Left a comfortable fortune by her spinster aunt, she devotes her time to cubist art, barefoot dancing, free verse and saving her less fortunate sisters from the pitfall of matrimony.

Fire Association Extends Invitation.

At a meeting of the fire prevention regulations committee of the National Association, held at the headquarters, 1520 Broadway, on April 15, an invitation was presented from the National Fire Prevention Association to send delegates to the annual meeting of that organization, to be held in Chicago May 4. The meeting was presided by J. E. Brulatour, chairman, who was empowered to select the delegates to represent the committee and the industry upon the occasion.

The National Association is affiliated with the National Fire Protection Association and was represented at the last annual meeting held in Ottawa.

New Developing Plant in Tampa Booming Florida As a Producing Center

UNDER the name Pandora Film Company, a concern has been organizing at Tampa, Fla., for developing pictures as fast as they are made there, a great convenience to companies now at work in that territory. Formerly the negatives had to be sent to New York, which took several days' time.

The establishment of the developing plant, with a complete studio in connection, it is thought, will bring many new companies here.

MEASURING the value of any picture on the market is a simple process requiring only the actual Box Office reports of business done throughout the country.

It is on that basis alone that Clara Kimball Young in "THE FORBIDDEN WOMAN" can lay its claim to being one of the biggest financial and artistic successes of the 1920 season.

We did not advertise it as being bigger than "Eyes of Youth" yet reports in this office show a greater total of business done on "THE FORBIDDEN WOMAN" than on "Eyes of Youth."

As a showman you must acknowledge that the one thing that concerns you is Box Office receipts and profits, therefore, an immediate playing engagement arranged thru your nearest EQUITY Franchise Holder will greatly swell your bank balance for the present 1920 season.

We direct special attention to an announcement, the most important announcement Equity has ever made to appear in the trade papers next week. It will carry the news of the greatest Clara Kimball Young picture ever released promising exhibitors unquestionably the biggest winner of the year. Watch and wait!

Benjamin Prager Succeeds Isaac Wolper as Mayflower Head; McKay Is Promoted

ISAAC WOLPER on April 15 announced his resignation as president of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation in order that he might start production immediately under his own name. He will be succeeded by Benjamin A. Prager, who until now has acted as treasurer.

Mr. Wolper stated that he is retiring from the active management of the Mayflower organization because of a disagreement in policy. Although he will no longer take part in directing the company's affairs, Mr. Wolper announced that he will keep his stock interest and will lend the concern every possible co-operation calculated to promote its success.

"I have been contemplating for some time producing under my own name," said Mr. Wolper, "as I believe there is a bigger future for me by operating in this manner. At present, I am hunting for offices, and as soon as I can find space and establish my headquarters I will make a definite statement as to policy and plans. Mr. Prager, who is taking my place as president of Mayflower, has been with the company ever since its organization and is familiar with every detail of the business. As a consequence, he is fitted to carry on the work in a most capable manner."

It was the work of Mr. Wolper that resulted in the organization of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation in 1918 and through him the arrangement was made with George Loane Tucker, which was responsible for producing "The Miracle Man," one of the most successful motion pictures ever made. As head of Mayflower, Mr. Wolper is credited with having accomplished many big things, which, according to Mr. Prager, is the reason the company is anxious to have him retain his Mayflower stock.

Mr. Prager's first announcement as president was that John W. McKay, former general manager of distribution, has been promoted to the position of general manager of Mayflower. Mr. McKay has also been with the company since it started and this step upward is in reward for his untiring services.

"At present," said Mr. McKay, "deals are pending for the manner in which these pictures are to be released, but as yet no transaction has been closed. We have a number of very big productions for 1920, and we want to be sure that we choose the best possible means of getting these features before the public, thus insuring the maximum of success for each picture."

Charles A. Giles Is Building New Theatre in Framingham

WORK will soon begin on the erection of a theatre in Framingham, Mass., that is promised to be one of the best equipped theatres in New England. It will be called the St. George and will seat 1,800. While intended primarily for use as a picture house, it will have a complete stage equipment and a stage ample in depth and breadth for the presentation of any form of theatrical or dramatic entertainment. It will have an organ costing more than $25,000.

The theatre interior will be an adaptation of the Adam style, with pale turquoise blue as a foundation for the color scheme, relieved by dull gray green and pale yellow gold. The main curtain will be a rich tone of pale mauve and the hangings will be in a deeper tone of the same, verging on crimson. The electric lighting will be devised so that at all times the house will be illuminated without detracting from the intensity of the picture on the screen.

The theatre was designed and will be built under the direction of Blackall, Clapp & Wittemore, architects, and will be owned and operated by the George A. Giles Company, which has a chain of theatres throughout New England, including the St. James Theatre in Boston. Mr. Giles is president of the Greater Boston Exhibitors' Association.

North to Direct for American Cinema.

Wilfred North has been engaged by the American Cinema Corporation to direct a new production for them. An original script by N. Brewster Morse is the vehicle.

Henley to Direct Faversham.

News of unusual importance is contained in the announcement by Myron Selznick that Hobart Henley will direct William Faversham in the second of the series of Selznick Pictures Corporation productions in which the famous actor will be starred.

Points to Christie Funmakers as Proof American Comedies Are Popular Abroad

REGINALD WARDE, exporter of Christie Comedies, who has just left the West Coast to return to his New York office after an extensive observation of film production in Los Angeles, has taken exception to the remarks published by John Hohenvest, declaring that Europe likes our American drama, but frowns on our comedies because they lack plot.

Mr. Warde says that the answer to this assertion is that in England alone the Gaumont Company, a house of high reputation for quality, has issued every one of the Christie Comedies produced since 1916, when the first one was made, and that all Christie Comedies have been sold for the entire European territory up to the end of 1920, and that individual countries are making offers for the series of 1921. Gaumont is now ready to renew the contract for two-reelers and secure an option for 1921. Gaumont is booking into the best theatres in England with wide advertising throughout the trade and to the public, and no comedy is better advertised or more widely booked throughout the United Kingdom.

Shown Throughout the World.

Mr. Warde continues: "Christie Comedies are shown in every country in the world and we will challenge any comedy producing organization to show more countries where sales have been made for the entire product." He also calls attention to the fact that this does not mean just a few, but the entire output, which, with two-reelers made by Christie under other brand names, amount to 397 pictures during the past three years.

"It creates a unique record," says Mr. Warde, "that never once in any country has a Christie Comedy been censored. This emphasizes the clean comedy standard. And it goes without saying that this brand of comedies has always been made without the use of slapstick which Mr. Hohenvest decries. And it is also a known fact that this brand has always been produced with the plot idea first and comic incidents second in mind."

Mr. Warde closes his answer to the foreign criticism by giving the following list of countries in which Christie Comedies for 1920 are sold: Great Britain, South Africa, Dutch East Indies, Straits Settlements, Japan, India, Burma, Ceylon, Australia,

New Zealand, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chili, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Brazil, Central American States, Cuba, Porto Rico, Costa Rica, Philippines, China, France, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, Greece, Egypt, Balkan States, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Poland and Czecho-Slavia.

"The Dream Cheater" Makes New Kerrigan Booking Mark

REPORTS from nearly all Hodkinson managers the past week reveal a higher spot booking mark on J. Warren Kerrigan's newest Robert Brunton production, "The Dream Cheater," than on any previous Kerrigan-Brunton picture since the star's amalgamation with the noted producer and scenic expert a year ago.

Considering the wide vogue enjoyed by Kerrigan's "The Joyous Liar" and "The Lord Loves the Irish," his most successful pictures to date, the great volume of contract bookings on "The Dream Cheater" substantiates the Hodkinson claim that the star has caught on with exhibitors and the picture-going public alike as never before in his long career.

An outstanding feature of "The Dream Cheater" is the perfection of its casting. Some of the best known players of the screen and two former stars of the legitimate stage support Kerrigan in this picture.

Steele Made Controller.

Announcement has been made by General Manager Sam E. Morris, of Select and Republic, that Charles Steele has been appointed controller of the various Selznick enterprises, including Select, National and Republic. Mr. Steele, it is made known, is promoted to this position from auditor of Republic.

Louise Huff's First Selznick Film.

Following the announcement last week of the acquisition of Louise Huff as a Selznick Enterprises star, comes the statement that the first production featuring Miss Huff will be "Dangerous Paradise." The second production will be "False Pride."

Pauline Frederick
Who will be starred in Robertson-Cole productions.

Robertson-Cole Signs Pauline Frederick for a Series of Special Productions

ROBERTSON-COLE definitely announces that it has entered into a contract to extend over a period of several years with Pauline Frederick. The noted emotional screen star will appear in a series of super-productions, beginning at the termination of her present contract. Miss Frederick's contract provides an additional link in the chain of special attractions with which Robertson-Cole is binding itself to the good will of both exhibitor and public.

Miss Frederick is conceded one of the biggest favorites with the motion picture public. In productions with vigorous stories of modern American life, always with strong love interest, and not infrequently tinged with a mystery motif, Miss Frederick is scoring month after month.

To Make Four Pictures a Year.

Never artificially advanced by exaggerated advertising campaigns, her success is based on her own good work and has been growing better, and of wider, and of more compelling nature with each Broadway and national success.

Robertson-Cole signed Miss Frederick as part of its progressive plans to obtain the productions of those stars which will win most continually and most certainly for the exhibitor. It feels that Miss Frederick fits these qualifications as nearly as any of the many stars and attractions which it has placed under contract during the last few months.

When Miss Frederick starts making her productions for Robertson-Cole, unusual effort and care will be taken with each. At least three months, and in some instances more, will be taken to complete each of the pictures. The maximum number which will be produced in any one year will be four. In this way Miss Frederick will have an opportunity to make the biggest and best pictures of her career.

Looking for Big Stars.

Fully realizing the value to the exhibitor of profitable stars, Robertson-Cole is not going to complete its work of engaging great attractions with the signing of Miss Frederick. It is thoroughly combining the motion picture star market, not from the standpoint of which star has been advertised the most, or which has risen to a momentary height, but in an effort to ascertain which of the stars are winning most consistently at the box office.

In other words, in picking new names it is always influenced by the continued drawing power of a star over a long period rather than by any artificial force which is brought to bear. In short, Robertson-Cole wanted in the case of Miss Frederick a star who positively does draw whenever her name appears in electric lights, rather than a name to boast about, and this policy is to be pursued in the signing of all other stars.

Pathe to Release "The Third Eye," Its Third Serial of the Year, on May 23

THE announcement by Pathe that the Gasnier Production, "The Third Eye," co-starring Warner Oland and Eileen Percy, would follow "Daredevil Jack" on the serial program of that company, designates May 23 as the day on which the third fifteen-episode serial of the year will be released by Pathe, and indicates the elaborate plans of the company for its 1920 serial program.

The first offering of the year, "Daredevil Jack," released February 15, was produced at the Robert Brunton studios. "Trailed by Three," which began its run on April 3, is an independent production from the Arthur F. Beck Serials Productions, Inc., while Pathe's next offering comes from the Astra Studios of Louis J. Gasnier.

At present Pathe serials in the making are in production at two studios, the George B. Seitz studio in New York and the Astra plant in Glendale, where Ruth Roland has her company at work on a new episode film.

The Seitz studio is the scene of activity for two companies, the Seitz unit which is producing a serial in which Mr. Seitz will co-star with Marguerite Courtot, and the Juanita Hansen Company, which is making headway on a scenario written by Seitz and being directed by Bertram Millhauser.

Charles Hutchison is now in Los Angeles, and the present plans call for him to start work on his first serial under his new contract with Pathe on April 19, at the Brunton studio. When Hutchison commences actual work at the Brunton studio there will be four companies producing Pathe serials.

Shurtleff Starts Another Based on Jack London Tale

FINAL scenes have been shot for the C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., production of "Burning Daylight," Jack London's novel of the North, enacted by a cast that includes Mitchell Lewis, Helen Ferguson and William V. Mong. The picture, which was made at the Metro studios in California and in the Truckee snow country, was directed by Edward Sloman and will be released shortly by Metro.

Filming of "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," the second Jack London story to be picturized for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., will begin within a fortnight at the Metro studios. President C. E. Shurtleff and Director Sloman have gone to San Francisco on a hunt for locations.

A ship will be chartered. Many of the exciting incidents in the story occur on shipboard, and Messrs. Shurtleff and Sloman are looking for a sailing vessel of the type that Jack London loved.

"Burning Daylight" is a story of Alaska in the days of the gold rush. Mitchell Lewis appears in the titular role. The cast also includes Arthur Edwin Carew, Gertrude Astor, Edward Jobson, Alfred Allen, Louis Morrison, Newton Hall, Robert Bolder and Aaron Edwards.

Numa Has Exploitation on "Return of Tarzan" Picture

THE Numa Pictures Corporation, which has been reticent about the disposition of its heralded "Return of Tarzan" picture recently completed, now says there will be special exploitation on it soon. From its offices in the Longacre Building, New York City, comes the word that the exploitation will be coincident with the release of the picture.

An announcement tells of high praise accorded the feature by film men who have witnessed private showings, and declares it represents the biggest and most artistic Edgar Rice Burroughs tale heretofore offered exhibitors. Gene Pollar plays the title role.

Exhibitors Acclaim "Blind Love."

Max Marcin's novel, the screen version of which was made by Gerald F. Bacon, under the title "Blind Love," with Lucy Cotton in the starring role, has made a big success on the screen, according to advices received by Nathan Hirsh from exhibitors throughout the country who have run Mr. Bacon's picture as a special attraction. In the supporting cast are George La Guerre, Edouard Durand, Bert Leigh, Frank O'Connor and James F. Cullen.

Reviews printed in Moving Picture World are written with authority by experienced craftsmen; written from the production, exactly as it will be presented on the screen of your theatre.

First Republic Serial Had Wide Publicity Preparation

IN announcing the release on April 18 of the opening episodes of "The Whirlwind," the serial starring Charles Hutchinson, and the first serial to be released by the Republic Distributing Corporation, President Briton N. Busch desires to call attention to the advance work done on it.

Republic began its national campaign of publicity and advertising, according to Mr. Busch, the day that "The Whirlwind" was contracted for. Not only were advertisements carried in papers where they would attract the most attention, but through Republic's publicity department, news stories and specials were sent out to newspapers from coast to coast.

By the time the first episode of the serial is shown, exhibitors will have received advanced advertising of a general nature that only requires a follow-up by the exhibitors to put the attraction over in great shape. It is the first of a series that Republic will release and nothing has been left undone that will contribute to its success. The second is now being made on the West Coast and negotiations are pending for more.

Robins Film Buys "Blind Love."

Nathan Hirsh, Aywon Film Corporation, handling the distribution of Gerald F. Bacon's "Blind Love," starring Lucy Cotton, has sold the northern New York territory to the Robins Film Corporation, Utica, N. Y. The Robins Film Corporation will present Bacon's picture as a special attraction, featuring the star, the author, Max Marcin, and the all-star supporting cast.

Edward Jose

Will direct Geraldine Farrar for Associated Exhibitors' productions.

Jose to Direct Geraldine Farrar's First Picture for Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

EDWARD JOSE has been engaged by Associated Exhibitors, Inc., to direct Geraldine Farrar's initial production for that organization. Mr. Jose has just finished directing Anita Stewart in "The Yellow Typhoon." It is expected that production of Miss Farrar's first Associated picture will begin very soon—as soon as she returns to New York from a Southern operatic tour.

While the Associated Exhibitors have made no announcement of the title or nature of Miss Farrar's first vehicle under their banner, it is stated that the picture can be looked forward to as a de luxe attraction—a showman's proposition in every sense of the word.

Mr. Jose is one of the most capable directors in the field. He has directed such stars as Norma Talmadge, Elsie Ferguson, Pauline Frederick, Anita Stewart, Lina Cavalieri and many others; also he has produced several big specials with all-star casts. His directorial genius has been responsible for numerous successful photoplays, and it is believed that in his new connection Mr. Jose will be given greater opportunities than ever before.

Mr. Jose's stage and screen experience dates back considerably more than a score of years. He was born in Antwerp, Belgium, and studied at the Paris Conservatory for pianists. His twenty years of stage experience in France, England, Belgium and South America included a long term as stage director for Sarah Bernhardt. He directed all the plays at the Theatre Antoine in Paris for several years. His screen career included connections in a directorial capacity with Pathe, Selznick, Artcraft, Famous Players, and many others.

The two latest pictures produced by Mr. Jose are "The Fighting Shepherdess" and "The Yellow Typhoon." Some other pictures directed by him are "The Beloved Vagabond," "The Light That Failed," "Poppy," "The Moth," "The Red Mouse," "La Tosca," "Resurrection," and "Fedora."

W. W. Hodkinson Announces Completion of "Silent Barrier," by Louis Tracy

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces the completion of "The Silent Barrier," the first of Louis Tracy's widely read novels produced for the screen by Louis Tracy Productions, Inc. It is now in the process of cutting and titling at the Leah Baird studios, Cliffside, N. J., under the supervision of William Worthington, one of the best known of American directors.

"The Silent Barrier," a drama of the Swiss Alps, was enacted for the most part at Lake Placid, N. Y., and Director Worthington had as his chief aid and art director, Ernest Des Baillels, the noted Swiss illustrator, specially engaged by Charles C. Burr, treasurer of Louis Tracy Productions, Inc., because of his wide reputation as an expert in all that pertains to scenery, costuming, architecture and outdoor customs of Switzerland.

Some of the snow scenes are said to be of an unusual character and all of them have a direct bearing on the gripping plot in the Tracy story and include plunges over precipices, mountain sledge races, skiing competition and other difficult mountaineering feats.

"The Silent Barrier" was acted by an all-star cast including Sheldon Lewis, Gladys Hulette, Fuller Mellich, Florence Dixon, Donald Cameron, Corinne Barker, Mathilde Brundage, Jack Raymond and Joseph Burke.

The first Louis Tracy production will in all probability be released by the Hodkinson organization the latter part of May, to be preceded by an extensive national advertising campaign.

Fox Signs Eileen Percy to Long-Term Contract as Star

SO excellent has been the work of pretty Eileen Percy in "Leave It to Me" and "Big Jim O'Kane," future releases in which she appears opposite William Russell under the direction of Emmett J. Flynn, that she has been signed by Fox Film Corporation to a long-term contract. Miss Percy will be starred, and in the near future will begin work in her first stellar production under the direction of Mr. Flynn, with whom she has been associated both in Fox and in American Film Company photoplays. Announcement has not yet been made as to what story will be used to introduce the newest star of the screen.

Miss Percy has a delightful personality, and a face and figure that show to excellent advantage on the screen. Although still in her early twenties, she has had a wide experience on the stage.

Work on the first Eileen Percy picture will be started within the next fortnight at the William Fox studio in Hollywood. Her stories will be of the light comedy type, a line of work for which she is admirably equipped by both nature and experience.

Denison Clift Is Directing Own Stories for Fox Film

DENISON CLIFT, for three years one of the best known scenario writers in the business, is now enjoying the distinction of directing his own features at the Fox West Coast studios.

Mr. Clift has long been a writer of powerful emotional dramas and has prepared the continuities for his own stories; in addition he is today directing and cutting his own pictures, making him one of the best all-round picture men in the game.

A series of fourteen continuities, some of them of his own original stories, has been written in fifteen months for Madeline Travers; in addition Mr. Clift has written some of the best stories for Tom Mix, Gladys Brockwell, Peggy Hyland and other Fox stars.

Mr. Clift is a young man of university education who entered the writing end of the game under Cecil B. deMille and Thomas H. Ince in 1917. He has just finished directing the current Madeline Travers production, and is now engaged in writing two stories for another Fox star, which he will shortly direct.

Engineer Joins Bray Technical Staff.

The industrial division of the Bray Pictures Corporation announces the addition to its staff of John F. Strickler, well-known engineer. Mr. Strickler is a graduate of the Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago. He has since been engaged in engineering work of various kinds, but specializing mostly on that requiring a keen analytical ability for machinery.

Exhibitor Cancels Low Price Semon Contract to Pay More

THE spectacle of an exhibitor deliberately cancelling one contract involving moderate rental in order to make a new contract for the same pictures at a higher rental was written into history last week in Denver. The manager of the America Theatre in that city abolished its contract, which had three bookings yet to run, in order to sign a new contract for nine ensuing releases of Vitagraph's Larry Semon comedies.

The new contract for these features involves a very much increased cost for the America, but the latter's manager believed the sacrifice he made was justified by his assurance of tying up the first-run bookings of the "million-dollar" funny man in Denver.

Vitagraph exchange men believe this is the first time in booking annals that such a thing has ever occurred. The company reports that it reflects a condition of competition for its star comedian all over the country.

Larry Semon's latest release, "The Fly Cop," is declared to have created widespread interest. His next will be "School Days."

Bioscope in Tampa to Make Slapstick Laden With Bathing Beauty

SLAPSTICK comedies with bathing girls galore are now being made at Goldstein's Springs, near Tampa, Fla., by the Bioscope Film Company, which has purchased seventeen acres and erected studios and bath houses. The concern is a local one principally.

The trustees are A. B. McMullan, president of the Kiwanis Club; Charles H. Brown, president of the board of trade, and W. L. Jones, manager of the Alcazar Theatre, part of the Lynch enterprises.

Bert Tracy is director. Vida Kadz, formerly of Sunbeam Comedies, has arrived to be starred in some of the pictures. Another well-known member is Edward Lawrence, known as "The Silver King," who is back in pictures after a long illness. The company recently completed its first picture, the title of which is "Introduce Me Quick," and is preparing to make a number of others. The enterprise is a permanent one.

Poli Books Selznick Pictures.

No better proof of the quality and popularity of the Selznick and Republic productions has been offered recently than that which is shown in the announcement made this week by Sales Director Charles Rogers, of Select and Republic, to the effect that the Poli circuit in the Connecticut territory has booked the Selznick production "The Woman God Sent," featuring Zena Keefe, and the two Republic productions, "The Girl of the Sea" and "Mothers of Men." In addition to this Mr. Rogers made public this week the fact that the Keith and Proctor circuits have booked the last two named Republic productions.

"Evil Eye" Serial Making New Box-Office Records

THE "Evil Eye," the new Hallmark serial by Roy L. McCardell, in which the lightweight champion, Benny Leonard, is starred, has opened in a number of theatres in New York to remarkable business.

Many exhibitors who had placed bookings made a wise speculation on Benny Leonard's popularity, not only in New York City, but in every section of the country, as attested by the ovation given the lightweight as he "stepped" onto the screen in the first episode of the serial, "Below the Deadline."

As remarked by one exhibitor, "I did not think I was taking any great gamble on booking Benny Leonard in 'The Evil Eye,' for I knew that Benny's name is a real box-office bet and that he has a wonderful following. When I opened my doors for the first performance of 'The Evil Eye,' I found I was right in my assumption, for the crowd waiting at the box-office was concrete dollars-and-cents-evidence of the boy's popularity."

In the supporting cast are Stuart Holmes, Ruth Dwyer, Marie Shotwell, Mme. Martini, Leslie King, and Glenn Kunkle.

The Leonard company is still on the coast, where the last few episodes are now being made under the direction of J. Gordon Cooper with Wally Van supervising.

Von Stroheim in New York.

Erich Von Stroheim, Universal's director whose "Blind Husbands" created a stir in the film world several months ago, has come to New York to supervise the final cutting and editing of his latest creation, "The Devil's Pass Key," a Universal-Jewel production of Parisian life, loves and intrigues. He says "The Devil's Pass Key" is a great improvement on "Blind Husbands" in the way of characterization, settings and verisimilitude.

Inter-Ocean Will Continue to Export Despite Conditions in the Foreign Market

THE attitude of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation in the present foreign film crisis is again defined and explained in a statement issued from the New York offices of the company. The statement sets at rest rumors which have gained currency in domestic and foreign film quarters as to the nature of Inter-Ocean's foreign trade policy in the future.

"Despite the statements of a certain well-known exporter who maintains that the American manufacturer cannot hope for a ready market for American productions until the exchange in Europe is stabilized, Inter-Ocean Film Corporation urges a continuation of export trade with the assurance to the American manufacturer of a fairly marginable profit on the sales of his product to foreign territories," according to the statement issued.

"The rise of the pound sterling during the past week to a point where it is almost safe to assume that it is on its way to normal exchange is indicative of the strengthened position of foreign trade. This emphasizes the statement recently made by Mr. Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation.

"While Inter-Ocean concedes that profits will not be as large as heretofore, it feels that the present foreign crisis demands no let-up in exports. This conclusion is based on the desire of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation and several other export companies who have expressed their willingness in statements in the trade press to lend a helping hand to the foreign buyer who is now supposed to be having difficulty in foreign exchange. Furthermore, inactivity in the foreign market would seriously hinder the future of foreign trade.

"Inter-Ocean Film Corporation will continue to export American films in large quantities despite the present condition in foreign markets. It maintains that a continuation of exports is the only means to the solution of the problems which at present beset the industry."

"Mountain Madness" for Early Release.

The second production to be completed for the Republic Distributing Corporation by the Lloyd Carleton Productions Company is "Mountain Madness," it is announced this week. The picture will be distributed through Republic.

Although no definite release date has been set, a late report states that it will be available for exhibitors within the very near future.

"Mountain Madness" was written by Anna Alice Chapin. Lloyd Carleton directed.

Inter-Ocean Film Announces Its Releasing Plans for 1920

A WIDE variety of subjects is offered to foreign buyers this year by Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, according to a statement issued this week from the New York offices of the company.

The 1920 list of Inter-Ocean releases is said to embrace a number of "special" productions which will be obtained for exclusive foreign distribution from the ranks of many well-known producers. In this connection plans have already been made with a number of independent producers for the acquisition of several "specials," the titles of which will be announced as soon as details are perfected.

Conspicuous among Inter-Ocean's 1920 list of releases is the series of Louis Tracy Productions now in the course of production by Gibraltar Pictures, Inc., under the direction of William Worthington.

"Gift Supreme" Another.

"The Gift Supreme," recently acquired by Inter-Ocean Film Corporation for exclusive foreign distribution, is another of Inter-Ocean's 1920 releases. The production was made by the McCauley's Photoplays, Inc.

The productions will be backed up by an extensive advertising and publicity campaign in the domestic and foreign trade press, which is to be conducted under the supervision of A. L. Feinman, in charge of Inter-Ocean's advertising and publicity.

Praises Nazimova Productions.

E. C. Bostick, managing director of the Merrill and New Strand theatres in Milwaukee, predicted, after witnessing a special showing of "The Heart of a Child," that this new Nazimova production will be more popular than any previous picture made by the Russian artist. Mr. Bostick is noted for his conservative estimates of screen work, so that Metro, as sponsor of the Nazimova productions, regards his particular praise of "The Heart of a Child" as worthy of special note.

Goldwyn Pictures Open New House.

The Triangle, a new Pittsburgh theatre, was opened in the East Liberty section of the city on April 3, with a complete Goldwyn program. This is the second Pittsburgh house to be introduced with a full bill of Goldwyn Pictures, the other being the Blackstone, opened last August.

The Associated Theatres, of which Nathan Friedberg is the managing director, operates the Triangle. It seats 1000, cost about $75,000 and is classed among the finest theatres in the city. It is under the same management as the Alhambra, East Liberty; Garden, Northside; and the American, Southside. In all of these houses an appeal is made to a discriminating public.

Fox Installs Equipment for Original Novelty Subtitles

THE novelty of the art subtitles introduced in the William Fox production, "Molly and I" in which the wistful little Shirley Mason made her second bow as a Fox star, has caused such wide and favorable comment that the producer since has completed arrangements to follow "Molly and I" with other film similarly fitted.

"Molly and I" was a screen adaptation of Frank R. Adams' novel, "Molly and I and the Silver Ring." Miss Isabel Johnston was responsible for the conversion of the book for the screen and has done excellent work.

It is the plan of William Fox to install in the new studio in West Fifty-fifth street, New York City, a complete equipment for the photographing of novelty subtitles. This department will be operated entirely separate from the other branches of the studio and laboratory and will be conducted under the personal supervision of Ralph Spence, who is thoroughly experienced in this kind of work.

A staff will be assigned for the sole purpose of inventing ingenious methods of introducing subtitles and spoken titles, and every facility will be found within the department for the artistic development of original ideas.

Bernstein, Van Ronkel, Loeb Form Commission Selected to Rule Over Universal City

UNIVERSAL CITY, CAL., the home of Universal films, has adopted a commission form of government, it is announced at Universal's New York headquarters. Following the lead of other American communities, a committee of three men has been appointed to administer the affairs of the little screen municipality. They are Isadore Bernstein, Sam Van Ronkel and Louis E. Loeb, all three well-known in the film world. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal company, will hold rank as Mayor of Universal City and be an ex-officio member of the commission. In his absence, the commission of three will be supreme.

Since its inception in 1913, Universal City has been under a one-man government. The general manager representing the Universal company has in the past been mayor, controller, police judge and everything else. The affairs of the curious city have grown beyond the scope of one man, however, causing the change to the commission system.

The three commissioners will share the burdens of administration equally. Bernstein will be known as production manager, Van Ronkel as studio manager, and Loeb as business manager. All phases of activity within the gates of Universal City have been catalogued under one of these three heads.

Bernstein was the first general manager of Universal City. He left Universal about five years ago and produced pictures of his own. Recently he has been production manager for the National Film Company.

Van Ronkel has been associated with the film industry for many years, although he has never been identified directly in the production of pictures. Loeb comes to Universal from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Saxe Buys the Strand.

Thomas Saxe, owner of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise for Milwaukee, has purchased the Strand Theatre of that city according to an announcement made by himself.

Mr. Saxe's latest acquisition now places him in charge of three of the most prominent downtown theatres in Milwaukee. His downtown houses previous to the purchase of the Strand consisted of the Alhambra and Princess theatres, both first-run houses. The Strand has a seating capacity of 1,500.

Straits Settlements Likes Universals.

Universal-Jewel productions and Universal serials have a great vogue in the Straits Settlements, Universal's Singapore branch office writes.

K. W. Tann, the native manager of the branch, reports that all that is necessary is to announce a Universal serial and the name of such stars as Marie Walcamp, Eddie Polo, Eileen Sedgwick and Grace Cunard and the theatres are packed.

Singapore prides itself of having three picture houses. They are the Palladium, Liberty Hall and Empire Cinema. They are furnished with pictures about the same time that they are shown in the United States.

First Whitman Bennett Film to Be "The Devil's Garden"

WHITMAN BENNETT announces that the first of the four releases he will produce for First National Exhibitors' Circuit starring Lionel Barrymore will be "The Devil's Garden," from the novel of the same name by W. B. Maxwell, the European author, who first attained fame with the publication of his "Cotton Wool." Work on the production has been going for the past week.

While the Bennett studio had "The Devil's Garden" scheduled for a Barrymore production, it was decided upon for the initial production because some of the settings demand a location of out-of-doors in the spring and Kenneth Webb, who is directing the picture, felt there was no time like the present for procuring such scenes. Ideal locations were found within easy traveling distance of the studio. When the star reported for work on April 12 the mechanical force was ready to begin at once on the picture.

The story of "The Devil's Garden" is one that gives ample opportunity for the display of dramatic talent such as Mr. Barrymore showed he possesses in the stage production of "The Jest" and "The Copperhead." It was produced at the Liberty Theatre by Arthur Hopkins.

Many Theatre Circuits Book Abramson's "Child for Sale"

A CHILD FOR SALE," Ivan Abramson's latest release, has fulfilled the prophecies of reviewers who have drawn the attention of the exhibitors to the timeliness and box office attraction of the picture. That the exhibitors agree with the reviewers has been proven by the rush for the booking of the attraction.

The picture was to open David V. Picker's Rio Theatre, seating 3,000, situated at Broadway and 159th street, New York. The picture had been seen by Mr. Picker before the final cutting, but could not be completed for the opening of the Rio. Nevertheless Mr. Picker made arrangements that the picture should first be shown in his new theatre.

His judgment in choosing "A Child for Sale" as an attraction calling for special efforts has been indorsed by other high grade exhibitors in New York and vicinity. The entire Picker Circuit is playing this picture, giving it a longer run than any picture thus far shown in his theatres. The same applies to the U. B. O. Circuit, which has booked it for the entire circuit.

The M. & S., Charles Steiner and S. R. S. circuits, the Symphony, Adelphi and a host of others have booked it for a longer run than usual. New Jersey has followed in line with the U. S. Theatre, Paterson; Strand Theatre, Hoboken; Park Theatre, Rutherford; Rialto, Passaic; Empire, New Brunswick, and others.

The souvenir vest pocket exploitation blotter had a sale of 600,000 the first week.

Says Advertising Slides and Pictures Are Getting on the Nerves of the Public

Editor Moving Picture World:

EXHIBITORS are going crazy over this matter of showing advertising slides to get free revenue for their associations. Fine! But did they ever stop to realize that in reality they are paying hundreds of dollars of dues yearly in this way because a slide once every day for 365 days is certainly worth $3 a week, which would make $150.

The point is that the exhibitors do not know where to stop, and the result is the throwing of advertising slides and advertising pictures that are going to get on the public's nerve. As a matter of fact, in Ann Arbor, Mich., students have started a campaign against two theatres showing these advertising slides and reels, and they hiss and howl whenever they are shown. In fact, the students have gone direct to the advertisers and asked them to stop.

The local newspapers have editorially commented on the fact that the public pays its money at the box-office for entertainment and it does not pay to look at advertising matter. They declare it is taking an unfair advantage of the public. Furthermore, they argue that the ten minutes or so given to advertising matter should be given to something with entertainment value. If they want to see advertising they can find it in the regular mediums, but that the theatre is not the place.

This is a big proposition, for it belittles the theatre and the whole moving picture industry.

If someone doesn't step in and start propaganda against it the theatres will be overrun with advertising slides, and the industry will get a black eye in the impression of politicians, legislators, church people, clubwomen, reformers, etc., and regular patrons.

Keep the screen for entertainment exclusively—no advertising of any kind.

Reviewers' Verdict Pleases Radiosoul Films Officials

THE Radiosoul Films, Inc., of 1400 Broadway, New York City, announces the ambitious intention of making Victor Seastrom a "prince of the screen" not only in Europe but also in America. The organization believes that the reception accorded Mr. Seastrom in "A Man There Was" by reviewers gives it more than half the battle and looks to the public to make the victory complete.

The organization anticipates striking success for this picturization of Henrik Ibsen's story and for the artistic future in this country of Mr. Seastrom, who both directed and played in the picture. The feature will be shown on the anniversary program of E. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre, New York City, which will also present Mack Sennett's "Down on the Farm," it is reported.

Sell Much Territory on Efanell's "Secret Formula"

THE intermingled atmosphere of business and aura of congeniality that prevades the New York headquarters of the Efanell Film Corporation, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, spells a hearty welcome to the state right buyer. To the energy and affability of Frederic L. Ferguson, general sales manager, is principally due this condition.

At the present time Ferguson is mapping out a progressive campaign for the spring season that bids fair to make the financial returns of the New York headquarters of the corporation big. This drive will not be confined to the daily and trade publications but will include other mediums.

"The Secret Formula" the latest release of the company has caused considerable comment among the independent state right buyers. Considerable territory already has been allotted to several exchangemen. Negotiations are now pending for additional releases.

Fairbanks Pleases Varied Audience.

"Douglas Fairbanks played to a packed house yesterday, and while the day we picked for the performance was nice overhead, few could come afoot, for most of my audience lives within a radius of twenty miles. Best of all, there was not a kick about the picture, which is an unusual thing, for it is hard to please every one in an audience consisting of wart hogs, swivel necks, long-line skinkers, gandy dancers, roughnecks and ladies, thirty miles from a railroad. While we don't want to wear Fairbanks' welcome out, we will return your contract on 'Mollycoddle' signed in a few days."

This was the letter of commendation Hiram Abrams, of United Artists, received from Whittemore & Pool, of the Lance Creek Theatre, Lusk Oil Fields, Wyoming, a small town where they are drilling for oil. The town hall is also the town theatre, in which there are placed about 200 "opery" chairs, lined up against the wall.

"When the Clouds Roll By" was the picture that broke the record of the house, and they have been playing all the "big four" pictures since.

Mayflower's "Atlantic" Shows New York Millionaires' Club

THE stately white marble Millionaires' Club, at Sixtieth street and Fifth avenue, New York, is practically thrown open to the public in the screen reproduction of Robert W. Chambers' novel, "Athalia," now fast nearing completion under the direction of Sidney A. Franklin, for Mayflower. Few visitors to New York fail to see this exclusive home of the men who make the wheels go round in railroad, banking, mining and manufacturing activities.

The spiritualistic theme on which Chambers based his thrilling novel is very timely now. Psychic phenomena recently received a flip through the arrival of Sir Oliver Lodge, who is now on a lecture tour here. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's activity in the promulgation of spiritualistic propaganda in the British Isles has given it a world-wide interest. Therefore, the theme worked upon in the screen adaptation of "Athalia" comes at a time that can be described as the psychological moment.

In the Mayflower presentation Miss Sylvia Breamer enacts the title role. This gifted young actress has made a rigorous preparation to properly portray the part of the heroine who is supposed to be actuated by supernatural powers. Conrad Nagle, whose screen work in "The Lion and the Mouse" brought him commendation, is the leading man.

Changes Title of Ince Picture.

The Thomas H. Ince special featuring Lloyd Hughes, announced previously under the title of "Wheelbarrow Webster," has been changed to "Homespun Folks." "Homespun Folks," an original narrative by Julien Josephson, directed by John Griffith Wray, presents Thomas H. Ince's latest "find" in a pleasing role in a comedy-drama that boasts of many novel incidents in the turbulent career of one young son of the soil.

Rowland Lee in Stellar Role.

Rowland Lee, one of the most popular of the younger principals appearing before the camera, who was recently placed under contract by Thomas H. Ince, will be cast in the featured role of a forthcoming Thomas H. Ince special. The title of the new special has not yet been announced.

Teaches Public How to Draw.

Larry Semon, Vitagraph's comedy star, has condescended to let the public in on the secret of his real art. During the filming last week of scenes for his newest comedy feature, "Schooldays," which is now nearly completed, Larry made a full demonstration of how cartoons may be drawn at high speed. The star used to be a cartoonist before he went into the film profession, and served on several of New York's greatest newspapers.

Simplex Breaks Production Records.

The week just past, according to E. M. Porter, general manager of the Simplex plant, saw all records broken for machine production since the building of the Simplex Projector was first started.

"It is nothing short of marvelous," said Mr. Porter, "to think that we should see a record-breaking week of machine production two months following a disastrous fire which deprived us of a five-story building. The loss of such a building, fully equipped with new machinery and tools, was naturally a severe blow, and came at a time when we were getting into our stride in the over-production program we had planned for."

George D. Baker Company Returns.

George D. Baker and his company, which includes Charles Hunt, assistant director; Hal Rosson, cameraman; Shatty Graham, Julia Swayne Gordon, Diana Allen, and Frederick Burton, have returned from New Orleans, where they went a week ago to take exteriors for "A Whiff of Heliotrope," a Richard Washburn Childs story, now being made for Cosmopolitan Productions. Director Baker brought back with him some wonderful scenes typical of Louisiana's rare natural beauty.

McLaughlin in New York.

Robert McLoughlin, author of "The House Without Children" and "Hidden Charms," made by Argus Enterprises and distributed by Robert W. Preist, is in New York selecting players for a new feature to be made by Bradley Features, Inc., directed by Samuel R. Bradley.

Jossey on Sales Trip.

Telegrams from J. S. Jossey, of the Arrow, who is making a tour of the centers in the West and Southwest, indicate the great success he is having in the disposal of territory. Mr. Jossey left St. Louis late last week for Kansas City, thence for Oklahoma City, Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta, Washington and Philadelphia.

Bacon's "Blind Love" Liked in Jersey.

Nathan Hirsh, of the Aywon Film Corporation, handling the distribution of Gerald F. Bacon's picture, "Blind Love," starring Lucy Cotton, is in receipt of a letter from the manager of the Fox Liberty Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., that "Blind Love" played to two of the best days he had during March.

Three Newest Christie Films Are Without a Marital Woe

THE Christie Film Company announces three new comedies which they state are without a single injured wife or jealous husband. One is "Ducks," with Earl Rodney and Helen Darling, directed by Scott Sidney from a scenario by Frank R. Conklin, and deals with the perils of duck hunting under certain conditions.

The second is "It Takes a Crook," featuring Dorothy Devore and Jimmie Harrison, directed by William Beaudine, presents the featured players in the guise of jewel thieves. The third is "Monkey Shines" with Eddie Barry, Earl Rodney and Helen Darling. Eddie Barry appears in the role of a college professor who is rejuvenated by the infusion of monkey glands. It was written by Scott Darling and directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Johnny Dooley in a Five-Reel Comedy.

Radin Pictures announces that Johnny Dooley, the popular comedian of the Ziegfeld Follies, will soon make his appearance in a five-part comedy now being directed by Jack Schultz. "Skinning Skinners" is the title. Prominent in the cast are Lillian Hall, Irma Harrison, and Maurine Powers. This is the first of a series of three to be made during this year.

Mayer to Make "Professional Wife."

Louis B. Mayer has in preparation for production "The Professional Wife," a story which when screened, is expected to prove a sensation.

While it is probable that the production will be finished this spring, it will not be released until some time in the fall.

Famous Players Buys Turnbull Story.

Hector Turnbull, critic, author, playwright, has signed a contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation disposing of the motion picture rights to a story which will be produced as a Paramount Arctcraft special. This announcement was made by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production.

Aywon Reports Bookings.

Through bookings made by Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, "The House Without Children," is being shown in a large number of houses in New York State. Aywon reports that this attraction has been doing exceptionally fine business.

B. A. Role will direct the production, which it is expected will be finished in four or five weeks.

Print of Shirley Mason's New Fox Film Reaches the East

IN spite of unsettled conditions in the railroad systems of the country, due to the "outlaw" strike, William Fox has received from his California studios a finished print of Shirley Mason's third release since she entered the Fox fold as a star. "Love's Harvest" is the film, the story being adapted from the novel, "His Harvest," by Pearl Doles Bell.

It is a simple comedy drama of the popular type, the leading role of which, had it been written especially for Miss Mason, could hardly have fitted her more becomingly in the eyes of either her director, Howard M. Mitchell, or the executives at the Fox studio in West Fifty-fifth street.

The smallest cast that has been seen in a William Fox picture for many a day supports Miss Mason. Her leading man is Raymond McKee, while Edwin Booth Tilton has a strong role. The second and only woman's part in the picture is played by Lillie Leslie.

The story has to do with the theatre and its people, with the glamor of the bright lights and the fundamental human instincts which lie hidden beneath the surface of paint and powder and the sham of Broadway.

Moss Circuit Books "Tillie" After Success at Broadway

GARDINER PICTURES, INC., handling the five-reel comedy reissue, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," for New York State, reports this picture has been booked for the entire B. S. Moss circuit of theatres. During the week of April 18 it was successfully presented at the Broadway Theatre, New York, and it is announced that the booking by B. S. Moss for this circuit was due to the record-breaking business on Sunday, when many were turned away, while business was even better on the following days.

Mr. Gardiner reports that this merely confirms the results obtained elsewhere, heavy bookings being reported from his Buffalo and Albany offices, as well as for many other dates in New York.

M. B. Schlesinger Reports Sales on Feature.

M. B. Schlesinger, who controls the rights to "Mother I Need You," featuring Enid Markey and Edward Coxes, has returned from a sales trip through the Middle West. He reports the sale of this production to a new company in Chicago for Illinois; to Minter United Amusement Co. for Michigan and to Schramm & Hoffman for Ohio.

Release Date for "A Woman's Business."

Jans Pictures, Inc., announce that May 3 has been set as the release date for its second production, "A Woman's Business," starring Olive Tell, with Edmund Lowe playing opposite. On the first release "Love Without Question," the company reports a heavy demand from exchangemen for additional prints, and that orders have already been placed for sixty-five.

Capitol Books "The Silver Horde."

Rex Beach's latest, and according to all reports his greatest production, will have its first showing in New York at the Capitol Theatre, where it has been booked for the week beginning May 9.

The success of the production at a number of pre-release presentations in large western theatres justifies the faith which the Goldwyn executives manifested in "The Silver Horde," by placing it in the class of specials. The picture is in seven reels that unfold a story of sustained dramatic intensity in an Alaskan setting.

Preacher Leaves the Pulpit to Become Screen Comedian

AN ordained clergyman, Rev. George Le-Roi Clark has quit preaching in order to become a comedian in motion pictures. He will be featured in a series of twenty-six two-reel comedies to be produced by Paragon Pictures Corporation announced as a company financed by prominent ranch owners of northern California.

The first two have been finished and work is progressing on the third. Fred Jefferson, formerly a Harold Lloyd director is directing Pastor Clarke. These comedies will be released through Romyne Superfilm Company, Los Angeles.

Garsson Explains the Distinction Between Fine Arts and Foundation

Murray W. Garsson, who is president both of Foundation Film Corporation and Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., announces that Foundation will handle industrial and educational films exclusively, while Fine Arts will handle features and regular run of short subjects. The industrial and educational branch will be under the supervision of Charles F. Schwerin. The new company was formed, says Mr. Garsson, on account of the growth of the business in connection with handling educational and industrial subjects, which is now sufficient to keep the entire staff busy. Fine Arts offices are now located at 130 West Forty-sixth street.

Record Heavy Bookings on Sweet Picture.

The success of "The Deadlier Sex," released by Pathe Exchange with a greater number of advance bookings than any other Pathe feature of the year, has placed Blanche Sweet in the front rank of women stars with a record of three successful productions in succession.

Announcement of the third picture, "The Deadlier Sex," had hardly been printed in trade paper advertisements before the greater percentage of those exhibitors who had played "Fighting Cressy," the preceding Sweet picture, inquired by wire and letter for details and dates. The result was greater than expectations, and on release date the picture had been booked for practically every city of any consequence in the country and had been contracted for by hundreds of exhibitors in smaller towns.

Last of First Lloyd Series Listed for Release May 2

WITH the announcement that "An Eastern Westerner," last of Harold Lloyd's first series of two-reel comedies for Pathe release, has been scheduled for issue on May 2, bookings on the second series have received a strong impetus.

In some sections of the country, the first series of Lloyds are only now receiving their first run engagements, owing to various local conditions. During the past week, the complete series of six was booked by the New Orleans exchange over the entire Saenger circuit, one of the biggest in the South.

The Ansonia in Butte, rated among the premier film houses of Montana, is also listed with the late purchasers of the Lloyds, along with the Casino, San Diego; Montauk, Passaic; Wigwam, Coakgate, Okla.; Rex, Racine, and the Strand, Clinton, Ia.

"An Eastern Westerner" will be featured by Dr. Riesenfeld and Jack Eaton, two of New York's foremost directors of screen theatres, and undoubtedly will receive wider exploitation than any other Lloyd. The box office value of a Lloyd attraction has taken on such a definite and strong value, that showmen cannot help but give him the fullest advertising and exploitation.

"Bullet Proof" Is Carey's Latest.

"Bullet Proof," the Universal picture to be released May 3, shows Harry Carey as an acolyte who forsakes the priesthood for the life of an outlaw to avenge the death of his father, murdered by a notorious gunman. A pretty love theme runs throughout the story, intermingled with virile western action. Lyn F. Reynolds was the director. Supporting Harry Carey are Kathleen O'Connor, J. Farrell McDonald, Robert McKim, Beatrice Burnham, Charles LeMoine, Fred Banble, Joe Harris and Captain Anderson.

"Bringing Up Father" Comedy.

It has been announced by the Pathe Exchange that the second of the International "Bringing Up Father" series of comedies, "Father's Close Shave," will be released on May 16. According to all reports, they found Johnny Ray the ideal Mr. Jiggs and Margaret Fitzroy the real Maggie. With Laura La Plante as Norah, the illustrious triumvirate of comedy stepped from the pages of the newspapers to the real life on the screen. Practically all the newspapers using the comic strip by George McManus were generous in their attention to the screen debut of the comedy character.

Palais Royal Scenes in Jans Special.

In filming the eight-reel Jans special, "Maddonnas and Men," Director B. A. Rolfe, to secure the correct atmosphere in the cabaret scenes, arranged for the use of the Palais Royal, New York, during two days. These scenes are said to be among the most important in the production, and it was thought better to use the real thing instead of building sets.

A Picture We Refuse to Joke About—and We're Not Married. It's Cecil B. De Mille's "Why Change Your Wife?" We couldn't even change a Russian ruble ourselves, but Thomas Meighan, Gloria Swanson and Bebe Daniels do much on the domestic exchange market in this Paramount-Artcraft production.

Gilmore and Raleigh, Prizma Cameramen, Back from Trip to the Sahara Desert

AFTER a four months' trip to the Sahara desert for Prizma Color Pictures, Otto C. Gilmore and Charles Raleigh, European producers of Prizma pictures, with offices in Paris, have returned to this country.

"The Arabs have not seen rain for nine years," said Mr. Gilmore, in recounting his experiences. "And when we told them they were going to have rain—well, we were apparently dubbed a couple of fanatics. But that night and the following night it poured in torrents. And after it was all over we were shown the gateway to the beauty and grandeur of the remotest sections of the Sahara desert."

From Marseilles Messrs. Gilmore and Raleigh took a steamer across the Mediterranean and within thirty hours landed in Algiers. From Algiers they traveled south 600 miles clear across the snow-capped Atlas Mountains. According to Mr. Gilmore, they (he and Mr. Raleigh) are the first Americans to penetrate that region. "Even Robert Hichens, the famous writer of 'The Garden of Allah,' whom we met," said Mr. Gilmore, "admitted that he had never seen what we filmed for Prizma Color Pictures."

Gets Pictures of Arabian Prayer.

The globe trotters first stopped at Laghouat, then traveled south to the Mozibitie country, around the sacred cities of Ghardia, back of Algiers, then through the Kabale Mountains to Constantine, south to Biskra, a famous winter resort for English people, to Touggourt, the jumping-off place for Sahara, and by caravan for twelve days to Eloued-Souf, the heart of the desert.

"Without exaggeration," said Mr. Gilmore, "we have secured for Prizma Color Pictures some of the most fascinating scenery, so unusual and original that it will be the delight of all audiences through its sheer beauty and grandeur of color."

"We also secured the exclusive pictures of an Arabian prayer, the Arabs' mode of living, making tea, scenes of market day, where oriental goods, spices, perfumes and sheep are bought and sold. Spahis, or what we call mounted policemen, performed some wonderful feats for the camera. Beautiful mosques, the sand dunes of the desert and countless other scenes of unusual interest were filmed."

Mr. Gilmore, who expects to leave for Paris some time next month, stated that his next tour for Prizma Color Pictures would probably be through Switzerland, Italy and several other countries.

Educational Secures Cream of Scenics Photographed Abroad by Rene Moreau

A NEW series of travel and scenic pictures produced by artists hitherto unknown to American audiences is announced by Educational Films Corporation. There will be about forty reels of these pictures, taken by Rene Moreau, a French photographer of nature, and these will probably be released bi-weekly, alternating with another of the Educational series.

Mr. Moreau has spent several years in visiting various portions of the world and in selecting the spots of most appeal, both from the standpoint of interest in the lands and their peoples and from that of artistic photographic effect. His entire work was brought to this country, his contract with Educational Films Corporation giving that company the privilege of selecting the material that it desired.

For several weeks the editing and titling forces have been engaged on these pictures and the assembling is now practically complete, so that the first of the pictures will be ready for theatres with the opening of Educational's new exchanges. Mr. Moreau is co-operating with the company's staff in preparing these pictures for exhibition. It is promised that they will represent the very cream of the cameraman's art, for any portion that does not come up to the 100 per cent. mark is being eliminated.

There is a wide variety of subjects and many lands covered in the series. Mr. Moreau has paid considerable attention to his native France, and his knowledge of the country has enabled him to bring to the screen many places and a variety of scenes that have never confronted the visiting cameraman from this country. These French pictures and others taken in countries that participated in the great war have no bearing on fighting or the effects of war. Battle scenes, ruins and scenes of suffering have been carefully avoided.

Switzerland has supplied some unusual material and Mr. Moreau has gathered much material that has been surprising to Alpine travelers who have seen the pictures in private showings. Spain, Portugal, Holland, Belgium and Greece supply the remainder of the European views. Egypt, Soudan and African deserts are said to supply some of the most striking of the pictures and unusual photography, especially those recording Algerian types. Turkey, especially the Caucasus, Syria and Palestine, India, Ceylon, Indo-China and Malasia are some of the other lands included.

Montagne Finishes "The Kid."

Edward J. Montagne, of the Selznick scenario staff, has just completed an original comedy-drama, called "The Kid." The story, which calls for an all-star cast, is unique, since the action is continuous from the iris in to the close of the picture. Mr. Montagne, who has made over a hundred adaptations, and written close to 300 original stories for the screen, has at present four of his scripts in production at the Selznick studios.

Ohio Censors Pass Fight Films.

Motion pictures of the Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey fight at Toledo July 4 last have been approved by the Ohio Board of Censors. Shortly after the fight took place the board declined to allow the pictures to be exhibited in Ohio on the ground they were too greswome.

Selznick Buys Rights to "Red Foam."

The screen rights to "Red Foam," a story that is said to have created widespread discussion when it was published in the Saturday Evening Post, have been purchased by Myron Selznick. "Red Foam" was written by William H. Hanby, whose fiction has appeared in all the leading magazines.

Morey Heads Boston Exchange.

M. E. Morey, known as one of the most capable executives and as one of the best salesmen in the motion picture industry in New England, has just been appointed manager of the Boston exchange for Robertson-Cole to succeed F. F. Kimmerle, resigned.

Selznick Chooses George to Direct "Wilderness Fear"

BURTON GEORGE, director for Selznick enterprises; Mrs. De Wolf Hopper, Charles Gerard and many other players who will appear in the forthcoming Selznick production, "The Wilderness Fear," which Mr. George will produce for Selznick, recently started on the first lap of a journey that will terminate in Northwestern Canada.

"The Wilderness Fear," written by Michael J. Phillips, appeared as a serial in a leading magazine. Myron Selznick purchased the screen rights and engaged Edward Montague to turn the story into continuity form.

Fully one-half of the story is said to call for exterior scenes of an unusual character. It was decided to take them at Banff, Canada; in and around the Canadian Rockies, on Lake Louise and in International Park. Because of the widespread area to be covered, orders were telegraphed ahead to engage two of the best guides to pilot the company.

First National Officially Opens Its 1920 Convention

OFFICIALLY opening the First National Exhibitors' Circuit convention in 1920, the board of directors for First National convened in New York City on April 19 in order to meet the requirements of the state's corporate laws. First National's New York State charter requires that its sessions be opened in this state. The meeting was adjourned to Chicago, at the Congress Hotel, Monday morning, April 26.

The following were in attendance at the opening session: A. H. Blank, Des Moines; J. G. Von Herberg, Seattle; Fred Dahnken, San Francisco; Col. Fred Levy, Louisville; M. H. Finkelstein, Minneapolis; H. O. Schwalbe, Philadelphia; J. D. Williams, New York, and E. B. Johnson, San Francisco.

Albert Kaufman to Have Three Producing Units; Negotiates for Theatre on Broadway

GATHERING headway. That's the news over the film ticker concerning the Albert Kaufman-Marshall Neilan co-operative alliance, which was formed following Mr. Kaufman's severance of connections with Famous Players-Lasky.

When interviewed by a representative of Moving Picture World at the Marshall Neilan office in the Capitol Theatre building, Mr. Kaufman stated that his plans to engage a big Broadway theatre for special presentation of the Dorothy Phillips-Allen Holubar and Agnes Ayres Productions have reached such a degree of satisfaction that he is going back to Los Angeles this week.

Three Producing Units.

Work will be started at the Neilan studio on the first Phillips-Holubar picture as soon as Mr. Kaufman reaches the coast. It will be in the big "special" class, written by Olga Scholl, creator of "The Heart of Humanity" and "The Right to Happiness." The combination of star-director-author, Mr. Kaufman states, is sufficient to guarantee a production of the "big" order and a picture that will get Kaufman Productions off to a good start.

Within a short time Mr. Kaufman will announce the name of the director whom he has secured for Agnes Ayres. The Agnes Ayres Productions will constitute the second unit in the Kaufman organization, and Mr. Kaufman is confident that in Miss Ayres he has picked a star whom exhibitors will immediately recognize as a box-office power. She is at present playing the leading part in Marshall Neilan's third independent picture.

It is Mr. Kaufman's intention to sign up a third director, thus heading a producing organization of three units, each turning out four big pictures a year. Anthony Paul Kelley is writing a picture drama for production by Mr. Kaufman.

The releasing plans of Kaufman Productions will not be announced until the completion of the first Phillips-Holubar picture.

New York Exhibitors Will Send 45 Representatives to National Convention

LASTING for over four hours, a meeting was held in Albany, N. Y., on April 20 of the executive committee of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. The afternoon session was held at the Hotel Ten Eyck. A report was made on the recent state convention at Utica and much time was spent in discussing pending legislation of interest to the industry. Announcement was made that New York State would send forty-five delegates to the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatres Owners of America in June, this being one from each congressional district.

Among those present were Walter Hayes, Joseph Schuchert, Buffalo; W. Callihan, Irving Salyerds, Rochester; Henry Lux, Fred Duffy, Utica; William Dillon, Ithaca; Emmet Cornell, Syracuse; Edward Clapp, Amsterdam; J. M. Kallet, Oneida; David Cohen, Binghamton; George Jackson, Elmira; Louis Bittner, Cohoes; W. Bernstein, George Roberts, Albany; C. A. McCarthy, Hoosick Falls; C. L. O'Reilly, S. I. Berman, B. Grobb, Lawrence Balognino, H. Rachmiel, J. Stein and A. Mangini, New York City, together with Max Spiegel and Moe Mark, representing the Strand interests throughout the state.

In discussing motion picture bills which have been introduced in the legislature this year, it was stated that Assemblyman Hunter's bill seeking to bring about a repeal of the present law which allows Sunday opening, with the consent of the respective municipalities, is buried in committee and need not be feared. The Flynn bill, which has to do with operators and necessitates an extra man in the booth, is in rules committee, where it will probably remain.

Stars to Attend Eastern Studios Ball To Be Held April 28 at New York Hotel

WITH several prominent screen stars present, the Eastern Studios Ball, to be held April 28 at the Hotel Commodore for the benefit of a welfare fund for the studio employees of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is expected to be one of the biggest affairs of its kind ever held in New York City. Nearly 1,000 tickets already have been sold, and the sale of boxes to stars and prominent motion picture men has swelled the receipts by several thousands of dollars.

In addition to the dancing the committee in charge has arranged several novel features. Emma Trentini, the famous light opera singer, will sing selections from favorite successes, and several artists from the Keith vaudeville circuit will take part in a program of vaudeville which will precede the dancing. To insure the necessary pep in the dance music, two bands of twenty pieces each have been engaged.

Two features of the ball which are attracting a great deal of attention are an ankle contest and a beauty contest.

The souvenir of the evening will be a program, the front cover of which will be done in colors by one of the members of the art and decoration department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's eastern studios. Photographs of the stars done in sepia, with a perforated edge so that they may be removed for decorative purposes, will be part of the program.

The new $2,000,000 studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as Long Island City is rapidly nearing completion and is expected to be ready for occupancy not later than July 1.

Abe Stern Succeeds Powers as Treasurer of Universal

ABE STERN, secretary and treasurer of the L-KO Company, producers of Rainbow, Century and other comedies, has been appointed treasurer of Universal to succeed P. A. Powers, who recently sold out his Universal holdings and resigned.

Although Mr. Stern has never held an official position with Universal, he has been closely allied with the big film company ever since its organization. Practically all of the L-KO output is released through Universal.

Mr. Stern already has assumed his duties as treasurer of the larger company. He will continue to hold his previous posi-

Interesting Male Leads in Namara Film.

Albert L. Barrett and Rudolph Valentino head the male cast in support of Marguerite Namara, starring in American Cinema Corporation's production of "Stolen Moments." Mr. Barrett will be remembered for his recent fine work in the Dorothy Dalton's Paramount-Arterraft picture, "Half an Hour." He has just finished the male lead in the Elsie Ferguson production for Famous Players, "Lady Rose's Daughter." Mr. Valentino will be remembered for his virile work in leading roles opposite Mae Murray, Dorothy Phillips, Dorothy Gish, Katherine MacDonald and Clara Kimball Young.

Ann May to Stay in Pictures.

Ann May, the wealthy young society girl who last year, while spending the winter in Los Angeles, decided to enter picture work for a lark, is now in the business to stay. Charles Ray recalled her from New York to act as leading woman in his initial First National production. Miss May has taken up her abode at the studio club in Hollywood. She will be seen shortly in "Paris Green," an Ince production, with Charles Ray.

The Stern brothers are brothers-in-law of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, whose wife was a Miss Stern.

Bray Pictures Corporation Opens New Chicago Studio

DUE to the rapid expansion of its industrial division, the Bray Pictures Corporation has been obliged to seek larger quarters for the western studios. The new location is at 7514 N. Ashland avenue, Chicago, where ample space has been secured in a new and modern building.

The new studio, which is in charge of E. Dean Parmelee, vice-president of the corporation, has a large camera room, film developing and printing room, large and well-lighted draftsman room, offices, and a thoroughly equipped projection room.

Jack Norling will have charge of the animated technical department. The camera room, developing and printing departments, and the taking of actual photography will be under the direction of Walter Schaefer. The Bray studio also maintains a large force of expert draftsmen.

The sales offices will continue at their present location, 208 South LaSalle street, Chicago.

LABOR PLANS TO USE FILMS FOR PROPAGANDA PURPOSES

Trade unionists will conduct labor propaganda through the medium of the motion picture. A national movement in this direction was indorsed on April 20 at the opening session of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation in Hagerstown, Md.

John W. Slayton, of Pittsburgh, says that the labor people already have four large motion picture concerns in the country bidding for scenarios depicting trade unionists in a favorable light. He is the author of one such play.

The First Big Theatre Film Show and Some Lessons To Be Learned from It

By EDWARD T. DUSTIN, Manager, Pathe Branch, St. Louis

THE first motion picture show staged in a large theatre which had previously been devoted to the legitimate drama and to vaudeville was opened in Louisville, Ky., in February, 1908, by Anderson & Ziegler and I was the first manager. Max Anderson is now dead and Henry M. Ziegler is in the oil business in New York City. The idea they initiated on that Sunday has spread throughout the world and many millionaires have been made on it. The story of our first day may be interesting and may carry a few lessons.

Our first show consisted of three one-reelers, two dramas and a comedy. An illustrated song finished the program. A piano furnished the music and a corps of what we called "effects men" worked back stage. Our "effects men" produced all sorts of sounds to synchronize with the pictures. Wind, waterfalls and the call of birds were all produced by the busy "effects" at the total cost of $80 a week.

Made $68,500 in Eighteen Months.

The dramas were "A Yankee Tar's Fight for Love," a Selig; "Francesca Da Rimini," with Paul Panzer and Florence Turner, a Vitagraph, and the comedy was "The Lively Barrels," a Pathe. We rented our projection machines through Spoor's Kine-drome Service for $15 a week for two machines and took our film service through Spoor, who had the General Film Company franchise. Our show cost $75 for the week. Our total cost of running the house for the first week was about $700. Our receipts the first day amounted to $460. The net profits in eighteen months were $68,500.

I lectured with all the pictures, supplementing the titles with descriptive explanations, and this was a feature of the show which the audience strongly insisted on having. Women and children were the first real enthusiasts, and I believe they still are the backbone of the motion picture public. I believe the secret of the success of motion pictures lies in the fact that women and children took up pictures. Men will always follow where the family leads. This applies with greater emphasis today.

Women and Children Business Essential.

The women and children must never be lost sight of by those who lead in the industry. Kill off that clientele and you will destroy the business. Play for the business of the women and children. And it might be well to remember that $1 and $2 admissions will kill the women and children business quicker than anything else. Every woman has a deep strain of economy.

In those early days most showmen predicted that the 5 and 10 cent, or even the 25 cent motion picture show was a fad. They were all certain it would die out. That legitimate attractions or vaudeville would outlast the movies was the general belief. We all know how wrong they were, and many of them know it to their cost.

I was confident of the enduring qualities of the business and the success of the five and ten cent stores, the dollar watch and other things of that character convinced me. I firmly believe that if prices had been made top-heavy in those early days the industry would not have developed. It would have become a fad of the few rather than the recreation of the many. To my way of thinking that danger is still with us, for the motion picture is a success today because it is a family institution.

When the price becomes so high that it is no longer possible for the husband and wife to go to the theatre with their one, two or three children, when going to the motion picture theatres becomes an event and ceases to be a habit, the whole industry is in danger. I believe the mass of exhibitors understand this thoroughly and will work to keep the motion picture in its place as the great American entertainment. This is one of the lessons we must learn from the phenomenal development of the business.

New Montreal Circuit Gets Hallmark and Pioneer Films

THAT the newly organized Amalgamated Exhibitors' Circuit, Ltd., of Montreal, consisting of a considerable number of independent exhibitors in the Province of Quebec, is going after business generally is indicated by the fact that a representative of the circuit called upon Ottawa theatres during Easter week to discuss booking arrangements. This representative was Jimmy Finch, a veteran exchange salesman of Montreal.

The Amalgamated has secured the Canadian distributing rights for Hallmark and Pioneer releases and a number of independent specials. The Hallmark pictures will be released at the rate of one each week and the Pioneer productions will come twice a month.

The general manager of the Amalgamated is Phil Hazza, of Montreal, who was with the Canadian Universal for a number of years. Mr. Hazza was instrumental in the organization of the new circuit.

Cassard Speaks to Operators.

S. S. Cassard, sales manager of the Nicholas Power Company, has been compelled to break his trip south at Washington and return to New York. After attending to a number of important matters requiring his personal attention, Mr. Cassard will continue his journey. Cassard addressed the moving picture operators at their headquarters in the Gayety Theatre Building on Monday night, April 19. Mr. Cassard spoke upon the subject of moving picture projection and his remarks proved of great interest.

Mr. Cassard is a native of Baltimore and as usual his many friends in that city turned out in force to make things pleasant for him. Cassard also spoke in Washington on Saturday night, April 17, before the local, and this meeting is reported as "one of the largest attendance in the history of the Washington union."

Henle Building New Theatre.

E. M. Henle, owner of the Palace Theatre, Muscatine, Ia., the largest in the town, was seen last week. Mr. Henle has the plans drawn for a new theatre that will seat 1,500 persons. This house will be in a modern apartment building and business block, on a site of 140 by 120 feet, the entire structure to cost about $250,000. He expects to open the new theatre in October, 1921.

Author of "Trailed by Three"

Praises Pathe Interpretation

EVIDENCE of the earnestness with which film producers are working to win the confidence of authors by having them co-operate with the director in filming their works and showing them that there is no foundation for the charge, in the past frequently made by the writers of novels and plays, that uncalled for liberties are taken with the text of a story to make "sensational" dramatic situations, may be found in a statement recently made by Charles Turner Dazey, who, in discussing the production by Arthur F. Beck of his serial story, "Trailed by Three," expressed himself as being entirely satisfied with the way in which it had been treated.

It is said that during the filming of "Trailed by Three," a fifteen-episode play co-starring Stuart Holmes and Frankie Mann which Pathe released April 3, the producer and Director Perry Vekroff frequently consulted Mr. Dazey concerning details of his production.

In the publicity matter sent out by Pathe there have been frequent references to Mr. Dazey's statement concerning the finished production of his work, in which the author is quoted as saying: "When I saw the production on the screen it appeared to me as a faithful visualization of the picture I had in mind when devising the plot and developing the theme. My gratification goes even further than this, for ever since my first connection with motion pictures I have known of the reputation which Pathe bears as the house of serial plays, and I am delighted to have a story of mine sponsored by Pathe."

Burston Distributed Casts to Promote Baggot Serial

UTILIZING a store window decorative idea, Louis Burston is distributing to those displaying his new King Baggot serial, "The Hawk's Trail," a life-sized plaster paris cast of a hawk, painted black. From the beak of the bird ribbon streamers extend, the idea being to hang the cast in the center of the lobby, with the streamers running off to the side walls, and directing attention to stills or other advertising matter placed at those points. Already very favorable reports are being received and the idea is worth noting, for it can be adapted to other films.

Riviera Installs Typhoon.

The Riviera, Chicago's foremost theatre, has just given a contract to the Typhoon Company to install Typhoons to cool the outer lobby of that theatre. Henceforth there will be no impatient crowds waiting for the second show during the hot summer days. Other new theatres which will install Typhoons are the Village Theatre, Wilmette, Ill., Burke Theatre, Kenosha, Wis., Apollo Theatre, Peoria, Ill., and the new Rialto Theatre now being built in Vincennes, Ind.

Conrad Nagle to Play Leads in Paramount-Artcraft Films

ACCORDING to announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production, Conrad Nagle, brilliant young stage star and screen leading man, has just been engaged on a long-term contract to play leading roles in Paramount-Artcraft pictures produced at the Lasky studio.

Nagle will begin work early next month, but it has not been decided as to what will be his first role under the new contract.

By arrangement with William A. Brady in the latter part of 1919, Mr. Nagle was engaged by Famous Players-Lasky to go west and play the role of Stephen Seward in "The Fighting Chance," from Robert W. Chambers' novel, which was finished some time ago at the Lasky studio.

His first work before the camera was in "Little Women," after the completion of which he returned to the stage in support of Alice Brady in "Forever After." He is 24 years of age and has been married only a few months, his trip to California being in the nature of a honeymoon.

After finishing "The Fighting Chance" Mr. Nagle played a part in a Mayflower production. "And now," he comments, "it looks as if I am going to stay in California for some time."

Cassidy's Purchase Merges Theatres in Princeton, Ind.

A MERGER of the moving picture interests at Princeton, Ind., is announced. The Noble, Grand and Empress theatres have been purchased by A. J. Cassidy and will be operated under the management of Clyde Noble, formerly proprietor of the Noble Theatre.

The proprietors of the other two theatres affected by the deal are Joseph Adcock, of the Grand, and F. W. Darbo, of the Empress. It is the plan of the new management to open the Empress only on Saturday nights.

Princeton exhibitors have believed that the three house proposition was too much for a city of that size. They say the keen competition has made the operation of the theatres more expensive for all concerned than the size of the city and the number of theatregoers warrant.

The new management has announced that there will be no cheapening of the program and no further increase in admission prices.

Gets Metro for South America.

Announcement has just been made by Jacobo Glucksmann, manager of the New York buying office of Max Glucksmann, Buenos Aires, that he has just signed for his concern, a contract granting him the exclusive rights in Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Brazil, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela and the Guianas on all the 1920 productions of the Metro Pictures Corporation. This covers all the Screen Classic films as well as all the specials to be made by Nazimova during the current year.

Ina Claire and Francesca Bertini Are Among Big Stars Enrolled by Metro Pictures

PART of the new and general scheme of expansion that ushers in the fifth anniversary of Metro Pictures Corporation is embodied in the recent acquisition of several new stars. These include Ina Claire, now playing in the David Belasco stage success, "The Gold Diggers," and Francesca Bertini, the Italian actress. Loew-Metro also announced a few weeks ago that it is planning to add another star to its galaxy in the person of a distinguished stage actor who hitherto has never appeared in motion pictures.

The identity of this male star Metro has not yet divulged, but it is promised that full particulars will be given out as soon as arrangements are concluded.

Ina Claire will be seen in a Loew-Metro picturization of "Polly with a Past," by George Middleton and Guy Bolton. Miss tured dancer in Ed Wynn's New Carnival, now playing at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, for a big special banquet scene in an Alice Joyce production now being filmed. "Four of the best-looking girls in New York" also happened to be one of the orders for this scene, and these were also secured from the same attraction at the New Amsterdam. The four girls are Ann Greenway, Carol Young, Dada Winlock and Laura Dale.

Pathe's Cincinnati Head Tells of Big Business

REPORTING to the Pathe home office and also spending a week in conference with executives in the organization, Stanley C. Jacques, the Pathe manager at Cincinnati, reports that Pathe features are getting 100 per cent. results in his territory with first run exhibitors. On his visit to the executive offices he brought with him many complimentary messages from the leading showmen of the territory and assurances of their regard for the policies and productions of Pathe.

"Ike Libson is using all Pathe features in his first-run houses in Cincinnati," Mr. Jacques said, "and he told me to say for him that they were growing better with each new release."

"We have had the same pleasant experience with Joe Stuerle, of the Walnut Theatre at Louisville. He is using more features from Pathe than from any other individual source and he is exceedingly enthusiastic about them. Gil Burrows is using all Pathe features first-run at his great new theatre in Dayton, Ohio, the Auditorium."

"Presentation of pictures has leaped ahead throughout Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky. The exhibitor has been doing his level best to hold the American public to the motion picture as the great American diversion, and with the proper support in the way of pictures they are sure of the future."

Sergeant Simone Wins Discharge.

Sergeant Peter C. E. Simone, late of Company L, 101st Infantry, Yankee Division, has just returned to his home in Albany, N. Y., armed with a certificate of honorable discharge. The sergeant, who, prior to his receiving most serious wounds in the great Chateau Thierry drive, had been gassed twice and wounded once, will just take things easy for a few weeks and then, with his father, Charles Simone, arrange for a major operation to be performed upon him at one of New York's leading hospitals. Expert surgeons declare this operation (the ninth) is of vital importance to the physical well-being of the young man. The right leg has to be reset in order to relieve a certain painful and dangerous pressure on the spine.

The operation will keep the sergeant in bed for about six months.

A. M. P. A. Has Midnight Matinee.

In honor of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association gathered in convention in New York City last week, a big "midnight matinee" was held Wednesday night, April 21, at the Rivoli Theatre by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., of which Paul Gulick is president. The program was a great success. A number of films were shown which have not appeared before on the screen, among them David Mark Griffith's forthcoming feature, "Black Beach." Mr. Griffith spoke on censorship. Many notables, including film folk, attended.

Claire blazed into stardom after appearing in "Polly with a Past" under David Belasco's management. "Polly with a Past" will be produced by Metro in the East.

The arrangement whereby Bertini's productions were procured by Metro for distribution was made by Richard A. Rowland, the Metro president, during his visit abroad some months ago. About two-score of Bertini's pictures were obtained for release in this country to acquaint American picture-goers with the actress who is the present reigning sensation of Europe.

Says Public Will Not Tolerate Any But the Best Kind of Picture Entertainment

By Richard A. Rowland, President of Metro Pictures Corporation

WHETHER or not the current comment is true that the American public no longer will eat any but the very best cuts of meat or wear stockings woven from any material but silk, it is certain that none but the first quality of picture entertainment is now countenanced.

No use to hark back to the pioneer days when one-reelers were slapped together on the roof of a vacant house in New York, on a stage which revolved with the sun. Let us look back for a brief instant at the development of the motion picture within the last two or three years. Scenario writers were paid high salaries, money was lavished on production, companies were fairly straining in their efforts to outbid one another for stars.

But there was a flaw in this system which a few progressive companies—and Metro among them, I am happy to say—saw, and that was the stereotyped story upon which the photoplays were founded. Picture audiences knew by heart all the conventional twists of plot, all the threadbare situations. Given a glimpse of the first reel, any member of the audience could have worked out the story from memory of many similar ones witnessed before.

Short Novels Proved Solution.

The solution was the purchasing for adaptation to the screen of plays and novels and stories of shorter length that had proven popular. Dramas and comedies that had withstood the test of Broadway; novels that publishers had deemed worthy of investment; stores that had by their sheet merit passed the exacting judgment of magazine editors—these the foresighted maker of pictures chose as the backbone of his business. Metro was fortunate in starting early its drive for the material for "fewer and better" pictures.

The mere purchase of the best available photodramatic material is not the entire story of "fewer and better" pictures. It is only the first chapter; and that, as every reader knows, may often prove full of promise and interest and then fall down lamentably in later and carelessly done parts of the book.

The basic principle which is the under-structure of this policy is that hurry and artistic work are incompatible. One cannot rush a picture through, improvising on the spur of the moment, substituting here and there without thorough planning, doing the next best thing, and expect the finished product to be genuinely meritorious. Robert Louis Stevenson once said, in speaking of the art of writing, that if one cannot spend an entire afternoon in turning a phrase so that finally it will express his thought, that man should not go in for literature.

Changes Is Result of Thought.

In our art we feel likewise. The object is to produce pictures that will express with all the dramatic force and skill possible the story we have selected for the Metro screen. When changes in production are necessary, they must not be hasty makeshifts, but the result of fully matured thought.

The Metro plans are big enough for machine-like production; there is perhaps an excess of equipment and space, though we have thought it wisest to err on the side of oversupply of facilities rather than on the side of scantness. But we do not believe in mere footage as a measure of production.

Hence, with the time necessary to do good work, there necessarily must be fewer pictures; and, logically enough, we believe those fewer will be better for the painstaking care. We couldn't have the "better," without making "fewer."

Theatre Business Impresses Lichtman; Calls Sid Grauman "Greatest Showman"

RETURNING to New York from a tour, during which he visited nearly every city of importance in the United States, Al Lichtman, general manager of the department of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has summarized the impressions of his trip as follows:

"My most notable impression during this trip was the tremendous volume of business that is being done by the motion picture theatres. All are serving a greater number of people than ever before. It is undoubtedly true that the quality of motion pictures is improving and the theatres in which they are presented are more comfortable, more beautiful and more pleasing in every way than they were even two or three years ago.

"Motion picture theatres all over the country are showing a decided tendency to longer runs of pictures that meet with the approval of their patrons. The exhibitors in the big towns are rapidly getting away from the old tendency to discontinue a big and drawing production at the end of three days or four days or a week, just because it has been the policy of these houses to make weekly or semi-weekly changes.

Longer Runs Help Exploitation.

"There is a noticeable improvement in showmanship everywhere I have been. This has been brought about to a certain extent by the increased runs the productions are getting. The longer run is helping the exhibitor to a better standard of pictures, and it is not permitting the poor or mediocre production to crowd out the production that finds the approval of the public.

"The field force of exploitation men sent out by this organization to carry the message of applied showmanship to the small theatre has won the unstinted praise of exhibitors everywhere. The small town exhibitors are especially pleased with the work of these live-wire showmen and have told me so in many places.

"Sid Grauman at Los Angeles is probably the greatest showman in the whole world. His theatre and his methods of presentation are the talk of the whole United States. I would certainly recommend that every exhibitor who is conscientiously trying to improve the conditions in his own theatre pay a visit to Los Angeles and study the methods of Sid Grauman.

Mr. Grauman Glad to Aid Exhibitors.

"This idea is suggested because of the extreme courtesy and friendliness that Mr. Grauman extends to every visiting exhibitor. He has no secrets and he is glad to give his time and his service to the showman who is really in earnest. Many showmen have called on him and he has never turned them down.

"Throughout all the exchanges of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation I have found a splendid spirit of loyalty and sincerity of purpose to carry out all the policies of this organization to the letter. The spirit of service to the exhibitor dominates every exchange and seems to extend from the highest man in the field to the latest addition in the humblest capacity in the smallest exchange. There is no more loyal and faithful business organization in existence than our own. This was deeply impressed upon my mind by my visits to practically every exchange in the country."

Two Mayflowers in Full Bloom.

According to telegraphic advices from exhibitors, "The Luck of the Irish" and "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" presented by Mayflower, are going with a thump. P. G. Theopholis, managing director of the Lorain Opera House, Cleveland, wired Mayflower: "House could not begin to hold crowds that came to see 'Luck of the Irish.' It was capacity on afternoon and night. Largest business we have ever done. Everybody more than pleased. Applause frequent. We want more pictures like this."

Harry Koch, manager of the Ohio Theatre, Indianapolis, wired: "'Mystery of the Yellow Room' opened here today to capacity. People waited hours in rain to secure admission. Everybody pleased."

Exhibitors' League Elects Officers.

The Miami Valley Exhibitors' League at its annual meeting elected the following officers: President, Benjamin J. Wheeler; vice-president, Ollie J. Schaefer; secretary, Dr. Alexander; treasurer, Bert Fialo; trustee, Theodore Lindsey. Executive board—Paul Banker, Val Raberg, Julius Leopold, George Richter and Robert J. Hrisch.

Corinne Griffith's Company Leaves for the Sunny South

CORINNE GRIFFITH, Vitagraph star, heading a company of 150 leading and extra players, left New York several days ago for Savannah Ga., to make the exterior scenes for her new feature, "Gumshoes 4-B." It had been planned originally to send the company to New Preston, Conn., but on two days' notice the arrangements were changed owing to the tardiness of spring in the North. Foliage and flowers were necessary and the South offered at this time the only suitable locations.

The company that went south is regarded as one of the largest that ever have been dispatched on a similar mission. It is under the direction of Edward H. Griffith, assisted by Jack Evans. Mr. Griffith recently directed Miss Griffith in her feature "The Garter Girl," which will be released soon.

After the completion of this feature, Miss Griffith and another equally imposing company will be taken to St. Augustine, Fla., on another picture. This will be taken from the story of "The Whisper Market," which was written by W. F. Scutt and published recently in a national magazine.

Officials See "Splendid Hazard."

The film adaptation of Harold MacGrath's widely read novel, "The Splendid Hazard," produced and directed by Allan Dwan at the Brunton studios at Los Angeles, has been privately shown to executives of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation.

Louis F. Gottschalk, orchestral arranger, has prepared a special operatic score from the masters of music which gives an added dignity to the production. It was this, coupled with the theme, that impelled those who saw the private view to describe "The Splendid Hazard" as a "motion picture grand opera."

Capellani Starts First Cosmopolitan.

Albert Capellani has started on his first Cosmopolitan Production, "The Inside of the Cup," by Winston Churchill. The cast consists of W. P. Carleton, David Torrence, Jack Bohn, Richard Carlisle, Margaret Clayton and Margaret Seddons. Dan Pennell is Capellani's assistant, and Al Ziegler is the cameraman. The big interior scenes are being taken at the Cosmopolitan studio in 127th street and Second avenue, while the lesser interiors are filmed at the studio in West 125th street.

Lewis J. Selznick Announces Program of 537 Subjects Before April, 1921

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, president of Selznick Enterprises, states that between now and this time next year 537 subjects will be produced and distributed by the various Selznick organizations.

The announcement of 537 subjects released means that the field will be so covered that an exhibitor can book his entire program—from scenic to serial—from this one source. Mr. Selznick announces that 116 star series pictures and specials, 416 short reel subjects, four Republic serials and a possible Republic star series are on his program for the next twelve months.

These enterprises include Selznick Pictures, Select Pictures Corporation, National Picture Theatres, Inc., and the Republic Distributing Corporation. The subjects to be released, besides the star serials and specials, are the Kaufman Weeklies, Kinograms, Selznick News, Prizmas and comedies.

Forty in Star Series.

In the division of subjects Myron Selznick, who, as in the past, will be in general charge of production, announces that there will be forty of the star series. These will include, besides the Olive Thomas, Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O'Brien and Owen Moore production, pictures by the new stars, William Faversham and Louis Huff, and Hobart Henley productions. In all probability there will also be several productions by from two to four more new stars whose names will be announced later. These will all be released by Select.

Then there will be twelve Selznick specials to be released through Select, which includes the Ralph Ince productions and the all-star and featured player pictures along the lines of "The Woman God Sent" and "The Valley of Doubt." Most of the stories in this series will be the work of prominent authors which has appeared either in book or play form.

Twelve Select Specials.

Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager, also announces that twelve Select specials will be released, besides twenty-six pictures produced by National Picture Theatres, Inc. Fifty-two Herbert Kaufman Weeklies, which are now ready, are also to be released through Select.

Republic's program has also been enlarged and elaborated. Twenty-six specials are to be released through this company. In the search for material President Busch has reached out and gathered in several producing companies to make pictures during the year. Among them are the Lawrence Weber and the Lloyd Carlton productions. An early release by Republic will be "The Sowing of Alderson Cree," a mountain story starring Bernard Durning.

To Release Four Serials.

Republic will also release 104 Kinogram news weeklies during the year and fifty-two one-reel comedies, the nature of which will be announced later. In addition there will be four serials released. The first of the serials, "The Whirlwind," starring Charles Hutchison, is completed and the first episodes are ready for release. The second serial is now being made and negotiations are pending for the other two.

The Selznick News Reel, which sprang into instant favor with its initial release on Easter Sunday, will be distributed through Select and 104 reels will be turned out during the year. There will also be 104 Prizma releases through Select. The plans to make short reel and five-reel dramatic subjects by the Prizma color process are well under way. A new series of twelve special productions will soon be ready for release, and by next August or September a series of Prizma five-reel dramatic productions will be announced for 1921.

Loew Houses to Give "Sex" Seventy-Seven Days' Showing

NICHOLAS SCHENCK and Fred Mitchell have signed contracts for the complete Marcus Loew metropolitan circuit booking of seventy-seven days for J. Parker Read, Jr.'s Louise Glaum production, "Sex." This contract was made with Marx S. Nathan, New York exchange manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, by Mr. Schenck in person and foretells a heavy advertising campaign to be made by the Loew theatres under their aggressive publicity manager, N. T. Granlund.

The Loew booking calls for twelve printings of "Sex" and the completion of the booking across the entire circuit in two weeks. The Loew officials were pleased with Miss Glaum's story and with its quality of production.

Cosmopolitan Gets Boyle Stories.

Cosmopolitan Productions, through its vice-president and general manager, Henry M. Hobart, has added another famous writer to its staff of literary luminaries. Jack Boyle, whose crook stories have been widely read has signed a contract whereby all his stories appearing in Hearst's, Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping and Harper's Bazaar magazines will, for an indefinite period, be subject to first call for motion picture purposes by Cosmopolitan Productions. Frank Borzage will direct the first of Boyle's stories.

English Offering of "Broken Blossoms" Draws Great Crowds to Alhambra, London

THE Film Booking Offices (1919) Ltd., the well known British renting organization, has just completed its presentation of D. W. Griffith's masterpiece, "Broken Blossoms," to English people.

Before an audience that packed the vast Alhambra Theatre, London, from floor to ceiling, Griffith's photoplay was screened with, for the first time in Britain, a specially staged prologue and epilogue. The Alhambra is one of London's premier theatres and save for one or two rare occasions, it has sedulously adhered to its legitimate program, its last success being the Russian Ballet Season.

When the gong in the Buddhist temple behind the curtain struck three sonorous notes, the curtains slowly rose to reveal a Buddhist interior, with a dim green light illuminating the face of the Buddha on the altar. With measured steps two Buddhist devotees having made obeisance, remained in an attitude of reverence before the altar steps. The recumbent figure of a Chinaman in the centre took up a Chinese chant and at its close the kneeling Chinamen in the background prostrated themselves, the Buddhist gong sounded three ominous notes, the curtain fell to rise again on the screening of the picture.

Showed Bier of White Blossom.

A finale was reached with the epilogue which showed the "Chink" and the child in the centre of the stage, the prone form of the "Chink" lying beside the bier of White Blossom, which was strewn with broken blossoms. Over the proscenium top hung cages of birds whose sudden song had an electrifying effect on the audience. The stage front and sides were decorated with plum and apple blossoms, and this scheme of dressing was carried over the orchestral pit, which was covered in and the top covered over with the same flowers.

The ushers throughout the house were garbed in Chinese costumes. The Chinese scheme of decoration was carried out both within and without the house, the electrical lighting being carried out in rose pink.

Author Among Many Notables There.

At this premiere of "Broken Blossoms" no less than three members of the British Cabinet attended, seven ambassadors, twenty-four members of the House of Lords, forty-four M. P.'s eleven members of the Royal Academy, and a considerable number of well known authors and publishers, as well as musical notables.

Thomas Burke, author of "Broken Blossoms," was also in attendance. Over 100 columns have already been devoted by the English press to a discussion of the Griffith masterpiece, and it is being screened three times daily at the Alhambra to record crowds, over 40,000 people having visited during its first two weeks.

British exhibitors have already been so impressed with the phenomenal success of "Broken Blossoms" at the Alhambra that they are coming from all parts of the country to witness these special screenings, which represent the initiation of a new era in the presentation of pictures in Great Britain.

The managing directors of Film Booking Offices (1919) Ltd.,—Messrs. Arthur and Albert Clozenberg—are deserving of the great praise showered on them for their enterprise in securing this great film tragedy. It is worthy of note that the film publicity arrangements have been carried out under the direction of Robb Lawson, the noted press man, in charge of their publicity department.

Carl Laemmle and R. H. Cochrane Buy Patrick A. Powers' Universal Stock

THE forecasted deal by which all stock held in the Universal Film Manufacturing Company by its treasurer, Patrick A. Powers, would be bought by Carl Laemmle and R. H. Cochrane, president and vice-president, respectively, of the film company, was consummated on Saturday, April 17. Mr. Laemmle and his lieutenants now have complete control of the big film corporation.

The deal involved several million dollars. Mr. Powers was the second largest stockholder of the concern. Upon turning over his stock he resigned as treasurer of Universal and completely severed his connections with the company.

Mr. Powers is silent as to his future activities, although he intimates he will not attempt the organization of a picture producing company. He gave as his reason for selling his Universal holdings the fact his other business interests had assumed such proportions as to interfere with his duties in the Universal company.

Messrs. Laemmle, Cochrane and Powers were three of the original stockholders of the Universal Company. The Universal, organized in May, 1912, resulted from a consolidation of several large and independent film companies, the most important of which was the Imp Film Company, then owned and operated by Mr. Laemmle. The new organization was formed to wage war against the Patents Company, an organization fighting the independent manufacture and sale of moving pictures in the United States.

Became Advertising Advisers.

R. H. Cochrane has been associated with Mr. Laemmle ever since the present Universal head entered the film business. Previously he was in the advertising business in Chicago with his brother, P. D. Cochrane, now head of the Universal poster department. Mr. Laemmle, as superintendent of a department store in Oshkosh, Wis., dealt with the Cochrane advertising firm. When he launched into the film world, the Cochranes became his advertising advisers and eventually his associates.

Mr. Laemmle is mainly responsible for the building up of the vast Universal concern, which now has agencies in every corner of the globe. He conceived and built Universal City. He has been president of Universal almost since its origin.

The new status of Universal control will cause little or no change in the administrative personnel of the organization other than the change in treasurers, it is announced.

Potsio Returns to Rome.

Constantine Potsio, who has been engaged in buying American productions for Gaytes & Mosco, of Rome and Athens, for the continent of Europe, sailed for Paris on April 14.

During his two years' stay in this country Mr. Potsio purchased more than sixty productions for his firm and enjoyed the most cordial relations with the trade. The American branch will continue operations under the management of Michel Fontrier, who came here recently from the Roumanian office of Gaytes & Mosco, at Bucharest.

Mr. Potsio, upon his return to Rome, will arrange a tour of the countries where Gaytes & Mosco offices are established and will open several new branches for his rapidly growing firm.

Selznick Lists First Kaufman Release.

Lewis J. Selznick announces that the first Herbert Kaufman weekly, "A Good Fellow," will be available for exhibitors on May 10. On May 17 Mr. Selznick stated "Content" will be released, and on May 24, "Pity the Poor," will be the third Kaufman release.

See Christie Comedy and Throw Away Your Crutch

THE dramatic editor of the Milwaukee Journal vouches for an incident which happened in the Merrill Theatre, where the latest Christie comedy, "Petticoats and Pants," with Bobby Vernon was being given its first-run showing in that city.

According to the Journal, which heads the story, "This is no Press Agent Bunk," a lone crutch stood in a corner of the theatre for more than two hours on a Sunday afternoon. Finally a man walked into the theatre and exclaimed, "Where's my crutch?"

"We have a crutch here in the corner," said Manager Bostick of the Merrill.

"Well, it's mine," said the man sheepishly, "I was laughing so hard at that comedy that I went out and left it."

According to Ralph Wettstein of the Mid-West Distributing Company, which handles the comedies for that territory, the Merrill Theatre, after screening "Petticoats and Pants," voluntarily raised its rental prices and displayed the comedy in its advertising extensively.

Circuit to Rate Independent Pictures After Tests in Membership Theatres

METHODS for determining actual instead of theoretical box office values on productions which lack star, story or directorial precedent as a basis for pre-release estimate of their rental worth, will be inaugurated by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., at the beginning of next season.

This new plan, which is revolutionary in its ambition to approach even closer to equitable screen values and the complete elimination of difference between pre-determined merit and actual box office facts, is characterized by First National exhibitor officials as their exhibition value department. It will function chiefly as an arbitrator of differences in opinion between First National members who have the authority of the entire membership to make purchases and the producers or agents from whom special independent attractions are bought.

A varying number of theatres will be used in all parts of the country, and of sufficient differences in clientele, character and location so that the results in total will be the equivalent of an absolute test of every theatre condition under which any attraction can be played. Every attraction to be so tested will be given its complete complement of advertising and publicity equipment by the First National advertising department, and it will then be played in each of the "test" theatres, supported by a thorough local advertising and exploitation campaign designed to attract the greatest maximum of patronage possible. The box office results, in each instance, will constitute the basis on which First National officials can predicate exhibition values for the entire country.

To Use Small as Well as Large Theatres.

The number of membership theatres to be used in each "test" of this nature will vary, according to the calibre and style of the attractions. The theatres will range from the most important and largest of the first run houses owned and operated by First National members, in which attractions are played for week stands or longer, to second and third run theatres, in which programs are changed two and three times a week.

It is pointed out that the plan has a like advantage and equal protective features for the independent producers as well. In cases where pictures considered for purchase by First National have no star or producer elements on which to base estimations, the plan places the attractions strictly on their own merits, with equivalent opportunity to the producers for unexpected and greater values as the result of the exhibition value tests.

"The plan will not function in the case of stars, directors and producers who have established box office ratings," declares a statement from First National. "We know from experience with previous releases the exact exhibition value of attractions starring such artists as Norma and Constance Talmadge, Charles Chaplin, Anita Stewart and Charles Ray and the Marshall Neilan productions and others."

Brady Due on April 22.

Advices have been received by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to the effect that President William A. Brady had sailed on the Mauretania and is due to arrive in New York on either Thursday, April 22, or Friday, April 23. With the return of President Brady to the city, a definite date will be set for the quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the national association, which was scheduled to be held in March but postponed owing to the absence from the city of the president and many of the board members. Vice-President Adolph Zukor, also a member of the board, is accompanying President Brady upon his return trip.

Fox Plans Further Foreign Expansion; Has New French and African Branches

REPORTS of action taken by his foreign representatives have just been received by William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, in connection with recent instructions by the producer regarding expansion of the corporation's offices and exhibitors' service in the foreign market.

Advices from both the London and Paris branches announce completion of plans for opening additional offices in several cities of England and France, and even Africa is invaded by the latest advance.

A branch office has already been opened in Algiers and a fine business in this field is reported. The Fox representative who negotiated for this Algerian branch received full co-operation from the exhibitors in this territory, and he asserts that the popularity of Fox films there opened the way for him in a locality where offices are practically as difficult to secure as they are in this country.

The theatre men in the European district embracing Treves and neighboring territory made urgent requests for Fox pictures. The Paris office of Fox Film Corporation experienced serious trouble in acquiring suitable offices in Treves and were forced to seek aid from the exhibitors, who succeeded in obtaining temporary quarters for the exchange pending permanent arrangements. Heretofore this territory was served by the Strassburg branch, but owing to the great distance separating many of the houses, the exhibitors expressed a desire for direct service.

In that section of France formerly served from the Paris branch, William Fox has opened two new offices. One of these is at Nancy and the other at Toulouse. Both are reported as having firmly established themselves with the theatre men of the vicinity.

In compliance with the instructions of Mr. Fox, Abraham Carlos, who opened these new branches on the continent, has been succeeded in the management by Daniel G. Temlinson, recently sent to Paris by the American producer. Mr. Carlos has departed for an extended tour of the continent, during which he will visit Italy, Spain, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden. On his return to Paris some time in July he will make a detailed report on the position occupied by Fox productions in the various markets visited by him and the advisability of opening new Fox branches in these countries.

All Fox films—features, Sunshine Comedies and the Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons by Bud Fisher, the latter known in England as "Dick and Jeff"—are reported as enjoying wide popularity.

Ince Adds to Publicity Staff.

John Paul Keefe, whose reportorial and editorial capacities have extended clear down the line from reporter on a metropolitan daily to personal representative for several well-known cinema celebrities, has been added to the Thomas H. Ince exploitation headquarters in Culver City, Cal., it was announced this week by Director of Publicity and Advertising Hunt Stromberg.

As a member of the Ince publicity staff, Keefe will assist in the broad co-operative service rendered exhibitors and motion picture editors throughout the country. He also will contribute feature articles to the leading photoplay magazines and journals.

All Los Angeles Praises

"For the Soul of Rafael"

The premiere showing of "For the Soul of Rafael," Harry Garson's special production for Equity Corporation, starring Clara Kimball Young, was begun at Grauman's Rialto Theatre, Los Angeles, Sunday, April 18. This is the first time any film other than a Paramount production has been shown in a Grauman house. The film was given an enthusiastic reception by big audiences. Lines of people extended down Broadway for distances of half block, awaiting admission at the afternoon and evening shows.

Los Angeles press praised the picture, calling it a strong drama with Clara Kimball Young at her best, and declared the story to be a true depiction of life and customs of early romantic California days. The film was shown on its merits and without any elaborate presentation stunts. The management predicts a five-weeks' run for it.

W. C. Patterson Has Letters to Prove Exhibitors Want Strong Defence League

A PERMANENT national organization of independent exhibitors, created as a defense body against invasions of producer-exhibitors into the theatre field, is the expressed wish of several hundred exhibitors who have sent written and telegraphic responses to the call by Willard C. Patterson, manager of Sig Samuel's Criterion Theatre of Atlanta, and president of the Southeastern Theatre Managers' Association, for a national mass meeting of independent theatre owners at the Hotel Congress on Monday, April 26.

Evolution of the mass meeting into an enduring exhibitors' defense league will, according to Mr. Patterson, be the logical result of a fast crystallizing determination by independent theatre owners to give national unity and strength to a formal demand for a show-down, and to back up that demand with a permanent centralization of independent exhibitor opinion in direct opposition to it.

Mr. Patterson announces that he has prepared a tentative schedule of activity for the mass meeting, which, after the disposal of the usual parliamentary proceedings necessary to the organization of the exhibitors present into a body will include the adoption of a constitution and by-laws setting forth the purposes and limitations of the league's intentions, and formal resolutions to be sent to every motion picture producer in the country.

"Telegrams and letters from exhibitors throughout the United States," reads a statement from Mr. Patterson, "urge that the mass meeting be made into a permanent unit for concerted action on all practices and intentions of producers which are detrimental to the independence of its members. There are other issues affecting independent exhibitor welfare that are important, but there is nothing existing at the moment which promises to work such havoc within the industry as the acquisition of theatres by producers, with all of the film service penalties such acquisitions work on the independents who must compete with them.

"If, as I have reason to anticipate, the mass meeting results in a permanent organization, it will be a sweeping and emphatic endorsement of my decision that now is the time for an organized demand to find out just where we are at with the producers who are becoming exhibitors. Such a result will go far toward answering the allegations that have sprung up, particularly in the southeastern territory, with producer-exhibitor agents apparently the authors, that my personal attitude toward the invasion is not representative of the national exhibitor sentiment."

Universal Executive Answers Critics Who Think Serials Injurious to Young

ROBERT H. COCHRANE, vice-president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has taken vigorous objection to published reports of the National Motion Picture League urging a ban on serials. In a recent interview he criticised the league and pointed out the fallacies of its contention.

"The National Motion Picture League," explained the film official, "has seen fit to convey to the public a series of reports emanating from various public school principals flaying certain phases of the motion picture industry. I am heartily in accord with all attempts to better the industry, but I find it necessary to take exception to certain activities of this league.

"Where official or unofficial organizations are formed to further the interest of the screen, they deserve encouragement and co-operation by film men and by the general public. Such organizations, however, have their greatest scope in aiding the exhibitor to present his pictures under the most acceptable conditions. Where there are adequate laws regulating motion picture exhibitions, they should co-operate with the exhibitor to obtain the maximum possible observance of such laws. Where there are no adequate laws, it is to their interest to further proper legislation.

Americans Appreciate Daring.

"It is unwise, however, for volunteer screen improvement societies to take upon themselves censorship authority. The National Motion Picture League has recently disseminated reports condemning serials on the ground of sensationalism and because they are alleged to form the 'motion picture habit.' The league further pretends to trace a devious connection between serials and juvenile delinquency.

"Nothing could be more erroneous or absurd. Serials have a well-defined place in moving picture programs. Any attempt to cast dispersion upon them is to exhibit an ignorance of the reasons why serials are popular.

"The main criticism directed against serials is the charge that they are sensational and filled with hair-breadth escapades, stunts and thrills. This is partly true. People in general, and Americans in particular, appreciate courage and daring. The greater portion of serial thrills are actual dare-devil stunts on the part of the actors.

"It also must be remembered that in all forms of literature or dramatic art it is customary to end a chapter, an act or an episode with a forceful conclusion which will carry the interest and suspense into the next chapter. For doing this at the end of a serial episode, we are accused of arousing such intense interest that the audience is dragged back to see the succeeding episodes—of engendering 'the moving picture habit,' and even of causing children to steal money to pay their way back into the theatre showing the serial.

"Imagine a novel you would feel like laying aside at the end of the third or fourth chapter! Imagine a play from which you could walk out at the conclusion of the second part, not interested in what might happen in the succeeding scenes!

"The serial form for certain kinds of screen entertainment is coming more and more into vogue. This is because of its adaptability to more complete treatment in the way of characterization and plot and also because more care is being taken in serial production. Better stories are being serialized."

Lawrence Grant Under Metro Banner.

Lawrence Grant, leading man for many English stage stars, has arrived in Hollywood from New York and has been engaged as a member of Metro's production stock company. Mr. Grant was under the management of Charles Frohman for two years. His best known stage work was in "The Wars of the World," in which he played History. His most recent stage appearance was A. H. Wood's new play, "Happy Go Lucky."

Butterfield Gets Another House.

W. S. Butterfield, Battle Creek, Mich., president and general manager of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise Company, has added another playhouse to his fast growing chain in the purchase of the Majestic Theatre property, that city.

During the coming summer Mr. Butterfield will spend $30,000 remodeling the theatre, making it one of the handsomest in Michigan. The playhouse is to be resumed but the title has not yet been decided upon.

Metro's Coast Studios Enlarged to 17 Acres; Five New Buildings To Be Erected

PURCHASE of seven and one-half acres of ground south of Metro's present West Coast studios site in Hollywood is announced by Metro officials, together with the statement that work will be commenced at once on the construction of five new studio buildings. An appropriation of nearly $250,000 has been made for these building activities. Besides the stage there will be put up buildings for the property department, a carpenter's assembling shop, cutting rooms, a film vault and isolated quarters for the scenario department.

Three adjoining city squares and one-third of another square in the Los Angeles suburbs are now owned outright by Metro Pictures Corporation. Within two months practically every foot of the seventeen acres now covered by the producing plant will be occupied by stages, laboratories, technical workshops and other structures that go to make up modern motion picture studios.

In addition Metro has at its disposal a location park of sixty-five acres north of Hollywood, in the beautiful San Fernando Valley. This is utilized for big exterior settings, such as streets and small villages, with a natural mountainous background.

The new inclosed stage of steel which has just been authorized will cost alone the sum of $85,000. It will be 100 feet wide and 250 feet long. This steel and glass structure will rise on the lot east of the present three stages. Larger than any of the latter, it will increase Metro's stage area 50 per cent., or to 75,000 square feet.

Construction has started on the carpenter's assembling shops. The building, of fireproof brick, 165 feet long, 55 feet wide and 25 feet high, will cost $35,000. It will contain two paint frames 40 feet high, each capable of use as a frame 65 feet long.

In two weeks work will start on a $70,000 building, 249 feet long, 50 feet wide and three stories high, to house receiving, shipping and property departments. It will include individual property rooms for ten companies.

A one-story building for the scenario department will be 200 feet long, with two wings. It will accommodate twenty writers and will cost $35,000.

Natalie Talmadge in "Love Expert."

Natalie Talmadge, the third of the Talmadge sisters, will be seen in an important character part with Constance Talmadge, in the latter's next release, "The Love Expert," an original story by John Emerson and Anita Loos, which will be the fifth of Constance Talmadge's First National Pictures, and which will follow "In Search of a Sinner," having its initial New York showing in May.

Goldwyn Has Five Dramas and Comedies Set for Release in May and Early June

NEW Goldwyn pictures recently completed and scheduled for distribution through Goldwyn's twenty-two exchanges in May and the early part of June are "Dollars and Sense," starring Madge Kennedy; "Out of the Storm," an adaptation of Gertrude Atherton's novel, "The Tower of Ivory;" "Jes' Call Me Jim," starring Will Rogers; "The Great Accident," starring Tom Moore, and "The Slim Princess," in which Mabel Normand stars.

Every reader of the Saturday Evening Post is familiar with the stories of Octavus Roy Cohen. "Dollars and Sense," the first of his works, prepared especially for Goldwyn pictures, is marked by the natural humor and strong human appeal that have given his stories a high place in current fiction. Harry Beaumont directed.

Exhibitors will be particularly interested in Gertrude Atherton's first contribution, an adaptation of "The Tower of Ivory." Its dramatic quality is said to be great and in addition to the human interest of the situations there are spectacular scenes presented in a vivid fashion, under the direction of William Parke.

Son Assists "Papa" Rogers.

From all quarters come reports of the rise of Will Rogers. In "Jes' Call Me Jim," a story by J. G. Holland, the comedian's 4-year-old son figures prominently. "Dad" portrays the role of Jim Fenton, a happy-go-lucky hunter and trapper who is in love with the village milliner, played by Irene Rich. Those who have read J. G. Holland's "Seven Oaks," the book on which this picture is based, will readily recognize its screen possibilities. Clarence Badger directed the production.

Tom Moore comes to the front again with a fast-moving story that is still fresh in the minds of readers of the Saturday Evening Post. It is "The Great Accident," by Ben Ames Williams, directed by Harry Beaumont. The plot structure of this exciting narrative should make it an ideal subject for motion picture treatment.

The fame of "The Slim Princess" as a stage play in which Elsie Janis scored one of the greatest successes of her career has lasted through a score of years. The title, in conjunction with the name of Mabel Normand, who is starred, will prove a magnet for followers of the stage, as well as regular motion picture patrons. Director Victor Schertzinger is said to have missed no opportunities for laughs in his handling of the rich material in this popular story.

Propaganda Film Goes Big in Toronto.

The recent five-day presentation of "The End of the Road," the disease propaganda feature, at Massey Hall, Toronto, forms one instance where a picture of this type proved to be a success in so far as Toronto is concerned. No less than 20,603 people paid admission to see the picture during the five-day engagement and the prices ranged from 20 cents to $1.

Incidentally, the attendance gradually increased throughout the run, the paid admissions on the fifth and last day amounting to 4,732. The feature was played on a percentage basis and the share of Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen for the Toronto engagement alone amounted to $7,225.15.

"The End of the Road" was booked to play for a week at the Majestic Theatre, London, Ontario, but it was held over for a second week. Runs of from three to six days have been booked for various towns throughout Ontario.

To Show Soldiers' Graves.

A fitting memorial has been arranged by the American Committee for Devastated France by which the entire American public will be able to pay homage to the boys who sleep in the poppy fields of France. An appeal has been sent out by the committee at the New York headquarters, 16 East Thirty-ninth street, that asks the co-operation of the entire country in honoring the memory of the American soldiers killed in action.

Telegrams have been sent by President Myron T. Herrick to every Governor of the United States asking his co-operation in calling upon all motion picture houses to throw upon the screen on May 30 specially prepared slides showing the graves and cemeteries of the Americans in France killed in action. Replies are pouring into the headquarters from distant parts of the country expressing approval and support of the movement by the different states.

Dana and Allison Begin Plays from Current Fiction

TWO of Metro's popular feminine stars, Vesta Dana and May Allison, are starting their new pictures together at the Metro studios in Hollywood and both of them are based upon current literary material. Miss Dana is to do "Head and Shoulders," by F. Scott Fitzgerald, a sprightly story which appeared in recent issues of the Saturday Evening Post. Miss Allison's new starring vehicle is "Held in Trust," the novel by George Kibbe Turner, which is now running as a serial in the Red Book Magazine.

In "Head and Shoulders" Miss Dana will be directed by William C. Dowlan, who also directed her in "Dangerous to Men." Percy Heath prepared the scenario from Mr. Fitzgerald's manuscript. Miss Dana will play the role of a youthful "shimmy" dancer who falls in love with a most studious college boy and after playing a number of pranks upon him becomes the bride. John Arnold is the photographer of the production.

John E. Ince has been selected to direct Miss Allison in "Held in Trust," which was adapted for the screen by Sarah Y. Mason of the Metro scenario staff. Miss Allison will have the part of Mary Manchester, a young shopgirl who breaks into society.

Finkelstein & Rubin Secure Hampton's "The Sagebrusher"

ON the heels of their success with Benjamin B. Hampton's Zane Grey production, "Desert Gold," Finkelstein and Rubin, the powerful northwest exhibitors with a chain of theatres in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, have given Mr. Hampton's newest W. W. Hodkinson release, "The Sagebrusher," a their enthusiastic approval in the form of a big contract booking whereby the Emerson Hough production will be given early presentation for week runs at the Unique, Minneapolis; the Blue Mouse, St. Paul, and the Lyric, Duluth.

S. Barrett McCormick, the prominent Indianapolis showman, also has booked "The Sagebrusher" for a week's showing at his Mister Smith Theatre, to be backed by as powerful a promotion campaign as any Mr. McCormick has waged in the Indiana metropolis.

H. S. Goldberg, Omaha's live-wire exhibitor, gave further proof of his showmanship shortly before the opening of "The Sagebrusher" at his Moon Theatre. After reading Emerson Hough's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Soul Child," and knowing that "The Sagebrusher" was the first Emerson Hough story to be screened, he immediately linked the story with his presentation of the Hampton production in a way that won him no little patronage during the week run.

Shows Railroad Terminal Operation.

Universal's New Screen Magazine No. 65, to be released on May 14 contains many interesting scenes showing how a big New York railroad terminal is operated and how complicated is the mechanism of handling New York's millions of commuters daily. The subject throws considerable light on how the recent railroad strike paralyzed the metropolis.

Another subject of timely interest is the fresh air crusade for tenement-raised children. The little tots are shown on house-top playgrounds and in roof-workshops.

Leslie Elton has contributed perhaps his best animated cartoon for this issue of the New Screen Magazine. Cinema Luke, his popular hero, introduces a trained flea circus to the delight of the audience and to the discomfort of the artist.

Picturesque shots of Newcombe's Tavern, built in 1796 near Dayton, and a new batch of Laughographs, culled from various newspapers, complete the screen magazine.

Bookings on Republic Productions.

According to Sam E. Morris, general manager of the Republic Distributing Corporation, bookings on six Republic productions stand out this week as uniformly good, and that exhibitors have played the features with gratifying results.

The six pictures in question are "The Gift Supreme," starring Bernard Durning, "Romany, Where Love Runs Wild," with an all star cast; "Twelve-Ten," starring Marie Doro, "The Blue Pearl," with an all star cast; "Tribby," with Clara Kimball Young, and "The One Way Trail," containing an all-star cast.

Announces Fourth National Picture.

Lewis J. Selznick, president of National Picture Theatres, Inc., has announced that the fourth National Pictures production will be "The Shadow of Darkened Windows." The first three pictures are "Just a Wife," "Blind Youth" and "Invisible Divorce."

This fourth production, it is stated, will be produced on a lavish scale calling for a wealth of detail in reproducing scenes laid in India.

Praises "Virgin of Stamboul."

A pre-release trade showing of Priscilla Dean's new Universal-Jewel production, "The Virgin of Stamboul," in the New Grand Central Theatre, St. Louis, recently called forth much praise on the part of exhibitors and the press. The picture will be run at the New Grand Central next week.

"It is no exaggerating statement," wrote the reviewer for the St. Louis Times, "to say that this picture ranks with the best ever produced."

"Rio Grande" Meets Demand for Great Outdoor Pictures

IN the course of the past three months a steadily increasing demand for live pictures of the great outdoors has been emphasized in the letters of exhibitors to Pathe managers, and in the reports of branch managers. The Edwin Carewe production, "Rio Grande," the film version of the Augustus Thomas play, is to be released by Pathe on April 25, and it is declared by all branch managers and exhibitors who have seen it at private showings to be the ideal production to meet this demand.

It is a romance of the border country, with Allan Sears playing the part of an Irish cowboy in love with a fiery tempered Mexican senorita, played by Rosemary Theby, and from the opening few feet of the several parts it is full of dash and excitement. Among others in the cast are Hector V. Sarno, Arthur Carew, Georgie Stone, Peaches Jackson, and Adele Farrington.

A remarkable demand for the production is indicated in the cities where the stage play enjoyed exceptional success and in all the States along the border. The interest in the border country is undoubtedly due to the fact that the theme of the story is not calculated to inflame feeling, but will rather show the way to permanent peace between Mexico, and the United States. The propaganda vein, however, is overwhelmed by the sheer dramatic power of the story.

28 Sets Standing on Stages at New Fox Studio Building

IN spite of the fact that finishing touches still are being put on various sections of the new Fox studio on West Fifty-fifth street, New York, production operations have suffered little interference so far as settings for various Fox features are concerned.

According to the Fox officials there are twenty-eight full sets standing on the studio floor of the Fifty-fifth street building in use by directors or awaiting their turn in sequence. In emphasizing the size of the studio the Fox offices call attention to the fact, with these twenty-eight sets standing on the floor, there still is room for as many as twelve good-sized sets in the space unoccupied.

Some of the sets now standing are being used by Dell Henderson, some by Harry Millarde, some by George A. Beranger; others are in use in productions being directed by Richard Stanton and Charles J. Brabin. Although these five are all working at one time, there is no interference and no friction, so complete and thorough is the system installed by William Fox in this new studio.

None of the productions in work here has been announced by the producer for release, and no mention is made of the names of the stories, the nature of the film or the identity of leading players. The productions, it is understood, are to be released in the early fall and are all of the super-special class.

William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, is more than satisfied with the progress made by his staff since entering the new building, and is busy planning several big special features for summer production.

Complete Cast for Two Big Goldwyn Productions

ADDITIONS to the casts of "Officer 666," the Cohan & Harris stage success, and "Milestones," the play by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblock, have been made at Goldwyn Pictures Corporation's Culver City Studios. Both of these subjects were recently placed in production, Tom Moore starring in "Officer 666," under the direction of Harry Beaumont, and "Milestones" under the direction of Paul Scardon.

Jeanne Calhoun has been assigned to the role opposite Tom Moore, while Priscilla Bonner will portray the part of Sadie, and Hardee Kirkland that of the police captain. With these additions the company is complete.

The "Milestones" production, which requires an unusual number of players to present the story that covers three generations, has been augmented by the inclusion of Corrine Kirkham, George Swan and Jack Donovan. Before the shooting of scenes was started, weeks were spent in securing just the right furnishings to give the picture atmosphere.

Preparing Scenario for Next Walsh Picture.

Dell Henderson, who has been successful in directing Fox productions in which George Walsh has been starred, "The Shark" and "The Dead Line," is at work with Thomas Fallon preparing the scenario of "Cherub Divine," from the pen of Sewell Ford, author of the famous "Torchy" stories. "Cherub Divine" will be used as a starring vehicle for Walsh.

"Elmo" Breaks Precedent.

"Elmo the Fearless," the recently released Elmo Lincoln serial, broke a precedent when booked by Otto L. Meister, manager of the Whitehouse Theatre, Milwaukee. Mr. Meister had adhered steadfastly to the rule of never booking more than one serial at a time. When "Elmo the Fearless" was offered for release, Meister already was running "The Lion Man," another Universal serial.

He wrote Universal a highly laudatory letter after the opening of the new strong-man serial.

Popular Players Appear in Pauline Frederick Support

ONE of the strongest companies ever assigned to a motion picture production is supporting Pauline Frederick in her new play, "Madame X," now being filmed at the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, Cal. Miss Frederick has the role of Jacqueline Floriot, who is tried for murder as "Madame X," under which name she is registered in prison when she refuses to reveal her identity. Casson Ferguson has the role of Raymond Floriot, her son, who defends her at her trial, not knowing that she is his mother.

William Courtleigh is Louis Floriot, her husband, and Lionel Belmore and Willard Louis, both among the best known character men of the screen today, play the Paris blackmailers, whose schemes lead Jacqueline to commit murder.

Others in the cast include Maud Louis, Hades Kirkland, Albert Roscoe, Corraan Kirkham, Sidney Ainsworth, Maude George, Cesare Gravina, Lloyd T. Whitlock and John Hohenvest. Mr. Hohenvest also is assisting Frank Lloyd, Miss Frederick's director, as an advisor on French sets.

Lytell, Filming Crook Play, Finds Model Penitentiary

A CHANGE distinctly for the better has come over American prisons since O. Henry wrote about Jimmy Valentine and Paul Armstrong made his famous play from the short story, "A Retrieved Reformation." This improvement was so noticeable as to evoke comment when Bert Lytell and his company journeyed recently to the State Penitentiary in Florence, Arizona, to photograph the prison scenes in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," the new Metro production starring Mr. Lytell.

Although the superintendent permitted a number of the prison inmates to participate in some of the yard scenes, the Lytell company was obliged to furnish the striped prison garb for the convict-actors and also to teach them the lock-step, which is unknown in this correctional institution. Twenty-five of the Arizona convicts donned the old-time striped suits, now not worn, and were lined up for the "Alias Jimmy Valentine" scenes.

When "Alias Jimmy Valentine" was finished a print of it was shown in the chapel of the Arizona Penitentiary on Good Friday and delighted the 300 prisoners—more than forty of them "lifers"—who applauded it vociferously.

Fight Fans Flock to See Pathe's "Daredevil Jack"

NOWADAYS the sporting fraternity starts its discussions and conjectures regarding the forthcoming championship prize fight in club rooms, billiard parlors or on street corners and ends them at the movies, and sporting writers, instead of passing on rumors anent the physical condition of the present title holders, put on their brown derby hats and venture abroad in search of some real facts at the cinema show.

This invasion of the sporting pages of daily newspapers and periodicals by the motion picture was made under the leadership of one having no less significant a title than "Daredevil Jack."

When Jack Dempsey announced that he was going to be the star in a Pathe serial the sporting writers found in the news an almost inexhaustible supply of material for quips and humorous observations with which to spice their columns. But now we have articles by special writers in which the fight fans are supplied with information under headlines reading "movies show Dempsey is in wonderful condition."

Moreover, when the fast fans gather for debate the conversation no longer centers about a report from some bold adventurer into the hinterlands usually serving as the retreat for a champion between ring appearances, but the topic is a recital, vivid and enthusiastic, of the wonderful physical condition, the speed and marvelous form displayed by Jack Dempsey as he disposed of a flock of villains in the first episode of "Daredevil Jack."

American's "House of Toys" Has Big Appeal for Women

ACCORDING to S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, "The House of Toys" will make a strong appeal to women fans," says its producer. "It was planned and produced with the idea of appealing to women," said Mr. Hutchinson. "It is a play every woman will take her daughters and her husband to see."

"The slogan which appears on all the posters, 'Is Your Husband Faithful?' and the sub-title of the feature, 'The Story of a Gamble in Matrimony,' are captions which will interest and attract women generally." To the exhibitors Mr. Hutchinson says: "Play up these points of appeal strongly in all your advertising and publicity and your house will play to stand-up business."

Seena Owen carries the leading role. Pell Trenton heads a strong supporting cast. Helen Jerome Eddy, George Hernandez, Marian Skinner, Henry Barrows, Lillian Leighton and Perry Banks complete a strong cast.

O'Brien's Next Being Completed.

Final scenes for Eugene O'Brien's forthcoming Selznick production of "The Figurehead," being produced at the Selznick west coast studios are nearing completion.

Production Manager Harry Rapf, of the Selznick west coast studios, is reported as sparing neither time nor money in making the production complete in every detail.

Fourth Moore Well Under Way.

The fourth Owen Moore Selznick production, "Stop That Man," from the pen of George V. Hobart, the playwright in the course of production at the Selznick west coast studios, is new well under way. It is announced this week. Owen Moore, in the story, is said to portray the role of a young American artist studying in Paris.

Supporting Mr. Moore are Nell Graff, Henry Miller, Jr., and Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of the world famous Russian pianist.

"Luck of the Irish" Breaks Records in Canton Theatre

THE LUCK OF THE IRISH," an Allan Dwan production, presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, is having a lively career throughout the country as a "wrecker of records," its most recent achievement being the smashing of the house record of the Alhambra Theatre in Canton, Ohio, established some time ago when hour and fifteen minute shows were given.

Picked Good Title.

Much of the success of the big Mayflower-Realart special has been attributed to its name, exhibitors who watch such things closely claiming that this production has the "box office name" par excellence of the year. This, according to reports, is based upon its timeliness and its familiar phrasing.

The production is founded on the story by Harold MacGrath and had a successful eastern premier at the Capitol Theatre in New York and in the West at Grauman's million dollar theatre in Los Angeles. Since then it has played big time throughout the country, with a particularly strong representation during St. Patrick's Day week.

300 Day Booking on Talmadge Film.

Since the initial showing in Philadelphia on January 26 of "The Daughter of Two Worlds," featuring Norma Talmadge, the First National exchange in that city has booked the attraction for more than 300 days, with not an open day to blur the booker's book. In the time already booked there were eight weekly runs, three of these theatres, the Imperial, Great Northern and Regent, at Allentown, Pa., changing their policy of two features a week to that of a weekly run.

Mortimer to Direct "The Misfit Wife."

Edwin Mortimer has been selected to direct the forthcoming Metro production, "The Misfit Wife," from the play by Julie Herne, which will be interpreted by a noteworthy cast, featuring Alice Lake. This drama of Miss Herne's was adapted for the screen by Lois Zellner. Mr. Mortimer was appointed a member of the general staff at the Metro studios in Hollywood a fortnight ago and is already deep in his preparations for the production of "The Misfit Wife."

Wanda Lyon Supports Max Linder.

The work of Wanda Lyon, the former beauty of the Winter Garden, who plays the leading role opposite Max Linder in "The Little Cafe," makes it certain that she will be regarded as a new star of some magnitude and will be heard from in the near future.

Made Good on Stage.

Miss Lyon will be remembered not only for her work in the several Passing Shows, but also for her success in Al Jolson's show, "Robinson Crusoe, Jr." She was a comedienne of the lightest type in musical comedy, and on the screen her work with Linder gives her training an excellent chance to show itself.

Consensus of Trade Press Reviews

Here are extracts from available reviews printed in the five motion picture trade papers. It is the aim to present one sentence that will reflect the spirit of the writer's opinion. The papers are indicated as follows: Moving Picture World (M. P. W.); Motion Picture News (N.); Exhibitor's Trade Review (T. R.); Wid's (W.); Exhibitors' Herald (E. H.).

Trailed by Three

(Frankie Mann and Stuart Holmes—Pathe Serial)

M. P. W.—Attended by a wealth of mystery and rapid action.

N.—A rattling good show if the first three episodes are any criterion.

T. R.—Serial seekers will find that the film gives ample satisfaction.

E. H.—It is replete with excitement and intense moments.

The River's End

(Lewis Stone—First National)

M. P. W.—Will fill the eye and grip the mind of the wearer of flannel shirt and boiled shirt alike—whether in hamlet or in town.

N.—Rich production given vivid northwest story.

T. R.—Hearty congratulations are due Marshall Neilan for the high water mark of success he attains with this production.

W.—Is surely a Box Office bet. It has all the elements of a B. O. success.

Sinners

(Alice Brady—Realart)

M. P. W.—Is a convincing piece of work.

N.—The picture is charming in its atmosphere and backgrounds and the acting of Miss Brady and her players is entirely capable.

T. R.—Far above the average.

W.—Nothing definite in theme or drama about this.

Partners of the Night

(Pinna Nesbit and Wm. B. Davidson—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—Has a humanizing motive and the sum of its values class it as good entertainment.

N.—Detective story carries an adequate punch.

T. R.—The subject is ever interesting and well handled in the present instance.

W.—Well enacted production that holds to the finish.

Old Lady 31

(Emma Dunn—Metro)

M. P. W.—Emma Dunn repeats stage success in Metro adaptation of Rachel Crothers play.

N.—Tears and laughter in excellently produced comedy-drama.

T. R.—Emma Dunn delightful in "Old Lady 31."

W.—Unusual and very pleasing comedy with human interest touches.

The Lone Hand

(Roy Stewart—Alexander)

M. P. W.—The production is well constructed, bubbles with the story heroism of the old West, and displays interesting action for every foot of the film.

N.—A good western with many thrilling and gripping moments.

T. R.—For the fan who enjoys the unlimited heroism of the West, the dance-halls, stage-coaches, coyotes and other well-known assistants, you can do no better than to give them genial Roy Stewart and "The Lone Hand."

W.—Just an old-fashioned western depends too much on riding and shooting.

King Spruce

(Mitchell Lewis—Hodkinson)

M. P. W.—Good melodramatic entertainment.

N.—Ought to please everyone except the matinee girl, but Mitchell Lewis has appeared in better productions.

T. R.—Those who love the great outdoors will find this feature decidedly interesting.

W.—Average feature but doesn't make most of the story.

Her Five-Foot Highness

(Edith Roberts—Universal)

M. P. W.—Universal five-reel subject features Edith Roberts in delightful story.

N.—Will bet by except as to logic.

T. R.—The picture is clean and agreeably wholesome and harmless.

W.—Indistinctive comedy-drama made from very ancient idea.

The Harvest Moon

(Doris Kenyon—W. W. Hodkinson)

M. P. W.—It has many qualities to please lovers of mystery and romance.

N.—Star makes play entertaining.

T. R.—The story remains dull and obscure in spite of the greatest attention given to charming settings, capable players and artistic camera work.

W.—Unnecessary details and ordinary direction fail to get this by.

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde

(John Barrymore—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—It has opened its New York engagement with every indication of becoming one of the greatest artistic and financial successes the screen will ever own.

N.—Screen acting in its highest form presented here.

T. R.—Ranks not only as a Barrymore triumph but a silent drama classic of unusual strength.

W.—John Barrymore's performance a tremendous drama in itself alone.

Desert Love

(Tom Mix—Fox)

M. P. W.—Is one of the best of recent Westerns.

N.—Tom Mix furnished plenty of thrills.

W.—Thrilling stunts put weak Western story over.

E. H.—Replete with those familiar qualities that make this star's western dramas excellent box office assets.

The Blue Pearl

(Edith Hallor—Republic)

M. P. W.—A truly thrilling photodrama.

T. R.—Clever criminal mystery story.

W.—Here's a very distinctive and entertaining mystery picture.

E. H.—It offers the wide-awake exhibitor many unique avenues of exploitation.

Shore Acres

(Alice Lake—Metro)

M. P. W.—Transforms old stage favorite to a splendid screen spectacle.

N.—Famous New England drama, well adapted.

T. R.—A credit to director Rex Ingram and all concerned in its production.

W.—Announce the date that you play it. That should be sufficient.

E. H.—Bring a well-beloved American stage play to the screen without loss of thrill or sentimental appeal.

The Blood Barrier

(Sylvia Breamer and Robert Gordon—Pathe)

M. P. W.—As a melodramatic subject this may be strongly recommended.

N.—Action and suspense will hold.

T. R.—It is a good melodrama of the kind that makes no pretenses toward being anything but an hour's suspenseful and exciting entertainment.

W.—Comprehensive treatment of complicated story.

E. H.—A very interesting and plausible picture.

Nurse Marjorie

(Mary Miles Minter—Realart)

M. P. W.—The clean, wholesome quality of the Realart production, "Nurse Marjorie," cannot be denied.

N.—Old English atmosphere pleases.

T. R.—Makes mild but agreeable entertainment.

W.—Insufficient story material causes this to drag badly.

E. H.—Containing an abundance of quaint humor, makes good entertainment.

The Cup of Fury

(Helene Chadwick and Rockliffe Fellows—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—The play as a whole is convincing.

N.—Trite and unconvincing theme; direction is poor.

T. R.—As a whole the picture will rank a little ahead of the average play.

W.—Story out of date and full of loop holes.

E. H.—Is the initial Eminent Authors production and if succeeding screen plays of this series are up to the standard set by this one exhibitors need have no qualms about booking them.

The Woman and the Puppet

(Geraldine Farrar—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—The picture is an artistic masterpiece.

N.—Single track idea overwhelmed with romance.

T. R.—Vibrates with color and melodramatic appeal.

W.—Good production may cover up poor story.

E. H.—The adaptation has been handled proficiently from every angle.

My Lady's Garter

(Wyndham Standing and Sylvia Breamer—Paramount)

M. P. W.—The production is wholesomely attractive, and develops among its other attributes a comedy vein.

N.—Mystery melodrama which should get by.

T. R.—Caught the public favor in both serial and book form, and, translated into film guise, it promises to win an even higher degree of popularity.

W.—Bang up detective mystery melo, with genuine spectacular thrills.

E. H.—It is a mystery story of more than usual interest.

The Virgin of Stamboul

(Priscilla Dean—Universal)

M. P. W.—A fine spectacle of generous treatment, with some stirring ensembles and a dash of melodrama to give it flavor.

N.—It is a big feature and will be well liked.

T. R.—The real thing in thrills.

W.—It lives up to all the fine things they've been saying of it.

E. H.—A splendid production from whatever angle considered, a box office power and a fine piece of entertainment, its history should be an enviable one.

Sidelights and Reflections

PROTESTS against the use of stage plays as foundations for screen dramas continue to get into print from time to time. An editorial in the last issue of the Exhibitors Herald is expressive of the writer's satisfaction that, in his estimation, the majority of moving pictures that must admit their descent from the spoken drama have very little of which to boast. To his mind, the moving picture men have been fooled, nine times out of ten, into buying an inferior article at a greatly inflated price. And yet producers keep right on buying the screen rights of nearly all of the stage successes and will continue to do so, for many a long day to come.

The reasons for this are obvious: Stage plays show the quantity and quality of the drama in them and its effect on an audience during one performance—and drama is about the hardest thing to corner that is necessary to the moving picture business; the screen must utilize material from every possible source; finally, the monetary returns from this class of pictures is the best excuse for listening to the voice of the play broker when he invites the moving picture producer to bid for the screen rights of any of the Times Square hits. Seated in an orchestra chair, the movie man follows the play from start to finish, and knows what he is buying when the performance is over. He also knows that, properly adapted in film form, a play with a real punch in it will give the picture public something different and prove quite as entertaining as the best of the simon pure movies that are not cursed by the bar sinister of the stage. Talk about the struggle that is being waged to get control of the world's supply of oil! The story is the gasoline of the screen, the motive power that must be gathered in from every possible source.

The Literary Digest in a recent article headed "Fears of the All-Devouring Movies" suggests a possibility that will put a different aspect on the question of acquiring the screen rights to stage successes. The article starts off with this cannibalistic forecast:

"Certain animals have been known to devour their offspring, but did one ever hear of the reverse happening, when the offspring ate up the parent? The movie seems to be developing an appetite that will not be content until it has swallowed the whole theatrical industry."

The prediction of such a state of affairs in the amusement world is not to be taken seriously, of course; but, if it ever should come to pass, the producer would have no one to blame but himself for paying exorbitant prices for the "fake success with phantom advertising values," and no one but himself to pay the price to.

After all, there are forces at work in the moving picture industry that are stronger than the men that control it. New and greatly improved methods of producing moving pictures will give larger freedom to the creative minds that are the real builders of screen product. The present system is both costly and clumsy. A better knowledge of the subject on the part of producer and exhibitor is bound to result advantageously for all concerned.

"The False Road"

Enid Bennett Appears as an Expert Little Safe-Cracker in Paramount, Produced by Thomas H. Ince.

Reviewed by Mary Kelly.

A CROOK story minus the many breath-taking turns and melodramatic climaxes usual in such tales is the Paramount picture "The False Road." Interest hinges on the reformation theme, rather than on the machinations and fate of a clever set of high class thieves. This angle may increase the effect of plausibility, but it seems that a few more thrills could have been inserted to advantage. The inner workings of such a band, as well as the featuring of unusual character types, always prove fascinating to the public, and some of these opportunities have been neglected in "The False Road."

Enid Bennett has the role of "the Innocent," one of the prettiest but most hardened members of a gang of safe robbers. As far as the necessity for appearing innocent is concerned, Miss Bennett is highly successful and true to type, but she is not so convincing in her hardened moods. Her personality is rather too sweet and her manner too cultured to carry off such a role. Lloyd Hughes is a splendidly clean and strong type for the part of the man who had the moral courage to shake off his old associates. Charles Smiley and Edith Yorke are very well suited to the roles of the kind-hearted country banker and his wife. The settings have been carefully planned and the photography is good.

Cast.

Betty Palmer.....Enid Bennett

The Story.

Roger Moran, member of Mike Wilson's gang of crooks, has just been freed after serving a two years' prison sentence. His confederates give a dinner for him, welcoming him back to their number. But he has decided to go straight and boldly announces this intention at the dinner. They leave him in disgust, and Betty Palmer, his former sweetheart, asks him why he doesn't buy a church and go into business for himself. He replies by asking her to marry him and begs her to leave "the false road." She refuses.

A short time later finds him working in a small country town for a kind-hearted banker, Joshua Starbuck. Starbuck's bank is next on Mike Wilson's list. Betty and "Frisco" Minnie are detailed to the job, as the safe is said to be an especially easy one to open. Roger's suspicions are aroused as soon as he sees the two girls in town. They evade his questions about their purpose in coming. After remaining two days to get acquainted with the Starbucks and the lay of the land, the girls make a midnight call at the bank and are successful in getting away with the funds which Starbuck had been saving for a trip to Italy to improve his wife's health.

Roger follows them to New York, shows up at Wilson's quarters and pretends that he is one of them once more. He tells Betty that the "lifting" game is the only one worth while and that he has given up the goody-goody life. She is strangely disappointed in him and tells him so. He is much affected by her attitude, and they agree to get hold of the stolen money and return it to Starbuck. Betty has great difficulty in accomplishing this, as Wilson gets wise to her intention and puts up a fight. She outwits him, however, and the picture ends with a Christmas Eve scene in the Starbuck home, at which Betty and Roger confess their past to the couple and present them with the stolen funds.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines:

"The False Road"—The Story of a Reformed Crook Whose Employer Is Robbed by the Crook's Former Sweetheart. See How He Led Her Away from "The False Road."

She Preferred the False Road, He the Straight and Narrow. See How Their Two Paths Met and Merged.

He Wanted Her to Go Straight. She Called Him a Coward. The Climax Came When She Robbed His Benefactor.

Exploitation Angles: The title is likely to be misleading. Make it plain that "The False Road" is a crook story, permeated with a strong love interest. It shows a battle between honesty and dishonesty and how two young lovers are separated because one chose the false or crooked road and the other the straight. A cut-out illustration of the two scenes, with roads labeled by mile posts and each road showing a solitary figure, on one a man, on the other a woman, might be effective.

"Would You Forgive?"

Five-Reel Fox Subject Presents Vivian Rich in Expertly Made Drama.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

STRAIT drama which runs an entire five reels without perceptible break not often achieved. Yet this five-reel Fox production, directed by Scott Dunlap, entitled "Would You Forgive?" builds up by degrees an intensely interesting situation and "follows through" in good style. It is satisfying in story, splendidly acted and rises to a really dramatic climax.

Vivian Rich heads the cast as Mrs. John Cleveland, a role which she portrays with ease and strength. Tom Chatterton is equally good as the husband, and Ben Deely plays the other man acceptably. The theme is one of perennial interest, "Should there be a double standard for men and women?" But the motive is not intruded to the detriment of the ingenious plot, as sometimes happens with this type of production. The story is allowed to work out its own answer, and does it very skilfully.

The introduction of plot and characters is an effective one. The young wife and husband each dip into the other's old letters and both get the just reward that is usually inflicted upon this sort of prying. Two lively "pasts" rise up to be explained and before the first half reel is completed the story is speeding along to surprising complications.

The Story.

John and Mary Cleveland, in "Would You Forgive?" are a young married couple, with wealth and a fine home, but no children after three years of married life. The wife has moments of unhappiness over this fact, though their love for one another is strong. One day they get to going over old letters and Mary discovers that John once had an affair with a girl named Claire. He, in turn, discovers that she was almost engaged to a bank cashier named Paul Horton, who was afterward sentenced for forgery.

These revelations bring about a serious quarrel. Mary goes to an apartment house, where for the last year or two she has been keeping a child. Paul Horton, released from prison, comes to the apartment to ask his former landlady for a loan. He sees Mary and the baby together. Learning that she is married, he attempts to blackmail her. She has no money, but turns over her rings to him.

John Cleveland at once notices the absence of Mary's rings. She tries to throw him off, and even lies to him, but he notifies the police. One of the detectives employed on the case brings out the fact that Horton pawned the rings, and there is a dramatic meeting in the apartment house later. John believes the child to be that of Mary and Paul Horton. After he has charged them with this, he is almost stunned with surprise and humiliation when facts are produced which prove the adopted child as his own, the mother being the girl named Claire, who has since died.

"The Friendly Call"

An O. Henry Story Made Into a Fairly Good Motion Picture by Vitagraph.

Reviewed by M. A. Malaney.

MOST every O. Henry story has a little twist at the end that makes the spectator laugh and gives him a delightful surprise. "The Friendly Call," produced by Vitagraph, is no exception. There is considerable mystery to the little plot, which keeps one anxious. It's all about two men, fast friends, who call upon each other when in trouble. A woman becomes infatuated with one; he wants to get rid of her and calls upon his friend, who falls in love and marries her. They don't get along together, so the husband sends for his friend, and he takes her away secretly, although with the husband's approbation.

There are but four characters. All do excellent work. The principals are Roy Applegate and Walter Miller. All of the scenes are laid in the Southwest, and some fine "shots" of the locality are introduced.

The mountain and lake scenes are beautiful. There is nothing in "The Friendly Call" that could possibly prevent it from being a pleasing number on the programs of the best theatres. Like all O. Henry stories, it is very human.

The Story.

Simms Bell and George Ringo were friends. They were a strange pair, yet they never failed to do for each other when necessary. Through a strange freak of fate they were thrown together when Simms saved Ringo's life. Later, when Simms was very ill, his friend saved him from death. If one was in trouble he sent out the "friendly call" to the other and there was an immediate response. Ringo called for his friend one day. He was pursued by a woman, so he called on Bell to take her off his hands. Bell did, and fell in love and married the woman.

After a while they did not get along together, and when Bell could no longer stand the nagging he sent for Ringo. Although he did not like the idea, Ringo had to get busy. So one night he "accommodated" his friend by running away with his wife. This brought peace and happiness to Bell again, but not Ringo, and the picture ends with Bell wondering if his wife will get a divorce and marry Ringo. If he does not get rid of her any other way, the chances are that he (Bell) will have to take her off his friend's hands again.

"Paris Green"

New and Amusing Material in Charles Ray's Latest Paramount-Artcraft Picture Produced by Thomas H. Ince.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE is nothing deadly in "Paris Green." The latest Paramount-Artcraft picture produced by Thomas H. Ince and starring Charles Ray has but few serious moments and many humorous ones. It gets away at a snappy start that is refreshingly original and contains large slices of new and amusing material. After the fashion of most Julian Josephson scenarios, the characters run strongly to rural types, but there is a clever intermingling of scenes in Paris and life on a New Jersey farm. Several of the situations are delightfully funny and, save for a few moments after the hero has proposed to and been accepted by the charming little French heroine, the entire story is wholesome and in good taste. The sight of the father and mother of the young chap and the uncle of the girl, prompted by a pair of elderly gossips, putting the wrong construction on the innocent embraces of the newly engaged couple is an unpleasant situation that never should have been allowed in the plot.

For the most part "Paris Green" has the usual excellent Charley Ray cast, and the star himself works with the same old sincerity and is just as entertaining as ever. Ann May as Ninon Robinet is dainty and winsome, and Gertrude Clair is the real thing as Luther Green's mother. This sterling actress knows how to touch the heart and win the affection of any body of spectators. Bert Woodruff puts too much of the comedy rube into his performance of Mathew Green. Just because the father of the returned soldier boy is a farmer, it is not necessary to deprive him of a fair share of brains. The Ray following will take to "Paris Green" like a Sunday School picnic to pink ice cream.

Story by Julian Josephson.
Directed by Jerome Storm.
Length, 4,259 Feet.

The Story.

The closing days of the war find Luther Green making his one and only stay in Paris on a time limit of fifteen minutes. From his slight acquaintance with the place his comrades call him "Paris Green." During his short stay Luther meets Ninon Robinet, a young French girl, and gives her his New Jersey address. He picks up four or five French words that he doesn't know how to use correctly, but is supposed, by his fond father and mother, to be a master of the language when he arrives home. They have also heard of the gay goings on in the French capitol, and so have the neighbors, and Luther is credited by his old friends with having cut up in Paris somethin' scandalous.

There is a large crowd at the depot to greet the returning soldier, but Luther misses the train and steps quietly into the old home late that night while his mother and father are trying to conquer their disappointment at his non-arrival. The scene next morning when Luther sits down to a home breakfast is one of the best in the picture. Dressed in a new suit of civilian clothes, Luther goes to call on Edith Gleason, his old sweetheart, and finds that she has consoled herself during his absence by finding a new beau.

In the meantime Ninon has started for this country to visit her uncle in New York. A crook on the ship plans to kidnap her when they land and hold her for ransom, her uncle being a rich importer. She is forced into a taxicab, but succeeds in escaping and finding her way to the New Jersey station nearest the Green farm.

Luther starts for the city the same night to hide his grief at his sweetheart's faithlessness and meets Ninon at the station. Neither can understand the other's language, but the ex-soldier takes the girl home and she is made welcome by his mother. Before her uncle arrives to claim her Ninon falls in love with the farmer lad and he with her. The day he proposes, with the aid of a French-English dictionary, the uncle appears on the scene. The crook and his pal also turn up and make another attempt to carry

Amusing First National Farce-Comedy
Produced by Marshall Neilan.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

RUNNING along the lines of comedy, "Don't Ever Marry" reaches the extravagance of farce at times. There is a true comedy situation as a base, and a wealth of incidents grouped around it. Rich in material of the laughter-producing kind, the main line of action can only be followed by close attention. The complications, while intimately related, are really those of the stage farce, diversified both in character and in characterization. The director is to be congratulated for bringing into any sort of continuity so many and diverse incidents.

The strong and outstanding characterization is that of high-strung and peppery old Colonel Whynn, just returned from the war and still fond of the smell of gore. Tom Guise's impersonation of the role is so intense that it is felt to be true to the nature of the autocratic male in a position of wealth and power. The lead, Joe Benson, enacted by Matt Moore, is one of large opportunity only partially grasped, though fairly acceptable as a whole. The balance of the cast is well selected.

With settings admirably chosen and some bright subtitles to enliven the story, "Don't Ever Marry" is well worth being called a First National Attraction.

Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

The injunction, "Don't Ever Marry," is disregarded by good-natured Joe Benson. He is ready to wed Dorothy, pretty daughter of choleric Colonel Whynn, when his proposal is emphatically rejected by the old Colonel, and he weds Dorothy secretly, the Justice agreeing not to report the ceremony until after his vacation. Joe engages the bridal suite in a hotel. By mistake the flowers he orders are confused with those intended for a funeral. They are suggestive, as the old Colonel has threatened to kill him.

Through Joe's kindness of heart other ladies arrive at the suite before Dorothy, one of them a friend who is hiding her marriage. She pretends she is Joe's wife, with distressing complications. Then appears a divorced lady friend, in dread of her murderous ex-husband. All now conspire to put poor Joe in such a state of mind that he is forced to pretended temporary insanity to keep from being wedded to the wrong girl. He barely escapes bigamy, to be confronted by the ex-husband, who insists that his former wife shall be treated right.

Again and again Joe tries to get away with Dorothy, but he only succeeds when the Colonel becomes unpleasantly complicated with the divorced lady. Only then are matters so adjusted that Joe and Dorothy can make a successful getaway on a bridal train with their friends. The happy four, now rearranged according to the dictates of their hearts, are at last free to do their billing and cooing.

"The Woman God Sent"

Sophie Irene Loeb's Story of a Fight Against Child Labor.

Reviewed by L. B. Skeffington.

IN these days of great industrial strife a picture which bears even remotely on the subject of child labor has the elements of timeliness. The Selznick special, "The Woman God Sent," does not deal with the questions now in the foreground of labor difficulties, but it does deal with the capital and labor question, and portrays a campaign to eliminate child labor. Labor leaders, as well as reformers, have long classed child labor as one of the greatest curses of industry, and there has been much printed and written on the subject. For these reasons the picture presents a vital subject.

"The Woman God Sent" is filmed from the story by Sophie Irene Loeb, long noted as a virile newspaper writer and a leader in various campaigns for child welfare and industrial reform. In some respects there is not much essentially new in the picture. "The Woman God Sent" is a love story, filmed in an industrial setting. There is a skein of propaganda running through it, the moral being that the child labor question in real life might work out as in the picture.

The Story.

Mary Manning is reared in an atmosphere of drab factory life. Early in life her mother died and she has never known her father, Jim Connelly, a tool of a powerful political machine. Bridget and Barney Flinn bring up Margaret as their own child. Being poor, she is soon sent into a factory. The evils of such a life makes a deep impression on Margaret, and she spends here evenings in the night schools, acquiring an education, in order that she may be qualified to attack the evil.

A campaign to abolish evil and to introduce reforms is undertaken, and Margaret's leadership gradually forces her to the front. With the assistance of Fred Mason, she fights to have a bill passed which would remedy matters. She goes to Washington. There Jack West, son of a wealthy politician, is drawn to her and joins her campaign. When he announces that he will marry her, his father opposes this on the score of her humble birth.

Jim Connelly is back of the fight against Margaret's bill, and Senator Mathews joins her side. The senator desires to combat Connelly, and begins a searching inquiry into his past, in the hope of finding something to discredit him. It is disclosed that Connelly is Margaret's father. On top of this, Pat Kane plots to disgrace Margaret and wreck her plans by apparently showing that she has been bribed by interests opposed to her bill. The proof of this is so strong that Jack almost loses faith in Margaret.

All ends well when Connelly admits that he is beaten and is proud of the stiff fight that his daughter put up against him. Senator West is satisfied with her birth, while Jack realizes that she is the one and only girl for him. The bill is passed and untold thousands of factory slaves are benefited.

CARMEN of the North" has same atmosphere, plot and characters as "Carmen" of operatic fame. One woman's treachery, another's faithfulness and a man's weakness are the dramatic factors that furnish the love interest, the pathos and the thrills. Most of the action takes place amid scenes of smugglers' dens and of cafe life in Holland.

Aside from the star, there is nothing definitely new in the feature. Miss Bos is gifted with charm and personality, has beauty of a rather heavy type, and discretely manages a role which might easily prove disgusting were she less discriminating. Smoothness is somewhat lacking in the introduction of new scenes. There are abrupt changes in locale, natural scenery and costumes that are not satisfactorily accounted for. Greater care in the directing could have improved these effects. The supporting cast is not entirely professional, but includes an excellent actor in the person of the leading man who has sensitively portrayed the stages of deterioration of a man's character.

Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

In a small country town in Holland lives Joseph, his mother and his betrothed, Mary.

He is suddenly called to military service and bidding good-bye to his sweetheart he promises to return to her as soon as he is mustered out. He is assigned to military police duty in a town where "Carmen," a bewitching young cigarette maker, lives and lures. She gets into a dispute with one of the factory girls and, in a burst of fury, injures her with a pair of scissors. Joseph is summoned to arrest her. He succeeds in resisting her coquetish glances to the extent of handcuffing her and putting her in prison.

She persists, however, in exerting her wiles until he, madly infatuated, consents to setting her free. For this act he is disgraced, imprisoned and finally dishonorably discharged. Carmen has hastened to the smugglers' headquarters and here he traces her. In the meantime Mary is growing anxious, not having heard from him for weeks. She decides to start out in search of him. Carmen's charm has proved too strong for Joseph to resist. He has forgotten honor and duty because of her. One night as he is jealously watching her flirtations with the military police whom she is detaining so that the smugglers can get over the border. Mary comes to him. But he refuses to return with her.

Carmen's affection for him is very fleeting. She soon gives him up for Dalboni, a popular opera singer whom she meets in a cafe. She is married to him. Joseph, broken down and disheartened, comes to the theatre where Dalboni is singing. He finds Carmen, pleads with her and when she laughs at him, he attempts to kill her. For this he is imprisoned for two years. Mary makes up her mind to forgive him and upon being released he faces a happier future.

IT is safe to say that the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation has a good bet in the foreign rights of "The Gift Supreme," a six-reel production made by C. R. Macauley Photoplays, Inc., and distributed in this country by Republic. The picture has been carefully directed. The story, adapted from the original by George Allan England, is interpreted by a cast of well-known and capable players.

One of the attractive points about the picture is the interesting characterization, which includes many different types. The accidental meeting of the principals, and the unhappy events which help to roughen the path of true love, provide plenty of color and suspense. The fight in the restaurant which leads to the final rounding up of the villain in the dope-selling scheme, is one of the most spirited punches of the picture.

Scenes depicting the struggle with a victim of dope, who has been shut in a room and deprived of the drug for several hours, could be cut to advantage. Bernard Durning plays the role of the lover, Bradford Chandler Vinton effectively. Seena Owen, although always an attractive figure, gives rather a colorless interpretation of the role of Sylvia Alden. Lon Chaney and Tully Marshall play up to the standard of former triumphs. The production promises well for the box office.

Sylvia, while engaged in mission work in the slums, meets young Vinton by accident. In the course of events they become engaged, without knowing the former unhappy associations of their parents. When Bradford's parents learn that he is about to marry a mission singer, they are horrified, and the elder Vinton resorts to unscrupulous measures in an effort to separate them. A crook investigator is employed, who obtains the signatures of a couple of loose women on a report of Sylvia's character, which states that she had lived at a house of ill-fame, and that she has a young son.

In the meantime Bradford, disgusted with his father's actions, has opened a restaurant in the slums. Here the investigating gang also find their way. The outcome of the affair is that in a struggle with one of the gang Bradford is wounded and taken to the hospital, where Sylvia is in training. His father and mother are sent for. "Dollar for Dollar"

Frank Keenan Featured in New Five-Reel Pathe Release of Dramatic Strength.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE Frank Keenan subjects usually probe a little deeper into life than most features, and this Pathe release, in five reels, entitled "Dollar for Dollar," is in line with former successes. It tells a tragic and generally pathetic story of the "under side of things," softened at the close by brighter scenes.

Ethel Watts Mumford, author of the original story, has taken as her theme the sad variation between human ideals and human practice, a condition which is only too true to everyday life, as any one of vision must admit. It requires a greater effort to be good than to be bad, for the reason that the human tribe loves each other for its weaknesses rather than its strength. So in this story we have three distinct and well imagined characters—Marcus Gard, a millionaire who has made his money both by hook and by crook; Mrs. Marteen, a society blackmailer, and Victor Mordant, a wealthy bigamist. Not a very pleasant assortment of characters, on the face of it, but each made human and understandable by their protagonists—Mr. Keenan, Kathleen Kirkham and Harry Van Meter. Gertrude Claire also does a strong piece of work as Mrs. Mordant.

The development of the plot is skilful and dramatic. The photographic effects are clear and there are some attractive outdoor camping scenes of timely appeal. The subject is a strong one of its kind.

Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

Marcus Gard, in "Dollar for Dollar," is a millionaire who has made his wealth by shady methods. He is at heart a good fellow, but has succumbed to the tricky practices of certain forms of "big business." His rival is Victor Mordant, who also has made much money in Wall Street. Mordant, as Gard discovers, is a bigamist, having an insane wife incarcerated in a private sanitarium.

Mordant's son, Teddy, is by his second wife and therefore illegitimate. Marcus Gard is fond of Teddy, in spite of his hatred of the father, and takes an interest in the young man's affection for Dorothy Marteen, a pretty young society girl.

Gard suffers a shock when Dorothy's mother calls at his apartments by appointment and victimizes him in a blackmailing scheme. Mrs. Marteen explains, by way of palliating her method of acquiring a living, that Gard was the cause of her husband's business ruin and death. Gard is forced to see the truth of this and instead of hating Mrs. Marteen he feels sorry for her.

The climax of the story is reached when Victor Mordant is mysteriously killed. Gard suspects Mrs. Marteen of the crime, since she also hates Mordant, but it develops that the dead man's insane wife did the deed. Two love matches follow the tragic death of Mordant.

"The Toll Gate"

Paramount Presents William S. Hart in a Strong Impersonation, in a Dramatic Story.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE TOLL GATE is a piece of screen artistry. It displays William S. Hart's personality to advantage. It holds interest on story merit alone. Its conclusion is satisfactory instead of being a sacrifice to the conventional ending. Well linked continuity and skill of direction cause it to run smoothly. There is sincerity and good taste shown in the selection of backgrounds. It is the story of an outlaw without an attempt to gloss over his character. To the contrary, while it shows his better traits in sympathetic moments, it does not avoid the truth as to his bitter vindictiveness and small store of scruple. In other words, it is consistent from beginning to end. There are some highly sensational incidents in the story, but they are not faked and are within reason.

Hart is supposed to be at home in the role of an outlaw, but his skill of portrayal is far from being merely a question of type. He represents the combined daring and cunning of the American fighting male. He not only looks the part, but he acts it with keen intelligence. There constantly shines in his eyes the combined pugnacity and caution of the true gunman of the West. He is ably supported by a cast chosen to fit the roles. Especially is this true of Anna Q. Nilsson. Toward the close of the play her pathetic submission to the power of circumstances is very effective. The entire product, as presented at the Rivoli, is one of the best of its kind. It is sure to win wherever it is shown.

The Story.

"The Toll Gate" through which Black Deering passed into the life of an outlaw was one which shut him out of the natural joys of life. From that moment he plunders until he becomes the leader of a desperate band in the Southwest. Finding that the forces arrayed against him and his followers is bound to win in the end, he announces his belief that it is time to disband. Jordan, second in command, urges one more hold-up for the sake of getting funds, and the band is with him. They stop a train and begin an attack, only to find that they have been betrayed. They are shot down to a man by troops on the train. Deering is captured and securely tied. He feigns unconsciousness and discovers that Jordan has betrayed the band for a reward. He makes a vain attack on the scoundrel in the express car. Later he escapes, throwing himself out of the train while it is in motion. His one thought is revenge.

It is an exhausted outlaw who rides into a small town where Jordan has opened a cantina with the proceeds of his treachery. Deering is hungry, weak and without ammunition. In spite of these disadvantages, he burns Jordan's place to the ground, robs his enemy of funds and makes a clean getaway. He is followed by two posses, one of Mexicans under Jordan and another under a manly sheriff. Deering reaches a high bluff over the border and dives from it to rescue a child. It proves to be that of a lonely woman, Mary Brown. In return Mary protects him from the sheriff's men. Deering is tempted to revenge himself on her when he finds she is Jordan's wife, but his better nature prevails. He kills Jordan in a conflict, but escape from the sheriff is impossible. He sees that the lonely widow is provided for. Permitted to go, because he is over the border, he rides away into a new life, ready to meet what it may bring, a changed man but not a hopeless one.

The hero has a genuine case of "love at first sight," which develops into a real romance, despite the first catastrophe to the pair. The rock slide which enveloped the two is so realistically done that it almost brings a laugh when the principals appear again. Such impossible incidents are unnecessary and lacking in conviction. Pierre Winton, in "Bullet-Proof," is studying for the priesthood, under the guardianship of Father Victor, when his own father, whom he has never seen, sends for him. He reaches his sire just in time to learn that he was shot by an outlaw named McGuirk.

After Mr. Winton's death Pierre vows to have vengeance upon the murderer. He leaves Father Victor and rides away with the latter's gift of a luck charm. During a hard storm Pierre seeks shelter with a girl named Mary Brown. They instantly fall in love, but their romance is cut short by a rock slide, which apparently buries them both. However, each escapes, thinking the other dead, and they do not meet again until the night of a masquerade ball.

By the time this event is reached Pierre has joined forces with the Boone gang, which has also sworn to exterminate McGuirk. Jackie Boone, daughter of the leader, loves Pierre, but he still remembers Mary. During the dance McGuirk makes a raid upon the cabin of the Boone gang, killing most of the members. Pierre and Jackie return to find the dead bodies. Pierre now takes up the pursuit and finally kills McGuirk in a gun duel. He wins Mary Brown and Jackie's heart turns to Dick Wilbur, another survivor of her father's band.

"Captain Swift"

Earle Williams Featured in Vitagraph Film Adaptation of C. Haddon Chambers' Play.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A CLEARLY told story characterizes the Vitagraph adaptation of C. Haddon Chambers' stage play, "Captain Swift." In spite of the fact that the character of the hero does not fit in with recognized standards of consistency, the average person will find entertainment in following the story of the man accused of many crimes, from the Australian desert to the homes of the rich in London's most fashionable section. Here with the shadow of a regrettable past hanging over him, he meets and loves one of England's fair young women and carries himself with unbelievable composure through trying circumstances.

Earle Williams is not particularly colorful in his interpretation of the character of Captain Swift, but presents a handsome, well-dressed figure in London's exclusive set. With one or two exceptions, the cast is not one that stands out. Edward Martindale, Downing Clarke and James O'Neill are noticeable for the excellent character portrayal. Florence Dixon is pleasing as Stella Darbisher, and Adelaide Prince has a correct conception of the role of Lady Seabrook.

Clearness of outline, as before said, is a strong characteristic of the production.

The Story.

The story of "Captain Swift" follows the career of a man who is first presented in flight from a pursuing posse on an Australian desert. Swift is a notorious outlaw who is accused of many crimes, including murders as well as robberies. On the desert he crosses the path of a dying prospector, whom he carries on his back for miles, only to find when at last a stream of water is reached that the man is dead. In a moment of inspiration he changes clothes with the dead man, leaving the identity of Captain Swift with the corpse.

Some time later he turns up in London, on intimate terms with one of its best families. The home of Sir Hugh Seabrook is open to Phil Dare, otherwise Captain Swift, at all times, and he falls in love with Stella Harbisher, the daughter of a friend of the Seabrooks, who resides with them while her father is absent in Australia.

A detective on the trail of Swift finally comes up with him, gaining his clue from Seabrook's butler, who has been mixed up in Captain Swift's early family relations. The discovery that Lady Seabrook is Captain Swift's mother, and that he is innocent of the crimes laid against him, with the exception of the bank robbery, finally leads to the dismissal of the detective through the intervention of a friend. He tells the whereabouts of the stolen money and is forgiven by his sweetheart, who swears that she loves him in spite of his one crime.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines:

Exploitation Angles: "Captain Swift" is probably forgotten by a majority of the present day theatregoers, but it will pay to recall the stage success to the old-timers and by so doing establish it in the minds of the new generation. Make Williams carry the bulk of the exploitation.

"Leave It to Me"

William Fox Presents William Russell in an Amusing Light Comedy.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THERE is more than one bright idea in "Leave It to Me." The story has many of the elements of a corking good farce-comedy or light comedy, one in which the main idea need not be taken seriously. Wherever the director leaves it to the spectator to see the joke by suggestion the effect is one which will evoke laughter. There is an attempt, however, to disregard the story's amusing features for the sake of such extraneous matter as bathing scenes, which have nothing to do with the story development. Padding of this kind and that of an obscure chase in automobiles is far from comedy and of no particular intrinsic interest. It is the true material and its development that count.

William Russell makes good use of his chances when he is well in the foreground, where the revelation of his perplexities can be easily seen. He is supported by a fairly good cast, notably by Eileen Percy, as Madge Earle; Lucille Cavanaugh, as Viola Devore, and William Elmer, as Red Kelly. The total values of the comedy are, however, high enough to bring laughter and sustained interest. It may be safely estimated as genuinely good entertainment.

The Story.

Dick Derrickson's fiancée, Madge Earle, is dissatisfied with his idleness. He must go to work if he would make her his bride. He buys a detective agency where there is nothing to do, but Madge discovers the ruse. He therefore sends the former owner to import some crooks who will steal and turn their loot over to him to restore. Meanwhile a chum calls. He is engaged to Dick's sister, but he fears a vamp to whom he wrote ardent letters in days gone by. Dick says, "Leave it to me." He engages a crook to steal the letters. He has them ready for his chum, when the vamp calls to tell him that she has been robbed of some valuable letters. They are on Dick's desk. She picks them up to emphasize "If I can only lay my hands on those letters!" and discovers them. A struggle. She has hidden them. Dick insists that she must disrobe. His fiancée appears and Dick has barely time to hide the vamp.

Now comes the crook, jimmying his way into the place. He finds the vamp an old pal. They agree to make a clean-up at the chum's wedding by kidnapping him. The wedding is ready and no groom. Dick says, "Leave it to me." An attempt at general robbery is discovered and the crooks chased by the wedding party. All escape but one, the crook who holds Dick's chum bound and gagged. Now fortune favors Dick. After one or two foolish attempts to corner the crook, he sits down on a chest to think. There is a sound. He opens the chest, saves the bridegroom and catches the crook, to his everlasting glory. He has at last won his way to the heart of his practical fiancée.

"The Strange Boarder"

Goldwyn's Latest Will Rogers Picture Leads the List.

Reviewed by E. H. Mayer.

THE Goldwyn production, "The Strange Boarder," starring Will Rogers, is by far the best picture Rogers has yet produced. It contains all the elements of success. It is a real picture, full of love interest, thrilling action and comedy of the kind which only Will Rogers knows how to put over. The story is well told and holds the spectator throughout.

The star is better than ever, if such a thing is possible, and contributes much to the success of the picture. His son, Jimmy Rogers, lends capable support and arouses much admiration, especially from the fair sex. Irene Rich, James Mason, Lionel Belmore and Doris Pawn fill their parts in a highly acceptable manner. "The Strange Boarder" should be a big winner anywhere.

The Story.

Sam Gardner, in "The Strange Boarder," has great faith in the honesty and better nature of his fellow men. He disposes of his ranch and with his son, Billie, goes to Chicago, where he is separated from his money by two money sharks. He puts up at a boarding house, where he meets Jane Ingraham, who takes an interest in both he and his son.

He decides the only quick way to recover a little money is to visit a known gambling house, which he does. Here he is spotted by the two men who had taken his money and they tell Jake Bloom, who conducts the place, to put him out. When they put Sam out he decides that they are peeved because he has been such a consistent winner.

"Kittie" Hinch, a hard-hearted gambler who has taken quite a fancy to Sam, gets angry at Jake Bloom when he pays attention to his wife. "Kittie" in one of her rages kills Jake. At the murder trial the circumstantial evidence points toward Sam, and his coolness and native shrewdness baffle the police, although they believe he is guilty.

His love for Jane gives him hope, and with sheer faith in himself he battles on. He is freed, wins the girl of his heart and finally sets himself to rights in the world.

Will Rogers Kept on Smiling—The Smile That Wins—Although "Broke," He Had That Supreme Quality Known as Faith—And Then After Plugging He Is Finally Rewarded.

Exploitation Angles: Hang this on Will Rogers hooking up with the stock gambling angle. Tell them to see what Rogers thinks of oil stocks. If there is much oil stock advertising in your local papers try to get a special display on the financial page.

"Hall Room Boys" Comedies

"Oh, Baby!" and "This Way Out," Attractive Two-Reel Comedies for the Average Exhibitor.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A COUPLE of "Hall Room Boys" comedies seen recently which will appeal to the average audience are "Oh, Baby!" and "This Way Out." They consist of two reels each and are released by Hall Room Boys Photoplays, Inc. The first, "Oh, Baby!" employs, in addition to the stars, Neely Edward and Hugh Fay, a very clever child of not more than three years of age. The story of the picture follows the adventures of the Hall Room Boys after they have won as a prize a life-size baby doll. Their very particular friends, the Misses Millionbucks, request that they bring the doll to a reception which they are holding. Before the reception takes place, however, a real baby is left at the door of their room, and the situation is covered by dressing the baby in the doll's dress suit.

Some of the events at the reception are amusing, and one or two which lack the requisites of ordinary refinement can be easily eliminated. The funniest part of the picture is where the boys are nabbed before they are able to return the baby to its parents for an offered reward. It turns out, however, that the child belongs not to riches, but to a fruit dealer's wife, who already has twelve children and refuses to shoulder the responsibility of the thirteenth.

"This Way Out" finds the Hall Room Boys in rivalry over a pretty girl. One of them pretends to be a stockholder in the department store in which they are both only ribbon clerks. Many amusing events happen in the struggle for the inside track. This comedy contains few objectionable features and will meet with the approval of the majority of moving picture audiences.

Comments

THE CAPTIVATING CAPTIVE (Christie).—This comedy is not out of the ordinary, but is fairly entertaining. A young girl shows her brother, Jack, a character picture of her pretty friend, in which she wears glasses, and looks otherwise unattractive. When the young lady comes to visit, Jack sends himself a fake telegram to come to New York. As he is leaving the house the pretty girl is arriving. He suddenly changes his mind, but when he reaches the house she is being entertained by a couple of other young men. In the course of events he kidnaps her, and at the conclusion they are happily married.

ARE BRIDES HAPPY? (Christie).—A very entertaining comedy in which a young girl about to be married "exhibits no bad habits except an aunt." The aunt declares her intention of accompanying the young couple on their wedding trip, an arrangement which does not meet with the young man's approval. They try to evade the aunt when she is on her way to buy the trousseau, and are married in an automobile. In the search for her niece the aunt comes to the same hotel, where some funny, farcical scenes in which the hotel detective participates take place.

HER PERFECT HUSBAND (Christie).—An amusing situation forms the basis of this comedy in which a young wife seeks to enter her husband in a "Perfect Man" contest. The husband, eager to make good, hires a trainer, and brings him home and introduces him to his wife as a distant cousin. The trainer's uncouth manners afford some comedy, and the climax of the picture shows him, with two associates, trying to get away with the silverware. His pupil, now expert in the art of boxing, knocks all three out, and then notifies the police. This is a clean cut comedy that most audiences will enjoy to the utmost.

THE GUN GAME (Western), May 1.—A two-reel Western melodramatic subject, written by W. C. Tuttle and directed by Art Flaven. Josephine Hill and Bob Reeves play the hero and heroine. This is developed with plenty of plot and action and has a strong climax of a sanguinary sort. It would no doubt be more satisfying to the spectator if the shooting of the crooked partners had been accidental rather than by deliberate contrivance of the hero; his arrangement seemed too safe for himself and pretty cold-blooded. The action and development are good.

The Questions on Optics

11. WHAT is the relative light giving power per watt of energy taken from the line, of an arc fed by D C through a motor generator set and A C taken through an "Economizer"? (P. 293-4).
12. What law is involved in distance of crater from lens, and how does it operate? (P. 157-8).
13. What is the limit of distance of crater from lens? As close as it can be set without undue lens breakage.
14. What direct effect on light economy has poor lamphouse ventilation? Ans.—It raises the temperature inside the lamphouse, thus compelling the placing of the crater further from the lens to keep down breakage.
15. What are the requisites of a good condenser lens? (P. 127-8).
16. What objections are there to a thick-edge condenser lens? (P. 127).
17. Why should condensers have a true, well polished surface? (P. 127).
18. Should the surface of a condenser lens be ground? (P. 126-7).
19. Does color in a condenser lens do harm? (P. 128).
20. Name the various reasons why condenser lenses should be set as close together as possible without actually touching each other. (P. 115, plus the fact that lens charts are based on E F of condenser combination when lenses are set that way.)

Some Real Mazda Dope

Recently our old friend, Leo Smeltzer, chief projectionist, Kearny Theatre, San Francisco, told us he was getting "excellent results" with Mazda.

Now the editor knows Smeltzer, and that he is a thoroughly competent projectionist, whose opinion in such a matter is worthy of serious consideration, hence we asked Uncle Sam to convey to him a message requesting further, detailed information concerning the proposition as a whole, and certain details thereof as well.

Here is his reply:

Answering your query as to clearness of details in my Mazda projected picture (We asked him if he did not lose much of the finer details of photographic shading through weakness of illumination. Ed.) as compared with when we used an arc, will say that prior to installation of Mazda we used 33 amperes D C through rheostats, and outside the softness of the light as compared to the arc the picture is absolutely as good, even to the finer details.

I do, however, notice a hesitancy in the light piercing the dark blue tones some producers inflict on their titles, for which they should be arrested and summarily dealt with, or at least their service refused.

We have discarded D C entirely, using A C through choke coil transformers, wound evenly for volts and amperes, the same being, of course, in series with the lamps.

By the way, I find it a good scheme to drop the core of the coil to normal on leaving for the night, so that next day the lamps will be started on low amperage and gradually warmed up.

Chief Trouble With Lamps.

I find the worst trouble with the lamps themselves to be an imperfect seal. The manufacturers tell me they have as yet been unable to produce a perfect seal, which will withstand the high temperature.

Another thing, the present type of holder, or socket is entirely too light in construction for perfect radiation of heat.

So far I have not burned out more than Either booklet, postpaid, twenty-five cents; both, forty cents. United States stamps accepted; cannot use Canadian stamps.

THE LENS CHARTS.

Are You Working by "Guess," or Do You Employ Up-to-Date Methods?

You demand that your employer keep his equipment in good order and up to date. He owes it both to himself and to you to do so, but you owe it to him to keep abreast with the times in knowledge and in your methods.

The lens charts (two in one, 11x17 inches, on heavy paper for framing) are in successful use by hundreds of progressive projectionists.

Don't "guess." Do your work RIGHT. Price, fifty cents, stamps.

one filament, though I have been obliged to discard some lamps after fifty days on account of discoloration of the glass—turning black—to such an extent that the light value was injured.

My opinion, based on experiment, is that the addition of a metal ring about one-half inch thick and one inch wide, clear around the top of the socket, and retained in close contact therewith by means of screws, would solve some of the difficulty. For one thing it caused the lamps to last longer.

One of the things which cuts lights heavily, and which must be very carefully guarded against, is a dirty reflector. This should be washed off with clean water occasionally. (Wonder about what friend Smeltzer means by "occasionally." Might be quite a stretchable term. Ed.)

My shutters are 2-blade, reduced to the limit (Hugely important with Mazda. With a comparatively weak illuminant the shutter may be reduced decidedly more than with a brilliant light. Moreover the yellowish tint of the light, as compared with arc illumination, adds to the possibility for shutter reduction. Ed.) and BOTH blades are perforated and set at extreme end of shaft, so as to catch as nearly as possible an exact focal image of lamp filament (aerial image of condenser—Ed.) projected through pin-hole in dowsler.

The shutters should go two inches further out, but there is nothing to hang them on, which is a serious fault in present machine construction. (You can get extra length shutter shafts from the manufacturer. Ed.) Even so little as one-sixteenth of an inch with respect to distance from lamp filament to condenser surface makes or mars the screen results.

Another thing, the spot is much hotter, or seems so, and will fire any bits of film which lodge in aperture more quickly than will the arc; also it heats up the whole gate and aperture to such an extent that the film often buckles if threading is done too quickly after shutting the projector down.

Awaiting With Interest.

I am awaiting, with considerable interest, the advent of a fifty ampere, or at least a 1,600 watt lamp, believing it will place Mr. A C transformer, mercury arc rectifier et al on the shelf for good and all, while at the same time consuming less wattage than the regulation arc. Saving in current has been about (average) $35 per month, with results as above set forth. Of course, no projectionist is afraid of work, but should some future one desire to sleep on duty the Mazda offers wonderful opportunity.

Mazda Manufacturers Attention.

The attention of manufacturers of Mazda equipment is pointedly directed to Mr. Smeltzer's remarks, because Leo Smeltzer is no tyro.

From what he says with regard to illumination I take it he regards the Mazda, when properly and expertly handled, to be the equal of a well handled thirty ampere D C arc, BUT notice, take note, set it down that Smeltzer is a projectionist, NOT an "operator." He knows his business. He understands how to take advantage of proper shutter location and blade reduction.

If he did not he most emphatically would NOT get the results he is getting. Make no mistake on that point. That would not, of course, be any fault of the Mazda, but of the man himself.

BUT it would be well for those making Mazda installations to take note and, after setting the shutter at or as near the aerial image as possible, to reduce its blade to the last limit of possibility.

It means a LOT more light in many, if not most cases, and unless either the installer or the projectionist gets that light the reputation of the Mazda will suffer.

I cannot agree with Smeltzer's performing stunt. In that we are sure he is in error.

He gains no actual picture light by perforating the master blade, and surely there is no very bad inclination to flicker. That heat radiating ring sounds good to us.

Mazda Users Take Note.

We believe the time has arrived when we should welcome data from projectionists using Mazda equipment. Let us hear from you with your ideas as to faults in equipment, possible remedies and how you regard the Mazda as compared with arc light for projection.

We submitted this to the Argus Lamp & Appliance Company, which corporation suggested that already some of it was rather out of date, and that before publication we go to Lynn, Mass., and look over the whole Mazda proposition in its latest developments. To this we agreed, but one thing after another has delayed the proposed visit for so long a time, with no certainty of making it in the immediate future, that we have decided to release this matter.

We will follow, of course, with what we finally find in Lynn at a later date. Meanwhile, we will welcome short notes on experience of theatre managers and projectionists who are using Mazda, especially as to how the audiences have accepted it and what faults are found in the equipment itself.

Give Us the Location

The following letter from Carl Ellis, Harlem, Montana, is typical of many this department receives:

Find enclosed twenty-five cents for second question booklet. Can you tell me where I should apply for admission to the Projectionist and Stage Hands' Union? Have desired to join for quite some time, but lacked the necessary information. Have been projecting pictures for eight years, and think it about time I joined. Also what are the requirements and fees for joining?

When asking such questions for Heaven's sake give me the exact location of your town. Sometimes I am able to find it and sometimes not. Harlem is not listed in the towns of Montana on my atlas, and I just simply cannot spare time to search the whole state map.

A man is always within the jurisdiction of the union he is nearest to in distance. Montana has unions in Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Billings, Great Falls, Lewiston and Missoula that I can think of offhand.

You belong in the one you are nearest, but it is not at all certain the union you are eligible to will take you in.

As to requirements for joining, why you must have been within the jurisdiction of the union you apply to for not less than six months. You must be working as a projectionist and must be able to pass such explanation as the union may see fit to impose, which in most cases I have personal knowledge of amounts to very little.

The cost of joining varies, different unions charging different initiation fees. Some are as low as ten dollars and some more than a hundred.

Well Put, Indeed

Recently Betty Flack, a member of the spring graduating class of the Greenport, Long Island, schools, wrote the editor of this department asking information as to the early history of the moving picture industry, that subject having been given her as the theme of her graduating paper.

We sent Miss Flack such data as was at hand, and she in return mailed us a copy of the paper she prepared, at the ending of which was a sentence we think would call for something more than a mere passing glance if it came from the pen of a seasoned writer. From a school girl it is remarkable. It reads:

The world has been conquered by the motion picture, because it has given to the world something its heart and mind desired; something which has made the world brighter, better and happier.

Seems to us that that sentence epitomizes the motion picture in its relation to human affairs pretty thoroughly. If it is original with Miss Flack, as we have no reason to suppose it is not, she is entitled to distinct credit for having put a long story into one perfectly worded sentence.

Projectionists Not Admitted

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has decided it would be unwise to admit to membership any one not a recognized engineer in some branch of the industry. This matter was discussed at some length at the Pittsburgh meeting when the admission of projectionists to membership was broached.

Long Focal Length Condensers

At last we have found a place where condenser lenses of any desired length, up to even the most extreme requirement of the high amperage chart, may be had. Cannot quote prices but the lenses may be had from C. & A. Matisse, 551 116th street, New York City.

This model is for standard film.

The Cosmograph

Dwyer Brothers and Company, of Cincinnati, are placing on the market a new, and in many respects a unique portable projector of the now familiar "suitcase" variety. It is to be known as the "Cosmograph" and is designed for use in class rooms, for semi-private entertainments, for advertising purposes, and home projection.

The Cosmograph will be made in two sizes, one for regular standard, and one for narrow width standard film, which is, it seems to us, a distinct recommendation, in that it leaves to the purchaser the choice as between the use of inflammable and non-inflammable film and puts such hazard as may lie in the use of inflammable film squarely up to the user.

Narrow Width Projector Is Small.

The narrow width standard projector is quite unique in the matter of size. It is the smallest and lightest really practical and substantially built motor driven projector we have ever examined.

Complete, with motor, it is something like fourteen inches long by a foot in height. The castings are all of aluminum and the whole machine weighs only seventeen and a half pounds, though the addition of the carrying case brings the weight up to twenty-two pounds.

Weight, 17½ pounds. A—framing lever; B—motor speed control; C—switch, controlling both motor and lamp.

Projection light is supplied by means of a tubular "Mazda," which gives what seems to be very satisfactory screen brilliancy.

Regular Projector Is Larger.

The regular Cosmograph, used for standard film, is a considerably larger machine, but it nevertheless fits into a carrying case eighteen inches long, a foot high and eight inches wide, same being substantially constructed of wood, and lined with fireproofing. The case is neat in appearance, though we incline to the view that the purchaser would prefer the "leather" covered case to varnished oak.

When ready for action the projector rests on top of the case, to which it is rigidly anchored. When projection is under way both reels are within the carrying case and entirely enclosed. The frame of the projector is of aluminum, which makes for lightness. As will be seen in the accompanying illustrations, the motor is attached to the front of the projector, just to the right of the objective as we look toward the lamphouse. It is of the "universal" type, and is direct connected to the mechanism by means of a universal joint.

Control of Speed.

Control of projection speed is accomplished by rotating the brushes upon the commutator, the handle used for this purpose being located immediately under the objective. The framing lever also is located immediately under the objective, but the one does not interfere with the other.

The lamphouse is of heavy Russian iron, 6.5 inches square by four deep, front to back. Back of the 400 watt Mazda lamp is a silver-surface glass reflector, rigidly secured in place. The condensers ordinarily used are of the corrugated type, but there is provision for instant change to either plano convex or meniscus bi-convex, if those lenses be preferred.

Combination Projector.

The lamphouse swings over from moving picture to stereopticon, which latter is incorporated in very excellent form. Both the light and the motor are handled by a single four-point snap switch, conveniently located on the working side of the projector.

The take-up is of the friction disc type, similar in action to that employed on professional projectors.

Both reels are in the carrying case when projection is in process. The path of the film is up out of the case, through a fire trap, over what corresponds to the upper feed sprocket of the professional projector, on up, forming upper loop as at "A" figure 1, down through the stripper plates, which correspond to the "gate" or "film trap" in other projectors, over the aperture, to the intermittent sprocket, over the lower sprocket and through a fire trap back into the case and onto the take-up reel. The feed reel and take-up reel as almost side by side. Rewinding is accomplished by changing the position of the reels, throwing the gear shift out and starting the motor.

There Is No Gate.

The Cosmograph has no "gate." Instead are two "stripper plates" of spring steel. By means of a convenient arrangement these plates may be pulled outward sufficiently to relieve all tension, whereupon the film is slipped down through across the aperture to the intermittent sprocket.

This arrangement should work well. It saves both manufacturing cost and space in operation. The mechanism is equipped with the usual governor controlled automatic fire shutter.

The intermittent movement is encased in

Due to the construction of the mechanism objectives of any diameter or any focal length may be used.

We have viewed the projection of a picture with the Cosmograph and must in justice say it compares very favorably in screen results with other projectors of its class.

The Cosmograph is welcomed to the projection field by this department as offering a new and worthy addition to the family of Portable Projectors.

A Simple Chinese Puzzle

Daniel Graney, New York City, is puzzled by the lens chart No. 2. Says that to him it is a Chinese puzzle.

Well, brother Graney, it is very easily explained. Chart No. 2 is intended to tell you the correct distance to place the revolving shutter from the aperture in order that it will cut the light ray at its point of least diameter, which is the aerial image of the condenser.

By setting the shutter at the aerial image it is possible to reduce the master blade of the shutter to its least possible width, and thus secure the maximum of illumination on the screen.

First, let me explain exactly what the aerial image of the condenser is. The objective has what are termed "conjugate foci points." These points are respectively the object and image. On one side of the lens it is the distance from the optical center of the lens combination to the object, and on the other side it is the distance from the optical center of the lens to the image.

The objective acts literally as a photographic lens. It photographs the film in the aperture, the image being formed at or on the screen. If there were no screen then it would be an "aerial image." In this instance the first distance is short and the second long. As you lengthen the distance from object to lens you automatically shorten the other distance.

Photographs Front Surface.

The objective also photographs the front surface of the condenser, but in that instance the object (condenser) is much farther away from the lens than is the case with the film; hence the other conjugate length (distance to screen) is immensely shortened, and will be just a few inches from the lens—sometimes, as with very short focal length lenses, even inside the lens barrel.

But at that point there is an image of the condenser surface formed, which you may see quite clearly if you hold a sheet of black paper (black because the image is so brilliant that you could not see it clearly on white paper) at the point where it is formed.

In lens chart No. 2 the distance of the aerial image from the aperture is indicated, and since the aerial image is the point at which the revolving shutter should be set, it therefore is the position of the revolving shutter, with this proviso that, owing to the fact that brother Griffith based his calculations of distance on a simple, instead of a compound lens, all these distances are about one inch long.

In other words, one inch should be subtracted therefrom. Lens chart No. 2 is of no large value, anyhow. It was merely given for the sake of completeness. I have wished sometimes that it had been omitted, because the correct position of the revolving shutter may be ascertained in a number of other ways, and quite a few seem unable to understand its workings.

A Typical Example.

Taking a typical example, say a five-inch E F objective, or projection lens as we then called it, with a nineteen inch distance from center of condenser combination to aperture, it is worked out thusly: First we find the five-inch E F lens in the left hand column, it being the fifth from the top.

We then find the nineteen inch column in "Distance from Condenser to Aperture," and where the two cross we find just nothing at all, but in the next column, which is for the 20-inch distance, we find 11.25 inches as the distance of shutter from aperture, from which one inch should be subtracted for error, leaving 10.25 as the correct distance where the lens is five inch E F, and the distance 20 inches.

We also find that the size of the aerial image will be sixty-nine hundredths of an inch high by nine-tenths of an inch wide. This, too, was put in merely for the sake of completeness. It has no large value to the projectionist, except that he be advanced far enough that he can lay out his shutter blade width with the data, and few can do that as yet.

Distance Is Little Altered.

But all this is for twenty inches instead of nineteen. But if we go way back to the fifteen inch column we find the distance is altered but a little more than a quarter of an inch, so the difference as between the nineteen and twenty we may discard as negligible, insofar as concerns distance.

If the distance were seventeen we would add the fifteen and twenty distances together and divide by two for the right distance, because fifteen is just half way between.

It would, in fact, be very easy to compute the precise distance in the case under consideration by subtracting 11.25 from 11.6 and then adding one-sixth of the result to 11.25. True, the aerial image changes very much more with added or lessened distance, but that you can only use in calculating shutter blade width by geometry, which I think few will attempt.

Flexible Calsomine Screen

It has been suggested that a cloth screen may be coated with calomine and still remain sufficiently flexible to roll on a roller by mixing about a quarter of a cake of common yellow soap in each bucket of water used for the white fish glue sizing and the same amount in each bucket of water used for the calomine.

Of course, one would hardly use a full bucket of water for either the size or calomine—certainly not for the latter, and a proportionately less amount of soap should be used.

How to Cash in on Catering to the Thirsty Kid and the Tired Shopper

"BAW I wanna dink." You exhibitors know the cry and you have been dreading its greater prevalence during the coming warm weather.

And you are not the only ones who do not like it. Those in the immediate vicinity of the thirsty youngster commence to audibly find so many extenuating reasons for the late Mr. Herod's actions that the kid's mother, becoming visibly embarrassed withdraws with her progeny and the house has lost the good will of several patrons.

It's a feature of the psychology of happy childhood to become suddenly and inordinately thirsty at the most inconvenient times and wise mothers, reckoning on this, often hesitate to enjoy the pictures as often as they would like, solely for this reason. The unwise ones who do not wake up to the fact often become a storm centre that ruins a feature picture and the proprietor's peace of mind.

But, once let the mothers know that proper drinking facilities are a feature of your picture theatre, there will be a sudden and gratifying increase of family attendance at the matinee shows.

Pure Box Office Velvet.

And the increased attendance will not be confined to mothers and kids either. Many a tired and thirsty shopper who has arrived at that stage where soda fountain decoctions are but an aggravation will figure that a long, satisfying drink of pure cold water from a new and sanitary cup combined with a few minutes restful contemplation of your pictures is the best possible wind-up of her afternoon. All of which will be pure velvet to the box office.

And, it is the simplest matter possible to add such an extra attraction to the features of your picture theatre. The Individual Drinking Cup Company, of 220 West Nineteenth street, New York, furnish a sanitary cup vender particularly adapted to picture theatre service.

Where this system is installed the patron may obtain a drinking cup at a cost of one cent, thereby allowing the house to cash in on a big attraction.

The vendors are of glass and nickelplated metal, attractively constructed, and occupy but thirty-one inches in height and four and one-half in width, standing out but five and one-half inches from the wall.

They may be installed on the rear aisle or at intervals along the side aisles, according to the seating capacity of the house. The cups are packed in sanitary, dust-proof cartons and the dispensers keep them equally well protected until a pull of the feed lever, which any child can operate, brings one into the patron's hand.

The Cups Are Attractive.

The cups are neat and attractive and absolutely sanitary and immediately impress the drinker with absolute confidence in their cleanliness.

No small amount of the patronage enjoyed by the big chain of Exchange Buffet restaurants of New York City is due to the fact that these eating places are equipped with the Individual Drinking Cup Company's dispensers and cups.

turing it on his screen, in his newspaper advertising and programs and in his out-door and lobby displays will find that he is cashing in, not only on increased patronage but also on the liberal revenue afforded by the sale of cups.

If You Are Building or Renovating These Ornaments Will Interest You

FOR the benefit of the exhibitor who contemplates the erection of a new house or the dolling up of his present theatre, we illustrate some typical examples of what may be obtained in the way of plastic relief ornaments.

These are stock designs and may be ordered in just the quantity required for each individual theatre. Each item may be obtained in several styles of ornamentation and design and in varying dimensions, to harmonize with the architecture and decorative scheme of the house.

Number 2545 is a bracket for use under balcony boxes where the rise from a lower to a higher floor level occurs between boxes. It has a projection of forty-six inches, a drop of thirty inches and is eight inches wide. The leaf design at sides combined with beaded effect of under surface and the drop button make it particularly ornamental.

Attractive Fan Brackets.

Illustration Number 2471 shows an attractive fan bracket or shelf. It is nine inches wide, projects eleven inches and has a drop of nine and one half inches and combines practical utility with beauty.

For the proscenium arch columns, number 2412 shows a pleasing design. This has a fifty inch drop, projects thirteen and one half inches and is eighteen inches wide. The ornamentation of wreaths and leaves is pleasing.

For use over the jambs on the auditorium side of entrance doors from foyer to auditorium number 2404 shows what may be obtained in the way of ornamentation. The specimen illustrated projects six inches has a drop of twenty-three and one half inches and ten inches wide.

The flower and leaf design of number 2360 is for use as a centre piece on balcony fascia. The ornament is thirty-four and a half inches wide at top, tapering to a twenty inch bottom width, and drops twenty-seven inches. The style shown would be in harmony with elaborate interior decorations.

For a centre piece to be used over the proscenium arch, number 3516 is a suggestion. The design shown measures thirty inches in width and is twenty-three and one half inches high.

Ventilating Grilles.

Figures 4503 and 4524 show two designs of ventilating grilles. The former is a basket weave design, with a centre rosette. It is thirty nine inches in diameter with a three inch relief.

The second grille has a rosette border design and is forty-four and one half inches

Here Are Some More Typhoon Sales Worth Blowing About

DURING the past week, the Typhoon Fan Company of New York, has received orders to equip the following theatres with the Typhoon cooling and ventilating system:

Martin Theatre, Lake Haven, Pa.; Lyric, Fulton, Ohio; Elgin, Anderson, Pa.; Port Smith Theatre, Port Smith, Ark.; Garden Theatre, N. J.; Colonial, Philadelphia; Lyric, Tampa, Fla.; Warner, Columbus, S. C.; Capitol and Empire Theatres, Macon, Ga.; Liberty, Albany, Ga.

Robert Ganshous, president of the Typhoon Fan Company, who is at the present on a trip through the southern states, reports that never before have theatre managers shown so great a desire to protect their patrons from summer discomforts.

Martin Wrote "Blind Love."

Robert F. Martin's photodramatic production "Blind Love," starring Lily Carter and starring throughout New York and New Jersey is a screen version of one of the best successful plays of Max Martin, author of "The Eyes of Youth." The Memphis Review says "and other about and screen production." During the summer Mr. Martin will produce a screen version of "The Girl from Boston."

Picture printed in Moving Picture World and complete with all the information necessary from the production experts as it will be presented on the screen of your theatre. That's why our readers are delighted.

A SMALL INVESTMENT— LARGE RETURNS—

This Machine is designed to apply a wax compound to the margin of New Films, to prevent damage during the first few runs thru the Projecting Machine.

The collecting of emulsion from "green" films on aperture plate and tension springs of the projector is in many cases causing untold damage to the film and excessive wear to the projector as well as marring the presentation on the screen by jumping.

Proper Waxing of New Films—

Prolongs the life of the Film.
Eliminates excessive wear on Projecting Machine.
Insures Steady Pictures on the screen.
Prevents tearing of sprocket holes by emulsion deposits.

AND

Saves the film from having Oil squirted all over it by some Operator trying to get "green" film thru his machine without a stop.

The Werner Film Waxing Machine applies the Compound accurately to the margin of the film and positively will not spread wax onto the picture.
Wax always in position. Requires no adjusting.

NINE years ago the first Simplex was put into commercial use.

Since then thousands of them have been installed.

Seems as though some of them should be showing signs of old age.

But every day we receive letters from users of our earlier models asking that their mechanisms be equipped with up-to-date appliances: think of a nine-year-old picture machine ready for another period of faithful service!!

And, do you know, it's quite a problem to pick up a second-hand SIMPLEX?

When next you visit your supply man's repair shop, see if you can find a "sick" Simplex—and then count the number of other machines that are on the shelf for "treatment."

Nicholas Power Company,
#90 Gold St.,
New York City, N.Y.

Dear Sir:-

In reply to your inquiry as to the results we are receiving from your Powers Projecting Machines, will say that it is with pleasure we are able to report that same have been giving us perfect satisfaction.

We are using two of your machines for projecting our release prints and on each of these machines we are projecting in the neighborhood of thirty thousand feet of film per day. This amount of footage is in considerable excess to that which a machine would be subject to under ordinary conditions and, taking into consideration the rate of speed which we are obliged to run these machines in order to put through the required number of release prints per day, and also the perfect condition in which these machines are now in - after being in service for two years - demonstrates to us the perfection in the manufacture of these machines.

We must have perfect projection for our releases and have found, by experience, that the Nicholas Power Machines fulfill our needs to the fullest extent.

95% of the machines used by the studios and laboratories in Los Angeles and vicinity are Power's.

Results!

AS long as motion pictures have been in existence distributors have been using posters. Exhibitors have used them for an exactly equal length of time. In the mind of every distributor of posters are certain likes and dislikes,—prejudices and partialities,—inhibitions and tolerances.

The exhibitor judges only by results.

The RITCHEY poster is designed primarily to get results.

Every quality put into it is put there for that one purpose,—to get results! And for that one purpose only!

It is made attractive,—to get results! The greatest possible appeal is put into it,—to get results! It is made convincing with that sole end in view,—to get results! Box-office results,—ticket selling results,—results that can be counted in terms of dollars and cents!

Such results mean something to the exhibitor. In fact, they mean everything to him. For that reason the RITCHEY trade-mark has come to stand as a literal emblem for his prosperity.

IT GETS RESULTS!

"Why Change Your Wife?"

Photoplay by William De Mille.

A Paramount Artcraft Picture

EVERYBODY knew that "Why Change Your Wife?" would break records. Because De Mille pictures always do!

At Grauman's in Los Angeles it ran to unprecedented business for seven weeks, playing to more people than any picture ever did in that city.

In Denver it ran simultaneously at the two largest theatres, breaking all records.

In a dozen other cities—everywhere it has been shown—it has produced the same results.

Now "Why Change Your Wife?" is conquering New York. It opened to tremendous business, and bids fair to break all records for motion pictures in the metropolis.

You take no chances when you show a De Mille picture. Every one is a box-office knockout!

It Was Midnight—

The Transcontinental was snow-bound—on the edge of the Arctic.
Inside one of the coaches sat
David Raine.
He was telling his story. He was running away from a shattered romance and tragedy. He was trying to lose himself.

"It was late when I reached home—unexpectedly," said
David.
"I heard voices from her room.
I went in—

"No. I didn't kill them.
I don't know why
I didn't kill the man.
He was a coward.
That man.
He crawled away like a worm. Perhaps that's why I didn't kill him.
And the wonderful part of it.
My wife.
She was not afraid.
She stood up in her
ravishing dishevelment.
And she laughed!
Yes, she laughed.
A mad sort of laugh.
A laughter of fear,
perhaps, but laughter!"

The greatest living author of tales of romance and adventure in the frozen North.
It is a master story made into a masterly photoplay production—with strong men and Sakewawin!

In Indian that means:
"I belong to you."
That's what Marge
O'Doone,
the little mountain
pixie of the Arctic, called David Raine.
A pretty name for himself he had told the girl, but he didn't know what it meant.

But one day he found out
And from then on it was the fight of his life—for Marge—the little nymph of the North, whose picture had been the lure that beckoned him onward through the freezing cold and the heartbreaking hardships of the vast frozen
Northland.

And what a fight he made of it!
From that point onward, comes the breathless moments, the surprise and suspense in:

It is the brain-child of a born story of the universe—

romance and adventure.
It breathes mystery and thrills, surprises and suspense and it strides along against a background of awesome beauty—the gods'

CONCEDED THE

The verdict of two

Dear Mr. Christie:

WE DO NOT hesitate for a minute to say that "Save Me Sadie" is the very best laugh producer we have ever shown in this theatre except possibly those comedies for which we pay fifteen hundred per cent more than yours cost. "Christie Comedy" means something to our patrons because the goodness of your product is consistent. They are clean, really humorous, full of fast action, and have definite, clean cut stories of merit. You very efficiently take more pains in selecting stories, casting characters, selecting types and ensuring every one concerned than does any other comedy producing company.

Very cordially,

Dear Mr. Christie:

THE enclosed copies of the Sunday Sentinel and Mil-doubt that the popularity of Christie Comedies is without a parallel. The manager of the Merrill Theatre after screening

"Petticoats and Pants" voluntar-stated that it was the best two-

Mr. J. S. Woody, General Manager,
Realart Pictures Corporation,
469 Fifth Avenue,
New York City, N.Y.

Dear Mr Woody:

I booked Miss Wanda Hawley in "MISS HOBBS" because of my knowledge of Miss Hawley's ability through my observance of her in recent DeMille productions. I am heartily in favor of Realart's policy of declining to ask exhibitors to sign a Hawley series contract at the beginning. I also, on account of knowing the producer, the star, the story and the director, feel quite confident that a preview of "MISS HOBBS" is not necessary, because Miss Hawley's entire future and success with Realart hinges on her first production, and realizing this fact I feel quite certain that "MISS HOBBS" will reach my fullest expectation, not forgetting, in the meantime, the good treatment accorded me by Realart executives.

Very truly yours,

MOORE'S THEATERS CORPORATION.

From the British Point of View

WE are told that there is a great stirring of the waters among the cinema makers of foreign lands, and a glance through the trade journals of the distant countries across the Atlantic confirms the report. The keynote of most of the articles is the claim that the best of their several products will compare favorably with the American pictures. Glad to hear it! The more prosperous the moving picture business the world over, the better for us all. The following item reprinted by The Bioscope of London, England, from the Toronto Film Trade Journal, describes the reception of a British made picture at Ottawa, Canada:

"It is evident that the sympathy and sentiment of the crowd was aroused toward the British pictures, while the exhibitors who saw the presentation, and who looked upon it more from the box office point of view, regarded the release as being among the best things that has ever been brought from England. One newspaper man declared that the picture equalled the productions of well-known American companies."

All of the above is very flattering to the pictures made under the stars and stripes. But our British cousins have not lost their clearness of preception, when it comes to discovering the weak points of the American made article. Kinematograph has a correspondent who writes to the editor of the English publication on the subject of "American Film Sub-titles" in this pertinent fashion:

"If the wonder of British kinema patrons is aroused as to who is the responsible person for the wording of American film sub-titles, it is surely quite pardonable. When one sees commonplace words such as 'necessary,' spelt 'necessary,' on famous serials, one must wonder why literary men are not employed to see to these small, yet important matters."

"Punctuation is also in some cases neglected. It is familiar to see such sentences as: 'Not a false move John.' This read with the omitted comma, conveys its intended meaning: 'Not a false move, John.' There is no reason why greater care should not be exercised over spelling and punctuation, as these are important features in raising the standard of a production."

All of which is referred to the makers of the errors.

Here are a few English opinions on the running of a moving picture theatre, taken from The Bioscope:

"The show business differs from many others inasmuch as the staff and manager are more together, and in many shows are much of a family circle. A tactful manager can always hold the respect of his staff, and that respect is reflected in the attention given to patrons. The patrons feel they have an interest in the show, it becomes a part of their family life, and we look forward to the time when the phrase 'our family cinema' will be as familiar as 'our family doctor.'"

"Many exhibitors feel that it is not business-like to give a pleasant 'good evening' to the members of the staff as they enter the show, or to pass a cheery word during the performance; others remember that the staff have, amongst other things, stomachs, and even go so far as to give them a cup of tea during the interval."

The American exhibitor has introduced many innovations in the management of the moving picture theatre, and the "family cinema" is already a result of his foresight. As to "giving the staff a pleasant good evening or passing a cheery word," it is quite likely that this is a general custom in the States, and it costs nothing, at any rate. But the cup of tea during the interval is an entirely different kettle of fish. Not that the expense would be too great, but the taste on this side of the pond runs strongly to ice cream sodas and nut sundaes—unless too powerfully influenced by regretful remembrances of the lately departed 2.75 per cent.

No Increase in Prices

THE industry is sticking by its guns. A canvass made this week by Moving Picture World reveals the gratifying fact that the big Broadway picture houses are not contemplating an increase in prices, thus taking a stand opposite to that of several legitimate producers who have announced a five-dollar-a-seat policy for the fall.

The attitude taken by the directors of New York's finest picture theatres was that their function was to provide entertainment at as reasonable figure as possible, and that to this end they would not revise their scale of fees upward simply because it was being done in legitimate quarters.

The picture belongs to the public. It must be reached by the public as often and as cheaply as possible if it would keep its place as the greatest modern entertainer and educator.

With the Independents

THE announcement that the Associated Producers, Inc., has formed its own distributing company with Oscar A. Price as president, and F. B. Warren as general manager gives the independent producing directors a direct route for their output that must materially strengthen this branch of the moving picture industry. New methods and new blood in the independent field cannot but stimulate that competition that is the life of every pursuit. Another article in this week's issue tells of the arrival of an entirely new factor among the independents—the producing manager. As time and experience develop additional recruits in this branch of screen activity the independents will not be able to enroll them all under their banner. The services of these men will also be sought by the old and firmly established producing and distributing companies, and the cause of good pictures will be assisted by new and powerful allies. Expert knowledge of every department of picture making is necessary for the man who is the court of last appeal while the literary adviser, scenario writer, director, camera man and film editor are engaged in their several tasks. Pictures frequently reveal slight or important discrepancies, traceable to this or that department, that should have been caught at their inception. The producing manager who devotes his time solely to supervising the making of his pictures is the best guarantee that all such discrepancies will be corrected before the films reach the public.

"Standee Bill" Fizzles When Its Sponsors Fail to Appear

IN view of the fact that no person appeared at the recent hearing before the Congressional District of Columbia committee in favor of the bill introduced by Congressman Loren E. Wheeler, of Illinois, which would have prohibited "standees" in Washington theatres, it is not believed that the committee will make a favorable report.

Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, had charge of the hearing for all the theatre and amusement interests. A meeting of the theatre managers was held prior to the hearing and Mr. Connolly was invited to be chairman of that meeting as well as preside at the hearing.

All the arguments at the hearing were in opposition to the bill. Congressman Wheeler, when asked to make a statement to the committee, refused to do so. The committee of managers which has had charge of the campaign against the bill is made up of Roland Robbins, of the Keith Theatre; Tom Moore, of the Moore Enterprises; Charles Linkins, of the Empire Theatre; and Lawrence Beatus, of the Marcus Loew interests.

Harry M. Crandall, president of the Associated Exhibitors of America, also owner of a chain of motion picture theatres in Washington, made the principal argument against the bill.

Says Foundation Film Title Conflicts with "Blind Youth"

THE United States Circuit Court of Appeals, of New York, has granted the National Picture Theatres, Inc., an injunction restraining the Foundation Film Corporation from using the title, "The Blindness of Youth," on the ground that it conflicts with the plaintiff's production of "Blind Youth."

Lewis J. Selznick, speaking for National Picture Theatres, Inc., said: "We do not wish to visit harm nor injure the exhibitors who have booked 'The Blindness of Youth,' but we will insist that any exhibitor who will book 'The Blindness of Youth' will do so at his peril. We wish to be fair in the matter and also wish it understood that we are going to stand on the rights guaranteed National Picture Theatres, Inc., by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals."

Pigeonhole Advertising Tax Bill.

Congress will not consider at the present session the bill recently introduced in the House of Representatives, contemplating a 10 per cent. tax on advertising. This prediction is based on statements made by the leading members of the House, who, in common with all of their colleagues, have found their mail full of letters protesting against the adoption of the bill.

"The demand for such a law," said Republican Floor Leader Mondell, "comes from the fact that in their effort to escape the payment of income and profits taxes many business men have been spending almost unlimited sums in advertising. The objection to the bill is that it would not only lay a very heavy burden on the tax-dodging advertising, but would lay an equally heavy burden on legitimate advertising. Such a condition would be undesirable. Off hand, I can see no probability of Congress taking any such action as contemplated by this bill."

New York Repeals Daylight Saving.

The New York State Legislature finally repealed the daylight saving law after a strenuous fight. The legislators of rural districts will find commendation in their own districts, but those from the cities will probably be condemned. Governor Smith, according to some of his closest friends, may yet lay this proposed law, in which proprietors of motion picture theatres are interested.

N. A. M. P. I. Annual Report Tells Important Activities

THE annual report of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., which reviews a variety of accomplishments along many lines of interest and importance to the trade, has been completed and is now being issued. Besides the minutes of the third annual meeting on August 5, 1919, President William A. Brady's address, the board of directors' meeting and Executive Secretary Frederick H. Elliott's report, it contains highly interesting committee reports on censorship, Sunday opening, film exchange building, fire prevention regulations, organization of F. I. L. M. clubs, film theft, legal and legislative and transportation.

Among the most notable reports are those of the first two committees mentioned. Work of the greatest good has been done by the censorship committee, headed by Gabriel L. Hess, of Goldwyn, and the Sunday opening committee, headed by Arthur S. Friend, of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. This can fairly be said without detracting any from the meritorious work of the other committees, because of the overwhelming importance of the work entrusted to Mr. Hess's and Mr. Friend's committees.

Picture Theatre Attendance Still Increases, Tax Shows

TAXES collected on admissions to moving picture theatres and other places of amusement during February totaled $6,167,717.42, according to a report just secured by the Washington Bureau of Moving Picture World from the commissioner of internal revenue, an increase of $1,411,532.52 over the collections for the same month of last year.

This brings the collections from the admission tax for the first eight months of the current fiscal year to $47,404,376.08, an increase of $17,564,303.42 over the corresponding period of the fiscal year 1919. During February the bureau also collected $295,923.07 from the rental tax and $22,958.87 from the seating tax.

Total collections by the bureau during the month aggregated $177,783,952, making the total for the first eight months of the fiscal year $3,119,863,891, nearly three times the collected total for the same period of last year, which was $1,090,000,577.

Among the items collected during the month were $11,660,473 from freight transported, $60,058 from express matter, $7,991,435 from personal transportation, $489,192 from seats, berths and staterooms, and $1,014,639 from telegraph and long-distance telephone messages.

Exchange Rate Gives Germans Advantage in Scandinavia

GERMANY is already showing itself as a competitor of the United States film market, according to John Lundquist, manager of the Scandinavian office of David P. Howells, Inc. He arrived last week from Stockholm to spend two months at the Howells executive offices in New York.

"German films as well as French pictures are coming into the Scandinavian market in increasing numbers," said Mr. Lundquist, "and a few British productions are being released. Probably Germany, which is the most serious competitor of the United States in the Scandinavian market, would not have been able to make the inroads it has, but for the big discrepancy in exchange rate between the United States and the countries of northern Europe."

As an evidence of the favorable exchange rates under which Germany is operating in the Scandinavian territory, Mr. Lundquist cites the fact that last February it took 5 kroner, 50 ore in Swedish money to buy an American dollar, while 5 kroner would buy 100 German marks.

First Film Filed as Court Exhibit.

For the first time, a moving picture film is to be filed with the United States Supreme Court, as an exhibit. Although, in cases involving moving picture patents, films were once before filed as an exhibit, the films in the previous case were filed as film and not as photographs.

In the present instance the Bass Petroleum Company, of Texas, has filed several hundred feet of film, together with a projecting machine, at an expense of several thousand dollars. However, the property involved is worth several millions, for it is in the famous Red River Boundary case, involving several hundred million dollars' worth of oil lands over which the States of Texas and Oklahoma are fighting for possession, and in which the United States and a large number of private individuals have direct interests.

Exhibitors Erase Old Scores at Chicago and Raise Curtain on Cleveland's Stage

Picture Showmen in Attendance at Large Convention Called by Willard Patterson Now Look to Coming Gathering in Ohio to Build National Body—

Producer Exhibitors Denounced—Some Stormy Scenes

TWO hundred exhibitors from practically all parts of the United States with the exception of the Far West gathered in convention at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, April 25, and remained in session two days. The main object of the assemblage was to take up the question of the acquisition of theatres by producing and distributor organizations. The call had been sent out by Willard C. Patterson, of Atlanta, Ga., backed by Sig Samuels of the same city. It is said Mr. Samuels spent $3,000 in financing the convention.

Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was also in Chicago, having recently returned from Europe and immediately gone west.

The result of the two days' sessions was the election of three officers and the appointment of a committee delegated to meet independent producers with the object of learning how far the latter would go in co-operating with them, and with instructions to report at the national convention called for Cleveland on June 8, 9 and 10. The sessions as a whole were marked by amity and a desire to accomplish something definite. On Tuesday morning, however, there were exciting moments, and for a few minutes there were indications that New York representatives again would walk out of the convention as they did at St. Louis last year.

Calmer counsels prevailed, however, and the sessions in the afternoon showed that the clearing of the atmosphere had had a most beneficial effect.

The outstanding feature of the convention was that it served as a curtain raiser for Cleveland. Its influence is bound to be felt at the coming Ohio gathering. Many of the old antagonisms were cleared up, men who for a year had been hostile toward each other were shaking hands, and there were predictions that there was in sight no tangible reason why a real national organization should not be created in Cleveland.

The situation in the South, as it was outlined by delegates from that section, received the most attention. One delegate from Florida insisted there were left practically but five independent exhibitors in the state. The charge was made that while the attack of the interests acquiring theatres now seemed centered on the South it was only a question of time before it would be extended to other parts of the country.

Whitman Bennett, for five years with Famous Players-Lasky, declared that nobody is going to be very long in suspense as to whether there was any real danger in the threatened attack. "If independence is not established within a year independents will have plenty of time to sit down and talk about it," he said.

One of the larger figures emerging from the sessions was Frank J. Rembusch, of Indiana. Mr. Rembusch has been one of the men in the center of organized exhibitor controversies flowing from the St. Louis convention. He is secretary of the National League. It was a matter of surprise to many that in spite of this he was asked to serve as chairman. It was a happy selection, nevertheless. Mr. Rembusch's steady aim all through the two days was to give every one a square deal, to carry out the wishes of the body. He was patient and he was self-effacing. He went the limit to remove misunderstandings. The vote of thanks extended to him just prior to adjournment was well deserved.

In attendance at the convention was a host of film men. Added to all those in attendance at the annual assembly of the First National Exhibitors Circuit were Lewis J. Selznick, surrounded by Sam Morris, his general manager; C. C. Pettijohn, his aid, the three of whom were among the speakers on Tuesday; Charles Rogers, sales manager, and C. R. Seelye. Al Lichtman, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky, came into town on the official train. Fred Quimby, Associated Exhibitors; Fred B. Warren, the new general manager of the Associated Producers; Watterson Rothacker, Al Kaufman, E. W. Hammons, Joe Brandt and scores of others interested in the production and distribution of pictures, were there.

Speakers other than exhibitors at the afternoon session on Tuesday were Robert Lieber and J. D. Williams, president and general manager of First National, and General Manager Berman and Harry Levey, of Universal. All promised aid to the exhibitors in the furtherance of the objects of the gathering.

The committee of sixteen, it was announced, would shortly hold a meeting in New York.

Monday's Session.

MONDAY'S session, which was attended by about 200 exhibitors, including representatives from nearly every state in the country, opened with an address by Willard C. Patterson, president of the Southeastern Theatre Managers' Association and manager of the Criterion and other theatres, Atlanta, to whose initiative the gathering was due.

Mr. Patterson stated in his preliminary remarks that as an independent exhibitor who is up against the problem of protecting his interests from the "heavy hand of the producer-distributor" he had called this national meeting for the purpose of outlining a definite and organized fight against producers owning and buying theatres. Especially in Atlanta have the interests of independent exhibitors been seriously injured by the attempts and success of producers in buying up theatres, and thereupon operating those theatres on a percentage basis.

Concerted Action Necessary.

"This meeting is called to determine in open conference and discussion, with facts and figures to reason from, the best method of combating the danger of the producer monopoly in the theatre field," Mr. Patterson explained, "and it seems to me that the organization of a permanent national association can accomplish this better than any other method. To make our purpose felt it will require the concerted action of every independent exhibitor. We must unfurl the banner of the independent exhibitor, form a ring of

Sorry, Guenivere, But We Can't Pun About "Stair" and "Stare."
You see, Gwenn, you gotta be careful about these serial stars, especially Antonio Moreno, Vitagraph, in "The Veiled Mystery." He's working on the veil now.

steel, and contest every inch of ground. We have battled hard in this game, and to lay down now and be forced out of business because we lack an organization would be not only cowardly, but would indicate a gross limitation of our strength and brain power."

Indications are the money that is being used by producer units in building theatres, Mr. Patterson said, is none other than the hundreds of thousands of dollars which is paid to them as advance deposits on film rentals by exhibitors.

Declares for Show-Down Now.

"If this is the case," he continued, "there is neither right nor justice to the independent exhibitor, nor is there any written or unwritten law or code of business conduct that compels an independent exhibitor to support his competitors with rental moneys, especially when that competition is urged by the man or concern from whom he buys his film service."

As an initial measure toward combating this monopoly Mr. Patterson suggested a set of resolutions be drafted at the convention, asking each producer and distributing company where they stand, what they intend to do, and whether their plan is to continue this invasion of the exhibitor's rights by buying theatres and forming circuits.

"A copy of these resolutions should go to every trade paper in the country," he further stated, "and if the producers reply that they will continue to buy theatres, gentlemen, there is but one thing for us to do. We will have to stop buying their product. It's not a boycott, it's self-preservation—the first law of nature."

Elect Frank Rembusch.

Mr. Patterson's remarks were received with demonstrative enthusiasm. A number of other exhibitors gave short informal talks, urging the advisability and necessity for concerted action immediately. Mr. Patterson was then made temporary chairman.

The first action taken was the elimination of all persons present who were not independent exhibitors. Several representatives of producing companies thereupon retired. Mr. Patterson then resigned the office of chairman in favor of Frank Rembusch, Shelbyville, Ind., who was elected by the body.

A definite statement of the purpose of the convention was then obtained by popular discussion and it was agreed by a unanimous vote that the first move necessary was to form a permanent organization of independent exhibitors, the name for which was to be decided later. The advantage of such a union was clearly set forth in a statement by Mr. Rembusch to the effect that the members of this new organization could refuse to take any film service from the producers who are exhibiting competitors.

Appoint Resolutions Committee.

The appointment of a committee of seven for drafting by-laws and resolutions then followed. Those appointed represented every section of the country and were as follows: Willard C. Patterson, Criterion Theatre, Atlanta; E. T. Peter, Queen Theatre, Yeokum, Tex.; Hector Pasmzoglu, Congress and Delmar theatres, St. Louis; J. Manheimer, Park Theatre, Brooklyn; Dan Chamberlain, Minneapolis, representing the Northwest; Maurice Choynsky, Newberry Theatre, and president of the Allied Amusement Association, Chicago, and Mr. Slosman, Michigan, representing the Northern exhibitors.

Various exhibitors were then given an opportunity to express their opinions and relate their individual experiences which had a bearing on the immediate subject.

Max Steeple, of Philadelphia, as a representative of the local exhibitor league and as a pioneer exhibitor, emphasized the advisability of organizing locally, then nationally.

"There must be unity among all exhibitors in every city," he said, "before there can be any degree of national solidarity. If I, for example, should refuse to book pictures produced or distributed by one of the larger companies, and my nearest competitor should book this feature which I have refused, what would I have gained by my attitude? Nothing! I would lose money and the producer would make it. Local organization is the first essential."

Cites Instance of Concerted Action.

given by Thomas D. Goldberg, Walbrook Theatre, Baltimore. Mr. Goldberg and a number of other members of the local exhibitor's league refused to book on a percentage basis, even though this meant sacrificing the opportunity to exhibit one of the most popular productions of the season. One member of their organization, owner of the largest theatre in Baltimore, booked this picture on a percentage basis, regardless of the decision of the league. Thereupon a delegation of members of the league called upon him and made plain the reason for their attitude and offered proof of the financial loss suffered by exhibitors who book on percentage. Their argument was convincing, he said. The offending exhibitor called upon the producers and offered them the sum of $5,000 for cancelling the booking. They demanded twice this amount, but he stood firm and was victorious. "Thus the value of organized opposition to the trusts was most effectively demonstrated," Mr. Goldberg said, in concluding.

Flays Advance Deposit System.

The present system of producers having the use of exhibitor's advance deposit money was flayed by James G. Rhode, Rhode Opera House, Kenosha, Wis.

"This is one of the most flagrant injustices," Mr. Rhode said, "the fact that the funds now being used by producers in buying and building theatres consist of the very amounts which exhibitors have been forced to deposit with them before renting pictures. I would suggest, therefore, that one of our by-laws provide that in case exhibitors are forced to deposit first that either they realize interest at the rate of 6 per cent. from the sum paid in to the producers or that these funds be held in trust by a security company."

Further remarks on the deposit system were made by Sam I. Berman, who has been prominently identified before the New York state legislature in recent bills affecting film exhibition.

"Last season," Mr. Berman stated, "we were instrumental in passing the Sunday closing bill. This season the paramount question was the deposit system. Against us in this fight the film manufacturers exerted their most powerful forces. Our next move is to present a bill which prohibits the building of any theatres in New York on deposit money."

companies, over $200,000 belonging to exhibitors was in their possession. To remedy this situation a credit bureau should be established in New York, by which the account of every exhibitor would be guaranteed. To illustrate the immense amount of money which exhibitors are obliged to put up for deposits on pictures, a recent statement from Moe Mark, Strand Theatre, New York, revealed that this exhibitor had up $60,000 in cash deposits, an amount which was netting him nothing. This money ought rightfully to be available for exhibitors for their own use in enlarging business, and that is what we are going to work for."

At the close of the morning's session Sam Atkinson, vice-president and business manager of the Allied Amusements Association, Chicago, gave a short address of welcome to out-of-town exhibitors on behalf of the association.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was devoted principally to the discussion of whether the independent producer should be asked to co-operate with the exhibitors in this fight against the monopolists. Mr. Atkinson advocated getting a statement from the independent producers first, which would make clear whether or not they intend to build theatres. H. Webster Smith, attorney and former counsel for the Whitehurst interests in Baltimore, clearly outlined a mode of procedure, as follows:

"In order to protect yourselves legally from these trusts, organize first, incorporate next, and third draw up an agreement whereby the producers are not to exhibit. Get their signature to this and your claims will always be upheld by the equity courts. If they refuse to sign, they will have no outlet for their goods. Therefore they will sign."

Other speakers were H. S. Farley, Montgomery, Ala.; William A. Steffas, Minneapolis; Thomas D. Goldberg, Baltimore; Sam I. Berman, Brooklyn; Fred C. Seegert, Milwaukee; Joseph Hopp, Chicago.

Tuesday Morning Session.

The second day's session at the convention of the independent exhibitors opened with a short, pithy speech by Whitman Bennett, now an independent producer releasing through First National, but for five years with Famous Players-Lasky. He did not hesitate to emphasize the seriousness of the situation as he saw it.

Mr. Bennett said he had been with Famous Players-Lasky five years, the last three of which as producing manager. "Before I left the company I had a great many frank talks with my oldest friend in this business, Mr. Lasky," he continued. "I often talked with him about Wall street and the impossibility of trying to find any satisfaction in my work when I had to spend half of my time answering a million fool questions about the business."

"Mr. Lasky said probably I was shadow-frightened. Only this morning a man told me he had talked with a number of exhibitors just previously and he told me he thought those who were in fear of producers were shadow-frightened. One thing is clear. Nobody is going to be very long in suspense. If independence is not established within a year independents will have plenty of time to sit down and talk about it."

"They" Won't Fight.

"I find it extremely embarrassing to say what I want to say, but I think you will agree that the fact of my presence here is a certain amount of testimony. I don't want to suggest that some of the old-timers are planning an onslaught, but I do want to suggest that these men have put themselves into the hands of men who are stronger than they are. I have heard this statement pooh-poohed around Forty-second street, but the men who have supplied the money are not showmen. And when these men say what will have to be done, my God, it will have to be done."

"When men don't give a hang about your theatre or your artists or anything else and can control thousands of theatres no moral issues can influence them. They just won't have a lot of useless and expensive fights. They'll find a way to avoid them. You can call it amalgamation or friendship among gentlemen or bankers' understanding or whatever you want to call it."

Will Independents Stay Independent?

"Before I left New York I asked my lawyer, a very capable and conservative man, if he thought coming out here to address you was a good thing for me to do. He said in reply that perhaps the independents will not stay independent; perhaps these men will themselves go out and buy theatres 'and then where will you be?

You may be back in a sideshow in Coney Island."

Artists Favor Independents.

"Now the artists want to work with the independents. They don't care to be with Wall Street. Your average artist wants to work with men they can call Bill or Jack. "Many of the prominent artists will be with you. Some of them have already expressed a preference for being featured by small producing units. But they must be convinced of the permanency of these smaller units. That is what organization will insure."

"But in order permanently to establish independent producing units there are three portentous obstacles that must be overcome. The first of these is incompetence—the old established producing companies have the advantage of years of experience over you. The second is bad faith—there is a compelling need for mutual understanding among showmen here. And last, the big bugbear of cowardice must be disregarded. There is a natural tendency to be overimpressed by the big things that are being done in New York, and a consequent limitation of your own capabilities. This is the wrong attitude, and once corrected, you are heading for success."

A report from the committee of seven which had been appointed on Monday and which had retired the previous afternoon for the purpose of drafting by-laws and a constitution for a permanent organization here intervened. It was announced that Willard C. Patterson had been elected chairman of the committee.

Maurice A. Choynsky then made a stirring speech in which he called attention to the necessity of co-operating with the independent producers.

"There will be no chance for the exhibitors," he warned, "if the producers become exhibitors. The safest way to counteract such a calamity is to support the independent producers. This industry was made by exhibitors, not by producers, and the exhibitors are the men with the brains. They created the field for the producers."

"The problem is not a new one. For four years exhibitors have been aware of the danger. Some of them have been preparing. All of them know, by now, that they are up against three of the most powerful producing units, that are rapidly grabbing up all that they can in the way of theatres. Are we going to support these producers, or are we going to support the picture maker who agrees not to buy theatres and thus become our competitor? We must include the independent producer among our ranks or we will have no lines on which to work. We must affiliate with those who can be of help to us, namely, the independent producers."

"Shot Heard in New York."

Sam Atkinson, general business manager of the A. A. A., Chicago, stated he had just received a report of a transaction that took place in New York on Monday, when fifty-four theatres in the East, belonging to Frank S. Black, were taken over by the Paramount organization. This later was denied in a telegram from Mr. Black.

"We have fired a shot," he said, "just by getting together here in Chicago. Already it has been heard in New York. Representatives from the trusts have been sent here and are now in Chicago waiting to know what we are doing. The question is 'How much will you give? How much in dollars and cents will you offer for the formation of this new body?'"

"I have the guarantee that within thirty days we can unite with certain independent producers. If we don't take advantage of this opportunity within thirty days, we're lost. Don't think that every producer is a thief. They're not all trying to 'do' you. If we stand pat, this fight is bound to end in victory for us, because we are the ones who bring in the money that goes to make new productions."

In response to Mr. Atkinson's appeal for financial support, which was followed by several other talks of a similar nature, and by one in particular from the chairman, Frank Rembusch, in which he asked how many were willing to put up $100 for every theatre in their possession, the sum of $4,700 was rapidly raised. This amount was refunded to the subscribers later in the day, when it was decided that the first essential move before putting up money was to send a committee to the exhibitors' national convention which meets in Cleveland, June 4.

The support of certain big financial interests in New York will be forthcoming if the independent exhibitors can succeed in raising $1,000,000, according to a report read by Oscar I. Lamberger, publicity representative of Ivan Abramson, president of the Graphic Film Company. Provided the exhibitors raise this amount, these firms have agreed to furnish $9,000,000. Out of this amount $2,000,000 will be used for making productions and securing stars, and $7,000,000 will be devoted to establishing a fund at the disposal of exhibitors for improving and modernizing their theatres. No action on the proposal was taken by the meeting, it being left to the general committee.

Much of the morning was given over to heated discussions among exhibitors who differed as to the advisability of putting up money without knowing exactly how these funds were to be used. There were spirited arguments marked by frequent interruptions and repeated calls for order from the chair. Interest was at a high pitch, and it was evident that misunderstanding rather than deliberate opposition occasioned these outbursts. Mr. Rembusch frequently reminded those present that the big need was to nationalize the discussion and not to refer to persons and local organizations. But it remained for Mr. Paterson to restore a general feeling of amity and co-operation by a few forceful words.

"We are not going to forget our real purpose in convening," he quietly reminded them, "to perfect an organization and to have the various distributors and producers go on record as to whether they are or are not going to buy theatres—that is what we are here for. I am representing many stockholders in the South who are interestedly waiting the outcome of this convention. I do not want to go back to them with the same old report which has been necessary in past experience. They have placed confidence in me and even though you may think my efforts in trying to organize are premature and misguided, I am going to ask you not to lose sight of the real incentive. Let us perfect our organization on a permanent line, and do away with ill-feeling. Let's not be defeated because of dissension."

Financial Support Promised.

Sam I. Berman echoed this sentiment and made another plea for unity. "Don't question one another's motives," he urged. "Forget politics and pull together."

Several other speakers expressed themselves similarly, following which a letter was read by Sam Bullock, executive secretary of the exhibitors' league in Cleveland, in which the purpose of the national convention in Cleveland scheduled for June 8, 9, and 10, were set forth.

At the close of the letter the question arose as to whether each and every exhibitor, whether representative of a local organization or not, would be permitted to attend the Cleveland convention. Mr. Bullock answered with an emphatic affirmative, stating that 15,000 invitations had been sent out, and that every exhibitor in the United States was welcome.

The morning's session closed with a motion by William Brandt, Brooklyn, to the effect that the organization be made permanent, that the money subscribed be refunded, and that a committee be appointed and sent to Cleveland. This motion was seconded and carried at the afternoon meeting.

Tuesday Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was peaceful. The delegates were in mellow mood after the stormy scenes of the morning and the consequent expulsion from their systems of several things that for a long time had been if not uppermost at least exerted much pressure on their chests. There were speeches by Robert Lieber, president of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit; J. D. Williams, general manager of the same organization; Lewis J. Selznick, Charles C. Pettijohn, Mr. Selznick's aid; General Manager Nathan Berman, of Universal; Harry Levey, head of Universal's industrial department, and Sam Morris, all of these in large degree speaking from the viewpoint of the producer and all of them pledging aid to the exhibitors in their more vital problems.

At the end of the session, before the meeting adjourned, a committee was appointed to consult within thirty days the independent producers and submit a report to the Cleveland convention called for June 8. The committee, which is to pay its own expenses, was appointed as follows: chairman of the convention, Frank J. Rembusch; the secretary of the convention, Sig Samuels; W. C. Patterson, Atlanta; C. E. Whitehurst, Baltimore; H. W. Kress, Piqua, Ohio; Karl Kettler, Jr., West Palm Beach, Fla.; L. T. Lester, Jr., Columbus, S. C.; Dan Chamberlain, Minneapolis; Hector Pasmoglu, St. Louis; A. F. Brettlinger, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Maurice A. Choynski, Chicago; Louis F. Blumenthal, New York; E. T. Peter, Paris, Texas; H. C. Farley, Montgomery, Ala.; John Mannheimer, Brooklyn; M. Van Praag, Kansas City.

honor to represent," said Mr. Lieber, "I only want to say this—that we have one real motive, and that is to make it possible for the continuance in business of exhibiting pictures by such men as so desire, to make it possible for them to do business unhampered. In wanting that we are not in any way desirous of putting anything in the way of the plans of any other organization.

Too Big for One Group.

"This business, if it is to retain the prestige that it has now; if it is to continue to have the following that it has now; if indeed it is to continue to fill the place of good amusement at moderate prices, that business must continue to grow, and it can only grow through the individual efforts of men such as you and through the individual efforts of individual producers.

"I think that this business is too big, too important, to be controlled by any one man or one group of men. If you men ever find such a condition to exist then from that minute on this business will grow less in its importance. To demonstrate the truth of this we have only to go back to the days of the Motion Picture Patents Company. Some of you gentlemen remember how those men were going to tell you just how the motion picture business was to be run and managed. They didn't succeed very well. If they had succeeded I am convinced that we would not have had the motion picture business, the theatres, of today."

"I wish I could tell you men all the things in my system," said Mr. Williams. "The things I do in the picture business I try to do in the way my past experience has taught me. You men don't know one-tenth of your strength if you will form an organization. The First National has formed an organization upon strictly these lines: the majority rules. They must follow their leaders—the board of directors. The way the majority votes is the way every loyal First National member goes. There are two things in my life that I have experienced that make me believe you can be successful. I have built in my time, I have had the pleasure and trouble of building, eighty-one theatres."

Mr. Williams told how when he was expanding in the larger cities (in Australia) a delegation of ninety exhibitors from smaller towns came to him and wanted to know his purposes as to their localities. The speaker also told of the amount of money they were paying into the exchanges he operated. His visitors reminded him of this fact. "I told them, you are not going to tell me what I am going to do," went on Mr. Williams. He then described how his exchange receipts dwindled from 40 per cent. a week from the small towns.

"I sent for these exhibitors and told them I would sign a pledge not to build any theatres in their small towns," said Mr. Williams. "I have heard Mr. Schwalbe tell what they did to Lubin in Philadelphia and how the General Film Company was told it must not build theatres, and how the General Film stopped building theatres.

Obeys the Majority.

"You are entitled to run your theatres in your own way. The First National now has got things in such shape that we can sell you a franchise for twenty-five years and can give you a square deal. Since coming into this room I have read this printed announcement from Mr. Selznick. If I were you I would go to him and give him my support. I don't care even if the star was rotten if I thought he was going to be with me in five or ten years. I had rather run a rotten picture than play with the man who is going to destroy me. I would go to a producer-distributor and say if you are going to build theatres I won't book your pictures.

"Take it from me, boys, you can do things if you will obey the majority. We have an article in our bylaws that we cannot produce pictures. I hope you will form an organization that is powerful enough to keep the independent exhibitor independent and the independent producer independent."

"Mr. Williams has said that the majority rules," said Mr. Selznick. "Mr. Williams is wrong. The minority rules. You have got to have leaders and managers. I know of no institution where majority rules and succeeds. The First National has not been ruled by a majority. It has been ruled by two men backed up by its membership.

"Can't Ride Two Horses."

"I am not a producer of pictures. I don't know how to make pictures, but I buy brains. I am not a theatre owner and don't intend to be one. (Applause.) Any one who thinks he can ride two horses is a fool. I had rather have your side of the business. I think there is more money in the showing of pictures than in the making of them."

Mr. Selznick then said he would let his hearers in on a little secret. "I am not going broke, as some producers have told you. I am making more money than I ever have before in my life. I will make $2,000,000 more this year than last.

"I am not going to tell you how to put the producer out of business because I am a producer. But if you want me to help you I am going to do it. I am willing to join a co-operative body and give you fifty-thousand dollar pictures or two-hundred-and-fifty-thousand-dollar pictures. You have the power. The First National has worked out a proposition. The question is, are you going to take advantage of it? Any proposition is better than letting the other fellow take away your business. I am willing to meet your committee on organization and tell you what can be done.

"The Selznick organization consists of myself and two sons. We are willing to contract with you to make pictures for you for twenty-five years."

"I believe that each and every one of these co-operative propositions should be encouraged," said Mr. Pettijohn, "whether it is ours or whether it is Associated Exhibitors' or First National's or anybody else's. Every co-operative plan is good for the exhibitor when it is a plain and simple proposition."

Mr. Berman read a statement from Mr. Laemmle saying that the independent producers are in the same boat as the independent exhibitors.

Mr. Levey referred to the chain of fifty-four theatres in New England which it had been reported had been transferred to a producing company. "The same chain of theatres was offered to our company and turned down," he declared. "We feel our game is the producing game and our fight is your fight. We propose to continue along lines we have laid down and make pictures and work with the exhibitor, to offer you the resources and brains of our institution, to help you solve the problems that confront you. We have no Wall Street money. The institution is directed by two men and they will act fearlessly and honestly and they will help you all they can."

"I think the problems in this industry are very simple," said Mr. Rembusch, "that

Oscar Price and F. B. Warren to Direct Distribution of Associated Producers

TRUE to predictions made two months ago by its representatives in New York, Associated Producers, Inc., has formed its own distributing company with Oscar A. Price as president, and F. B. Warren as general manager, and will deal with exhibitors direct instead of through a middleman or sales organization owned by others.

This announcement is made for the Associated Producers, Inc., in California. Contracts were signed last week by Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett, Marshall Neilan, Allan Dwan, George Loane Tucker and Maurice Tourneur, powerful principals in the big alliance. All of these directors will complete their former contracts with other organizations in full and at least two more well known directors will be added.

Has Its Own New Exchanges.

The Associated Producers, Inc., distribution will not utilize the facilities of any other organization. It will own and operate its own newly opened exchanges in all the important sales zones of the country, completely manned and managed by its own exclusive employees. Production plans of the members of the Associated Producers, Inc., are well developed and their new organization will be actively releasing the first productions at the opening of the next motion picture year.

Both Oscar A. Price and F. B. Warren, operating executives of this new distributing, are men trained in other businesses outside of the motion picture industry. They are both characteristically independent and have always shown little or no regard for film industry precedents, being organizers of wide experience and with the mental independence of the newspaper publishing profession from which they were recruited into pictures.

Mr. Price has been active in editorial and political circles for many years and served his government throughout the war as William G. McAdoo's right-hand man in the railroad administration. Mr. Price has been president of the United Artists' Corporation from the date of its formation a year ago, retiring two weeks ago.

Warren Helped Forward Goldwyn.

Mr. Warren was one of the founders of the Goldwyn organization in association with Samuel Goldwyn and Edgar and Archibald Selwyn. He was vice president and a director of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation from the day of its formation, with control over sales. For a year, following his retirement in April, 1919, he was vice-president in charge of sales of the Hodkinson organization, from which he retired recently for his new alliance with the newly formed Associated Producers, Incorporated.

Joseph R. Miles Moves Offices.

The Joseph R. Miles Motion Picture Enterprises and Lloyd's Film Storage Corporation, both of which are headed by "Joe" Miles, have moved from 220 West Forty-second street to their new home at 126-132 West Forty-sixth street, New York City. The entire sixth floor is occupied. A prized possession which went along with "Joe" Miles to the new office was the framed copybook expression he had struggled hard to memorize when a child—"Mighty oaks from little acorns grow."

Washington Managers Explain Discontinuance of Screenings

THE Washington Exchange Managers' Association is sending a letter to exhibitors in Maryland announcing the discontinuance in Baltimore of screening films. The ruling applies to all parts of this territory, but the letter is not being sent all exhibitors for the reason that films are not sent to any city other than Baltimore except on rare occasions. The ruling, which became effective April 15, reads as follows:

No film shall be shipped or delivered to exhibitors for screening purposes unless accompanied by a representative of the company distributing such film and then only through a definite appointment as to time, place and date. Exhibitors requesting screening of films on the above basis shall pay for all expenses incurred (operator's fees) and such exhibitions shall be only for the benefit of the owner, manager or employee or employees of said theatre.

It is preferred that the exhibitor make such appointments for screening in Washington, where projection rooms are had very readily and without expense.

Kirkland Sails on May 15.

David Kirkland, director for Constance Talmadge, will sail for Europe on May 15. On that date he will have finished work upon "The Perfect Woman," which is the sixth of Miss Talmadge's First National Productions, and the fifth to be directed by David Kirkland, under the supervision of John Emerson. Kirkland will take with him a compact "traveling camera," to secure pictures of European locales for reproduction in American studios.

Films Lose Promising Actress in Death of Clarine Seymour

CLARINE SEYMOUR, one of the youngest and most promising motion picture players appearing in D. W. Griffith productions, died at the Misericordia Hospital, New York City, on Sunday evening, April 25, at 9 o'clock, following an illness of only four days.

Miss Seymour entered the hospital on Wednesday, April 21, for an operation for intestinal ailment, and her condition then was reported critical. Her physicians held out little hope for her recovery, despite her brave fight for life. At times she seemed somewhat improved, and up to Saturday, April 24, those in attendance believed she might pull through. On Sunday afternoon her condition took a turn for the worse, and her death resulted.

Clarine Seymour was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert V. Seymour, of 12 Thomas place, New Rochelle, N. Y. She has appeared in many screen successes, notably in D. W. Griffith's production of "The Girl Who Stayed at Home," "True Heart Suzie," "Scarlet Days" and "The Idol Dancer." Prior to joining the Griffith forces she appeared for Pathe, Thanhouser, Rolin and Christie. In all of her work she brought to the films a freshness of youth and charm that served to establish her as a great favorite among motion picture patrons.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday, April 28, at 11 a. m., at the home of Miss Seymour's parents in New Rochelle. Interment was private. Many prominent photoplay stars and directors were in attendance.

Joe Brandt Issues Warning on "Captivating Mary Carstairs"

JOE BRANDT, director general of the National Film Corporation of America, has just issued a statement to exhibitors throughout the country in which he warns them against booking old prints of "Captivating Mary Carstairs."

"It has come to my attention that following the announcement that National would reissue its early success, 'Captivating Mary Carstairs,' in which Norma Talmadge is starred, some people have been offering old prints of this picture to exhibitors.

"Any exchange offering for booking, or any exhibitor showing an old print of this picture, is doing so contrary to law and will be prosecuted by National. All rights for showing or booking these prints have expired.

"National will reissue this film shortly. It is being re-edited and retitled. New posters, publicity and advertising aids are being prepared. It will be placed on the state rights market. Because of the popularity of Norma Talmadge, I sold territory as soon as I made the premier announcement concerning it.

"Exhibitors should not book this film until they are advised of the sale of it in their territory. As soon as rights are disposed of each exhibitor in that particular territory will be advised by the purchaser."

New York's Picture Music the Best, Declares Manager Thomas of Omaha

THE best motion picture theatre orchestras are to be found in New York, declares H. M. Thomas, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Omaha. "There's nothing can touch the music you find in the representative houses in the big town," said Mr. Thomas in New York last week. "Theatre for theatre it stands out."

It is not often a theatre manager from the West or Middle West hands a bouquet of any dimension to New York. The head of Omaha's Rialto had just been explaining how theatre owners in cities other than the largest are handicapped in the up-building of a first-class orchestra, due naturally to the limited field upon which they may draw. From the conversation of the manager, however, it was not difficult to gather that he is convinced the western houses continue to dominate the eastern in the larger essentials of exhibiting pictures.

Mr. Thomas' visit to New York marked the end of a tour of investigation which had included stops in cities like Minneapolis, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo. "The manager who sticks at home and does not look over the other fellow's house always gets the impression that he is good," he said. "I like to browse around and pick up ideas. If I find anything wrong in a theatre, right there it occurs to me that possibly something like that may be going on in my own house."

Tests "Temper" of Employees.

"In Chicago I went into two similar theatres in one afternoon. In the first, in spite of the fact that four ushers were stationed behind the rail, not one of them made a move to show me to a seat. In the second an usher showed me to a seat, brought me a program and asked me if I would care to go further toward the front. You know if I lived in Chicago which of those two theatres would get my money."

"I enjoy wandering around asking fool questions and noting the kind of answers house employees make to them, how they 'keep their temper' and dispense courtesy. Detroit, I think, as a city has the best houses. Surely they are kept at the top notch. In no prominent house in that town did I observe anything like what I found in one of the newest and best known Broadway houses—music stands on which the lamps shine for all those in the house. They were not hidden, as they should be. In lighting fixtures generally I notice a tendency to use amber in illuminating the houses and to employ soft tones in fixture materials, such as in carpets and rugs. I have noticed, too, that the most successful theatre is the one that is the most homey, the one that is adorned with paintings, etc."

Preferred Overture to Scenics.

"Speaking of Broadway houses, three years ago in New York I called attention to one of the big ones where on the side walls were thrown reflections of light every time anyone opened the doors at the back of the auditorium. The same situation exists today."

The conversation turned to educationals. "My experience is that the public is not crazy about them," said Mr. Thomas. "I like to sit in with my patrons when I am at home and listen to comments. I don't go to a box, but drop into a chair. I notice, when I am in my own house or in others, that when a scenic is on the screen there is a steady chatter. In the Adams Theatre, in Detroit, a Kunsky house, two men were talking all through the running of a scenic. Then came the overture. It had hardly more than started when one of the men said to the other, 'Can't you keep quiet and let me hear the music?' The public is getting educated to overtures and shows an increasing fondness for them. I find the Literary Digest is making a hit right along, too. The topics put pep in a show.

Film Cutter Should Consider Musician.

"Do you know I don't think the producer gives enough attention to the importance of music in the presentation of pictures. Rather he or the cutter of the film overlooks the possibilities for giving the musician a chance. For instance, there is a shift in the action compelling the director of the orchestra to swing to another piece of music. Yet before the musicians have got fairly started they are choked off by still another radical switch on the screen. Many pictures lean heavily on the musical accompaniment, and it seems to me it would be the part of wisdom for the producer to recognize this and help the showman by exercising better judgment in the cutting."

"How often do I try to put over a real smash? Not more than once a month. That is about all the traffic will bear. Of course we are steady, consistent advertisers. We have to be to fill 2,500 seats at 30 cents admission. We have five artists in our exploitation department. One is employed on scenery, one on newspaper drawings, one is a card man, the fourth is a filler in and then there is the head artist," who paints only. Also a carpenter is regularly employed.

Held "Idol Dancer" for Warm Weather.

"After my trip it is my intention to put on 'The Idol Dancer.' I have deferred showing this picture until the weather is warmer. You see I have planned much on the exploitation of this subject, and as a grass costume figures in the window dressing I have felt that May would be more seasonable than March."

"I ran into something the other night at the Hippodrome I am going to try out at the Rialto. If New York can get away with it, Omaha can. That was putting on the old songs for the house to sing. They were such old-timers that I thought they were forgotten, pieces like 'Bring Back My Bonnie to Me,' 'Little Brown Jug,' 'Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines' and 'Yankee Doodle.' It was the hit of the night. And it just goes to show that you can't beat the simple things in life for interesting people in the mass."

The Influence of Woman.

"What is the influence of woman in the picture theatre—what proportion of your patronage do you ascribe to her?" Mr. Thomas was asked.

"Seventy-five twenty-five," was the prompt response. "I estimate if a house is evenly divided between men and women that one-half of the former are there as the result of being drawn in by the women—dragged in, if you will."

"I do one thing at the Rialto—I talk to my audience. If it is in the afternoon I wear an afternoon coat, and if in the evening a Tuxedo. And when I go back I am going to tell my people they are getting pictures cheaper than they are getting them anywhere else. I will tell them they are getting pictures for 30 cents where people are paying 50 cents in a dump in Chicago."

"In my talk to my patrons I tell them about the pictures to come. In the case of 'Broken Blossoms,' just before the prologue I told them I didn't want any of them to go out saying they thought it was a bad picture. If the story should not appeal to them I asked them to analyze it from the producer's standpoint, to keep watch of the many good things entering into the making of it. I told them if they saw a scene they thought was out of focus they probably would be right, that in fact Mr. Griffith intended it should be."

"I aim to be able to go in front of one of my houses and put my personal guarantee behind a picture. I say very frankly we can't show a good picture every week. Incidentally I don't go on the stage every week."

"Just to keep track of what we are getting over in the newspapers in the way of advertising and publicity, I have arrangements with a clipping bureau for a service that covers the Sunday newspapers in all the key cities of the country. So we know all the time what the other fellow is doing, and if he is putting over anything we think is worth while we go out and get 'em the way he does."

Mr. Thomas said he would be in Chicago for the convention slated for April 26.

KEEPING IN PERSONAL TOUCH

By SAM SPEDON

WILLIAM G. SMITH AND JEROME LEWIS dissolved partnership in the Fidelity Pictures Company. Mr. Smith will continue the Fidelity at its present headquarters, 117 West Forty-sixth Street, New York. The Fidelity will release on a state rights basis. The working title of the production is "Somewhere in Love," featuring Vivienne Osborne, now starring in the stage play, "Bonehead," at the Fulton Theatre, New York, and Thomas J. Carrigan, who was featured with the Fox production, "Checkers."

Bernard Scholtz, formerly in Select's Chicago office, has been selected to handle the Select serial, "The Whirlwind," in Connecticut.

Bill Rudolph, formerly publicity director for the Clara Kimball Young productions, has returned to the New York haunts of filmdom from the oil fields of Texas, in which he is now interested.

Norman Moray, manager of Republic, has returned to New York, from a four months' assignment of inspection through the South and Middle West. On his return he was greeted by a seven pound baby daughter, born April 19.

A. G. Stockhammer has leased his Victoria Theatre and air dome of Brooklyn, N. Y., to Sam Rotheimer, owner of the Normandy, Rowney and the Globe. Mr. Stockhammer is now a salesman with the Selznick pictures in the New York office.

Gardner Picture Syndicate has booked "Blindness of Youth" with the Loew and the Proctor, United Booking Office houses, in New York State.

Cornelius Kahil, according to information, has purchased Poll's Meriden, Conn., Theatre, for $100,000.

George S. Bothwell, formerly with Griffith productions, Biograph and Simplex Precision Company, is now with Dwyer Brothers & Co., of Cincinnati, in the New York office of the Cosmograph projector.

Shea Amusement Company of Buffalo has taken over the controlling interest of the Ryerson Company, of Rochester, controlling the Regent, Piccadilly and Gordon theatres of that city.

George Callaghan, representing Ben Willson Productions, has arrived in New York from the Coast. Ben is producing a serial.

Arrow Film Corporation will move to the fourth floor of the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second Street, New York, occupying the entire Forty-second street front.

Douglas D. Rothacker, of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, and H. J. Aldous, secretary of the same company, are in New York, to remain until May 4 or 5.

A. J. Sherman, of Philadelphia, was in New York week of April 26 and says he is opening a new "square deal" exchange at Baltimore.

Nick Jamille, manager of the Lyric Theatre, Waterbury, Conn., will soon increase the seating capacity to 850. He will also remodel the entire house, with new and up-to-date improvements, making it one of the most attractive theatres in the State.

A. Goodside, of the newly erected Capitol Theatre of Springfield, Mass., has purchased a Cosmograph projector for his private office for pre-viewing all his pictures. He will purchase ten more for his other New England theatres.

Lester Tobias, Realart's will known Connecticut representative, is the "chesty" father of a nine pound boy, born April 21. "Toby" and "Toby" junior gave a house party to their friends.

"Hop" Hadley, director of Hallmark publicity, has purchased a seven reel picture of "The Vicar of Wakefield," Oliver Goldsmith's classic, from the Ideal Film Company of London, invaluable as an authentic picturization of the novel. After Mr. Hadley has edited and retitled the production he will decide the method of distribution.

Japanese Here to Study Our Theatres and Films

TOSHI TAMURA, of Tokyo, Japan, owner of one of the five theatres in that city of more than 3,000,000 inhabitants, with Shiko O'Kamura, a play writer and owner of a magazine in Tokyo, and Ken Yamasaki, are now in New York at the Hotel Astor for a stay of three weeks. Mr. Tamura is here to study American theatres and picture houses, with the view of building a new theatre in Tokyo in which American plays and players will be represented.

Mr. O'Kamura is here to get American atmosphere displayed in some contemplated stage productions and scenarios, as he says the American films are almost the only ones shown in Japan, and also that the Japanese people, although not generally conversant with English, understand the plays and pictures and take great delight in them.

The Japanese people are studying English as never before, and Mr. Tamura says that nearly all the higher classes speak English fairly well, and that more people go to moving pictures than ever before. They like the serials and short comedies best and the American productions are growing in popularity, to the extent that Mr. Tamura is going to buy his equipment in this country for his new theatre and book some American plays.

Mr. Tamura was in America twelve years ago and finds New York has made great strides and changed surprisingly, so much so he was quite unprepared for the congestion of traffic, and several times barely escaped being run down. Messrs. Tamura and O'Kamura will visit other large centres, including California, and will be in America for several weeks before returning to Japan.

ness, is back at his desk with everybody extending felicitations.

G. W. Sampson, Pathe's Detroit branch manager, was in New York the week of April 26 to hold conference with the home office, on the weekly one man weekly convention plan.

Paul Gusdanovick, owner of many theatres in Cleveland and vicinity, was in New York week of April 19.

I. Hoffman and William Shields, of Derby, Conn., have started on the building of a new theatre on the site of the Sterling Theatre.

Henry I. Coleman, president of the Seaboard Film Company, has returned to New York from a trip to Washington and Baltimore branches.

Max Herring, of the Exhibitors Film Company of Pittsburgh; Sam Felix, of Liberty Film Exchange, Washington; Adolph Samuels, president of the Southeastern Pictures Company of Atlanta and Bob Lynch of Metro's Philadelphia exchange, were visitors in New York the week of April 19.

P. D. Dana, sales manager of the Arrow Film Corporation, was in Chicago, at the exhibitors and First National conventions during week of April 26.

Frank Quinlan, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Waterbury, Conn., has redecorated the front in a most attractive and impressive style. He is getting a fair share of the town's best patronage.

Elmer R. Pearson, director of Pathe exchanges, left New York Saturday, April 24, for a three weeks' trip as far as Kansas City, stopping at the exhibitors' convention on Monday, April 26.

E. M. Goldstein, general sales manager for Universal, spent several days at Buffalo week of April 19, inspecting the Universal's new office, occupying two floors in the Warner Building in that city. While there he met Art Smith, Cleveland's district manager.

W. W. Aechtler, of the Major Film Company of Boston, has signed up the New England rights for the Cosmograph projector. The Feeney Ferris Company has signed for Western Connecticut and Eastern part of New York State.

Al Lewis is now representing the Boston Photoplay Company in the Connecticut territory.

Miles Gibbons, who was branch manager of Pathe's Pittsburgh office, has been appointed short subject sales manager at the New York office. F. C. Bornistall has been appointed his successor at Pittsburgh.

R. H. Simmons of the New York Masterfilms, Inc., left New York Saturday, April 24, for a trip through New York State to book the Carmen Beauty Show in connection with Chaplin's Burlesque on Carmen.

W. H. Sherrill, of Frohman Amusements, has been laid up with a severe attack of neuritis.

Sam Grand, of the Arrow Film Company, Boston, stopped in New York the latter part of week of April 19 en route from a meeting of the affiliated exchangemen of America, held at Cleveland.

Nathan Goldstein, of the Unique and Palace, Patchogue, L. I., one of Long Island's most progressive exhibitors, came in personal touch with the writer last week. Mr. Goldstein has been a staunch advocate of Sunday pictures for a long time, testing their legality in court and trying to secure a vote by local option.

The Fox publicity department seems to be under military rule, temporarily at least: Captains James Loughborough, Merritt Crawford and Lieutenant Wells Hawks.

Harry Newman, of the Victoria Theatre, Ossining, N. Y., is looking for a manager of refinement and experience.

Walter W. Griffith, formerly manager of Poll's Bijou, New Haven, Conn., has been made manager of the Rosen Film Delivery System of New Haven.

Englishmen Will Change Their Ways of Picture Production in the Opinion of William A. Brady, Just Back Home

By WALTER K. HILL

ITALY, France, Scandanavia—a great part of the territory of Great Britain and Continental Europe—will be an El Dorado for American moving picture men of vision and capital in the opinion of William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry, who returned last week from another of the numerous trips he has made abroad in the interest of his various theatrical ventures. The after effects of war are still acute, building and expansion in business is marking time, but there must come a change for the better eventually and then, says Mr. Brady, will be the opportunity of the American producer.

When Moving Picture World's representative saw Mr. Brady in his office in the Playhouse Tuesday, April 28, the showman had just "Twentieth Centuried" from Chicago. He had gone directly west upon his arrival from Europe the Friday previous—but not to attend the "gathering of the clans" in convention at Chicago.

"They wanted me to address the assemblage Monday morning, before I left for New York," said Mr. Brady, in referring incidentally to the First National convention—"but I thought I would not 'fit into the picture.' Practically everybody of prominence in the picture business is out there just now. I never saw such a lot of picture magnates in Chicago at one time before."

"More than ever before," said Mr. Brady when asked about film conditions abroad, "Englishmen are awake to the possibilities of the moving picture. The daily papers carry frequent advertisements of syndicates being formed and stock propositions promoted for theatres, the incorporation of producing companies and the sales of shares in picture concerns. That's the way many of the English music halls and other theatrical productions have previously been handled and now the picture prospectors are going to the public to sell shares."

English Seek American Film Market.

"This move is an indication of an awakening. During the war pictures were stable entertainment and the 'news reels' supplied the masses with good reason to look upon the screen with favor. American pictures furnished the entertainment with the balance greatly in favor of this country in the total number of subjects projected. Since the armistice, however, English producers have become active and there will be a constantly increasing amount of English production from this time forward."

Asked if the English ideas and method of film production would be likely to undergo any change Mr. Brady replied that he was convinced that, before long, the English producer will take a leaf from the American method in directing and producing photoplays. "The Englishman is sincerely desirous of gaining a foothold in America, and repeatedly I was asked to explain the antipathy exhibitors in the United States have shown toward strictly 'foreign' productions."

"In my opinion Mr. Zukor's 'English made - with - American method' screen dramas will show the English producers just wherein the difference lies. Work is under way on the first Famous Players-Lasky presentation in the newly created studios Mr. Zukor has located in Islington, London. I understand 'The Sorrows of Satan' will be the first presentation—and the Englishman will have a purely English production of the same subject, previously made and exhibited, for direct comparison."

Introducing the American Method.

Referring to Mr. Zukor's English producing plant Mr. Brady said that the studio was only made possible by changing the site of the studio at Islington from the location that had previously been selected. Famous Players-Lasky went to Islington because they were able there to hook up with a tram-car system for electricity. There pictures will be made by American directors under American conditions as nearly as may obtain in London.

"The English picture man likes us and wants to continue liking us," said Mr. Brady, "and the process of getting together should be easily accomplished. For the strictly English market the pictures now made there are satisfying—but the world knows that there is a difference in American and English method of production. When Englishmen see that they can really do things the American way I haven't the slightest doubt but what they will, ultimately, adapt themselves to the change in system."

May Be "Brady-Made's" in England.

Mr. Brady came back from England with plans for his personal interest in foreign production well defined. He declares that he is authorized to send to England a million dollars worth of studio equipment to be used in making pictures over there. Asked if he would be concerned in those productions Mr. Brady would only admit a possibility of his personally producing outside of America.

"I have a contract with Alice Delysia, who is now appearing as star of 'Afgar', one of the great stage successes of the current London season," said Mr. Brady. "When 'Afgar' comes to America in November Miss Delysia will be the star of two pictures I shall produce—romantic dramas suited to striking type of this French beauty."

Pictures—the National Propaganda.

Reverting to the matter of English photoplay production Mr. Brady said: "Nowhere in the world is the importance of the motion picture realized more fully than it is in England. Englishmen are keenly alive to the fact that during the war they have dropped behind, and that American scenes, stories, heroes and heroines, constitute the best world propaganda America has."

"Englishmen realize that in every country in the world—China, South America, Persia, India, everywhere—people are looking at American pictures, and they are just as anxious to equal our status in the motion picture field as they are to compete with us in other lines. With the scenery of France, Switzerland, Scotland, Ireland, Spain, Italy, and Holland at their door steps—perfect photographic backgrounds that have been unused for five years due to the war—the people over there see a new world spread before the eye of the camera."

"They want their own Pickfords, Fairbanks and Chaplins, and they are determined to have them."

Song: "We're Going to Overall (haul) the Nation."

Some of the pretty chorus girls from the Capitol Theatre of New York set a precedent for the rest of us. They'll change the "teer" to "tear" in "profitteer."

We Have With Us To-Day

Director Chet Withey Who Was Once Ambitious to Do Blackface Comedy

By HERBERT J. HOOSE

TO interview a director is one thing. But to require two interiors and a twenty-five mile automobile ride in order to get the interview is still another thing. The writer was introduced to Director Chet Withey in his cozy New York apartment and finished the interview at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the trip being made in a limousine.

First, the director told of his reason for taking up acting as a profession.

"You know," he said, with a smile of recollection, "ever since I was five years old the stage was an attraction. I lived in the West with my folks and played with a lad who wrote short sketches. These plays were presented in an attic and because he cast me in nearly all of them I thought he was the greatest boy in the universe. His name? Why, none other than Channing Pollock!"

"When did you really 'break in,' Mr. Withey?"

His First Chance.

"When an actor came to our town and put on a show for the benefit of a church, my part was to sing and dance and act funny. After the performance all the homeowners congratulated me, but the actor took all the swell out of my chest when he informed me how far below Broadway calibre I was. While playing bits with stock companies on the coast, I would occasionally 'lower' myself by taking roles in film dramas. You know, in those days a legitimate player looked down on the movies."

Dodging a Blackface Parade.

Mr. Withey's first real movie affiliation was with the Selig company of Edendale, in 1909, as a scenario writer, this organization and the Bison company being the only two on the coast at that time.

"The Mack Sennett studios was my next stop as a scenario writer," he continued; "and herein lies a little joke. I had always wanted to be a blackface comedian and my chance came. Roscoe Arbuckle was preparing for a blackface parade, and, being unable to garner enough fellows, invaded the scenario department and managed to capture five of the six writers. Peculiar to state, but I was the one out of the sextette that refused. So you see, when the real opportunity for 'cork' parts came I was apparently too dignified to fall in line. As a result of this unwillingness I was fired on Saturday night."

Because he turned out a suitable two reel melodrama in less time than it takes to speak of it for Frank Woods, of the Triangle organization, Mr. Withey was given a position on the company's staff as a writer. Being in close touch with the studios he often took part in Triangle plays and finally graduated into the director's class. "The Old Folks at Home," with Herbert Beerbohm Tree, and "Madam Bo Peep," are two of his many excellent Triangle pictures. Later he directed Billie Burke for a time and then signed with United Artists, the corporation for which he is now working.

Wants Appropriate Musical Scores.

Mr. Withey is of the opinion that the presentation of a picture has a great deal to do with its success. Some exhibitors in trying to squeeze in an extra performance will instruct their operators to speed up the projector. The result is that scenes will be shown with the players darting about on the screen thereby spoiling a good dramatic scene. Mr. Withey is also strong for the development of appropriate musical scores for all pictures.

"I think that the moving pictures have an excellent future and that this future lies mainly in developing a more artistic touch and expert tinting of the films," he answered, when asked his opinion on this question. "At present there are three different tones in black and white. How far we can go in perfecting these, along with the colored films, is not a case for one man alone but a problem for all who are employed in production."

The Director's Pipe.

By this time the studio was reached and Doris Keane, whom he is directing in "Romance," was patiently waiting to be "put through her paces." After watching Mr. Withey at his work it was easy to see that there are few directors that obtain such excellent results with so little effort.

During the entire interview he clung to an old pipe with a large bowl. Who knows but that this smoke producer might be one of the secrets of his success. Unfortunately there are no photographs of it available, but if visitors to the Griffith studios chance upon a gentleman with a pipe, in the act of coaching a cast, most likely it will be Mr. Withey.

Signal Company Obtains Associated Franchise for Big Atlanta Territory

THE Signal Amusement Company, with big independent theatre holdings in the South, has acquired the franchise for the Atlanta territory in Associated Exhibitors, Inc. This territory includes all of Georgia and most of Tennessee, Alabama and Florida.

The present holdings in Chattanooga are the Rialto, Alcazar, Fine Arts, Bijou, Lyric, Superba, Bonita, American, Royal and Post theatres, and their interests in Knoxville include the Strand, Majestic, Queen, Rex and Bijou theatres. The Palace and Princess theatres, Merryville, Tenn., are also owned by Signal.

The foregoing houses, however, are only an indication of the rapid expansion and progress of the Signal company, for at present there are under construction several theatres in various cities and plans under way for many more. Chief of these new houses is the half million dollar Tivoli Theatre, now being built in Chattanooga. This house will have a seating capacity of 2,500.

In addition to this house construction also is under way in Knoxville of the Riviera Theatre. This house will cost $150,000. Leases also have been signed and contracts let for the construction of the Rivoli, a building that will cost a half million. The Signal company's $80,000 theatre in South Pittsburgh, Tenn., will open within a month, and another new house is announced for Harriman, Tenn.

The Signal Amusement Company represents First National exhibitors in their territory. They also are affiliated with the National Theatre companies of Knoxville, which combination controls eighteen other theatres.

F. H. Dowler, Jr., vice president and general manager of the Signal company, said at the time of signing his Associated Exhibitors franchise that his main reason for joining hands with the association was the advantage that the affiliation held for the future construction of an organized body of independent exhibitors in the Atlanta territory. He emphasized his belief that the co-operation of independent exhibitors would be secured through the sub-franchise plan, which offers every exhibitors in the territory a chance to come in on an equitable basis with the Signal company.

VerHalen in Larger Quarters.

C. J. VerHalen, who recently established himself as advertising engineer to the motion picture industry, has moved into new offices at 116 West Thirty-ninth street. His former quarters in the Times Building proved inadequate for his purposes. Numbered among his accounts are some of the leading state right companies in the industry.

Harry H. Poppe Resigns from Fischer to Write Scenarios

THE ranks of those who write for the screen was augmented last week when Harry H. Poppe announced his resignation as advertising and publicity manager for A. H. Fischer Features, Inc., and embarked in business for himself as a writer of original stories for the screen. He has established his headquarters at 3 East Forty-fourth street, New York.

Aside from four years' service as a member of the editorial staff of the Billboard, Mr. Poppe has been connected with stage and film producing companies since his entrance into business. His picture experience covers a period of five years, during which time he directed advertising and publicity campaigns for David Horsley, Yorke-Metro, Octagon Films, Inc., the producers of the Houdini serial, and A. H. Fischer Features, Inc.

Exhibitors Win Striking Victories as New York Legislature Closes Sessions

THE 143d annual session of the New York State Legislature concluded at two o'clock the morning of April 25. During the present session the following action was taken on bills of interest to the motion picture industry:

Passed and in the hands of Governor Smith:

The Cotillo bill, making a trust fund and preventing the use of moneys exacted on film contracts for deposit from being used by the manufacturer or producer or becoming a part of his assets.

The Kelly bill, permitting a parent to designate any adult person whom they see fit to be the guardian and accompany children to motion picture theatres.

A waiver bill which prevents any manufacturer or producer from putting a waiver in the Cotillo measure on any contract and preventing the law from being nullified.

Killed by being left in committee:

The Hunter bill, which sought to repeal the present law allowing each municipality in the state to settle for itself the question of Sunday motion picture shows.

The Davenport bill, which sought to raise the age of admission to motion picture theatres from 16 to 18 years.

The Flynn bill, which would force upon the exhibitor the necessity of employing, in addition to his regular operator, an apprentice.

In passing the first three bills and in blocking the remainder, the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, through its representatives, Sydney S. Cohen, Charles L. O'Reilly, S. I. Berman and Irvin Salyerds, achieved what is probably the most notable victory in the history of the motion picture legislation in the state.

League Officials on the Job.

During the last four or five days of the session, the men were constantly at the Capitol, taking no chances in any objectionable bill being quietly slipped through during their absence. On Friday night, April 23, the men remained at their post until the day's session concluded at six o'clock Saturday morning. They were on the ground throughout Saturday and up until the session closed at two o'clock in the morning, even going without meals throughout the day, sustaining themselves on chocolate rather than taking a chance at leaving the Capitol for a half hour or so, when almost anything could happen, as bill after bill was jammed through with little or no discussion. As a result, the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League secured a 100 per cent. victory, fighting against odds which at times threatened to snow under some of the bills.

Speaking on the results of the legislature, President Cohen, of the league, said at the close of the session:

Cotillo Bill Protects Contract Money.

"The Cotillo bill and the favorable action that has been taken by the legislature really marks a new epoch in the development of the industry and becomes the first constructive piece of legislation passed in any state towards safeguarding the moneys of motion picture exhibitors exacted as collateral on film contracts. The bill was passed unanimously in each house and is now in the hands of the governor, and I have every reason to believe it will be signed.

"Following this course of protection to the exhibitors, the league submitted another section to the business law which prevents any manufacturer or producer from putting a waiver in the Cotillo measure and so nullifying the law. The National Association of the Moving Picture Industry, composed of the manufacturers, producers and distributors, endeavored to have incorporated into the bill the following clause: 'Unless otherwise agreed to in writing by the parties thereto.'

Criticizes Existing Contract.

"This clause, if permitted to have become a part of the bill, would have defeated the very purpose we were striving for, because we as exhibitors know that the very un-

Governor Smith May Call

Hearing on Cotillo Bill

IN all probability, there will be a hearing soon in Albany, N. Y., on the Cotillo bill, passed by the legislature and now in the hands of Governor Smith, but to which there has been strenuous opposition on the part of the manufacturers and distributors. On April 25, Governor Smith refused to state definitely if he intended to call for a hearing on this measure.

It is understood that the manufacturers and distributors sent hundreds of telegrams and letters to the senators and assemblymen, endeavoring to stop the passage of the bill. They will now endeavor to kill the measure by telling the governor it would be unconstitutional as an amendment to the general business law.

There are three bills before the governor, all of interest to the motion picture industry. It is quite possible that a hearing will be held at one and the same time on all three bills, enabling the governor to take action within the next thirty days.

fair and equitable contract at present in vogue by most film distributors, consisting of two pages of compactly printed small type matter, is offered to the exhibitor, and that it would be a very easy matter to include the amendment which they desire to be embodied in the bill, and thus our efforts on the part of the exhibitors would have been circumvented.

"We cannot help being grateful to the representatives of the national association for advising us in advance that the attempt was to be made to circumvent the law. It is difficult sometimes to teach an old dog new tricks and it is more than surprising that some members of the national association do not yet see the light of a new day wherein the exhibitors, representing the motion picture going public and likewise the real financial investment of the industry, have become the leaders by view of the fact that they own their screens.

Kelly Bill Proved Confusing.

"Their theatres are more than mere places of amusement. They are the social centers where community sentiment can be mobilized for the welfare of the nation. We must once and for all use our concerted power to keep the few who are attempting to create a monopoly in this business from accomplishing their purpose."

The Kelly bill had rather hard sledding, owing to the fact that, while it passed in the Senate, many of the assemblymen were more or less confused on it. When it came to a vote on Friday night, it was defeated by 76 to 50 after a thirty-minute discussion. Efforts were successful, however, in getting a reconsideration, and during the hours that followed Mr. Cohen and his associates left no stone unturned to smooth away the misapprehension that had cropped out in the lower house. At nine o'clock the bill was passed in the assembly by a vote of 130 to 12.

Davenport Bill Died Young.

"This legislature," said Mr. Cohen, "shows the power of exhibitors of any state, if properly organized, in protecting their investment and their interests. The deposit bill upon which all efforts were concentrated, prevents the exhibitors' money from being exacted by producers, distributors and promoters, by way of deposit or advance payment, from being used to either build or acquire theatres. The money must be kept in a separate fund and not mingled with other moneys that they may have, and the exhibitor is to get all accruing interest, and in the event of a petition in bankruptcy being filed, the funds of the exhibitor are separate and distinct from other assets that the creditors can use for the liquidation of the concern's liabilities."

The bill introduced by Senator Davenport raising the ages of children to be admitted to motion picture theatres of New York from 16 to 18 years got no further than the codes committee to which it was committed.

"Love, Honor and Obey" First S-L Picture Started at Metro's

WITH Maxwell Karger, director general, in full charge, Metro's New York studios at 3 West Sixty-first street has resumed picture-making. The first production to get under way is Eugene Walter's picturization of "The Tyranny of Weakness," the novel by Charles Neville Buck. This picture, an S-L Production which Metro will distribute, is being made under the working title of "Love, Honor and Obey."

Eugene Walter recently joined Metro's staff of authors, and this production is the playwright's first screen dramatization under Metro auspices. "Love, Honor and Obey" is to be played by an all-star cast.

Wilda Bennett, the young prima donna of the current stage success, "Apple Blossoms," has the leading feminine role in "Love, Honor and Obey." She is cast as Conscience Williams. Henry Harmon as William Williams, Conscience's father; Kenneth Harlan as Stuart Emmet, the juvenile lead, and George Cowl as Eben Tollman, the "heavy," have the three other principal roles.

Leander de Cordova is the director, assisted by George McGuire. The camera work is being done by Arthur Martinelli.

Moves Editing Department.

Randolph Bartlett, heading the editing department of Selznick Pictures, which was recently established by Myron Selznick, with his assistants, has been transferred from the Selznick Bronx studio to the studio at Fort Lee. Mr. Bartlett's assistants include Joseph Hayden, Cyril Gardner and Irene Rae.

Enter Whitman Bennett as a Producing Manager, a New Force in Picture Making

By EDWARD WEITZEL

S AID Whitman Bennett: "The motion picture is growing less like the stage play in form and more like it in method of production every day." This interesting statement, coming from a man who has been closely connected with the making of one hundred or more screen dramas a year, started the interview off in just the direction I would have chosen. One of the first and firmest convictions that laid hold of me, some five years ago, was the necessity for the film producers to take advantage of the hundreds of years of experience in the amusement business belonging to the stage. A few years back the best examples of the new art were distressingly raw and crude when compared to the masterpieces of the spoken drama. Today the leading motion pictures challenge the artistic excellence of the foremost stage plays of this decade. During the last two years the manner of their making has steadily approached nearer the ways and means of the parent craft. Small wonder that Mr. Bennett's opening remark gripped my attention and led to a string of eager questions!

Watching the Audience.

"You believe, then, Mr. Bennett, that the laws of the drama will not change just because a new form of telling a story by physical action has been discovered?"

"Decidedly not! The old dramatists learned their business in the only practical way—by watching the effect of their plays upon an audience. The screen is learning in the same practical fashion and finding out that show business can neither be coaxed nor driven. Shakespeare got his lesson in the early days of his theatre in Shoreditch, and had it constantly impressed upon him that he might supply his plays with nine-tenths of the proper ingredients and fall short of a popular success from lack of the other tenth. The most successful of his plays are the best made ones. The same is true of the best motion pictures of today."

"My contention that it is always errors of technic—using the word in its broadest sense—that injure a photoplay's chance of success is a sound one, you think?"

The latest recruit to the ranks of the independent producers looked at me quizzically for an instant, before answering:

"Your contention covers a multitude of sins chargeable against the scenario writer, director and everyone else connected with the making of a picture, from selecting the story to the moment it is shown to the public. This condition has brought about the entrance of a new supervising force in the moving picture business, in the person of the producing manager. He is, of course, well and favorably known to the stage, the late Charles Frohman being a brilliant example of the producing manager at his best."

Working on "The Master Mind."

"How about the producing director—isn't he the same thing?"

"Not precisely. The independent directors who are now releasing their pictures through the First National belong to the David Belasco type of stage producers, but the producing manager is a new figure in the motion picture field. Like every other business man he will do his best to turn out a product that will repay him well for the time and labor spent upon it. But this is not his only incentive. He may even admit that he is not without one or two ideals, and loves his task for the intellectual stimulus it affords him. That is my own attitude in the matter, and I do not expect to make more than eight pictures a year."

"You have already started on 'The Master Mind' with Lionel Barrymore?"

"Yes. Our studio in Yonkers is in full blast, and I am keeping in close touch with everything that is being done. Every foot of film that is completed in a day is shown me the following afternoon. Our next picture will be 'The Devil's Garden,' and the one following it will be from a famous play with a fine part for Mr. Barrymore."

"As strong as Milt Shanks in 'The Cop-head'?"

Lionel Barrymore's Method.

"Yes, but in a different vein. We are trying to go deeper into life than is usual with the average screen drama, and Mr. Barrymore is helping materially by the careful study he is putting upon his own part. While discussing one of the characters that he is to play he surprised me by remarking, 'I can see the house this man lives in. It is at the end of a lane and there are no other houses near it—he is safe from prying eyes.' That is the way Mr. Barrymore goes into the details of a character, and we are trying to be just as thorough with everything connected with the picture."

Whitman Bennett.

The Man in the Orchestra Chair.

I was much interested in the turn the conversation had taken, but I hadn't grasped the distinction between the producing manager and the producing director, and asked Mr. Bennett for further information.

"The main point of difference," he explained, "is that the director and his work is constantly under the supervision of the man whose money is being spent, and he is always at hand to have the last word in deciding each detail of production. This, of course, presupposes that the producing manager is practically an expert in every branch of moving picture making, just as Charles Frohman was an adept in the staging of a play. Seated at the prompt table or in an orchestra chair, the manager of the Empire Theatre followed closely the work going on at rehearsal. Having selected the cast and given the instructions for the stage sets, he was fully competent to order changes in the acting, lighting or lines of the play, and his suggestions extended to the smallest detail. His stage director was always a skilled member of his profession, but Mr. Frohman's point of view was similar to that of the man who has paid for his seat and is interested only in the result of the combined efforts of the cast and the director."

"On the theory that a play is an argument and, to succeed, must convince the other fellow?"

"Exactly. While at work the director does not know just how the argument he is building up will react on another man's mind. The producing manager not only supplies the necessary funds and comprehensive knowledge in all branches of production, but takes the place of the man in the orchestra chair and is ready, at any moment, during the making of a picture to give the director the benefit of his keen observation and mature judgment. It was this system that gave the Empire Theatre productions their high standing in the amusement world. Personally in close touch with the authors of the plays he produced, Charles Frohman decided every detail of the staging of the dramas he selected. The screen needs producing managers of the same sort. It is my ambition to be of their number."

Kaufman Back in California to Start First Holubar Film

A LBERT KAUFMAN left New York on Sunday, April 25, for California. Mr. Kaufman expressed enthusiasm over the results of his short visit to New York and stated that he was not yet in a position to disclose his new plays, but expected to do so within the next few weeks.

Immediately on his return to Hollywood, Mr. Kaufman will start shooting on his first Allen Holubar production starring Dorothy Phillips, all the advance preparations for which were completed under his supervision during the past month. Olga Scholl, author of the "Heart of Humanity" and "Right of Happiness," the two former Holubar-Phillips successes, has just finished the first story to be handled by Mr. Kaufman.

Agnes Ayres, now appearing in a Marshall Neilan Production for First National release, will soon be starred by Mr. Kaufman, who has just closed with a director of prominence to stage her first offering.

In addition to these units, Mr. Kaufman promises to announce the names of a new star and director with whom he expects to close arrangements during the next few days. Anthony Paul Kelley will also do a story for Mr. Kaufman's presentation.

Other plans are now underway which indicate that Mr. Kaufman will soon have a large producing organization on the West Coast. In accordance with his recent alliance with Marshall Neilan and by arrangement with that producer, the advertising and publicity of Albert Kaufman Productions will be directed by Pete Smith in the Marshall Neilan New York office. A large national advertising and publicity campaign on all Kaufman stars, directors and productions is now being planned and will be put into execution in the near future. At the large studio which Mr. Kaufman shares with Mr. Neilan at Hollywood, Edward O'Hara will be in charge of the repertorial publicity work of both organizations.

Lasky Defends Entry of Famous Players Into the Theatrical Producing Field

THE action of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in helping to finance plays and in securing the control of various theatres is not going to hurt the stage, as some people profess to think, but on the contrary is going to help it," says Jesse L. Lasky, Famous Players-Lasky vice-president.

"Persons who have said our entrance into the legitimate producing field would debase the standard of the drama seem to forget that the most artistically successful legitimate plays in recent years have been made into motion pictures. The fact that a play is artistic in no way bars it as film material; on the contrary, if any Broadway producer puts on a production that is artistic, no matter what its commercial success may be, he will find the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation the first to bid for its motion picture rights. Instead of seeking to lower the standards of the legitimate drama, we want to raise those standards.

"Our critics also seem to ignore the fact, well known in the theatrical business, that no Broadway manager will accept a play for stage production unless he also can have the motion picture rights to that play for disposal, at a big profit to him, to the motion picture producers. No matter how high and artistic standards a given play may set, not a producer on Broadway will put it on the stage unless he has the motion picture rights. Are these producers who are so loud in their defense of the drama seeking themselves to drag it into the mire?

"Moreover, in the past many an artistic and praiseworthy play has been denied a hearing because its theme was one which the prospective producer feared might prevent it from becoming a popular success. Has any Broadway manager produced 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' since Mansfield? Has any Broadway manager produced 'The Admirable Crichton' in recent years? Famous Players-Lasky has produced both these famous works in motion pictures. 'Treasure Island' ran only a comparatively short time as a stage play at the Punch and Judy Theatre, yet its meager success did not prevent us from producing it in the films.

"Dramatic critics for years have been assailing the managers for having an eye only to the box office. These are the managers who have raised the American drama to the dizzy heights of the bedroom farce, the crook melodrama, the sex play. And these are the managers who now loudly protest that Famous Players-Lasky is seeking to drag the drama down from this high estate!

"The entrance of Famous Players-Lasky into the legitimate field cannot but have a salutary effect on the American drama. It stands to reason that if an arrangement is made between a producer and a motion picture organization whereby the former is assured against loss, he can select his plays on artistic merit alone. Our foremost stars, like Ethel Barrymore and Elsie Ferguson, under such arrangements, can produce plays of high artistic merit, regardless of the prospect of commercial success.

"Let me call your attention that this is

"Riders of the Dawn," Hampton's Newest, Listed for Early Release by Hodkinson

ANOTHER Benjamin B. Hampton-Eltinge F. Warner production is ready for exhibitor. The publisher-producer's newest achievement is "Riders of the Dawn," from Zane Grey's novel, "The Desert of Wheat."

"Riders of the Dawn," a worthy successor to Zane Grey's "Desert Gold," had the advantages of every attribute that made Benjamin B. Hampton's first Zane Grey picture one of the most talked of productions. All during the course of production, a matter of eight months, the producer had the assistance of the author, Zane Grey.

Shipment of prints of the new production to all Hodkinson branches is now being made and during the forthcoming ten days "Riders of the Dawn" will be shown to exhibitors in all the first-run cities of the country.

"Riders of the Dawn" was produced under the direction of Hugh Ryan Conway. In the cast are Roy Stewart, Robert McKim, Joseph J. Dowling, Marc Robbins, Frederick Starr, Violet Schram, Marie Messenger, Frank Brownlee and Arthur Morrison.

Belgian Film Stock Attracts Attention of Producers Here

ONE of the most recent "invasions" of the American film industry by the continent and one which promises to become a part of the production machinery of this country is the Gevaert Film Company, of Antwerp, Belgium, manufacturers of raw stock.

The Gevaert company has been producing negatives for the past twenty-five years. Its moving picture stock is extensively used by foreign producers, and even during the war the Belgian factory was able to put forth its product, although not at capacity rate.

The Gevaert stock, according to reports, has a number of qualities which recommend it to the producer. It requires no tinting, as the color is in the base. Fourteen color schemes are put out by the Gevaert experts. The base employed in manufacturing the film is of such a resistant nature that it will stand up under the wear and tear of use better than the ordinary stock, thus giving it longer life and recommending it to harassed exchange managers. The film is also guaranteed against static and halo danger.

The Gevaert factory in Belgium is so equipped and its organization so flexible that should it suddenly be called upon to increase its output by several million feet a week, it could do so without any difficulty.

Joseph P. Lamy, 1492 Broadway, is acting as salesman for the Gevaert company, which is establishing offices here in New York and preparing for an extensive campaign.

Broadway Picture Theatres Will Not Follow Stage in Increase of Prices

THE increase in prices for legitimate Broadway attractions, due to climb to five dollars a seat in the fall, as announced by several producers, will not spread to the big Broadway picture houses, according to the canvass made this week by Moving Picture World.

The only theatre unable to say what its policy in the fall would be was the Capitol, whose prices now range from thirty cents to $2.75. The Rivoli and Rialto, the Strand, together with the B. S. Moss and the Loew circuits stated that the only thing which would force them to raise their scale as it now stands would be a substantial increase in running expenses, unforeseen.

To Keep Amusement Popular.

The Strand, at a meeting of its board of directors, authorized the statement that its policy was to furnish good picture entertainment to the public as reasonably as possible and that it contemplated no increase in prices.

Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rivoli, Rialto, and the newly opened Criterion, said, "The Rivoli and Rialto theatres may be forced to advance their prices in the fall, not because the spoken stage is planning it, but because costs are going up on every side."

As to the Criterion, which is now charging straight prices for all seats, fifty cents for matinee shows and one dollar in the evening, no statement could be made. "It would be obviously unfair," said the Rivoli-Rialto office, "to discuss an institution scarcely a week old. The Criterion seats only six hundred, and at present it might be classed as an experiment among picture theatres as to prices."

The top evening and holiday price at the Rivoli, Rialto, and Strand is now seventy-five cents for orchestra seats, although the first two houses charge one dollar for

High "Legitimate" Prices Will Not Drive Patrons to Pictures—Riesenfeld

DOES the picture theatre conflict with the legitimate house? According to Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion theatres, it does not. In discussing the announced increase to five dollars a seat by several legitimate producers, Mr. Riesenfeld said:

"I do not believe an advance in prices for spoken attractions will drive people from that form of amusement to ours, nor will the reverse happen if we advance our admission fees. The two fields of entertainment are distinct. Of course, they overlap. People who go to the movies also go to the legitimate theatre, but while they go to both, for the same purpose, entertainment, they do it in a different frame of mind. One does not take the place of the other."

the loges. Fifty cents is the top price at Loew's New York.

Public Interest Manifest.

New York legitimate producers are not all agreed on the five-dollar "hold-up." Lee Shubert has called the five-dollar ticket a joke, while Marc Klaw has denounced those managers who have announced the increase. The New York press has taken a general attitude of disfavor toward the movement.

As an index of the interest taken by the public in the question as to whether the picture houses of New York contemplated an increase in prices may be taken the following letter to the editor of Moving Picture World from A. H. Melville, director of research for the Nast Publications:

Editor Moving Picture World:

The New York World this morning carries a story telling of the intention of the owners of theatres to increase their prices 100 per cent. for the next season.

I doubt not that the "get rich quick" class and those who come to New York primarily for the purpose of spending money would care little about an increase of a few dollars for a ticket to see a few shows while they are in town. I do, however, believe that the theatre lover and the theatre goer will rebel at this increase of 100 per cent. in theatre ticket prices.

I certainly hope that the motion picture houses will not follow in the footsteps of the theatres and increase their prices again, and thus make it impossible for thousands of salaried people who love and enjoy this wholesome recreation to have their usual evening's entertainment.

Is there not an opportunity here for you men who stand for the best in filmdom and particularly for the mass of the population to enter a word of warning to moving picture houses along this line?

My own feeling is that the theatres will cut down their attendance appreciably by raising prices and that the moving picture houses will greatly increase their attendance and receipts as a result of the theatres action, providing they too do not put on a similar price raising campaign.

A. H. MELVILLE.

Pathe Exchange to Continue Established Serial Policy

PAUL BRUNET, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces that the policy of two serials at a time, inaugurated last fall, when the "Bound and Gagged" serial and "The Black Secret" were released at practically the same date, has been successfully established and that the plans for the balance of this year and 1921 with regard to serials are to be drawn on the "two at a time" basis.

It is stated that the success of "Trailed by Three," released early in April, in obtaining bookings in practically every house that ran "The Adventures of Ruth," has been accepted by Pathe as final and conclusive evidence that the scheme introduced October last has now been established and that there is an active demand for serials great enough to warrant the continuance of a schedule offering exhibitors two serial episodes a week.

Reports of increased demand for serial plays during the latter half of last year and in 1920 have been insistent, and the announcement from Pathe takes on added significance as proof that these reports were based on facts.

"Fallen Idol" Available to Producers.

"The Fallen Idol," a society drama by Guy Bolton, is another offering to motion picture producers, by the Authors Stage and Screen Plays, Inc.

Guy Bolton has been responsible for many Broadway successes, such as "Adam and Eva," "Have a Heart," "The Riviera Girl," "Miss Springtime," "Polly with a Past," "Leave It To Jane," "The Girl Behind the Gun" and "Oh Boy."

"The Fallen Idol" has a wealth of screen material.

Broadway First "Unified" Program Theatre Opens with De Mille's "Why Change Your Wife"

SATURDAY evening, April 24, saw the opening of the first theatre in this country devoted to the "unified" program. Hugo Riesenfeld, the managing director, with but four days at his disposal succeeded in having the necessary alterations made in the Criterion Theatre, at the corner of Broadway and Forty-fourth street, New York City, and Times Square now owns a first run house at which the length of a picture's engagement will be determined solely by the attraction's drawing powers, a policy pursued by all the spoken drama theatres of the neighborhood. This method of presenting moving pictures was bound to arrive, and marks another forward step for the screen.

The Criterion is a small house, seating about six hundred persons on the main floor and in the first balcony. Five performances will be given daily. The admission for the evening performances and at the Saturday, Sunday and holiday matinees is one dollar, including war tax, for all seats. At the other matinees all seats are fifty cents.

The Picture is the Thing.

At the Criterion the picture is the thing. The program includes an overture, played by a concealed orchestra; a picture number, "Beautiful Things," made up of bits from many different scenics and educations; a Paramount-Post production "A Tale of a Terrier," and the Paramount-Artcraft picture presented by Jesse L. Lasky "Why Change Your Wife," Cecil B. DeMille's latest society satire. As an introduction to the feature picture Helen Shipman and four youthful assistants appear in a musical trifle, "A Probable Reason for Changing Your Wife." The absence of a news reel or the special vocal and instrumental numbers that find a place on the programs of the one week run picture houses in Times Square helps to focus the attention on the feature and adds to the weight of merit must carry.

Long Run Indicated.

"Why Change Your Wife" gives every indication of being in for a long run. It is smart according to the Broadway understanding of the word. Up-to-date, in theme and treatment, it more than holds its own with the sophisticated public which is familiar with the best the regular stage has to offer. The reputation of the "Follies" for startling and expensive costumes is not more well deserved than is the lavish dressing or undressing displayed by Gloria Swanson and Bebe Daniels. But "Why Change Your Wife" is not a feast for the eye alone. William DeMille has taken an old theme which is ever new and given it clever and interesting characters, bright subtitles and a steady flow of amusing satire that reacts upon the spectator most entertainingly. And brother Cecile has supplied a capital cast, with Thomas Meighan as the leading male member, and has directed everything with keen artistic cunning. "Why Change Your Wife" is a question that will be answered on Broadway five times a day for some time to come.

Playwrights Could Break Any Attempted Theatre Monopoly

ANY attempted monopoly of the legitimate stage by motion picture interests, which tended to lower artistic standards, could be broken within two months if dramatists will organize, according to John Emerson, photoplay author and director, in a speech before 300 members of the Drama League at the McAlpin Hotel yesterday.

"Although I do not think that motion picture interests intend to monopolize the legitimate stage, I do think that such a monopoly would be an incalculable calamity, just as a monopoly by a Wall Street pool would be a misfortune," said Mr. Emerson. "If writers of plays will only organize as the actors have organized, they could force such a monopoly out of business within two months by shutting off the supply of plays—and the efforts of the dramatists during the strike has shown that they can organize. Personally, I do not think movie producers have any desire to wreck American drama."

Miss Anita Loos, wife and collaborator with Mr. Emerson in motion picture writing, also spoke.

Foster's Novel Available for Screen.

The latest literary effort from the pen of Maximilian Foster, "The Trap," is a novel of society life, dealing with love, mystery and intrigue.

The story has been running serially in McClure's Magazine and will come out in the fall in book form.

This is the first literary offering to motion picture producers by the Authors Stage and Screen Plays, Inc. This organization intends to co-operate with the producer of this story in a national publicity campaign.

Famous Lets St. John Option Expire.

For the past year St. John, N. B., has been the centre of rumors regarding the building or acquiring of new theatres. Famous Players-Lasky has, it is stated, held an option upon what is known as the Dufferin property at the corner of King Square and Charlotte streets. This option, upon which the sum of $1,000 was paid, it is reported, expired on April 4 and the property owners will not renew it unless a further deposit is forthcoming.

F. G. Spencer who recently purchased a large property on Charlotte street is said to have plans for erecting in the rear of the existing shops a large modern theatre.

Backer Makes Southern Trip.

F. E. Backer, general sales manager of Jans Pictures, Inc., left recently for a flying trip through the South in the interest of the first two Jans pictures starring Olive Tell, "Love Without Question" and "A Woman's Business."

The purpose of the trip is to bring the exchanges into closer co-operation with the home office and to introduce the pictures into localities where they are not already known.

Fox Company to Hold International Convention of Branch Managers in May COMMENSURATE with the growth of the Fox Film Corporation throughout the world is the latest announcement issuing from the executive offices of that firm in West Fifty-fifth street, New York, heralding the sixth annual convention of its sales forces, which will be held at the Commodore Hotel, New York City, and which will bring together the Fox branch managers, district superintendents, special representatives and sales heads from every Fox office in the world.

It is an international convention which William Fox has planned and according to the schedule it will be opened on Monday, May 24, and continue throughout the week, closing on Saturday, May 29.

Herman Robbins, general sales manager of Fox Film Corporation, has sent out a call to all branch offices of the firm—including all foreign exchanges of the organization.

Among Largest of Its Kind.

This convention of Fox Film Corporation, will be among the biggest affairs of its kind in the film world. Representatives of the firm will come from all the principal cities of the United States and from the various branches located in the Dominion of Canada. They will come from the north and from the south, from Calgary to the Gulf of Mexico, and from California to Maine. They will come from Algiers, from France and Great Britain. Others will journey from South America.

London, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Glasgow, Cardiff, Leeds, Birmingham and Dublin will furnish the quota of Fox officials from Great Britain. The Australasian field will send managers from Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide and Wellington, New Zealand.

The South American field will contribute its share from the Fox exchanges in Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo, Buenos Aires, Rosario, Montevideo and Lima.

Holland Branch Represented.

The corporation for some time has maintained offices in France at Paris, Marseilles, Strassbourg, Lyons, Lille and Bordeaux. Additional branches have recently been established in Treves, Nancy and Toulouse.

The managers of these new branches are not expected to attend the convention, in view of the fact that these are sub-divisions of the territory covered by the Paris branch.

The other foreign branches which will be represented include the Brussels office in Belgium, the Amsterdam branch in Holland and the Italian exchanges in Rome and Turin.

William Fox brings his sales force together this year for the most important business meeting in the history of the corporation. This convention comes as a climax to the broadest and most successful sales campaign ever instituted by the organization.

Sheehan to Take Charge.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the corporation, who is in Europe, will return in time to take charge of the convention, as in the past. Mr. Sheehan will be thoroughly equipped for an exhaustive conference with Mr. Fox regarding the results of his tour and the conditions of the foreign market with relation to Fox films.

William Fox will open the convention, and will outline to his sales organization the policy to be adopted by the corporation for the ensuing year as regards the distribution of Fox productions. Other matters of import will be brought before the sales force by Jack Leo, vice-president of the company, John C. Eisele, treasurer, and Saul Rogers, general counsel for the corporation. Each of these will address the body on matters pertaining to policy.

Most of the convention delegates have never seen the new Fox studio building on West Fifty-fifth street. It is therefore planned to receive them in a body at the studio and conduct them through the various departments, including the large stages on the third floor. Herman Robbins will have thrown on the screens of the battery of projection rooms the Fox special productions and the early forthcoming regular releases in which the following stars appear: Tom Mix, William Russell, Buck Jones, George Walsh, William Farnum, Pearl White, Madeline Traverse, Gladys Brockwell and Vivian Rich. These films will be shown to the sales force before the scheduled release dates.

Those who will attend the convention from various sections of the United States and Canada are listed below and will represent thirty-five or more branches of the Fox organization in this country and at least a half dozen in the Dominion of Canada.

District superintendents with headquarters: Harry F. Campbell, Boston; Clayton P. Sheehan, Buffalo; George Allison, Atlanta; E. M. Wachter, Kansas City; Howard J. Sheehan, Los Angeles; Vincent J. McCabe, Toronto.

Dominion branch managers: Maurice West, Montreal; L. M. Devaney, Toronto; Jos. Lieberman, St. John, N. B.; R. A. Scott, Vancouver; William Spencer Jones, Winnipeg; Mitchell Rose, Calgary.

United States branch managers: George Allison, Atlanta; H. F. Campbell, Boston; M. H. Greenwald, Buffalo; C. W. Eckhardt, Chicago; Rudolph Knoepfle, Cincinnati; William Shapiro, Cleveland; L. E. Harrington, Dallas; Joseph Kaliski, Denver; W. C. Barnes, Detroit; C. E. Penrod, Indianapolis; E. H. Wachter, Kansas City; B. E. Loper, Los Angeles; M. J. Weisfeldt, Minneapolis; B. L. Dudenhofer, New Orleans; Sidney Meyer, Omaha; George F. Dembow, Philadelphia; Leo Burnstine, Pittsburg; Clyde A. Walker, Salt Lake City; Charles Muehlman, San Francisco; Lester Sturm, Seattle; G. E. McKean, St. Louis; Paul E. Krieger, Washington; Louis Rosenbluh, New York City.

Fox Will Open Convention.

On the morning of the 24th the convention will be opened by Mr. Fox. The afternoon will be given over to the viewing of Fox screen productions at the new studio and the evening will be devoted to entertainment of the conventionites. This is the schedule which will remain in force during the entire week, the mornings being devoted to conference and the afternoons to the studio projection rooms.

On Friday night delegates hailing from the most distant points on this continent will leave for their homes. The others will remain until Saturday morning, and depart under fire of the Fox cameras—still and motion prints to be filed in the Fox library, which contains records of all the conventions.

Chicago Convention Thanks Universal for Its Offer of Financial Backing

UNIVERSAL has definitely taken its stand on the side of the independent exhibitor. Not only has the fullest support been pledged to the welfare and activities of the various exhibitor associations, but President Carl Laemmle has offered financial backing to the Independent Exhibitors' Association, now in convention in the Congress Hotel, Chicago.

Through his representatives, H. M. Berman and Harry Levey, Mr. Laemmle assured the independents that they can count on Universal to take a leading stand in the fight for open bookings and the rights of the independent exhibitor. He pledged that Universal will at all times supply independents with its pictures and will further seek to produce the kind of pictures that the members of the independent association want.

In accepting the offer the association pledged itself to cancel and refrain from buying service from any producer who has not declared himself to the effect that he will not buy or operate theatres in competition to the independent exhibitors. Frank Rembush, chairman of the Independent Exhibitors' Association of America, sent the following telegram of thanks and acceptance to R. H. Cochrans, vice-president of Universal, whose office is in New York City:

Text of Telegram.

"The convention of independent exhibitors in session at Congress Hotel today formed a permanent national association and greatly appreciates the offer of Universal Film Manufacturing Company for the clear cut and straight forward statement made by your representatives, Berman and Levey, on the floor of the Convention Hall this afternoon in which they declared Universal being heart and soul with the independent exhibitors in their fight against the producing companies who are building and buying theatres.

"It was further voted and will so be enforced that the independent exhibitors shall cancel and refrain from buying service from any producer who has not declared himself to the effect that he will not buy or operate theatres in competition to the independent exhibitors. Your handsome offer of support, backed by Mr. Laemmle's offer of financial aid to put our association on its feet, is deeply appreciated.

ciated. The names of the men selected today is an evidence of the calibre of our newly organized association.

"Give this telegram the widest publicity.

"The exhibitors of this convention have asked and have given us their promise that they will cancel and refrain from purchasing any further film service from any producer who is operating theatres in competition with us. We are sincere and propose to fight it out on these lines until the issue is decided."

Triangle Exchange System and Pictures Are Secured by Frank Hall of Hallmark

FRANK G. HALL, president of Hallmark, and Percy L. Waters, president of Triangle, have just closed another big deal of interest to the industry. It not only involves the taking over of a complete distributing organization with eighteen branches but also includes control of many big productions of some of the screen's best known stars.

Mr. Hall has acquired for Hallmark Pictures Corporation the complete system of Triangle exchanges from the Triangle Distributing Corporation and also control of the pictures of Triangle Film Corporation. This gives Hallmark firmly established exchanges in Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Denver, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Seattle, Detroit, Salt Lake City, Washington, New Haven and Milwaukee, all of which have been handling the physical distribution of Hallmark pictures for some time.

This move by Frank Hall is the opening gun of an offensive campaign intended to place Hallmark at the top of the list of independent producers and distributors. Preparations for large expansion have been going on quietly for several months. With the announcement of the closing of the Hall-Waters deal comes the news of four special pictures completed and ready for immediate release, with eight more to follow at short intervals, two of which are already in preparation. The finished specials are "The Discarded Woman" and "For Love or Money," both Barton King productions, and "Should a Wife Work?" and "What Children Will Do," staged by Horace Plimpton. "The Common Sin," another Burton King production the title of which has not been decided upon.

The former Triangle distributing organization, now Hallmark, will be kept intact and the personnel of each office will remain the same with George N. Montgomery, general sales manager for Hallmark, in charge. Mr. Montgomery recently completed an extended trip which took in all of the branches. He was greatly pleased with the marked spirit of co-operation he found, a spirit which is very much in keeping with Frank Hall's ideas.

The productions controlled by Hallmark through the purchase include some of the best pictures of many big stars and leading directors. Frank Keenan, William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks and Norma Talmadge are among the more prominent stars in the Triangle list, which contains nine Keenan pictures, thirteen Fairbanks pictures and seven Talmadge pictures in addition to sixteen elaborate Keystone comedies and other interesting productions.

Veteran Showmen to Judge Vidor's "Jack Knife Man"

KING W. VIDOR has announced that he will apply the same test in "The Jack Knife Man," his second production for First National, that he made in ascertaining the exhibiting of his previous picture, "The Family Honor," in which Florence Vidor played the leading feminine role.

Mr. Vidor attributes the big success of "The Family Honor" in the exhibiting field to his experiment, which consisted of showing it in a dozen motion picture houses in California before its general release and in obtaining the views and suggestions of veteran showmen for its betterment. Thus he was enabled, by making a few changes, to put bigger box office punch into the attraction. He was present in person at each of these showings.

"The trouble with many producers is that they do not make a sufficient study of exhibitor problems," said Mr. Vidor. "They do not get into the field. As soon as they finish one picture, they shove it onto the market without giving it a fair test and then begin work on another. They think that the picture is good and let it go at that, not taking into consideration the fact that the exhibitor may entertain entirely different views."

Precision Company Opens Non-Theatrical Division

IN keeping with the progressive policy that has characterized the Precision Machine Company since its inception, a newly organized division is now part of this projector building plant known as the non-theatrical division.

E. M. Porter, general manager of the company, has for some time been preparing an analysis of the groups included in the fields outside of the theatrical one, and so promising does the future for Simplex installations in churches, schools, industrial plants and other public buildings look, that it was decided to create a separate division for the cultivation of this market.

Leon L. Horstmann has been placed in charge of the non-theatrical division.

Despite Embargo, Germany Will Become Excellent Market for American Films

Alfred G. Anderson, Former Berlin News Correspondent, Declares Teutons Want Our Product and Eagerly Await the Lifting of Import Ban—Threatened Nationalization of Industry of No Consequence to Us

IF the old adage that coming events cast their shadows before them holds good, and the prospect is favorable, Germany will in time become one of the best markets in the world for American motion pictures, pessimists of contrary convictions notwithstanding. The present embargo is only a passing obstacle that soon will disappear.

This is the opinion of Alfred G. Anderson, of the Inter-Ocean sales staff, who recently returned from an extended stay in Germany. Before his affiliation with the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, Mr. Anderson was the Berlin correspondent of the International News Service. By virtue of his newspaper connections he was in an excellent position to analyze film conditions in the Teuton regions.

Prefer American Pictures.

"German audiences far prefer American pictures to any others produced, including their own," said Mr. Anderson. "They cultivated a taste for our product before the war, and this taste was amply developed during the actual conflict when German motion picture production, like other non-war industries, was seriously crippled, thus opening the way for a foreign picture invasion.

"Of all foreign pictures American productions were by far the most popular. The Germans like snappy stories and a maximum of action. This they find only in a limited measure in their own pictures. And where the demand exists the supply cannot be indefinitely withheld from the consumer.

"In the summer of 1918, at a time when the American doughboys were putting the finishing touches to Germany's defeat, I personally witnessed the cordial reception given a World Film production distributed abroad by the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, by a packed house at the Wittelsbach Theatre in Berlin. This film, like many other World pictures, had come into Germany through a neighboring neutral country.

Negotiations Long Under Way.

"During the same period I saw audiences roar with laughter over American animated cartoons exhibited at the Tauentzienpalast in Berlin. In both cases every man, woman and child in the audience knew perfectly well that they were looking at American pictures.

"There is nothing surprising nor astounding to me in recent reports that some German film men have opened negotiations with American producers and exporters for large supplies of American pictures as soon as the embargo is lifted. More than once during 1919, while a newspaper correspondent in Berlin, I was approached by German motion picture people who both wanted to buy American films for Germany and sell German films in America.

"At the time I was too busy with my newspaper work to give such matters the attention they deserved. But that does not alter the fact that the intention was present. And I did live long enough in Berlin to see American news film enter the country legitimately and become included in the regular programs before I returned to America a few months ago.

"Since my return home I have followed events in Germany closely. I have, among other news articles, read all the reports I could find in German trade journals on the present film embargo. From the German trade press it appears that the embargo is by no means hailed as an unmixed blessing by German exhibitors.

"The Erste Internationale Film-Zeitung, one of the leading Berlin trade journals, quoting the Berliner Tageblatt, recently reported turbulent session of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce when the motion picture element of that body launched an attack on the embargo and introduced a resolution for its removal by August 15, 1920. The resolution, according to the Film-Zeitung, was voted down under the influence of producers and the non-film elements of the chamber, who were opposed to the importation of 'luxuries.'

Life of Embargo to Be Short.

"The life of the embargo, however, will hardly be long. The German government, facing internal disturbances and uprisings on every hand, is beginning to realize that motion pictures are a necessity rather than a luxury, according to recent advices from Berlin. The government is awakening to the fact that a healthy and popular source of amusement like photoplays will go a long way toward making the people forget their material wants, which are at the bottom of all disturbances in Germany.

"A few days ago I received a letter from one of the leading men of the industry in Germany, who declared that he soon would be in the market for American pictures. This does not indicate a protraction of the embargo, though the report that it will be lifted as early as May 1 does not appear to be authenticated by German official sources.

Need Not Fear "Nationalization."

"The threatened 'nationalization' of the German motion picture industry should not, even if it materializes, interfere with the exportation of American pictures to Germany. National or municipal control of production and exhibition means merely that our competitors in Germany will be the government or municipalities instead of a large number of private individuals and concerns.

"In Norway some of the cities and towns have already taken the motion picture theatres out of the owners' hands. They have become nationalized in the German sense. Still we are selling as many American pictures as ever in Norway, for the municipalities can no more than individual owners operate a 'movie' without pictures.

"From German trade papers it is evident that Scandinavian producers are busy building up future markets in Germany. The Scandinavians are close enough to Germany to always perceive the direction of the wind, and be the wind ever so ill, if it blows something good for Scandinavian pictures it will do fully as much for American films.

"Greater Danger of Americanization."

"Speaking of the prospects of nationalization, Herr Koch, German minister of the interior, declared to an interviewer of the Berliner Tageblatt that 'there is a greater danger of Americanization than of nationalization of the German motion picture industry.'

"This, to be sure, was a hard admission for a German cabinet officer to make, but he voiced a popular sentiment that in time will bring a handsome addition to the profits of American motion picture exporters."

Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales, when questioned on the German situation regarding the difficulties in foreign exchange, said:

Can Afford to Pay Prices.

"The problem of receiving a fair price for pictures sold to the Germans is not so difficult as the depreciated state of the exchange would lead one to think. The exchange, to be sure, must be taken into consideration in dealing with Germany, and it will, until the mark takes an upward climb toward its pre-war value, be necessary to make some sacrifice in profit.

"On the other hand, the Germans can afford to pay a high price for American films, for German motion picture patrons pay well for their amusement—much more, correspondingly, than American screen fans do. A German will cheerfully pay 15 to 20 marks to see a program that in America would be regarded as quite ordinary.

"As the exchange now stands, this admission price revolves around 30 cents, just a little more than high-class American neighborhood 'movies' charge their patrons for a good show. It is, therefore, evident that German film importers, even with the exchange against them, can afford to pay the price for American pictures."

Mayflower Product Will Be Released by Associated First National Exhibitors

ALL reports concerning the distribution plans of Mayflower were definitely set at rest last week by the announcement of Benjamin A. Prager, president of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, that a releasing contract had been signed with Associated First National Exhibitors whereby the bulk of Mayflower's future productions will be distributed through the First National organization.

In consummating these negotiations the Associated First National Exhibitors were represented by Harry Schwalbe, secretary-treasurer, while President Prager and General Manager John W. McKay acted for Mayflower. Under the terms of the contract, Associated First National will take over the distribution of the Allan Dwan features, all future R. A. Walsh productions and the picture now being completed in Los Angeles by Sidney A. Franklin.

Of the Dwan series, the first subject, "A Splendid Hazard," from the Harold McGrath novel, is now ready for release. When shown to First National officials, it evoked great enthusiasm. The other Dwan pictures are "In the Heart of a Fool," based on William Allen White's book of that name, and "The Scoffer," from a magazine story by Val Cleveland. Both of these pictures will soon be available, and preparations are now being made by Mr. Dwan for another production, as yet unnamed, which he is scheduled to start shooting on May 1.

Distribution Methods.

With the exception of "The Deep Purple," which is being handled by Realart, all of Walsh's product will go through First National in the future.

It is expected that Mr. Franklin will be finished shortly with "Athalie," his current production, which is an adaption of the Robert W. Chambers' novel, and according to the tentative program, this will be the second Mayflower production to go through the First National channel. Incidentally it will also be the third picture directed by Mr. Franklin to be handled by First National. The other two were Mary Pickford's "The Hoodlum" and "Heart o' the Hills."

"In contracting with First National for the distribution of our pictures," said President Prager, "I believe the Mayflower company has put into effect an arrangement which will enable it to reach the photoplay public through the very best medium in the film industry. First National has demonstrated by results the practicability of its system. There can be no doubt that the magnitude of the organization, with its unlimited facilities for distributing, advertising and exploiting, will give to all Mayflower productions the maximum of exhibition, as well as the very best of satisfaction to exhibitors and picture patrons."

Incorporations Totaling $1,707,000 Are Filed in New York State in Few Days

Demand for "Sex" Results in Extra Prints for Exchanges

THE demand for "Sex," J. Parker Read, Jr.'s Louise Glaum production, from every section of the country has necessitated the shipment of additional prints the past week to twenty-two of the Hodkinson exchanges.

Last week the production created two records in Des Moines, playing to the largest business ever done on a picture in the Iowa metropolis. B. I. Van Dyke, owner of the Royal Theatre, was compelled to extend a week run to ten days because of the crowds that clamored for admission.

Harry Koplar, the prominent St. Louis exhibitor, has booked "Sex" for his entire chain of thirteen theatres in the Mound City. In California, Turner & Dahnken has signed for week runs at their T. & D. theatres in Oakland and San Jose.

Scenic Pictures Show Cannibal Isles, South Polar Region and Our Northwest

IT will be good news to every exhibitor in the United States to learn that Martin Johnson, the famous photographer and explorer, is sending to the civilized world a new series of pictures which will be released under the name of "Wild Men of Malekula." Robertson-Cole, which made one of the great strokes of its early career in obtaining for distribution the first of the Johnson pictures, will release the new feature.

Mr. Johnson, a friend of the late Jack London, knows every corner of the antipodes, and in the early South Sea Island cannibal pictures gave the civilized world one of the greatest thrills of this character in the history of motion pictures.

"The Bottom of the World," the pictured version of Sir Ernest Shackleton's famous expedition into the Antarctic regions, has been released by Robertson-Cole as "the season's most successful travel and exploration picture."

life, studies of the ice and snow and dozens of humanly interesting adventures which were the lot of the Shackleton party.

Robertson-Cole declares it is making an honest statement in asserting that the series of thirty Adventure Scenics which it is releasing are the best short subjects of their character ever placed on the market. These pictures are being made by the Adventure Scenic Corporation, of Los Angeles, a producing ally of the Robertson-Cole Company. The first ten already have been released and work on the second ten is progressing.

Beautiful Scenics of Northwest.

Up to the present most of the pictures have been made in the American and Canadian Northwest. A number of these, made last winter amid beautiful snow scenes by J. G. Sill, of the Adventure Scenic Corporation, are soon to be released, and H. H. Brownell has gone into the Everglades of Florida to obtain a series of southern subjects. The short subject is now as important upon every program as the feature, and Robertson-Cole in offering Adventure

Scenics helps to fill a need which is unusual.

As a fitting climax for this succession of announcements, Robertson-Cole leaves with the exhibitor a final thought: the end is not yet. Before the autumn season comes, this rapidly-moving organization may have an announcement for the motion picture world which will prove even more important than all, or any of those herein set forth.

Robertson-Cole Building to Have Many Features

BESIDES the rapid growth of its organization, its swiftly increasing prestige in the industry, and the worth of its stars and productions, Robertson-Cole has another and even more convincing claim to permanence. This is its home office building now under course of construction at the corner of Seventh avenue and Forty-eighth street, New York City, in the heart of the film administrative world.

The new building will be "by, for and of" Robertson-Cole. Robertson-Cole is building it and will own, occupy and control it.

There will be three theatres on the roof. These will be utilized for the showing of film to press representatives, foreign buyers and various persons interested in Robertson-Cole pictures. The best possible equipment will be installed in these theatres, including six standard machines. Three operators will constantly be on duty. This will treble the present facilities of Robertson-Cole for the screening of pictures.

Lew Cody.

Playing for Robertson-Cole.

As a most unusual feature of these three theatres, on the top floor of the building there will be installed a suitable organ. This will enable the company to give special exhibitions at various times to which guests will be invited, as well as to screen a picture with musical accompaniment, thus obtaining the exact effect of a regular theatre showing.

Probably the most unusual and progressive feature contemplated is the department which will entertain exhibitors from all parts of the world.

Otis Skinner to Film Famous "Kismet" and Ethel Barrymore "The Superwoman"

HARDLY less important to the alert exhibitor is the announcement that Robertson-Cole has induced Otis Skinner to place on the screen his stage triumph, "Kismet," which is to be released early in the autumn as a super-special. Back of this attraction there will be a publicity campaign of great magnitude and effectiveness.

The play itself was acclaimed by the critics as one of the most harmonious blendings of color and dramatic action ever presented on the American stage. It combines all of the pomp of a spectacle, all of the suspense of a tragedy, all the allurements of romance, and all the keen subtlety of philosophy.

Ethel Barrymore, who won another success in "De classe," the dramatic triumph in which she has been appearing this season at the Empire Theatre in New York City, is now at work on one production for the screen. This will be "The Superwoman," a picture particularly suited to her talents. Robertson-Cole has a contract for its release.

"The Superwoman" is being filmed with great care and at an expense which should make it one of the finest pictures of the year. It contains a part which fits its star eminently and offers a dramatic situation which is comparable to the strongest in which she has ever appeared. Miss Barrymore comes of a famous family of actors which stands near the pinnacle of the American theatrical world.

An announcement which holds itself out to the exhibitor the promise of money-making productions unrivaled in their introduction to the public, is to the effect that Robertson-Cole has obtained the exclusive rights to all of the Arsene Lupin French detective stories. The first will be "813." This is one of the most striking stories in the series, which is world-famous.

Wedgwood Nowell, an artist whose personal appearance is said to fit exactly the character of the famous French detective, who is the central figure of the Arsene Lupin stories, has been engaged to appear as the leading character in the first one of the pictures.

The amount of publicity which the Arsene Lupin stories have received is a promising index as to the drawing power they will have when converted into productions on which no care or money will be spared.

Pathe Discloses "Simple Souls" as New Starring Vehicle for Blanche Sweet

THE widespread comment caused by the recent appearance in the trade papers of the teaser advertising on "Simple Souls" came to a climax with the announcements that it is the title of the latest Blanche Sweet production to be completed for release by Pathe. Production experts who have seen the film say that it is one of the best productions of Blanche Sweet's career.

Pathe has determined to back the production with an exceptional campaign of advertising and exploitation. Nothing will be spared to make clear the merits of the production to the end that the thousands of exhibitors who have been steadily building a Blanche Sweet clientele in their houses may clearly realize on this latest picture.

The story is from the widely known novel by John Hastings Turner and tells the romance of Molly Shine, a show girl of lowly birth, and the Duke of Wyninghame. They were two simple souls, delighting in their youth and simplicity. Their ideals and dreams made them kindred spirits, but their attachment could not be understood by his rich relatives or her poor folks and scandal brought its sting into their lives.

Richard Thornby directed the picture. He has scored in all of the recent Blanche Sweet pictures, "The Woman of Pleasure," "Fighting Cressy" and "The Deadlier Sex." In selecting a cast he strengthened the production with such performers as Charles Meredith, Herbert Grimwood, Mayme Kelso, Herbert Standing and Kate Lester.

"The Deadlier Sex" has started out with a greater number of bookings in advance of release date than any other Pathe production with the exception of "Other Men's Shoes," the Edgar Lewis production which is ranked with the very best money-makers of the year. An opportunity for an exploitation tie-up with the book and picture is presented, for Scribner & Co. is getting out special material to assist in a promotion campaign on the book and the picture.

Many Follow Suit as Neilan Puts on Overalls and Jumper

THE "back to old clothes" movement has hit the Hollywood motion picture colony. One day last week Marshall Neilan appeared at his studio clad in old overalls and a jumper which had seen considerable service around his garage. Marjorie Daw, who appears in "Don't Ever Marry" and "The River's End," wore an old middy blouse and walking skirt.

Mr. Neilan posted a notice inviting his employees to join in the movement to reduce the high cost of living. The following day Agnes Ayres, the Neilan-Kaufman star, wore a gingham dress. Wesley Barry arrived in a pair of overalls. Wellington Wales, business manager, worked at his desk all day clad in khaki trousers and a flannel shirt. Ben Carre, art director, and Howard Ewing, electrical expert, wore overalls.

Over on the Albert Kaufman lot Dorothy Phillips wore a gingham bungalow apron and Allen Holubar was attired in an old golf suit. Mr. Kaufman, who is now in New York, expects to wear a pair of blue overalls on his return trip to California this week.

Many other studio folk are following suit.

Pauline Frederick Is Released from Her Goldwyn Contract

THAT Pauline Frederick is being released from her contract with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation was announced by officials of that company this week. No break in the pleasant relations between the star and the producer has occurred, and the Goldwyn company was emphatic in its expression of the satisfaction and profit which have come through Miss Frederick's services with Goldwyn. The company, however, is now engaged in producing a series of big pictures, and has contracts for others which will be put into work in the next few months.

The latest release in which Miss Frederick has appeared, "The Woman in Room Thirteen," was received by the reviewers with unstinted praise. Her next two photo-plays, "Roads of Destiny," which was pictured from Channing Pollock's stage play founded on an O. Henry story, and "Madame X," from the French play of the same name by Alexandre Bisson, will soon be released.

Hugh Woody Back from Coast.

President Hugh Woody, of the Capital Film Company, has just returned to Chicago after a protracted visit to the Capital Film Company's studios at Hollywood, Cal.

Mr. Woody is enthusiastic over the work that is being done by the Capital companies on the coast in the production of its subjects featuring Neal Hart in his Westerns, Al Jennings in the outlaw series in which he is now being featured, and Helen Gibson, the daredevil of the screen, in her railroad subjects. Work is also progressing on the five-reel productions which will shortly be announced, on the big Irish picture "For the Freedom of Ireland," and on the Pippin Comedies.

Small Nebraska Town Takes Entire Output of Realart

ONCE and awhile the small town exhibitor, commonly referred to in a general way as the "backbone of the industry," comes in for his proper share of glory, as in the case of H. E. Rodell, owner of the Crystal Theatre in Mitchell, Neb., who gets credit as the pacemaker in Realart's end-of-season campaign. Mitchell has only 840 inhabitants.

This finish to the new company's first season was recently inaugurated to establish a new record for sales organization and demonstrate the strength of the Realart trademark. It has now been in progress several days with the entire sales force in the field, closing out on two big Mayflower specials and five star productions.

Bert R. Latz, Realart's Denver manager, visited Mr. Rodell. First of all, Mr. Rodell signed contracts for Realart's entire star series of fourteen pictures, each one to be played a day. Next he contracted for "Miss Hobbs," the first production in which Wanda Hawley is to be starred by Realart. After that the conversation turned to the Realart specials and Mr. Rodell booked "Soldiers of Fortune," an Allan Dwan production; "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," an Emile Chautard production, and "The Luck of the Irish," an Allan Dwan production.

Anita Stewart Begins Work.

Anita Stewart's new picture, "Harriet and the Piper," has gone into production at the Louis B. Mayer studio with Bertram Bracken directing. The story by Kathleen Norris originally appeared as a serial in the Pictorial Review. The screen version was arranged by Monte M. Katterjohn.

In the supporting cast are Ward Crane, Irving Cummings, Charles Richman, Margaret Landis, Barbara La Marr Deely and Byron Munson. Rene Guissart is in charge of the photography and effects. The picture is being made as a Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

I WENT out to the Fox studios this week to watch Tom Mix make a western dance hall scene and stage a big fight in "No Limit Carson," a forthcoming Fox feature.

All of the Fox stars have little bungalows which are used as offices and dressing rooms, and as Tom was not on the set when I got to the plant, I went over to his bungalow, watched him make up and encouraged him to talk.

Tom is a great guy. He's as good as reading a book—a sort of human document. He showed me a picture some one had snapped of him while he was engaged in the gentle art of building a dog house at his home.

"Don't you get enough exercise whipping husky extras, jumping off seventy-five foot cliffs, and otherwise helling around in the movies?" I asked him.

"Oh, I like to keep busy all the time," he said. "Nothing pleases me better than to get a hammer and nails and some lumber and then build something. A healthy man can't do too much work. People that haven't got any hard work to do should be made to box, run, swim, jump—do something to keep them in shape. I don't mean healthy from a physical standpoint alone. Exercise is just as good a tonic for the morals as it is for the muscles."

Ornery Men Are Lazy Men.

"You believe in the theory that an idle mind is the devil's workshop, do you?" I asked.

"Absolutely," said Tom. "Nearly all of the ornery men I know are lazy men. The chap that's got nothing to do but sit around and think is pretty sure to get to thinking the wrong kind of thought. About half of the so-called moral sins are committed by lounge lizards who don't do anything more strenuous than manicure their nails. A man had better sweat his body with work than sweat his soul with remorse, which he'll surely do if he lazes around long enough. That is, supposing a lazy man has got a soul."

Tom's secretary called him to the telephone, and I took stock of his dressing room while he was gone. Two big mountain lion rugs with the heads on, a phonograph, a weighing machine, a punching bag, a few guns, five or six pairs of boxing gloves, a make-up table, and at a rough guess, seventy-five or eighty pounds of western hats of various kinds. Through the window I could see the fully equipped boxing ring that stands on the lawn alongside of the bungalow.

Boxed Jack Dempsey.

"Do you work out there much?" I asked him when he came back.

"Almost every day," he replied. "I've got a split lip and a black eye a good deal of the time from the bouts we stage in the ring. I took on Jack Dempsey the other day. Jack's a husky boy."

It is well known in the colony that Tom never uses a double and that he frequently doubles in difficult and dangerous parts for other players.

"Why, it would take all the fun out of the game," he said, speaking in this connection, "if I couldn't do my own stunts. I get a lot of kick out of it, and, besides, I've got the public to consider. The public is my boss just as much as William Fox is, and I don't believe in this 'public be damned' stuff. I don't believe in faking the people that support me."

We got to talking about temperament.

Actors Swallow P. A.'s Praise.

"That comes from publicity stories," declared Tom. "Some actors get to believing what their press agents say about them. My father took all the temperament out of me with a strap in the woodshed when I was a kid—my father was a great man. We always had a lot of horses and I remember once he got a pair of horse clippers that he didn't know how to work—"

I had to wait until later for the horse clipper story, because Jacques Jaccard, who was directing the dance hall scene, had got his two hundred people all ready to rehearse by this time, and Tom had to cut his remarks short and hustle over to the stage.

The dance hall was one of the biggest things of its kind I've ever seen. The set was a hundred feet long and fifty feet wide. There was a regular stage at one end and a double tier of boxes extending about forty feet away from the stage on either side—the kind of dance hall of the free and easy type that flourished in the West when the flourishing was good.

Page "Pussyfoot."

There was a long bar with realistic looking stuff in bottles, and five bartenders, headed by Mike Ready as head drink slinger, and every kind of gambling device that was ever invented—roulette, rouge et noir, cards, dice in a bird cage, slot machines by the dozen, and D. G. Sherlock—who has dealt faro in Bob Austin's Cottage in Denver, and Jack Davis' place in Pueblo, and who knew Soapy Smith in Skagway and saw him killed and has got one of the few pictures of Soapy with whiskers—turning the cards at a regularly appointed layout.

Mr. Sherlock specializes in gambler parts because of his intimate knowledge of games. He was the gambler in "The Spoilers" with Bill Farnum, in the Parson of Panamint with Bill Hart, and in "The Beast" with George Walsh, and has gambled in many another film.

The room was full of miners, cowboys, gamblers, hard eggs and dance hall girls. Sol Wurtzel, general manager of the Fox studio, with a party of friends, Francelia Billington, Lester Cuneo and Wilbur Higby, who were in the cast, stood by watching.

A Battle Royal Starts.

Seven cameras were arranged to shoot the long shots and close-up bits at the same time. Three one hundred thousand candle power Sunlight Arcs were pouring their rays into the scene. Arthur Ford, production manager for Mix, and Lloyd Nosler, film editor, were helping Jacques Jaccard.

They started shooting. The games got busy. The bartenders and waiters began serving their prop drinks. The curtain went up on the stage. Lucille Young, the lady heavy of the piece, costumed as a Spanish senorita, came out and danced. Then a chorus of twenty girls headed by Dorothy Lee, who led them through a maze of whirling, swirling, posing and posturing, down a runway into the crowd on the floor and back to the stage.

Tom Mix came in the scene, crossed the room to where Joe Bennett, the juvenile of the story, was playing at roulette. Tom said something to Joe and Joe said, "Gettohell out o' here," or words to that effect, and Tom started to take Joe out of the place, and that started a fight.

Via the Chandelier Route.

There were a lot of tough eggs in the crowd that wanted to get Tom, and a general mix-up followed. Tom fought his way to where a long drapery hung from an upper box, and started to climb. He made the upper box and found a bunch there waiting for him. He threw six or eight of them out of the box like bags of straw, but it got too hot for him; he jumped on the railing of the box, grabbed a chandelier and swung out over the heads of the people.

From this he swung to another chandelier in the center of the room, then to another closer to the stage. The crowd holiered and yelled and tried to drag him down, but old Tom just kept a-going from chandelier to chandelier, showering the crowd below with broken glass.

Tony to the Rescue.

Tom got above the stage, dropped, pulled his guns and held the crowd at bay. Then there was a rattle and a clatter as if some one had dumped a load of bricks on the wooden floor, and Tom's horse, Tony, charged into the room, scattering the crowd that scampered wildly to get out of the way of his flying hoofs as he made his way to the runway and up on the stage to Tom.

Then Jacques Jaccard blew a whistle, the lights went out—and the thrilling stuff was over.

I talked to Tom some more that day. Few people know it, but one of Mix's arms is a full inch shorter than its mate.

"See that arm?" said Tom, rolling up his sleeve. "That's another example of what hard work will do. I got it broken, along with three cracked ribs and a fractured skull in a smash-up in a chuck wagon race. When I was able to crawl around that arm was a stiff as a poker. I had just got to where I was able to make headway in my line of work when the accident happened.

Exercise and Patience Effected a Cure.

"It seemed as though I would never be able to use the arm again. It was a discouraging outlook, but knowing what exercise will do to the muscles, I set out to fix the arm with exercise. The bone was badly set and projected an inch above the elbow and was stiffened in that manner. I fixed it by sawing wood—two hours each morning and one hour each evening.

"It was torture, but I built up a new set of muscles around the broken end of the bone. It took weeks before I saw much in the way of improvement, and the day that I could raise the arm high enough to scratch my head was one of the happiest days of my life. Now it's a good old arm, even if it is a little shy in length. A buck saw and a pile of logs and hard work did what the doctors couldn't do."

"I was raised down in El Paso County, Texas, when it was pretty wild," he said. "I was always around horses and was riding the trail with the men when I was twelve. I was always fond of trick riding and took in all the contests and rodeos. I went to a big rodeo at Cheyenne, Wyoming, and won a championship, and as I went into the bank to get my check cashed, the banker told me he had a telegram from Col. Selig, of Chicago, asking him to employ a rider that could act as head cowboy for his western riders.

"I took the job. My first work in the pictures was 'The Million Dollar Cowboy,' with Winnifred Greenwood, under Director Oscar Eagle. I've been in the films ever since, and I have been with Fox three years."

Horse Clippers Ruined Romance.

After this Tom set 'em up to roast pork and apple sass in the studio restaurant, and I reminded him of his unfinished remark about the horse clippers.

"Oh, yes," he said. "That was one of the sad chapters of my life. You see my father didn't know how to handle the clippers very well, and every time he'd tune them up he'd try them out on me. I was just at the age when I was thinking of going around with the girls to parties and things, and horse clipper hair cuts weren't very fashionable. I remember getting my hair cut four times in two weeks before the old gentleman got the hang of the clippers."

Benjamin B. Hampton Visualizes Time When Theatre Menus Will Differ Widely

THE high-class small theatre and the policy of long runs for good pictures are factors that will materially influence the future of motion picture production," is the opinion of Benjamin B. Hampton, producer of Great Authors and Zane Grey pictures. "That is simply an inevitable step in advance of conditions now. Distinctive pictures will play small houses seating from 500 to 800 and have runs of a month or longer. Large houses will be more and more dependent upon a mixed program of feature, comedy and educational films, grand opera and concert.

"It will come down to a basis of selection. Tastes differ so greatly that literature, art, drama and music have half a dozen different schools, each supported by its devotees. There is every reason why this should become the case with motion pictures. To use effective slang, a certain downtown house with a limited seating capacity will cater to a 'highbrow' audience, another to an audience that likes thrills for the major part of its film menu, another, perhaps, will be running a sex play, and another a human play, a 'glad story,' a children's play.

Rich Man and Poor Man Now Take Pot Luck.

"Pictures will be advertised for what they are, and word of mouth advertising will bring in a comfortable capacity for a small house, depending upon the appeal of the subject for weeks. The patrons will be pleased because for the most part they know what they are to be given; the type of picture they see is their choice. Then audiences will have a wider range of selection than is possible under present exhibiting conditions.

Pictures are exploited now with a view to attracting every class of patron; persons who attend grand opera and those who prefer burlesque have to take pot luck together on their evening's film entertainment. The policy of our best showmen in giving quite a program tends to allay dissatisfaction, for with these houses the picture becomes of less importance, and the feeling with the audiences is that their money has not been wasted, however little the picture may appeal to them.

No "Glad Stuff" for Him.

of the smaller showman. It also permits mediocre pictures to 'get by,' and in many cases may injure the reputation of a film that would otherwise be very successful, by showing it to an audience which for the most part does not care for that type of picture.

"Pictures suffer in popularity today when the cynical young clubman, obliged to sit through a 'glad-good-glad' picture, reports it 'rotten' to his friends, and when the little school girl who would have delighted in the 'glad' stuff reports to her friends that a stormy emotional drama she has just seen 'isn't much good.' I have two pictures in mind when I say this; two very popular photoplays recently produced, which could have played profitably many, many weeks on end at a small downtown house on the long run system.

"Of course a large theatre could not do this profitably; the problem of the large theatre owner will be to please the most number of patrons and mollify those he does not please by the variety and attractiveness of his program. But the small theatre will in the future exhibit the best photoplays for long runs to a selective audience; the standard of production will be raised, and artistic successes like 'Broken Blossoms' will become financial successes as well."

Equity's Latest Young Picture Playing to Heavy Business

EQUITY PICTURES' latest Clara Kimball Young production, "For the Soul of Rafael," an adaptation from Marah Ellis Ryan's popular novel of the golden days of Southern California, is nearing the completion of its second big week at Grauman's Theatre, Los Angeles. The production has broken all box-office records of the theatre, where capacity attendance is evident at every performance.

Those who have been fortunate enough to gain admission to Grauman's Theatre during the second week's showing have pronounced the production one of the finest seen there in a long time. Crowds have been turned away every night unable to gain admission. The matinee performances have been unusually large.

The story offers an exceptional love theme of old California, presented in a way that will both startle and fascinate, and is readily conceded to be Clara Kimball Young's crowning achievement—greater, indeed, than "Eyes of Youth" or "The Forbidden Woman."

"For the Soul of Rafael" had its premiere at Grauman's Theatre, April 21. Since then many congratulatory telegraphic reports, too long for publication, have been received at the Equity offices.

The picture received elaborate exploitation in Los Angeles under the supervision of Harry L. Reichenbach.

Quick Work by International.

Hearst's International News Weekly made another speed record on Saturday, April 24, when it took a scene and three hours later showed that scene at all the Broadway, New York, motion picture houses.

The record was made in connection with the high-price-protest parade engineered by New York's Cheese Club. As fast as the scenes were taken they were hurried over to the laboratory by special automobile, developed and printed and hurried over to the different theatres for matinee showing.

Zukor Points to New York and Dallas as Examples Why Theatres Are Bought

IN a personal interview with a representative of Moving Picture World on April 30, shortly after his return from Chicago, Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, reiterated his previous declarations that the "excitement" about the alleged acquisition of theatres by producers with the intention of creating a monopoly is founded on a misunderstanding of the situation deliberately created by certain people.

"I know that the producers have no desire to take the theatres away from the exhibitors," Mr. Zukor said emphatically. "Our acquisition of theatres in certain localities is only in order to protect ourselves. Take New York City for an instance. In order to obtain sufficient representation for the productions of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in this city we have been obliged to acquire the Criterion Theatre at an enormous expense. That action was absolutely necessary because other theatres are tied up to other interests.

"The taking over of the Criterion will be a boon to exhibitors. It furnishes a try-out for our best productions and makes their worth known from coast to coast. The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is thinking of the exhibitors' welfare all the time; its desire to help the exhibitors is a primary reason why the Criterion was acquired."

Texas Exhibitors Unduly Alarmed.

"Texas exhibitors are excited at the possibility that you are seeking a theatre monopoly in that state; would you care to say that you are interested only in Dallas?" Mr. Zukor was asked.

"That is an example of what I was saying," Mr. Zukor replied. "We want representation in Dallas; we are not trying to monopolize the state."

"Whitman Bennett told the convention that the oldtimers (meaning the producers) have put themselves in the hands of men stronger than they are," suggested the interviewer.

Mr. Zukor answered that the statement is incorrect, that the fear of a monopoly by anybody in the industry is founded on a misunderstanding of the situation.

"Has Paramount taken over the fifty-four Black theatres in the East?"

"Paramount has not; Paramount has had a booking arrangement with them for a long time," said Mr. Zukor. "There is nothing to the story. Famous Players is acquiring theatres only here it needs representation. It is merely protecting its own business interests."

Mr. Zukor explained that while he had been in Chicago, he had not had the opportunity to hear details of the conventions and knew little about what transpired. He went to Chicago to attend a wedding and not to talk business, he said, and he only met one or two theatre men while in the city.

United Picture Theatres Corporation Has Receiver

INVOLUNTARY proceedings in bankruptcy have been instituted in the United States District Court against the United Picture Productions Corporation and the United Picture Theatres of America, and Harry Zalkin is in charge of the affairs of both corporations as receiver.

The appointment of Mr. Zalkin as receiver of the United companies was made by Judge Mayer upon the application of creditors and did not meet with any opposition from the film companies which have become involved in financial difficulties necessitating the indulgence of the creditors and co-operation on the part of all interests concerned to work out an adjustment.

Liabilities Approximate $375,000.

The liabilities of the United Picture Theatres of America, which is engaged chiefly in the distribution of motion pictures under contracts with approximately 2,000 exhibitors, amount to at least $375,000, while the assets are estimated roughly at $300,000, dependent, of course, upon the fulfillment of the contracts with the exhibitors and the amount derived from these contracts.

In view of this situation Judge Mayer

Pretty Ankles Help Famous Players Studios Ball to Walk Off with Honors

WE never dreamt there were so many styles of hosiery on the beauty market, but the ankle contest at the Eastern Studios Ball of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, held at the Commodore, Wednesday evening, April 28, proved that every little ankle had a hosiery all its own.

Which delightful bit of fact not only puzzled the judges but baffled the spectators by whose applause the judges regulated their awards. So much so that it took deliberate consideration and elimination to make the final decision.

Beautiful "Footage."

A curtain shielded the contestants—with the exception of the ankles, of course—and when one young lady stepped to the footlights with some paper specie of the realm visible in the well-known "First National Bank," she threw more uncertainty into the contest than the recent arrival of English gold did to the exchange rate. Upon viewing which demonstration of the financial solidarity of the American woman one old gentleman was heard to murmur, "I'm glad I've got a good seat on this Stocking Exchange."

Miss Camelia Penny's trim "footage" won the first prize of $20 in gold, while Miss Aleta Dore and Mrs. Caroline Moore showed the prettiest ankles for the second and third prizes of $10 and $5, respectively. Mlle. Spinelle of the Ziegfeld Follies supervised the judging of the thirty contestants.

This bit of originality displayed by those responsible for the program and management of the ball characterized the affair from start to finish, or chronologically speaking from 8.30 p. m. to 4.30 a. m.

A "Different Ball."

Which obliges us to use the word "different." This was a "different" ball. Well managed and well directed, it caused favorable comment on all sides. "This isn't at all like the movie balls I've attended," "This is certainly a well-handled affair," "Altogether different" were some of the comments heard as event after event fitted into each other as if made to order.

A bill of Keith vaudeville artists entertained the crowd of 1,200 until 10 o'clock. Then the dancing started, interrupted now and then by more "talent." At midnight the grand march was staged, lead by Elsie Ferguson and Colonel William Weigle, representing Major-General Bullard. It looked more like the First Division marching down Fifth Avenue behind Pershing authorized Receiver Zalkin to continue the business temporarily, and it is expected that he will obtain the further permission of the court to continue the business in the usual course pending the consummation of some definite plan of adjustment to be determined upon.

Proceedings Instituted April 27.

The bankruptcy proceedings against the producing company were instituted on April 27 by Strasbourger & Schallek representing the following creditors: Royal Ribbon & Carbon Company, on a claim of $5,890; Zinnsmith Press, on a claim of $1,278, and the Barclay Desk Company, on a claim of $496.

The proceedings against the distributing company were filed on April 26 by Olcott, Bonyng, McManus & Ernst for these creditors: The Water Color Company, Inc., on a claim of $330; Elco Gelatone Publishing Corporation, on a claim of $993, and Ethel Cotter, on a claim of $500.

instead of the usual tangled affair listed under the general misnomer of "Grand March."

Beauty Contest Popular.

A buffet supper was served at 12:30, followed by the aforementioned ankle contest. The contest which undoubtedly raised feminine interest to the highest pitch was the beauty contest. Fifteen beauties were picked at the conclusion of the grand march and from these, pictures of whom were taken, Daniel Frohman will select the three who will be given screen tests by Famous Players-Lasky. The names of the three possible stars are not available as we go to press.

The proceeds of the ball will go toward the establishment of a welfare fund for the benefit of the studio employees of Famous Players. The welfare association is headed by J. N. Naulty, general manager of the Eastern Studios, with Daniel Hunting, vice-president, M. Healy, treasurer, and James Hood Macfarland, secretary.

Affair Well Managed.

Large issues of credit go to Mr. Naulty for the capable arrangement and handling of the ball, and to his various committees who shared in the work. The program deserves particular commendation for a beautiful and business like piece of work.

Among those present besides those above mentioned were Jesse L. Lasky, Arthur Friend, Thomas B. Clarke, Jr., Jules Brulatour, General Sir Charles Ferguson, Mme. Trentini, Fay Marbee, Mrs. George Fitzmaurice, Edward Small, Gypsy O'Brien, Arthur Cheney Johnson, Martha Mansfield, Marjorie Rambeau, Percy Marmont, Tom Wise, C. P. Holzderber, Faure Binney, Lillian Walker, R. R. Neill, Grace Darmond, Guyer P. Dominick, Marie Shotwell, Chamberlain Brown, H. H. Wentworth, Crauford Kent and Maurice Werthin.

Offer Reward for H. E. Specker.

The St. Louis Film Board of Trade offers a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of one H. E. Specker, who formerly operated motion picture theatres at Mattoon and Neoga, Ill. The organization writes that on March 4 five reels of film were shipped to Specker at Mattoon and have since that time been held by him.

The reels cover the following subjects: "Knight of the Western Land," "Threads of Fate" and "The Wrong Flat."

Sales Branches of Selznick Speed Up After Annual Convention in New York

A RESUME of the sales and booking reports from widely separated cities indicates a general acceleration in the business of the Select, Republic and National Picture exchanges. The exchange manager are now busy imparting to the sales forces the news of the Selznick convention and in arranging for the starting of some of the new methods outlined to them at the New York meeting.

The Atlanta office is the recipient of many compliments from several exhibitors in that territory who have benefited from the exploitation department's assistance. The Criterion Theatre, of Atlanta, was one of the theatres which played to a capacity house with the Olive Thomas production, "Footlights and Shadows."

Following an extensive campaign in Savannah in which window displays, song tie-ups, and elaborate lobby displays were used, the Odeon Theatre played to capacity business during the run of "Upstairs and Down," the Select production starring Olive Thomas. The novel idea of dressing a negro in a red uniform and sending him about town pushing a wheelbarrow filled with money bags, did much to put over the Eugene O'Brien production at the Alcazar Theatre in Birmingham, recently.

In Buffalo, T. W. Brady, Republic manager, screened the first episodes of the new serial "The Whirlwind" and Manager Howard, of the National Picture organization, screened "Just a Wife." This general screening resulted in several contracts, a report says, and Manager Howard closed contracts for National with the Schugert Enterprises, of Buffalo; Charles Havens, of the Cataract, Niagara Falls, and Max Andrews, of Salamanca.

Manager Moses, of the Buffalo Select office, has started a sales drive on Prizma productions and it is said that several of the salesmen have started brushing up on the geography of the world as a result.

The San Francisco office has reported excellent business for the past few weeks and the Eugene O'Brien production are reported even more popular than usual. His latest production, "A Fool and His Money," is said to have scored heavily on the West Coast.

"Humoresque" to Have Private View.

"Humoresque," Cosmopolitan Productions' new feature picture featuring Alma Rubens, which is scheduled for release by Paramount-Artcraft on June 6, will be given a special private showing in the big ball room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, on May 4. Prominent men and women will be invited. There will also be another special showing to professional concert violinists which will be held about the same time.

Two Goldwyn Pictures Go Over Big in San Francisco

GOLDWYN WEEK on Market street, San Francisco, brought record-breaking crowds at the California Theatre, where Pauline Frederick in "The Woman in Room 13" was the attraction, and at the Rialto, showing Rex Beach's "The Silver Horde." The pictures opened on a Sunday, one of the finest of California spring days. Thousands of people had gone to the beaches or on motor trips, yet lines two and three deep waited in front of the theatres from opening time until shortly before the closing hour.

The publicity received on both productions was far above normal for San Francisco, although the expenditure on exploitation was kept within a reasonable figure. Walter Bodin, Goldwyn press and service representative at the San Francisco exchange, started the circulation of publicity on the two pictures about six weeks in advance of the showings, and as a result there was a considerable popular interest in the productions.

The city was so well covered with twenty-four, three and one sheets that no one could travel about San Francisco without being met by the name of Goldwyn.

Disposes of "Adventuress" for Big Foreign Territory

INTER-OCEAN through Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales, recently closed for the major portion of the foreign territorial rights to "An Adventuress," according to a statement issued from the New York offices of the company. While the name of the buyer is not mentioned in the text of the statement, it is understood that he is the accredited representative of a large export house distributing motion pictures in foreign territories.

By the terms of the contract, the buyer takes over the exclusive distribution for United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, including the Channel Islands; Belgium, Australia and New Zealand; Norway, Sweden and Denmark; France and its Mediterranean Colonies; Switzerland; India; Mexico, Cuba, Holland, Spain and Portugal; Dutch East Indies and Strait Settlement; Porto Rico, Santo Domingo and Venezuela; British South Africa, Argentine and Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Egypt and Finland.

"Gift Supreme" in South America.

"The Gift Supreme," recently acquired by Inter-Ocean Film Corporation for exclusive foreign distribution, has been disposed of for physical distribution throughout seven Latin-American territories, according to a statement by Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales for Inter-Ocean.

The deal in question calls for the distribution in Argentine, Paraguay, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

Purchase Franklin Novel for Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran

FIXED BY GEORGE, one of Edgar Franklin's recent novels, has been bought by Universal for Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. It will be produced as a five reel comedy. Mr. Franklin has come to be recognized as one of the leading writers of farce plots. Two of his stories recently put into films with great success were "Everything But the Truth," a Universal starring Lyons and Moran, and "Don't Ever Marry," a Marshall Neilan production.

"Fixed by George" will be the third five-reel Lyons and Moran comedy. The first was "Everything But the Truth" and the second was the screen version of Fred Jackson's musical comedy, "La La Lucille."

"Fixed by George" is the story of a young married man who tries to tell everybody else how to manage their affairs. It was published serially in the Argosy, beginning with the issue of February 21 this year. It will be put into production early in the summer and will be released next fall by Universal as one of its Star Series pictures.

Trade Showing of Pathe Serial.

W. E. Raynor, manager of Pathe's New York branch, has announced that a special trade showing of the new Pathe serial, "The Third Eye," for exhibitors in the metropolitan district will be held at the Stanley Theatre, Seventh avenue, near Forty-second street, on Tuesday morning at 10.30 A. M. The first three episodes of the serial will be screened.

Paragon Company Will Feature a Clergyman in Series of Twenty-six Two-Reel Comedies

ANNOUNCED as one of the film oddities of the year, Paragon Pictures Corporation, of Long Beach, Cal., are producing a series of two-reel comedies in which the Reverend George LeRoi Clarke, a Baptist clergyman, who has turned from the pulpit to the screen, will be starred.

The Reverend Clarke was for eleven years an evangelist, and is said to be the only regularly ordained minister now in motion pictures. As soon as he has finished the last of his twenty-six pictures, which will be distributed by Romaine Superfilm Company of Los Angeles, he will return to his work as a minister.

These productions are being made at the former Balboa studios in Long Beach, California. Fred Jefferson will direct, and the supporting cast includes Marian Pickering and Johnny Hayes. The pictures will have a wide range of appeal, but will be "comedies" pure and simple, without the ghost of a moral or teaching, declares the minister.

He also states that he is appearing in films to prove that the gospel of fun is one of the bulwarks of Biblical teaching. "I want to help people help themselves to laughs galore." It is announced that a special effort will be made to interest prominent church workers.

"Up in Mary's Attic" Will Be Title of Fine Arts Comedy in Five Reels

FINE ARTS PICTURES, INC., of which Murray W. Garsen is president, announces that the five-reel comedy purchased from Ascher Enterprises, Inc., will be released under its original title, "Up in Mary's Attic," instead of "Some Baby" as first planned. Several reasons prompted this move, chief among which is the fact that a number of prominent exchangemen preferred the longer title, and also the fact that "Some Baby" has already been used.

"Up in Mary's Attic" is described as a rollicking comedy of a different type, with a clever and original story depicted in a whimsical and farcical manner, care being taken to maintain the story throughout so that thrill, suspense and interest abound throughout the picture.

The cast includes Eva Novak, Harry Gribbon, Minne-ha-ha, the Indian who appeared in "Mickey," and a large number of beautiful girls. More than 30,000 feet of negative were exposed, and is now being cut by Elmer McGovern. Charles F. Schwerin, general sales manager of the company, announces that a trade showing will probably be held in about ten days.

While many bathing girls are shown in the picture, it is said not to be, in its strictest sense, a bathing girl picture, as most of the scenes are laid in a girls' school, the girls being shown as students of the school.

The story is novel, and its whimsical tone will, it is said, bring tears of joy to the spectator. Fine Arts states a large sum of money will be spent to aid exhibitors in putting over this feature, and that exploitation aids of all kinds, as well as co-operation in advertising, is planned by the Fine Arts advertising department.

Mrs. Cobb Will Visit

Big Exchange Centres

As announced in our last issue, Agnes Egan Cobb, sales and publicity manager for Schomer-Ross Productions, Inc., has started on a country-wide sales tour. After attending the First National convention in Chicago, she will visit buyers in principal cities, including Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Minneapolis, Denver, San Francisco, Omaha, Kansas City, Salt Lake City, Seattle, St. Louis, New Orleans and Atlanta.

Mrs. Cobb's trip is in the interest of her company's pictures and also Joe Brandt's products, and she will be in position to offer practically a complete program to state right buyers. It will also be her purpose to study closely the public taste and ascertain just what should be done to cater to the demand. She is highly pleased with the reception accorded the first Schomer-Ross production, "The Sacred Flame," featuring Emily Stevens.

Marie Doro Picture Is

Pioneer's May Release

The Pioneer Film Corporation's May release will be Marie Doro in "Midnight Gambols." The story deals with a girl who, because of prenatal influences, is possessed of a double consciousness, and who becomes enmeshed in the perils of New York's White Light district.

The supporting cast is headed by Godfrey Tearle, while Mary Jerrold, Christine Maitland and Sam Livesay have prominent roles. An elaborate line of exploitation matter, including lithographs, lobby displays and novelties is being prepared, together with a comprehensive press book. Arrangements are being made to post a large number of twenty-four sheets on this production.

Billy West Discards

His Familiar Make-Up

Billy West, now producing two-reel comedies for Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, has discarded the eccentric make-up which he has used for several years, and beginning with his first for Reelcraft has adopted a straight make-up, and will wear whatever apparel the type of character calls for in the script. This opens up a wider field for the selection of subjects.

Theodore Lorch, who has headed his own stock company for several years, has been added to Billy West's support, which includes Ethlyn Gibson, Leo White, Bud Ross and Al Martin. "Brass Buttons" is the title of the first comedy in which Billy West appears without his familiar make-up.

Pioneer Appoints C. A. (Buck) Taylor General Manager of Buffalo Exchange

PIONEER FILM CORPORATION has appointed C. A. (Buck) Taylor as general manager of its Buffalo branch, and he has already taken up his duties. Mr. Murphy will remain as office manager under the direction of Mr. Taylor. Mr. Taylor is well known to New York State exhibitors, and was for three years manager of one of the Pathe exchanges.

Reports from the Buffalo office indicate that a large number of contracts are being secured for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Empty Arms," and that great interest is being manifested in the forthcoming release of "Bubbles."

Mr. Taylor is pleased with the outlook for business, and expects his office to continue the rapid stride it has made during the past year and to soon become one of the foremost links in the Pioneer chain.

Kremer Corrects Error and Announces a Sale

Victor Kremer Film Features reports that its recent announcement that rights to four Essanay Chaplins were purchased by Standard Film Corporation for Kansas and Missouri is in error, as this should be for Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri. Western Missouri and Kansas is controlled by First National of Kansas City.

Victor Kremer, who is on tour and expects to return to New York within a week, announces he has sold the rights to these productions and also for "A Burlesque on Carmen" for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Beaudine at Work on Another.

William Beaudine, who directed "Petticoats and Pants" for Christie, is now producing another two-reel comedy for the same company, with a cast including Fay Tincher, Jimmie Harrison, Charlotte Merriam and Eddie Baker.

"The Kentucky Colonel" Without the Eagle on His Shoulder. Nevertheless he's got a chicken on his arm in this National Film Corporation production.

Marion Kohn Announces Additional Stress Will Be Placed on Plots for His Pictures

MARION H. KOHN, president of Marion H. Kohn Productions, announces that in the future more attention will be paid to the plots of the short subjects he is producing. "People demand a story in a comedy as well as in a big production, and it must be a good story or the picture will not get by," says Mr. Kohn.

"It is my intention to pick only clever stories. I have added several scenario writers to my staff as I want every subject to be thoroughly up to the minute in plot as well as in picture. There will be logical reason for every move in the lively, fast-moving Grace Cunard Westerns, and plots will also bolster up the work of Polly Moran and Smiling Bill Jones in their comedies. The plot in the short subject will be the biggest thing."

Polly Moran has completed her first "Sheriff Nell" comedy, while Smiling Bill Jones has finished his fourth single-reeler, "A Fishy Affair," in which the Kohn bathing girls will be featured.

Jans Special Nears Completion.

The final scenes of Jans Pictures, Inc., feature drama, "Maddonnas and Men," are now being filmed under the direction of B. A. Rolfe, who promises it will be one of the finest pieces of screen-craft he has ever turned out. The story deals with both ancient and modern times, and is said to have same unusually elaborate sets.

Great Interest Shown in "Vanishing Trails"

Hardly had the advertising campaign started, announces Canyon Pictures Corporation, when numerous inquiries were received regarding the Selig serial, "Vanishing Trails," featuring Franklyn Farnum and Mary Anderson.

J. M. Goldstein, treasurer of the company, announces that several sales of territory have been made. "We have built up a state rights clientele in the past few years," says Mr. Goldstein, "by holding to our promises. Once a man starts buying our pictures we can generally count on him when we release future pictures."

Sol Lesser Will Star Wheeler Oakman Now Annette Kellerman's Leading Man

AS the result of his work with Annette Kellerman in her new modern comedy-drama, which she has just completed for Sol Lesser, Wheeler Oakman will become a star in his own right under the Lesser banner. He has appeared in prominent roles in several big productions, including "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er Do Well," "Mickey" and "The Virgin of Stamboul."

In each of these pictures he has portrayed a distinct type. The first three of these productions Mr. Lesser handled for his territory and was attracted to his work. In the Kellerman picture he is the leading man, and is said to have a role different from any he has attempted. After viewing his work in this film Mr. Lesser placed him under a long-term contract.

While a new studio is being built to house the Lesser productions and a story secured for

Burston Selects Title for Latest Ford Serial

It has been definitely decided by Louis Burston to release his latest serial, starring Francis Ford, under the title of "The Great Reward." This serial is in fifteen episodes and relates the story of a young man who takes the place of an ancient monarch.

Mr. Burston announces that all of the titles suggested were found to be unsatisfactory, as they adhered too closely to the spirit of the story.

Chadwick Pictures Corporation Offers Briggs Comedies on State Right Market

THE Briggs Comedies, which during the past year have been released through Paramount exchanges, will in the future be released on the state rights market by Chadwick Pictures Corporation, a company recently formed to handle high-class productions.

I. E. Chadwick, president of the company, announces that at present ten subjects are ready: "It Happens in the Best Regulated Families," "Oh, Man," "Oh, How He Could Dance," "The Handy Man Around the House," "The Town Lock-up," "Wonder What a Baby Thinks About," "Sticky Six," "The Tramp," "Buried Gold" and "Circus Day."

These are all based on the Briggs comic series appearing in many prominent daily newspapers, and will be released at the rate of one a week for ten weeks. Elaborate advertising accessories have been prepared.

Chadwick Pictures Corporation is located in the Leavitt Building, 130 West Forty-sixth street, and Jacques Kopfstein, vice-president of the company, is in charge of the sales department.

Censors Have Not Cut "Hall Room" Comedies

Jack Cohn, of Jack and Harry Cohn, producers of Hall Room Boys Comedies, in which Neeley Edwards and Hugh Fay are featured, states these comedies are practically censor-proof. "Of the sixteen comedies already produced," says Mr. Cohn, "not one has lost a foot through the use of censor's shears."

"This is a record in which we take pride. It does not mean there is no live action to these comedies, but goes to show that even though a picture is full of laughable situations, with action and pep, there is also a chance to keep it clean and wholesome." "Tell Us Oujia" is the latest of this series.

"Move a Little Will Ya Lady—Yer Not Posin' Fer a Gallery Portrait,"

So speaks Rev. George LeRoi Clarke, who is featured in Paragon comedies with Miriam Pickering.

Kremer Organization Achieves Rapid Growth During the Past Six Months

DURING the past half year Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc., have achieved an excellent record in sales and bookings, and from October, 1919, when rights for five Chaplin reissues for the United States and Canada, an almost unbroken record of weekly sales for these productions has been maintained.

From one room the office space has, during this period, been increased until a large portion of one floor of a prominent film building is now occupied. A local exchange for New York and northern New Jersey has been opened, and the staff of the office increased from five to thirty.

Bookings on the Chaplins have been secured in some of the best theatres, including the New York Rivoli and Rialto and Grauman's Los Angeles, and at present less than ten per cent. of the territory remains unsold.

The following exchanges have bought rights on these productions: Bee Hive, Chicago; First National, Kansas City; Twentieth Century Film Company, Philadelphia; Superfilm Attractions, Washington; Quality Film Corporation, Pittsburgh; Essene Productions DuLuxe Company, Cleveland; Big Feature Rights Corporation, Louisville; A. C. Bromberg Attractions, Atlanta; Eastern Feature Film Company, Boston; Feature Film Company, Minneapolis; Standard Film Corporation, St. Louis; Metro Pictures Corporation, Dallas; Mickey Film Corporation, Chicago; Exhibitors Films Exchange, Washington; F. A. F. Enterprises, Omaha; D. W. Griffith Film Service for Ohio and Kentucky; A. Glasnapp, Bowman, N. D., and Davis Amusement Enterprises, Montreal.

Yudkin Makes Trip to Boost "Screen Smiles"

Originator of "Screen Smiles," Herbert H. Yudkin, left New York recently for a trip to prominent independent exchanges in the interest of this novelty topical, which is being distributed by Victor Kremer Film Features. He will visit Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

Mr. Yudkin carries prints of the last three issues, together with samples of advertising accessories, including stock one-sheets, heralds, press matter and a lobby display of eight photographs showing the main title and animated illustrations.

Rights to this series for eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey have been acquired by Consolidated Film Company of Philadelphia.

Release Date Named for Initial "Franey" Comedy

May 17 has been set by R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, as release date for the first of a series of one-reel Billy Franey comedies. Titles of the first three releases are "The Paper-Hanger," "The Dog-Catcher" and "The Water Plug."

It is announced that exchanges distributing this series will be advertised in a national campaign which has just been started

Polly Moran Comedies Will Be Two Reelers

The Polly Moran comedies will be released as two-reelers instead of single reelers as originally planned, announces Marion H. Kohn Productions. Miss Moran is at work on the new series of "Sheriff Nell" pictures, and the first, "Sheriff Nell Surrounded," has been completed.

A special water set, with capacity for 5,000 gallons was constructed for this comedy, and Marion Kohn asserts this is typical of the care and expense which will be gone to make these "slap-stick" comedies above the average. Joe Brandt reports considerable territory has been sold on this series.

Marion H. Kohn Productions has been granted articles of incorporation in California to produce motion pictures.

Marion H. Kohn is president; D. J. Chatkin, vice-president; J. D. Letterman, secretary, and George A. Oppenheimer, treasurer. Joe Brandt is eastern representative.

Alice Howell Films Sold for Entire Country—Print of Latest Received

REELCRAFT PICTURES CORPORATION has received negative and sample print from its Chicago studio on the latest two-reel Alice Howell comedy, "Her Bargain Day." This picture was directed by Frederick J. Ireland, vice-president in charge of production for Reelcraft, and several of the scenes were filmed in the Chicago "Loop" district, in and around a prominent department store, the Chicago traffic police being used in many scenes. This is said to be the first time in several years that a picture company has taken pictures inside the "Loop."

Standard Gets Rights.

Rights on the series of Alice Howell comedies were recently sold to Standard Film Company, of Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland, and Masterpiece Pictures

Interstate Photoplay Company Announces Feature Picture "The Ninth Commandment"

INTERSTATE PHOTOPLAYS COMPANY, which recently announced a feature production, "The Ninth Commandment," starring Fernando R. Elizondo, is getting ready to begin on a second production in which this new star will be featured. Emil Harder, who directed the first production, will also direct this one.

The actual filming of "The Ninth Commandment" is now complete and it is being cut and assembled. The picture is based on the theme "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife," and deals with a character Zaldou, who, rebuffed in trying to gain a woman's love, sets out to revenge himself after she is happily married. He kidnaps one infant son and later tries to make away with the other one.

Believing he has succeeded he again tries to win the woman's love, but is recognized by the son who he has kidnapped, and who succeeds in foiling his plan. Interest is added to the story by a charming love affair between the kidnapped boy and a distant relative of his mother, and the further fact that the boy, reared in luxury, when he is injured, gets his brother to pose as his double and visit his mother and sister.

Featured in this production is Mme. Halina Bruzovna, who appeared in Selznick's "The Faded Butterfly."

National Film Going Right Ahead With Its Program of Increased Production

HARRY M. RUBEY, president of National Film Corporation, announces that all difficulties have been adjusted and everything is now in excellent shape at the studios, and production activities will go ahead in keeping with pre-arranged increased program.

The "Buddy" Post unit is making twenty-six two-reel comedies to be released by Goldwyn under the Capitol brand, and the various Marion Kohn units are rapidly turning out numerous subjects. Preparations for "The Son of Tarzan" serial are nearing completion, but the company is awaiting the arrival of Joe Brandt before sailing to a South Pacific island to film the main scenes of this Edgar Rice Burroughs' novel.

Roy Somerville has completed the continuity for the first three episodes, and Harry Revier, the director, announces he will inroduce several unique ideas in this serial, of which Jack Hoxie is the star.

There will be a little lapse of time before production is started on the next feature to follow, "The Kentucky Colonel," due to the illness of Director William A. Seiter. Several big stories are under consideration.

Brandt Optimistic.

Joe Brandt, director general, is optimistic regarding his company's plans, and states that "The Confession," "Parted Curtains," "Nobody's Girl" and "The Kentucky Colonel" are representative of National's capabilities, and that future efforts will be centered on producing a small number of pictures of this calibre each year. "We expect to make each succeeding picture better, to spend more money on them, and exhibitors will find that the extra expense is justified."

Company, of Philadelphia, for their respective territories. This is announced by Reelcraft as closing out the entire territory in the United States on these comedies.

Pioneer Will Appoint Big Promotion Force

At the recent conference of the executives of the Pioneer Co-operative Distribution System, in New York, it was decided to create a body of special representatives to visit the exchange centers and work in conjunction with the local staff.

The formation of this staff is in progress, but has been somewhat delayed on account of getting the list of spring offerings in order, but it is expected that within the next few weeks the first group will be appointed.

Jack Cohn Announces "Laughographs" A Reel of Animated Jokes and Gags

CLOSELY following the announcement of "Screen Snapshots" Jack Cohn announces he is about to launch another novelty reel, which will also be issued every other week, and thus, with the "Snapshots," provide exhibitors with a weekly release.

"Laughographs" is the title of this new reel. It will be composed of animated jokes and a varied assortment of quips and gags, and is said to be entirely new in its conception. For example, in the first issue a negro preacher explains to his congregation the meaning of "miracle," providing exceptional humor, it is claimed.

Jack Cohn states he will have some of the best known "columnists" prepare "copy" for this reel, and that the funny side of life from all corners of the globe will be the basis of each issue. "Laughographs" will be released on the state rights market.

Louis Burston Presents Francis Ford in a Five-Reel Abraham Lincoln Film

LOUIS BURSTON announces for early release a new Abraham Lincoln five-reel drama entitled "The Heart of Lincoln," in which Francis Ford portrays the leading role. Mr. Burston states that he made this picture because of the interest shown by exhibitors in the Lincoln pictures issued in connection with this great American's birthday, and that in this production he has attempted to show some of the lively moods of Lincoln, as well as his hours of great grief and stress.

Interwoven in the picture is a love story of a young couple whose path crossed that of the martyred president. An attractive line of advertising and exploitation matter has been prepared in connection with this picture.

Halbert Brown Portrays Dignified Role in Film

Prominent in the cast of the Lee Francis Lybarger thought drama, "Democracy, the Vision Restored," is Halbert W. Brown, who impersonated Ambassador Gerard in "My Four Years in Germany," which was also directed by William Nigh.

Mr. Brown is a native of Vermont, and in his early youth was featured in melodrama. Later he made a name in heavy and character roles. He was with Margaret Anglin for three years and also appeared in prominent roles with several other stage stars. He has also been seen in several photoplays, including "A Perfect Lover," "The World Aflame," "Please Help Emily" and "Civilian Clothes." In the Lybarger drama he portrays the role of the doctor.

Educational Describes Chester Studios Now Nearing Completion in Los Angeles

LATE dispatches from Los Angeles announce the practical completion of the physical organization of C. L. Chester Productions, Inc., whose entire product will be released through Educational Films Corporation. Only the laboratory and permanent offices remain to be finished before the entire plant will be in operation.

Mr. Chester is in personal charge of all the activities on the West Coast, having offices for the present at 6372 Hollywood Boulevard. Here also are located Katherine Hilliker, whose work on the titles for Chester Outings is so well known and who will do the title work for all the Chester offerings, and Arthur W. Loomer, director of art work.

Until the new Chester laboratory is completed, the cutting and projection rooms are located in the William Horsley Laboratories at 6060 Sunset Boulevard. Here Joseph LaRose, who is so well known as production manager for the Rialto and Rivoli Theatres, New York, is located. Mr. LaRose is assembling and editing the comedy and travel productions under the direct supervision of Mr. Chester.

The Chester Studios, where the comedies are being produced, are located near Lincoln Park, not far from the Selig Zoo. William S. Campbell, who has had long experience in handling productions in which animals participate, is in charge of activities, with Harry Burns as his assistant and Lee Garmes as cameraman.

Adjoining the studios is the Chester Zoo, which affords unusual facilities for the production of animal scenes. Animals figure as prominently in the second of the Chester Comedies, now nearing completion, as they did in "Four Times Foiled," the initial production, which recently had its pre-release showings in New York. The Chester Zoo offers a variety of animal actors, including the lion family of six, headed by Leo and Queenie; Meatsie, a leopard, and her two cubs; a puma, an anteater, a pair of raccoons and an African vulture. There are some twelve breeds of the monkey family, including Alexander, who took the hero's role in "Four Times Foiled."

There are in addition to the domestic animals, including the horse and dog that showed such intelligence in the initial Chester comedy creation.

Before leaving Los Angeles the Chester Comedies will be ready for the exhibitor. There also the Chester-Outings and Screenies will be edited and titled, the film being dispatched to Los Angeles by the five Chester cameramen who are "scattered to the four winds."

Educational will announce a definite release schedule for the Chester product within a few days. Ample exploitation material on each release is being prepared.

Theatre Publicity Manager Complains of Poor Quality of Exploitation Materials

Editor Moving Picture World:

THERE is a subject vital to the promotion of the popularity of the motion picture that is seemingly overlooked by all except the one responsible for the publicity for the individual or chain of theatres devoted to first runs in the larger cities. This is the inadequate supply of suitable stills for publicity purposes in the metropolitan newspapers or other publications wherein stills may be "planted" providing they are of a suitable nature.

Why is it that seeming care is given to the smooth working of the departments of the producing company with the exception of that department which can be counted as one of the most important of all—the publicity? That is, as far as the tools with which to work, in this instance such tools being suitable stills for publication purposes. It is said that the average cost per still to the studio is 45 cents and that the aggregate cost of such material is far out of proportion. Still if this is a fact, why do the producing studios insist in foisting upon the exchanges for publicity distribution a bunch of junk that is apparently useless by those upon whom such publicity distribution depends.

Complain as to expense and then willfully cast their money to the "four winds of Heaven." A pretty girl can always get attention from the press and can top the layout. Those engaged in the work of theatrical publicity know this and work to this end, but if one does attempt to gain good-looking stills of the more popular stars from the exchanges there is always an appalling lack of such and in their places is an inconsequential collection of stills which mean nothing and in most instances non-publishable except where a figure is blocked out here and there. This occurs even when it happens that you are the first man to handle the run. Either the stars do not wish to become popular (and I do not certainly believe that this is the case) or else the producing companies are fearful that their stars may become too popular.

Anyway in the long run, it is only working injury upon the producer.

HOWARD O. PIERCE.

Publicity Manager, John H. Kunsky, Inc.

Zukor Will Produce British Stage Successes in England

FILMING of British stage successes in England for distribution in this country, England and on the Continent will begin at once by a Famous Players-Lasky British producing company, it was declared by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, upon his arrival in New York City from abroad, last week.

The plays include all of Sir James M. Barrie's successes, including "Peter Pan," "What Every Woman Knows" and "The Little Minister." A new play being written by Henry Arthur Jones and the Drury Lane spectacle, "The Great Day," also are among the British stage successes which will be converted into motion pictures under the direction of Jesse L. Lasky, producing head of the corporation. Hugh Ford, a director, is already on his way to London to open the new Famous Players-Lasky studio in that city with the production of Marie Corelli's novel, "The Sorrows of Satan."

These plays, Mr. Zukor stated, will be enacted by British casts in British settings, and more than anything else will serve to bring the Old World closer to America.

While in London Mr. Zukor conferred with several leaders of British life and he says he received many indications that the British people are greatly pleased because American motion picture producers will film British plays in British settings for American consumption.

"When I was in England," he asserted, "I received letters by the score congratulating me and my associates on our enterprise. The British people like American photoplays, which are having a tremendous success throughout the British Isles as well as on the continent, but, naturally, they want to see photoplays in English settings, and with our new London studio we are in a position to supply them."

"Nearly all the comment I heard while in England was to the effect that motion pictures made in England and distributed in America would have a most salutary effect in uniting even closer the two nations in the bonds of friendship and understanding."

looks well and the style can be followed where the space cannot be afforded. It is not so much a matter of how much space you use as what you do in that space, and a four fives would look just as well as an eight tens with practically the same design.

For his second week Mr. Malaney is less apt to use a cut attractor as for an opening, but the plain announcement, backed up by press work, will probably sell a first run as easily as would a cut, and the dignity and appeal of this display would be hard to better. The border is perhaps a trifle too ornate. A more sketchy design might have helped in some small degree, but the main point is getting the announcement over, and this could not be bettered very materially.

and try to make up with big, black letters. It is better to use small light letters which will seem large in the space.

These houses are handicapped by the fact that they run double features and must give two titles equal display, yet other managers, in other towns, can get apparent display in the same or even smaller spaces. They do it by studying how to get big effects with small type faces, and generally they find the answer in lighter faces. Bold type faces should not be used in limited spaces. They are for use in large spaces where there is plenty of room in which they can spread out and have their effect.

For the small area the preference should be for light letters which gain seeming size by the relative proportioning of the lines. This is something the average manager does not seem able to understand. He does not realize that a large letter in a small space is too crowded to have effect. The smaller the space the larger the letter he tries to use, and so he defeats his end, whether it be newspaper space or a weekly program. Value is not a matter of blackness, but of conspicuousness, and the two are utterly different.

Grew a Tent Into a Theatre

F RANK E. Lee, of Three Oaks, Mich., sends in a local weekly in which he has five advertisements and adds that he has been in Three Oaks for nine years. He started in a tent, showing a single reel for three days and then changing. With the approach of winter he got into a store fit-up and in course of time sprouted this into a regular theatre. He has been a steady and consistent advertiser, and is not afraid to take an extra page to put over a special attraction.

He is the leader of the local band, as well, and the issue he sends advertises a special benefit for the band at the opera house, under his management. With some houses changing hands two and three times a year, it is pleasant to find an old timer who has stuck. But Mr. Lee stuck because he went into a town, worked right, advertised—and kept on advertising. He gives good shows and scales his prices to match the current program, starting in at ten and twenty and raising for the larger features.

Another Cleveland Half Page in Which Type and Lettering Are Well Combined

J UST as the Grauman style is a distinctive type, so the advertisements from M. A. Maloney, of the Loew theatres, Cleveland, are distinctly educative; particularly the Euclid half pages. It is not to be supposed that many advertisers will use half pages to follow Mr. Malaney, but this small reproduction

Another Euclid Half Page.

There seems to be a method in this madness of Mr. Malaney for large spaces. He takes this half page and a matching half for the other Loew theatres in Cleveland, the Euclid running at the bottom of the first photoplay page, while the other display bottoms the facing page. As a result the Loew houses get the first chance at the prospective patron. He naturally turns to the photoplay page, and he sees only the Loew announcements. If he wants anything else he must turn the page. The chances of selling him before he turns the page are sufficiently strong to make the additional cost for space worth while.

Rochester Theatres Vary Style and Get Distinction Without Too Large Displays

R OCHESTER must be a comfortable sort of town to have a theatre in. The theatres mostly use double sizes or sevens and instead of sitting up nights trying to "fade" the other fellows, each house gets out a good design and stops worrying. They do not copy styles, apparently, but trust to a difference in the layouts to get a good show with a double five or six instead of going strong on black borders and similar devices in an effort to dominate the page. It is the better scheme where all will play the game right and not try to cut under. Then when one house has an exceptional attraction it can get a splash in a three tens.

See What a Fashion Show Can Do

Of the three displays we like that for the Regent best. Miss Pickford does not need much shouting and this two fives is attractive and dignified. The Fay space has the lower portion, advertising the vaudeville, cut off. This is plain type display and does not work in with the drawn design which advertises the film. The picture of Tob Mix standing on one foot is a crazy sort of thing to use for a cut, which is the very reason why it is a good idea to use it. It is different, therefore it attracts.

The Victoria has the most conventional showing, but it manages to make much of the elephant strips, and between that and the circus cut they get attention. They seem to use a tab show weekly to offset the Fay vaudeville. A lot of people seem to like tab shows, but we never could stand chorus girls in cotton stockings. Rochester seems to put it all over its neighbor, Utica, in theatrical advertising, probably because the Rochester papers are more generous with their advertisers. The tightwad business policy never helped a newspaper get large spaces, yet it is still followed in some sections.

Samuel Sivitz's Three-in-One Would Be Better Did His Artist Letter Plainly

HERE is another example of how Samuel Sivitz, of the Rowland and Clark theatres, Pittsburgh, tries to get full effect for three houses in a five fives. This is more or less along the lines of the Franklin style, but Mr. Franklin takes half this space or more, and hampers the telling by using lettering not always clear. It would be much better did to have the text set up and printed on strips of paper which could be pasted into place. The idea of a combination space is good, but it is possible to use three small spaces to give one large display and still have the stuff legible. We do not think the artist has been very successful in this sample.

Philadelphia Artist Does Not Sense Value of Open Display to Make Appeal

EVIDENTLY the artist employed by the Stanley houses in Philadelphia does not appreciate the value of open display in his Sunday spaces or else he is overwhelmed by the amount of copy supplied. Recently we showed one of the spaces in the joint announcement. Here is another, this time for the Stanley.

A Three Fours Far Too Crowded.

It is about sixty lines across three columns, and something could have been made of this space through planning, but the space is reduced to a two-column, though the use of a blotchy looking cut showing a woman's bust set into something which might be a Philadelphia garter or a life preserver. The house signature and an underline and a "coming soon" and a personal appearance take up so much space that the lines are all huddled together.

This is not as poor a specimen as the recent Nazimova space, but it cannot be called good work. The Stanley management is so excellent in so many respects that we are surprised that they should be content with such poor art work. It should be possible to obtain a first-class display in better than twelve column inches.

Another Angle to the Fashion Show

FASHION shows are not only good business makers in a house, but when they are worked right they can be made to produce much extra advertising. This cut shows how a San Francisco store hooked up with the California Theatre to put over a fashion showing. The store posed a special case display with a large sign announcing the showing, and gave all that extra advertising well in advance of the playing date. Even without this advertising hook-up the fashion show properly worked is a big draw, but with the show better than paying for itself, there remains all of the booming the store must give to get its own value out of the joint enterprise. In proportion to the cost, we know of nothing better calculated to bring returns than a fashion show well staged, and yet hundreds of managers never try the scheme because they are afraid to tackle even so simple a proposition. The fashion show can be worked in any town of five thousand or over and can be made a big revenue getter.

Made City Directory Basis of Display in Advertising for "Too Much Johnson"

MAKING a page of the city directory the frame for a three tens for the New Aster, Minneapolis, was John Leroy Johnston's way of getting attention for Bryant Washburn in "Too Much Johnson." Just enough of the page was used around the edges to show what it was, but not enough to intrude on the space, and the cutting was done so that the greatest possible number of given names could be run. Johnsons are more plentiful than Smiths in some sections of Minnesota, and the appeal was strong and direct. It is more than a quarter of a century since Russell's comedians used the Smith page for "The City Directory," and probably Johnston does not recall this, but it worked then and it works now. Try it some time for Johnson or Smith or Jones. The stunt is interchangeable.

Build Your Programs Right

PROGRAM building is not yet become an art in the picture game. Managers are guided more by release dates than by the relation of subjects, but release date has very little to do with the Boston genius who mixed up Pathe's "The Life of Christ," Mrs. Castle in "The Amateur Wife" and the serial, "The Lost City" for a Holy Week bill. And it was one of the large houses, if you please, and not a small house where the manager might not be supposed to know better. And then some people wonder why the pictures do not make greater progress.

Press Bunk and Publicity Are Not the Same

Prelude, Prologue and Production All Used

Alert San Francisco Managers Jazz New Sennett Five Reeler to Big Business

GOING the limit with Mack Sennett's fourth experiment in a five-reel story, "Down on the Farm," the Imperial, San Francisco, which had first chance at the production, is still cleaning up big business. They are handling it like a super-feature dramatic film just to make people realize it is different. As a result the production got off to a jam and has held the crowds. Not all of the stunts can be copied by the smaller time managers when the film comes into their field, but it will be worth while to remember what the Imperial has done and at least adapt a portion of the stunts.

When it was decided to let the Imperial have it first, Eugene Roth and J. A. Partington, managing directors of the string with which the Imperial is connected, got into conference with Harry David, the house manager.

To Make It Important.

It was felt that to get the most out of the picture it must be handled in the same way that the dramatic stuff is worked. Before they got through they had worked out a program which combined about all of the features ever used to put over the extra big attractions. As a result the public and the critics took it seriously while laughing their heads off. Just as a red and gold sash makes a good cigar seem better, the production enhanced the value of the film in critical and other eyes.

A Pierrette was employed to open the program, and she appeared before the curtain after the fashion of "Pagliacci" and made the prologue. It lacked the vocalism

"Number Nine in the Red Book, Boys. Kill It!"

How Severi and his famous San Francisco orchestra helped to put over Mack Sennett's new five-reeler, "Down on the Farm," at the Imperial.

of the opera, but it was direct and to the point, running:

Listen folks: We're going to give you a show without rhyme or reason. As our old friend, Mark Twain, said: "Persons attempting to find a motive in this show will be prosecuted; persons attempting to find a moral will be ejected and any one who seek to discover a plot will be shot at sunrise. This is the order of the management."

Then a Song.

She vanished behind the curtain to give place to a girl in farmerette costume who sang a song written by Ben Black, who collaborates with Art Hickman, the Jazz King. It was not much of a song; just doggerel verses outlining the program, but it was different, and got the audience in a proper frame of mind.

As soon as the song ended the curtain was taken up without giving the applause a chance to die out and the first film feature, "Bobby Bumps," was projected. Then the screen went up for the prologue.

Severi's orchestra is one of the things the San Francisco picture goer likes to brag about. His Sunday concerts are local musical events and his men are artists. It was something of a shock to discover them in a haymow, anticipating the country-wide overalls movement by a couple of weeks. They reveled in top boots and false whiskers and they gave one of the always popular village band selections about as badly as the worst local band ever attempted.

Musicians a Hit.

The sight of the familiar players draped in denim and Spanish moss was almost as much of a treat to the crowd as the fun which followed. It was not as funny, but the men were known and this gave humor to the appearance.

A two-reel Harold Lloyd comedy gave the men a chance to change and get into the orchestra pit for the production. This was a farm scene, shown in the cut, with a fat legged little girl to sing an old-fashioned rural song.

Before her appearance the lights were used to carry the scene from dim light to

Were They All Like That "Down on the Farm"

We should hear less talk about getting the boys back to the cornfields. Congressional committees are advised to consult with Mack Sennett.

Don't Use a Hundred Words If Ten Will Tell It a sunrise effect and so to the full lighting, the orchestra in the meantime helping the effect. On her exit the screen was dropped and the presentation of "Down on the Farm" begun.

In the Proper Mood.

All that had gone before had worked to get them into the proper frame of mind for the fullest enjoyment of the nonsensicalities of Louise Fazenda, Marie Prevost, Ben Turpin, Harry Gribbon, the Great Dane, the thespian cat and all the other factors of the Sennett two-reel hits.

Probably the story would have been found enjoyable without all this preparation, but by working the audience to the proper pitch the utmost was gotten from the play and the audiences went out talking it up to those who had not seen it, while the critics went back to their offices and wrote glowing stories. They forgot to be analytic and look for the plot. They were in the right mood, the same as the rest of the crowd, and some of the criticisms sounded as though Harry David has shown them what he keeps in the cellar before they went home.

Do Some of It.

Not many houses can afford to do as much as this, but the suggestions can be modified to suit the individual purse from a straight orchestral selection to a "Sis Hopkins" prologue. The more the manager does, the better pleased his patrons will be. Making good with a film is not merely a matter of renting a good story. The production can contribute very materially to the acceptance of the entertainment, and make the story seem better just as a painting in a proper frame is more presentable than an unframed canvas. The San Francisco management has gone the limit, but it is not much of a price to pay for several weeks' big business.

Played Local Leading Man to Limit to Put Over "A Daughter of Two Worlds"

ALTHOUGH publicity man is the term applied to any person who writes advertisement and press stuff, the real press agent is only the man who knows how to get more than he is given from the stuff at command.

Charles Beahan, of the Driggs Theatre, Clearfield, Pa., put one over big recently, and got results that reached back to New York.

Somehow the management learned that a local man of considerable wealth and high social standing had written home to friends that he was the leading man for Norma Talmadge in "A Daughter of Two Worlds," playing under the name of Jack Crosby.

Worked on the Tip.

That was all the Driggs needed. The picture was booked in for a two-day run, and as soon as the contract was signed the billboards blossomed out with the announcement that "Sam Stewart, Clearfield's First Motion Picture Star" would be seen in support of Norma Talmadge.

Then the newspapers came out like this:

NORMA TALMADGE

in

"A Daughter of Two Worlds."

and after that the chief of police himself could not have driven the crowds from the front of the Driggs.

And Sam Denied.

The advertising was launched so far in advance that there was plenty of time for talk to spread around. It did not have to be pushed, it was self-propelling. Clearfield is not so large that the publication of a local Who's Who is considered necessary. Everyone knew who Sam was and the announcement that President Wilson and Bill Bryan would appear in a joint debate on state letter writing could have done no more so far as Clearfield was concerned.

Of course the news was rushed to Sam that he was being billed like a circus, so he sat down and wrote to his friends to deny the reports. His friends rushed to print denials, but the Driggs kept right on advertising two stars. The denial simply helped to make more business.

And It Was.

The local gossips could scarcely wait until the show came to town and Beahan did not have to go out and ring a bell in front of the house to draw a crowd. The line did not form the night before, but the wise ones came early and the house was packed to the police limits as quickly as the tickets could be taken up.

And it was Sam, for the dope was straight and the management felt that it was a straight hunch, and everyone went out and told the world that Clearfield at last had a he Mary Pickford for its very own, and the rest of the town came down to the theatre in a body.

Not all of them could get in, but the picture has been rebooked and promises to repeat its success.

It was a good job of press work.

Wrote House Plugger Song for "Why Change Your Wife?"

GETTING his house leader to write a plugger song for "Why Change Your Wife?" carrying the same title, was one of the things Charles Gross, of the Columbia, Dayton, did to get over the De Mille picture for an eleven-day run.

Harold A. Krell wrote the music to which Leon Berg, another local man, added the words. It was used as a plugger, a singer being brought from Cincinnati. The local angle gave even more than a national song, and helped a lot to put the story over big after a poor opening due to bad weather.

But Mr. Gross did not trust entirely to the song. Five hundred one-sheets and heralds and window cards in proportion were used as well as generous newspaper spaces.

Better Edit Your Hook-up Pages

THE Majestic, Jackson, Mich., sends in a hook-up double page for "Pollyanna" along the old lines, but one clothing store advertised that the reason Miss Pickford got a divorce was not Fairbanks, but the fact that Moore did not wear a certain brand of clothes they handle. Probably they thought this was clever, but it certainly did not help the theatre any. A certain editorial supervision over the copy for a hook-up page is needed.

Here's a Prologue Setting to Go With "The Idol Dancer"

NATURALLY, the Hawaiian troupe is coming into its own for Griffith's First National production, "The Idol Dancer." The cut on this page shows the setting used by Turner and Dahnen at the Tivoli, San Francisco. The top of the volcano appears rather crudely done, but this is because it was painted for light effects, and the flowing lava did much to put over the production. Mme. Worthington, a Hawaiian singer, was the soloist, and the dance was done by Pau Lei Lani, six more or less musicians being employed for the accompaniments.

Local Color for a South Seas Picture.

Of course the local color must be dark, so Frank Costello, of the Tivoli, San Francisco, used six colored ukulele urgers, a cafe au lait dancer and a lighter singer for "The Idol Dancer," Griffith's First National production.

Don't Try to Fool Editors or They'll Fool You

Lem L. Stewart Works New Key Stunt to Interest in Opening of New House

COLUMBIA, S. C., is now a "Key City" in the real sense of the word. "The Rambler" and others will please take notice. As told recently, Lem L. Stewart, general publicity man for Southern Enterprises, Inc., closed down his desk in Atlanta to work closer to the ground. Lately he has been in Columbia, S. C., helping to put the New Imperial Theatre on the map. The stunts he worked are interesting, credit being shared with J. S. Hursey, local manager, and Mr. Laskin, the Paramount publicity man in that territory.

The Imperial is the old Pastime Theatre, formerly devoted to vaudeville. Fire closed the house, which was fixed up and turned over to such amateur events as offered. The Lynch people took over the property and practically rebuilt. The problem was to put the house back on the attendance list, with competition from four other picture theatres and a vaudeville house. The white population is about 18,000 and the six houses combined offer about 6,000 seats, so that there are but three persons to each seat.

Working the Keys.

About a week before the opening a local hardware store made a window display of locks of various sorts, with an ordinary door lock featured as the lock of the New Imperial. A card announced that season passes would be given to the first seven who could fit a key, weekly passes to the next seven and admission to the opening day performances to all who succeeded after the first fourteen. Further details were to be given in the Sunday paper.

One hundred keys were "lost" throughout the city, seven of which were capable of opening the lock. Each had a tag attached stating the terms of the contest and advertising "On With the Dance," the opening attraction. The contest was also advertised in a two twelves in the Sunday issue.

Helped the Hook-ups.

Following the opening shot the classified columns were used to advertise the "lost" keys. Six window hook-ups had been arranged for, two in ten cent stores, three in clothing stores and the hardware store already spoken of. Each day these classified advertisements picked up one store, stating that the key had been lost in this store, one, for example, stating that the key had been lost while purchasing music in Woolworth's. This helped the store business.

Although later investigation seemed to show that these advertisements were mostly read by the young people, the whole town was soon talking about the keys, and the tagged keys held by small boys were articles of barter and invitations to assault and robbery.

The opening day the lock was set in the lobby, and apparently most of the town was on hand to try the lock. Any key could be used, and some tried as many as twenty-five keys before they gave it up. The season and weekly passes had been won by half past four, and about fifty more qualified under the single admission clause.

Adapted Stunts.

This was the most novel, but by no means the only stunt. The window dancer used in Atlanta was also employed, and the same dancer appeared without her mask at an "On With the Dance" night of the Civic League the Saturday before the opening. A prize waltz was also held, the prize being a season pass. This provided two opportunities for announcing the opening to a large crowd, representative of the best element in the city.

Coming in so late in the season, Mr. Stewart found all of the billboards under contract to the other houses, so he could use only three and six sheet stands, but

Who Reads the Ads.

The crowd represented all classes, from the street urchins up to the highest type of business men. About 50 per cent. were women and girls. By question, I found that the boys and younger men had read the papers. The older men had not seen the advertisement, but had heard of the stunt from others or saw the crowds. It would appear that a majority of the readers of the motion picture advertising in the newspapers are the younger folks, who pass the word along to their elders.

LEM L. STEWART,
Southern Enterprises.

he put out a street car similar to that used by the Rialto, Tulsa, with cut-outs of the various Paramount stars for the passengers. This was new in Columbia and more than compensated for a lack of 24-sheets.

Effective Use of Cutouts

Marks Kansas City Theatre

CUTOUTS from lithographs were apparently provided for when the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, was built, for several excellent displays have come in from this theatre. The cut shows the house dressed for Louise Glaum in "Sex" with end panels for a local fashion show, hooking up with the elaborate costumes worn by Miss Glaum in this play. There are five cutouts from lithographs and two special paintings for the fashion show stretching across the front of the entrance. This is not only more effective than the use of banners, but it gives a touch of distinction to the house where the banner cheapens the display. A slight drapery across the top masks the top lightning and also gives a finish to the set-up, while other lights across the bottom are hidden by the display title. An adaptation of this useful idea is possible to many houses not originally planned for such a showing. For a temporary display beaver or corrugated board can be used, but for a permanent showing the preparation should be more elaborate.

Broke Old Tradition with "The River's End" for Week

EVERY little while someone finds that he can do something which "everyone" knows cannot be done. There is a tradition out in Salt Lake City that a film show is good for not more than five days and they mostly play split weeks. Back in the dim past this probably was true, but George Mayne, of the American, began to wonder if perhaps something could not be done to let a show come in for a week.

He had "The River's End" and he defiantly booked it in for a whole seven days, then he got after Old Man Hoodoo with a sharp stick. There was good paper, so he used paper, and he backed this up with heralds, throwaways, and, above all, newspaper work. He got so much publicity that people forgot to stop going at the end of the fifth day and whole crowds absent-mindedly strolled up to the box office as late as the last day of the run and put down good hard money for tickets.

Now when you tell Mr. Mayne that a picture cannot show for more than five days he merely smiles and replies that it all depends.

"Long May She Wave!" Chant the Sign-Painters.

But the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, has done away with banners and gets a more slightly and effective display with cutouts from posters and paintings.

"Press Agent" Is Something More Than a Title

Sympathetic Barkeepers Gave Windows to Help "Water, Water Everywhere"

WORKING on the sympathies of mournful barkeepers was only one of the angles employed by the Philadelphia Goldwyn exchange in helping the Stanley Company put over "Water, Water Everywhere" in the City of Brotherly Love.

The posting of a flooded residential district has already been described, but that was not a marker on the stunt of getting the bottlers of soft stuff to use 125,000 labels, one on every bottle of stuff sent to the clubs, restaurants and cabarets. You could not toy with a ginger ale or lemon soda without being reminded of the happy days.

The manufacturers looked upon it as a species of propaganda and were enthusiastic in their support of the scheme, making it unanimous.

Used Trailers.

The film opened at the Victoria, but every Stanley theatre carried a trailer showing Rogers being engulfed in a watery flood with his quip, "I remember the time it was considered a disgrace for a man to get drunk. Now it is considered an achievement."

This not only got a laugh but it took the title all over town, and became as much of a by-word as the "Once a man entertained his friends in the parlor; now he takes them down cellar," which was used on the cutouts which adorned every window the barkeepers donated.

The barkeepers seemed to take a mournful pleasure in donating space to help rub it in, and they regarded the bills with delight.

Hotels Came In.

Some 25,000 cut out novelties were distributed to diners by the hotels and leading restaurants, and in addition five foot soda glasses were given a place in most of the lobbies with displays of stills. Like the barkeepers, the hotel managers seemed to feel that it would help keep the public stirred up, so you passed the soda glasses to sit at a table and look at the cutouts until the waiter brought you the best you could get with a watery label stuck on for good measure.

Sandwich men were sent out with champagne bottle signs and the film delivery wagons carried painted signs on both sides, to help along.

A Big Window Hook-up.

The most elaborate single display was a window in the downtown section which gave a motion picture exhibit. Portions of the scenario were shown and wax figures were used to illustrate the making of a scene, with backings, lights and a camera with a dummy director.

The development and printing of the film were also explained, and finally a 22 by 28 picture was illuminated by a nitrogen lamp placed in a projection machine.

This display attracted so much attention that the Public Ledger picked up the story for its business section, illustrating with photographs of the display.

It was an unusually elaborate hook-up, and it put the picture over strong. The bottle label idea is particularly to be commended. This is practical even in the smaller towns.

Used a Boxing Match with First Dempsey Serial Show

EMPLOYING a local boxer to give an exhibition with a sparring partner was the scheme used by Manager Sellman of the Strand, Waterbury, Conn., to put over the first installment of the Jack Dempsey serial, "Daredevil Jack." The serial was booked for three days for each installment and Mr. Sellman wanted to get it off to a good start. A local boxer who had showed up well in nearby contests was engaged for an exhibition and was made the subject of mystery advertising, the announcement merely stating that an event of local interest would be staged in connection with the showing.

The idea is capable of elaboration and adaptation. Where the local laws permit bouts may be staged with contestants from the local athletic club or school gymnasium. It is always possible to get someone, and exhibitions may be permitted where bouts are not allowed. The stunt worked big in Waterbury. It will work for others.

Used "Different" Display for Sennett's "Down on the Farm"

EMPHASIZING the fact that "Down on the Farm" was different from the usual Sennett comedies, Nick Ayer, of the Imperial, San Francisco, studied out something new for the advertising. It speaks for itself, but if you can vision this on a page with the usual run of display advertising, you can realize that the space stood out like a cocktail at a prohibition conference.

Imperial "DOWN ON THE FARM" A Mack Sennett Knock-out

by Willie Klutz

 This is Ben Turpin who chaperones the cows and chickens  This is Harold Lloyd very flirtatious with 'Haunted Spooks'  This is Gino Severi the big little leader of the 'Yap Town band'  marks the spot where a man fell out of his seat from laughing  This is Noah Webster who loaned a few of his craziest words for a song sung by Evelyn Francoeur.... and this is the way you'll look when you see this show

Second Week Starting Sunday

The Imperial's Novelty Ad.

The bill was an all-comedy, as told elsewhere, and even the dignified orchestra leader put on a pair of high-water pants and a Chaplin moustache and led a rube orchestra. Mr. Ayer and Messrs. Roth and Partington, the managing directors, felt that something out of the ordinary was needed for the advertising display, and they certainly achieved it. It is a safe bet that more people studied out this advertisement than were held by any other one advertisement on the amusement pages simply because it was so different from the rest, and evidently a large proportion felt called upon to go and see the show.

Perhaps You Don't Believe in Signs.

But the Philadelphia Goldwyn Exchange does, so they pasted their delivery fleet to help along a drive on "Water, Water Everywhere," which went over strong with the kind collaboration of bottlers and barkeepers.

Only Ticket Selling Stuff Is Good Press Work

Try the Street Address for a Mystery Letter Campaign

NEW ENGLAND exhibitors have been puzzled over a letter which urged them to hurry to 13 Stanhope street, Boston, to listen to the troubles of the writer with "my husband's other wife." These were written in longhand in feminine script and even some of those who knew the address to be that of the Pathe Exchange wondered for a moment which typewriter or inspector they had been talking to was married.

The stunt is by no means new and the suggestion that the theatre's address instead of name be used was offered in Picture Theatre Advertising some years ago, but few managers seem to have used this angle, though it works well. Most persons do not think of the Rivoli theatre as "268 Main street." It is the Rivoli. The use of the street number will get a lot of people looking for the number who otherwise would pay no attention to a letter. They can't remember what is at 268 Main street, so they go to see—and they remember the message.

A number of current films lend themselves well to this form of advertising. Why not try it out?

Black and White Scenery Used for Film Prologue

SOMETHING radically new was used at the Capitol Theatre, New York, during the run of Nazimova in "The Heart of a Child." For the prologue a scene depicting the Limehouse district of London was employed, and this was done in black and white instead of color, to harmonize with the film to follow. The stage showed a street in the district with a group of figures dancing to the music of a street organ.

Light effects were used to get color for the scene, but the setting and costuming were held to black and the colored lights heightened this film effect.

The idea is not only new, but it will be found handy by managers who cannot handle color.

Narrow Lobby Used Circus Connection to Carry Out the Tent Idea for "Jinx"

PROBABLY nothing carries a stronger appeal to the general public than a circus play. In this it pulls even stronger than behind-the-scenes stories and tales of bold, bad Broadway. And the more emphasis the management gives to the circus angle, the better the business is apt to be.

William Koch, of the New Aster, Minneapolis, who seems to vie with the New Lyric for stunts, got a new touch for "Jinx" recently, playing this Goldwyn attraction rather belatedly.

The New Aster has a circular outer lobby, with a long and rather narrow inside passage. The outer lobby was dressed as a tent and the passage to the auditorium was fixed up as a "connection," as the circus people call the passages between two tents.

Went the Limit.

The effect of the connection was somewhat detracted from by the use of advertising material for the succeeding attraction, but the atmosphere was fairly well preserved, and it did not matter as much, once the ticket taker was passed. It did help materially when viewed from the outside in connection with the outer lobby display.

The chief stunt with the outer lobby was a set of paintings for the side show freaks, with a center painting rather larger than the rest for Miss Normand herself. There were a Siamese twins, a snake charmer, a fat woman and a wild man, and one of the house employees worked as a stilt clown around the front and up and down the street.

A painted piece helped to convert the box office into a ticket wagon, and house employees were dressed in clown suits to give the proper color and life to the display.

Not New, But Good.

The stunts were not new, with the exception of the connection, but the general idea was more fully carried out than usual.

Mr. Koch had no winter quarters circus to fall back upon for animals, but the clown on stilts did almost as well as an excitement maker and was more tractable.

The paintings were the chief touch of local color, and these are beyond the reach of the small town man, but there is a chance to replace these with the stock paper from such concerns as Hennegan, who carry in stock paper for most standard freaks, wild men, living skeletons, sword swallows and the like. The paper is cheap and flashy, and it would pay the small town man to lay in a set and hold them against the next circus play.

It is not always possible to hire tents, but in a pinch hay covers can be borrowed or perhaps canvas can be dug up from the boy scout troops. A tent flash for a circus play is worth all the money it costs, and most lobbies will lend themselves to some sort of decoration, if nothing more than the paintings.

Do the Best You Can.

Now that the circus season is on it will pay to keep an eye out for the shows and run a circus play, with proper trimmings, a week or ten days before the traveling show comes. The bills will whet the appetite for the tent shows. The elaborate billing of the road show can be made to work for the house, and possibly be made to take the edge off the circus when it comes.

As soon as the bills go up, dig out your own preparations, wire to the exchange to ship the play you have determined upon, and you can get the advantage of several hundred sheets of billing at small cost.

Mr. Koch did things in a big way, but you do not have to work as big. Just do the best you can.

Moving Picture World is sold on news-stands at 15 cents the copy. The subscription price is $3 the year. By subscribing, you save $4.80 on 52 issues—and that's worth while. Do it now!

Ever Go to the Circus and Stroll from the Menagerie to the "Big Top"?

If you did you passed through the "connection." This is a connection rigged in the lobby of the New Aster, Minneapolis, to create local color for Goldwyn's presentation of Mabel Normand in "Jinx." The front was all dressed up with side-show paintings, and this is a continuation of that effect. It did not cost much and it helped a lot.

"Looks Like Fair Weather from Now On," Says Carl Laemmle, Discussing Universal

IN buying out P. A. Powers' interest in the Universal Film Manufacturing Company I have achieved the ambition of my life," announced Carl Laemmle in a recent interview concerning the re-adjustment of Universal holdings when Mr. Powers sold out to Mr. Laemmle and resigned as treasurer of the film company.

"I organized the Universal company eight years ago and it always has been my 'baby.' In all the vicissitudes of the Universal company's varied existence, I never gave up hope of gaining practical control of it some day. That day has come. There is the friendliest feeling between Mr. Powers and myself. The deal was consummated in all friendliness and with regard for the mutual interests of both of us. Although he no longer is connected with Universal, he has my good will and I have his.

"It has been a hard struggle most of the time, building Universal. We have taken the slowest but the surest method. Our basis has been fair treatment of exhibitors plus fair treatment of competitors. It looks like fair weather for Universal from now on. In the past year there has been a striking improvement in the quality of Universal pictures. Our latest success, 'The Virgin of Stamboul,' is proving itself one of the most popular pictures of the year. And it is only the beginning of a succession of master productions, many of which already are completed, which we will release in the near future.

Five Jewel Pictures Ready.

"'The Devil's Pass Key,' Erich von Stroheim's latest Jewel production makes you think you're set right down in Paris, so realistic is the Parisian atmosphere. We have five of these big pictures ready now, including 'The Virgin of Stamboul' and 'The Devil's Pass Key.' The others are 'Ambition,' with Dorothy Phillips, 'The Breath of the Gods,' with Tsuru Aoki, and 'The Beach Comber,' with Elmo Lincoln.

"For its special pictures, to be released approximately every week, beginning next July, Universal has selected six popular stars, each star to make a series of eight pictures during the ensuing year. This plan will assure exhibitors a steady output of excellent pictures starring players of first rate ability and prestige.

"Our five great 1920 serials are taking like hot cakes. 'The Lion Man,' 'Elmo the Fearless,' 'The Moon Riders,' 'The Vanishing Dagger' and 'The Dragon's Net,' taken either individually or together, form a distinct stride in chaptered photodrama. Two of them are the results of foreign expeditions, one to Europe and the other to Asia to obtain the proper settings.

"Universal is beating new paths in other directions. Two exploring expeditions now are in the heart of Africa and Borneo, getting pictures of native life, of the scenic wonders and of the strange animals of those two sections of the world.

"Other new and recent ventures by Universal include the turning out of high-class five-reel comedies based on farcical stories by popular writers, a new brand of high-class two-reel comedies and a weekly novelty reel of curious things in nature and in the works of mankind.

"Universal rapidly is expanding its great sales and distribution force. An expedition now is nearing Australia to set up the first Universal branch in that continent. Keep your eye on the Universal. We've just begun to fight."

Archainbaud Signed on Long Contract by Myron Selznick

GEORGE ARCHAINBAUD, director of Selznick Pictures, has been signed to a long term contract by Myron Selznick. Mr. Selznick's announcement is said to be the aftermath of the success of Elaine Hammerstein's latest Selznick picture, "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes." This production, made under the direction of Archainbaud, according to report, has and is proving to be one of the biggest successes Miss Hammerstein has had.

Although Mr. Archainbaud has not yet reached his thirtieth birthday, he is credited with a career that many an older director might be proud to boast.

National Picture Theatres Appoints Directors Acting for 1,200 Exhibitors

THE National Picture Theatres, Inc., is to be an absolutely self-governing organization and the directors for the organization, who represent more than 1,200 leading exhibitors have been appointed, according to an announcement made by President Lewis J. Selznick.

The appointments were made just previous to the Selznick convention held recently in New York City and the names of the directors are made public this week for the first time. At the time the National Pictures idea was conceived by Mr. Selznick, he hoped to obtain the services and backing of the best exhibitors in the country. The outcome of this ambition is now self-evident and no better assurance of the continued success of the enterprise could be offered than the announcement of the men who will govern the progress of the organization.

The newly appointed directors are: Nat Ascher, Aaron Jones, of Jones, Linick, Character & Schaefer; Harry Lubliner, of Lubliner & Trintz, all of Chicago; Jules Mastbaum, of the Stanley Booking Company, Philadelphia; Tom Saxe, Milwaukee; Harry Bernstein, Richmond, Va.; W. H. Cline, Los Angeles; Harry Crandall, Washington, D. C.; Fred Dolle, Louisville; George Giles, Boston; John P. Harris, Pittsburgh; Ike Libson, Cincinnati; Charles Olson, Indianapolis; H. M. F. Pasemzoglou, St.

Louis; E. S. Rebner, Youngstown, Ohio; Ross B. Rogers, Wichita Falls, Texas; George Simpson, Rochester, and Jake Wells, Richmond, Va.

The organization is now in complete control of the exhibitors and three of the members have been appointed to frame the bylaws.

In speaking of this action Mr. Selznick said: "I believe it essential to the best interests of National Picture Theatres, Inc., that all the important matters of policy shall be decided by exhibitor directors, and as the bylaws are among the most important factors of our success, I want to carry out the principle of self-government to the limit."

Good Business Reported for Kremer Show.

New York Independent Masterfilms report the booking of four short-length Chaplin reissues by the B. S. Moss and also the Proctor circuits in New York; also that "A Burlesque on Carmen," presented with the Carmen Beauties Revue, has broken house records in Perth Amboy and Newark.

This latter attraction is booked for Elmira, which will be followed by a week's engagement at the Empire Theatre, Buffalo. So far this production has played Kingston, Tarrytown, White Plains, Penns Grove, Perth Amboy and Newark.

Bessie Love Looks in the Heart of a Flower and Says: "I See Myself as a Poor Girl in the End."

And no more than she speaks the dream comes true in "The Midlanders," an Andrew J. Callaghan production, which has been adapted from the well-known novel.

NEWS LETTER

BY A. H. GIEBLER

Bernstein Given Reception at Universal Studio in Honor of His Return to the Firm

ISADORE BERNSTEIN, the first general manager of Universal City, and who directed the building of the mammoth film plant, has returned to the scene of his former activities, after an absence of several years, as manager of productions.

In celebration of Bernstein's return, a reception and dance was given at the studio and in the receiving line were a number of the stars of Universal productions, including Priscilla Dean, Edith Roberts, Frank Mayo, Anne Cornwall, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Marie Walcamp, Eddy Polo, Harry Carey and several of the leading directors, among them Henry McCrae, Tod Browning, Lynn Reynolds, Jack Ford and Reeves Eason.

A negro jazz band furnished snappy music for dancing on the new north stage. Four big ball room sets had been prepared for the occasion and the studio was strung with gaily decorated Japanese lanterns. More than a thousand guests, among them many of the stars who were appearing in Universal productions under Mr. Bernstein's former administration at U City, attended the reception.

Mr. Bernstein is production manager.

Thompson Returns from Trip.

Louis W. Thompson, president of the Special Pictures Corporation, has returned to Los Angeles after a four weeks trip to Chicago, Pittsburg, Cleveland and New York. While in the latter city Mr. Thompson started camera expeditions to different parts of the world to secure scenic subjects for his productions that will be colored and presented with the Artcolor weekly release.

E. L. Silcocks, special traveling representative of the company, has just established a branch in New Orleans with Al Durning as manager. The Pearce Film Corporation of that city will also handle the Comedyart Productions.

Will Make Comedies in France.

Walter W. Bell, cameraman with the Buddy Post comedy company at the National studios in Hollywood, will sail for France about June 1 to film American comedies in a continental setting near Paris. Bell will also be prepared to supply inserts and scenics photographed in Europe to American producers.

Invents Enlarging Camera.

Two inventions of importance to the motion picture industry have been developed in the research laboratories of the National Film Corporation recently. Lenwood Abbott, superintendent of the National laboratory, has perfected an enlarging camera which will make a clear cut print from a motion picture negative, making it possible to reproduce pictures for publicity purposes without the use of a Graflex camera.

The other invention is a tubular ray filter to be attached to the lens of a stop-motion camera with a vertical focus. This filter, which is the work of William Paley, is built on the principle of the Maxim silencer, thin blades inside the tube absorbing the necessary light. Both inventions have been registered at the Patent Office.

Two Weddings in Filmiland.

Josephine Hill, leading woman in Metro features, and Jack Perrin, Universal serial star, were married recently. The two film players met several months ago when both were working at Metro. Mrs. Perrin will not retire from the screen, and a new home will soon be built in Hollywood for the couple.

Hope Loring, of the scenario department at Universal City, was married a few days ago to Louis R. Lighton, son of the author of the Billy Fortune stories, and himself a writer for the magazines. Miss Loring and Mr. Lighton met when Lighton visited U City to arrange for putting one of his stories on the screen.

Eclipse Company Starts.

The Eclipse Film Company is a new producing company that has just started work at the David Horsley studio, and will produce a series of two-reel comedies, using the same cast and characters in each picture.

Wycliffe A. Hill is the author of the series and will supervise production. Tom Gibson will direct. Dan Crimmons, of the vaudeville team of Crimmons and Gore, will head the cast, and other principal players will be Hattie Wade Mack, Lottie McPhearson, Allan Cuthbert and Helen Carpenter. The series will be called "The Problems of the Potts Family."

Willat Productions at Work.

The Willat Productions, recently incorporated with C. H. Willat, former director for Famous Players-Lasky, as president and general manager, and Irving Willat in charge of productions as director, are at work on their first feature at the National studios in Los Angeles. The Willat productions are to make a series of adaptations of well known books for release through the Hodkinson organization. The first film by the new company will be ready for release about June 15.

Jack Wheeler Comes Back.

L. C. Wheeler, known to the picture industry as Jack Wheeler, and remembered as the editor of the Selig-Tribune News Weekly, and for other intensive film activities in and around Chicago, has returned to the pictures as treasurer of the Kosmik Films, Inc. Mr. Wheeler is in Los Angeles to personally supervise the filming of "The Hope Diamond Mystery" being made under the direction of Stuart Paton.

Kosmik Films Producing.

The Kosmik Films, Inc., of Chicago, composed of George Kleine, president; John Larsen, vice-president; L. C. Wheeler, treasurer, and B. C. Harcastle, secretary, has opened a studio on the west coast for the production of a serial entitled, "The Hope Diamond Mystery."

The serial will be directed by Stuart Paton with Grace Darmond and George Chesebro at the head of a cast which includes William Marion, Boris Karloff, Carmen Phillips, William Puckley, Captain Clayton, Ethel Shannon and May Yohe.

Salisbury to Start Production.

Monroe Salisbury, recent Universal star, has completed the organization of his company, which will be known as the Monroe Salisbury Players, and will begin on his first picture within a short time at the Brunton studio.

Clermont Enters Production Field.

Clermont Photoplays Corporation, with a capital of $500,000 is the newest company to enter the field of motion picture production in California. The new company has begun work at Bernstein studio on Boyle Heights, with the first unit, Lloyd Carleton Productions, directed by Lloyd B. Carleton. Six more producing units are being added and a studio will be built some time in the future. Stories with all star casts will be featured. Hannibal N. Clermont is president of the new concern, and Lloyd B. Carleton, supervising director.

Only a Scratch.

Edna Purviance, who took part in an automobile accident a few weeks ago, wants it known that the cut she received in the smashup did not extend clear across her face to her ear, but was a mere scratch on her nose, which is now entirely healed and will not mar her "so-called beauty" (her own words) nor keep her out of pictures.

Thomas Persse Dies.

Thomas Henry Persse, a member of the local film colony and of the Actors Association of Los Angeles, and an opera singer for years, died at a Santa Monica Hospital on April 20, at the age of 57 years. He leaves a widow, four sisters, three brothers and his mother, all living in Canada.

Casino Converted into Cinema.

The Casino at Redondo Beach has been leased by George Cleveland and C. Gordon Parkhurst of Venice, and will be made into a motion picture theatre. Cleveland and Parkhurst are planning to open a large picture theatre in Venice, and expect to arrange for a third theatre in Santa Monica soon.

Sig Schlager Breezes In.

Sig Schlager, erstwhile publicity director of the J. Parker Read productions, but now special traveling representative for Read, has just come in from a trip to New York, Chicago, Boston, Kansas City and other ports, where he boosted the productions of Louise Glaum and of Hobart Bosworth.

Historical Film Producing.

Four months behind schedule because of reorganization and rearrangement of plans, the cameras of the Historical Film Corporation of America, the company organized to film the Bible, began to purr at Santa Barbara on April 12, and the first unit of The Pageant of the Bible is now on its way to the screen.

Among Busy Exchangemen

Buffalo

C. A. Taylor With Pioneer.

C. A. Taylor, who recently resigned as manager of the Pathe office, Buffalo, and was succeeded by J. E. Kimberly from the Republic exchange, has become general manager of New York State for the Pioneer Film corporation with offices at 145 Franklin street. "Buck" has hit the foothills and glaring lights of every town in the Empire State and knows the territory like a book. "Buck" is one of the pioneers who blazed the film trail in Buffalo and film men are glad that he is still going to call the Queen City of the Lakes his "Home, Sweet Home."

Barnett at Select Office.

A. T. Barnett, former Metro and Paramount salesman, has been appointed assistant branch manager at the Buffalo Select office to succeed Jerome Weiss, who has entered business for himself. Mr. Barnett will also have charge of booking, relieving Al Botham, who will be supervisor of shipping, a new department being developed to take care of the increased business. H. C. Wallner, former Goldwyn salesman is now with Select. He will handle short subjects and specials in the Buffalo territory.

Canty Fox Book Keeper.

George Canty, who has been in the poster department at the local Fox office, is now a book keeper at the same exchange. George is the son of Sergeant Tim Canty, of Police Station No. 14. Clayton Sheehan, district manager for Fox, who has been touring all over the country in the interest of the big sales drive, stopped off in town a few days recently and then went to New York. He is expected in Buffalo soon.

Breaks All Records.

Allan S. Moritz, Famous Players-Lasky manager, is authority for the statement that "Why Change Your Wife," is breaking all records at the Regent Theatre, Rochester, where it is being presented for a two weeks' run, the first, by the way, at this house. Mr. Moritz also announces the promotion of Leroy Rouff from the percentage department to the sales force. The local office broke all business records the week of April 19, which proves that the popularity of the film play is growing daily.

P. H. Smith Busy Man.

P. H. Smith, local First National manager, is up to his ears in contracts these days. There is a veritable avalanche of them pouring in from all directions. Mr. Smith has just closed a contract for the showing of "Auction of Souls" at the Empire Theatre in conjunction with the personal appearance of Aurora Mardiganian, the star of the picture, for a week run. This is a notable bit of work, because of the fact that the film has been shown in almost every other house in Buffalo.

Lieut. Jim Anderson is working on some unusual exploitation methods to put the film over like a shell from a Big Bertha. Among western New York houses that have closed for the First National feature are Richardson, Oswego and the Bertis Grande, Auburn. Miss Mardiganian will appear at both houses in person.

Buffalo Exchange Notes.

H. E. Wilkinson, Realert manager, toured the state the week of April 19, boosting Wanda Hawley in her first production, "Miss Hobbs."

Jack Kelly, Robertson-Cole publicity man, is busy with a preliminary campaign on the local appearance of Carpenter in the Broadway Auditorium. Jack has put over several good stories on the local sport pages.

Henry W. Kahn, manager of the Metro office, is spending most of his time these days getting his new headquarters in the Warner Building ready for occupancy on May 1.

Renovating Meader's Theatre.

Tom O'Donnell, who recently secured control of Meader's Theatre on Eighth street, southwest, from Harry M. Crandall, is materially improving that house. He has closed his Navy Theatre on the same street, and has sub-rented it to the Piggly Wiggly Stores. He is spending several thousand dollars in this work. He has cut down the forty foot stage at the front of the theatre and has put in 160 more seats. The front of the building is being re-decorated, and the innumerable small lights are being taken out to be supplanted by a more modern flood lighting system. Also a large organ is being installed by the American Photoplayer Company.

Harris Closes the Zenith.

John Harris, who has been operating the Zenith Theatre, on Eighth street near G street, southwest, has closed the house and turned the property over to a chain store concern. Mr. Harris formerly operated the Senate, disposing of his interests in that house some time ago to Tom O'Donnell.

Improving Victoria Theatre.

Miss Sadie Cohen, who operates the Victoria Theatre in Southwest Washington, is contemplating materially improving that house. It is one of the smallest and oldest theatres in the city, and enjoys a good patronage. It is probable that she will tear out one of the side walls and widen the property and possibly tear out the rear wall and lengthen the building.

Pittsburgh

Nally to Build $100,000 Theatre.

F. J. Nally, of the Lyric Amusement Company, operating the Arcade Theatre, Carnegie, Pa., has purchased a lot 60 by 100 feet at the corner of East Main and Mary streets, that town, on which will be erected a model photoplay theatre, to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. Ground will be broken May 1, and the intention is to have the building completed by the first of September.

Buys New Alpine Theatre.

The McCartney interests bought the New Alpine Theatre, Punxsutawney, from Jim Carvella. Mr. Carvella has been sick for the last several weeks, and the house has been managed by the operator. Mr. McCartney controls the Jefferson, Majestic and now the New Alpine, which makes the total of Punxsutawney's amusement houses.

Purchases Arcade Property.

The Scottdale Amusement Company, which operates the Arcade and Scottdale theatres, has purchased the property on which the Arcade stands. The consideration, it is understood, was $35,000. An imposing theatre devoted exclusively to the exhibition of motion pictures will be erected in the near future.

Detroit

The Vitagraph Exchange Territory.

Vitagraph exchange, Detroit, will serve the counties of Van Buren, Berrien, Cass, Kalamazoo and St. Joseph effective May 2. In the past these counties have been served from the Chicago exchange. It means that the Detroit office will serve exhibitors in the entire lower peninsula of Michigan.

Popular Booker Becomes Bride.

Gladys Fraser, booker for nearly three years at the Paramount Exchange, Detroit, has resigned and on April 17 she became a bride. She was the recipient of many presents from employees and exhibitors. Her successor is Sarah Koslow—another charming young lady who already has become very popular with Michigan exhibitors.

Dow Thompson's New Responsibilities.

Dow Thompson, former Fox salesman in Detroit, has taken charge of the new Linwood-La Salle Theatre, Detroit, which opens this month. It is one of the finest houses in Detroit, seating nearly 1,500.

in Big Distributing Centers

Pittsburgh

Pathe Changes Managers.

Miles Gibbons, manager of the Pittsburgh Pathe branch, has been promoted to the New York home office, in the capacity of short subject sales manager.

F. C. Bonistall has been selected as successor to Mr. Gibbons, and has been acting manager of the Pittsburgh office, since April 19. Mr. Bonistall was formerly sales manager of Pathe here, also manager of Paramount in Pittsburgh and for the past few months has been in charge of the National Pictures, a Selznick enterprise. "Bonnie" says it's just like going home to get back at the Pathe exchange.

Give Gibbons a "Send-off."

On Tuesday, preceding his departure for New York, Mr. Gibbons was tendered a fond farewell party by the members of the Pittsburgh F. I. L. M. Club, when he was presented with a beautiful sterling silver card case, suitably engraved. The presentation speech was made by President L. F. Levison and Mr. Gibbons accepted the gift in a few well-chosen words.

Screen Actor Now Salesman.

Paul C. Sahner, a former screen actor for the Kalem and later with Vitagraph, has deserted the ranks of the producers and has entered the selling end of the game, owing to eye trouble. He has affiliated himself with the Simlec exchange, Pittsburgh.

Becomes Theatre Publicist.

J. Howard Lichtenstein, manager of exploitation and publicity for the Select-Selznick Enterprises in this territory, left that organization April 24 to become manager of productions and exploitation for the Cameraphone Theatre, East Liberty, Pittsburgh.

During Mr. Lichtenstein's stay in this city, he has built up a following of successful and original exploitation ideas, and his prologue presentations at the Cameraphone Theatre in connection with various Selznick productions, have called forth the greatest kind of praise and comment, for the originality and cleverness displayed.

In addition to Mr. Lichtenstein's work at the Cameraphone, he also plans to handle the advertising and publicity for a number of theatres in this territory.

Pittsburgh Film Items.

Clyde Book, of McDonald, has been engaged by Manager Moore, of the United Artists, to do the Rube stunt in connection with the boosting of the "Down on the Farm" picture. A Rube orchestra will also be a feature of the exploitation to be worked with this picture.

Gauding with Comedy Art.

Harold Gauding, formerly of Universal and Robertson-Cole, is now on the road for Comedyart Films in this territory.

M. M. Copeland, formerly with the Gulf Refining Co., has joined the salesforce of the Pittsburgh branch of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation.

Seattle

Reizner in Seattle.

George Reizner, owner of several theatres in Raymond and South Bend, was in Seattle this week completing his line-up of bookings for his fine new Tokay Theatre at Raymond. He also ordered a $16,000 organ while on this trip. The Tokay will be the finest small-town theatre in the Pacific Northwest when it is completed some time next month.

United Artists Open New Office.

One of the handsomest and most efficiently arranged film offices on the Pacific Coast was opened this week, when Charles W. Harden, Seattle manager of United Artists, moved his force into the new building just completed for them on Film Row at 1913 Third avenue. The woodwork is all mahogany finish, and the individual offices are enclosed with partitions of glass in small square panes. The manager's office is enclosed to the ceiling, while the booker's office, just back of it, is enclosed part way up. The space opposite Mr. Harden's private office is used as a reception room, while just back of it the bookkeeper has a separate office partitioned off part way up. The general office extends across the entire width of the building just back of the booker's and bookkeeper's offices.

Aronson for San Francisco.

J. A. Koerpel, who was appointed to succeed A. S. Aronson as Western division manager of Goldwyn, now that plans to have Mr. Aronson open Goldwyn offices in Australia have been abandoned, will take the position of special representative of the home office in San Francisco, with the territory including northern California, Oregon, Idaho, Washington, and Alaska, under his supervision. Mr. Koerpel will leave for New York to confer with heads of the organization next month.

San Francisco

Select Moving and Consolidating.

The San Francisco branch of the Select Pictures Corporation will be moved shortly to 105 Golden Gate avenue, where it will be consolidated with that of the Republic Distributing Corporation. One office force will attend to the work of the two organizations, but each will have its separate manager. E. C. Mix, manager of the Republic, has returned from a trip to New York and has inaugurated the work of combining the exchanges.

Metro Official Visits San Francisco.

J. Robert Rubin, secretary of the Metro Pictures Corporation, was a recent visitor here, accompanied by his wife and son. A stop was made at Del Monte on the way from Los Angeles, the trip to the Coast being in the nature of a vacation. Mr. Rubin has since left for New York.

Hundred Per Cent. Record.

Jack Frazier, who travels out of the San Francisco office of Universal, has returned from a five weeks' trip through Northern California and Nevada, which comprises his territory, and succeeded in closing contracts in every town he visited, making this his best selling trip. Exhibitors in Nevada are doing a good business and improvements are being made in many houses there.

Exchange Managers Go to New York.

Ben Simpson, manager of the San Francisco office of Realart, expects to leave for New York to attend a conference of branch managers about May 10. H. J. Henriouille, manager for Pathe at San Francisco, will also leave shortly for New York.

District Manager Locates at Golden Gate.

C. S. Edwards, Jr., West Coast supervisor for Hallmark, arrived here recently and has decided to make San Francisco his headquarters, the local exchange being at 86 Golden Gate avenue. At one time he was connected with the Pathe Exchange.

Dons Film Harness Again.

Joe Dietz, formerly in the film exchange business, but who has been connected with a talking machine company during the past year, has returned to his former love and is now connected with the San Francisco branch of the Special Pictures Corporation as general salesman.

Open Exchange in Shanghai.

ROBINSON and Walker Company, Ltd., of Seattle, who have been exporting film to Java and the other Dutch East Indies for the past three years, have opened an exchange of their own in Shanghai, which is under the personal supervision of F. Marion Sanderson. Next fall they plan to open another in Manila. They will handle twelve big feature pictures per year, as well as used service. They will also act as agents for accessories and the Acme Projector. Besides handling purely theatrical pictures, they will also handle commercial films.

A. W. Walker, secretary and treasurer of the company, has just returned to Seattle from a trip to Shanghai, Manila and Java. He declares the demand for American films to be growing at a great rate, and he adds that their importation is being encouraged by the authorities, who recognize them as the most effective means of educating the natives.

New Policy at Strand.

The new management of the Strand Theatre, Seattle, which is a company composed of A. Shemanski, Mike and Al Rosenberg and Jensen and Von Herberg, have inaugurated a new policy for that house. It began the week of April 18 with "Everywoman." The policy is to show only super-productions at advanced prices of from 50 cents to 75 cents. The bookings of these big pictures will be made so that they can run indefinitely.

Lyric: "The Right to Lie."

Big Olean Theatre Deal.

A DEAL of unusual interest in Western New York film circles was put over on Friday, April 23, when the old Havens Theatre in Olean, N. Y., was sold by James H. Havens to Nicholas Dipson, of Batavia, and Marcus James, of Buffalo. While the purchase price has not been made public, it is understood that it is close to $100,000.

The new proprietors will take possession June 1. Mr. Dipson will make his home in Olean, and will take over active management of the theatre. The Havens theatre for the past several years has been managed by Fred Bittner. Mr. Dipson and his associates also operate the Family and Grand theatres in Batavia, N. Y.

Under the new management the Havens will run continuous performances from 1 to 11 p. m. This will prove a departure for a town the size of Olean, but it is believed that the policy will be a success. The new owners of the Havens have also secured a lease on the Gem Theatre, now operated by C. T. Nickum, and will shortly assume the management of this Olean film house.

Roberts Diphtheria Victim.

Walter Roberts, assistant manager at the Strand Theatre, is confined to his home with a serious attack of diphtheria. Walter is one of the most popular men in the local film game, and his early recovery is hoped for.

Auto on "Hipp" Stage.

In connection with the presentation of "Excuse My Dust," at Shea's Hippodrome the week of April 25, Managing Director Harold B. Franklin introduced a Stutz racer in the race scene. At the most thrilling moment the screen was raised, disclosing the car going at high speed on a tread mill, with a swiftly moving landscape scene revolving in the rear.

General Theatres Advertising.

The General Theatres Corporation, which controls several houses in Buffalo, is using newspaper space to advertise the various attractions. A composite ad, with the name of theatres white on black and type inserted, is being used. The Allendale, Arcadia, Ellen Terry and Marlowe are the houses boosted.

Penn Yann Theatre Sold.

H. C. Morse, owner and manager of the Sampson Theatre, Penn Yann, has sold his house to M. P. Sackett and will erect a new theatre in the same town soon. Mr. Sackett will take possession of the Sampson on May 1. Between then and the time the new house is ready Mr. Morse will play out his bookings in the Penn Yann skating rink, which will be fitted up temporarily for this purpose. It is hoped to have the new theatre

Fennyvessy in Town.

A. A. Fennyvessy, of Rochester, was in town on April 23 for conferences with local interests on the disposal of the Star Theatre, which closed its doors April 18. No announcement has as yet been made as to future plans for this historic theatre, which has had a somewhat stormy career for the past few years.

Movies in Church.

The Rev. Thomas Timmons, of Saint Margaret's Church, Hertel avenue, has installed a projection machine in the institution and is giving shows on Sunday, Tuesday and Friday nights for the members of his extensive parish. The film shown April 25 was Tom Mix in "The Cyclone."

Garage May Replace Empire.

A project to build a big garage on the site of the Empire Theatre, Pearl and Niagara streets, was discussed at a dinner in the Ellicott Club on April 28. The plans call for a $1,000,000 garage. The Empire, which is the old Garden burlesque house and prior to that policy, the old Shea vaudeville theatre, recently changed its program to week run picture bills.

Percy Dawson's New Situation.

PERCY DAWSON, of Toronto, an outstanding authority in Canada on the subject of moving picture projection, has been appointed superintendent of the repair department of the Perkins Electric Company, Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg. Mr. Dawson is one of the pioneer members of Moving Operators' Local 173, Toronto. The Perkins company now employs four members of this union, who are department specialists. Incidentally, the Perkins people are distributors of Powers and Simplex projectors and many other lines of equipment.

Changes "Hawthorne" Title.

"Hawthorne the Adventurer" is the title that has been adopted for the Famous-Lasky release, "Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," for the presentation of the feature in Canada. The feature has also been retitled so that the hero reveals himself as a British subject and a native of Canada. It is understood that the retitled picture will be released in England and Australia as well as Canada.

Association Asks Support.

President J. C. Brady, of the Canadian Exhibitors' Exchange, Limited, 34 Richmond street East, Toronto, has issued a personal appeal to every exhibitor in Canada for support for the company, which is a subsidiary organization of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario. This exchange was organized seven months ago by a group of the association's members as a protection for themselves and other independent exhibitors in Canada, he states, and there are now more than one hundred and twenty-five independent exhibitors who are stockholders.

In his letter, which has just been sent to all exhibitors in the Dominion, Mr. Brady appeals to the independent men to "protect their investment" because of the fact that "monopolists are making every effort to control the theatres and the film industry." He asserts that every dollar invested in the co-operative exchange is "a great protection for your theatre."

British Columbia Taxing Theatre.

The British Columbia Legislature is apparently running wild with proposals for legislation that affects the moving picture business throughout the Province. The lawmakers at Victoria, B. C., have been juggling with the measure that is intended to impose a tax on theatres that is equal to twenty per cent. of the gross receipts, the assessment to be paid by the exhibitors or by patrons in the form of a ticket tax.

Legislating Educational Films.

Still under freak law that is making the jumps in the British Columbia Legislature is a measure providing that at least one "educational reel" must be screened at every performance in a moving picture theatre in the Province. No show can be held at all unless one picture is an educational, according to the proposed legislation.

"Kick Back" to Legislation.

Announcement has been made that the Film Managers' Protective Association of British Columbia has important conferences with a view to withdrawing moving picture exchanges from British Columbia in case the above laws are definitely adopted and enforced. It has been claimed that all film companies have operated at a loss in British Columbia because of the comparatively few theatres in the Province and it is suggested that the new conditions will only serve to make matters worse.

Winn Now a Manager.

ACTIVE management of the Grand Theatre at Washington, Ind., is now vested in Raymond W. Winn, formerly a salesman in Indiana for the Select Pictures Corporation. Mr. Winn has moved his family from Indianapolis, where he resided, and has taken active charge of the theatre. The theatre has been under the management of L. H. O'Donnell, one of the principal owners. It is understood that Mr. O'Donnell's numerous other business interests prevented him from continuing as active manager of the theatre.

Mystic Theatre Sold.

The Mystic Theatre at Rushville, Ind., was sold by R. D. Sampson to Marshall Eakin, of Chicago. Mr. Sampson said that he wanted a larger theatre, and as there was no chance to expand in Rushville, he decided to sell the Mystic and buy a bigger theatre elsewhere. Eakin, Sampson said, bought the theatre because he wished to locate in a city where Sunday shows are not permitted.

New Corporation Forms.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state at Indianapolis for the United Exhibitors' Productions Corporation with a capitalization of $1,000,000, to maintain and operate theatres. None of the directors, listed as Sherman Williams, Merrill Moore, Robert H. McCloskey, Frank Fitzgibbons and G. L. Pugh, are Indianapolis men, so far as could be learned. Indianapolis moving picture men said they understand the new company will conduct a booking agency for exhibitors who were stockholders and become members of a proposed motion picture circuit.

"Isle of Destiny" Put Into Work.

MEMBERS of the Character Film Company have arrived from New York and have begun work on their new picture, "The Isle of Destiny," which is being filmed on the estate of Paul Gilmore, who is to be starred in the play. The co-star will be Hazel Hudson and the director is Tamar Lane.

Upon the completion of "The Isle of Destiny," it is planned to make several other moving pictures here. The Gilmore estate, which is located on Anna Maria Key, a few miles south of Tampa, is a splendid location for outdoor work, as the island abounds in all kinds of tropical jungle and other good scenery.

Plans for Permanent Work.

It is the plan of Mr. Gilmore, who formerly appeared on the legitimate stage as star of many plays, to make his estate a permanent movie city, and accordingly a large force of carpenters and mechanics is at work. Other moving picture companies will be invited to make use of it and Mr. Gilmore believes that it will eventually become an important point for the production of pictures.

Upon their arrival at Bradentown, the county seat of Manatee County, in which the Gilmore property is situated, Mr. Gilmore, Mr. Lane and Albert W. Plummer of the company were met by the mayor and board of trade and tendered a reception and banquet. The people of that section welcome the new industry and look for great things from it.

As the Gilmore property is only a short distance from Tampa, all street and city scenes will be filmed in that city, where a number of companies already are at work.

Bioscope Building Tampa Studio.

The American Bioscope Company is finishing its second comedy, which will be slightly different in character from the first, and plans to complete one good comedy each week indefinitely. Rapid progress is being made in the construction of its studios and other buildings on a large tract north of the city.

This tract is located midway between Sulphur Springs and Goldstein's Springs and close to the banks of the Hillsborough River, affording splendid settings, especially for bathing girl and other aquatic scenes. In addition to making use of many professional players the company is drawing extensively on local talent.

To Get Scenarios for Advertising.

The Volvan Film Company, a new concern which will manufacture advertising films, has started competition for the best scenario produced by any resident of Tampa, not a professional scenario writer, which may be used by the film company in the advertising of men's furnishings, music stores, restaurants, shoe repair shops and sporting goods.

Adams Gets Empress Lease.

J. L. ADAMS, of the Adams Theatre Company, Des Moines, has announced the purchase of the lease on the Des Moines Empress from Elbert and Getchell, effective June 1. The house was built in 1913, and has been operated as a four-a-day vaudeville house ever since. It is the largest theatre in Des Moines, with 2,500 capacity.

The Adams Circuit now includes twenty-three theatres, all pictures but the Empress. The Empress will run vaudeville and pictures for the present at least.

Unique to Be Remodeled.

Elbert and Getchell have announced that they will remodel the Unique, commencing May 15, and will convert it into a big time movie house, playing first-run films. The house is on Locust street, directly opposite A. H. Blank's Garden, in the heart of the amusement district.

Elbert and Getchell have made the Unique pay with its present policy of short films at the lowest prices in the city.

Gives Free Show for Kiddies.

Manager Ray Harding of the Casino gave the kids of the town a free showing of "The Lost City" at 9 a. m. last Saturday. The house was packed.

Bushman-Bayne at Luncheon.

F FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and Beverly Bayne, who have been appearing personally at the Grand Opera House in "The Master Thief," were the guests of honor at a luncheon given recently by the Exchange Club at the Burnet House. Mr. Bushman entertained the club members with an address on moving picture subjects, with especial reference to their influence among the inhabitants of almost the entire world. Judge Charles W. Hoffman, of the Juvenile Court, also spoke on the care of children, and stressed on the influence of the pictures on the child mind.

Boulevard Theatre Company Incorporates.

The Boulevard Theatre Company, Cincinnati, was incorporated April 22 with a capitalization of $25,000 by C. J. Broughton, L. H. Fischer, C. G. Neff, M. L. Buchwalter and S. A. Headley. This is the company which will operate the former Standard Theatre, which has been remodeled for a picture house and has been running for several weeks under the name of the Boulevard.

Libson Trying for Grand Opera House.

I. Libson, of the I. Libson Amusement Company, which operates the Walnut, Strand, Family, Bijou, Star and other houses in Cincinnati, as well as several theatres in other cities and towns in this vicinity, is negotiating for a perpetual lease of the Grand Opera House, which at present is under the management of John H. Havlin and T. E. Aylward. The present lease has three years to run, but it is believed that if Mr. Libson closes the deal he will manage the theatre during the summer season of pictures. Whether it will be used as a regular picture house or as at present for the legitimate, during the winter months, has not been stated.

Thomas P. Hall has been appointed exploitation manager for the Cincinnati exchange of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation.

Harry V. Martin, formerly publicity man for the Goldwyn Picture Corporation, has left that company and accepted a position on the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Labor Indorses Moving Pictures.

AS the representative of the Moving Picture Operators' Union, Local 181, G. Kingston Howard, president of that organization, attended the sixteenth annual convention of the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor, which was held in Hagerstown, Md., during the week of April 19. Following an address which was made by John W. Slaton, of Pittsburgh, a former organizer of the American Federation of Labor, the labor men in session at this convention indorsed moving picture shows as a means of spreading propaganda at the opening session. A large list of labor bodies who favored the plan was read by Mr. Slaton, and he said the two greatest guides of public opinion were the press and motion pictures.

Operators Change Location.

The headquarters of the Moving Picture Operators' Union, Local 181, have been removed from the third floor of the Gayety Theatre Building, to the third floor of 419 East Baltimore street, the location which was formerly occupied by the Exhibitors' League of Maryland. The back part has been partitioned off and will be used as the office of the executives of the union.

Protests Theatre Ordinance.

A protest against the passage of an ordinance giving permission for a moving picture theatre to be erected at 1610-12-14 Druid Hill avenue, has been lodged by the Rev. James R. L. Diggs, of Trinity Baptist Church. This ordinance is now awaiting the signature of Mayor Broening and was passed by the City Council of Baltimore on March 8.

Meets Tragic Death.

Stating that he was going for one last ride on his motorcycle which he had just purchased, before he returned home with his father, James S. Browning, 28 years old, an operator at the Fairmount Theatre, was later found unconscious on the road beside the machine, by his sister, Mrs. Joseph Southard, of Gittings, Md., on Sunday evening, April 25, about 5 o'clock, on the Long Green Valley road. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital in Baltimore and died on April 26.

Benefit at Parkway.

A benefit moving picture performance was held at the Parkway Theatre, which is under the management of Howard Jefferson, for the Girl Scouts on Saturday morning, April 24, to raise funds for the summer camp of that organization, and it proved very successful. It is planned to hold another benefit performance at the Parkway on Saturday, May 8.

Garden Holds Benefit Show.

A benefit performance to raise funds to go toward the enlarging of the Free Hospital by the Volunteers of America, was held at the Garden Theatre, Lexington street at Park avenue, on Sunday night, April 25. A program of moving pictures was arranged for the occasion by Louis A. DeHoff, supervising director of the Whitehurst Theatrical Enterprises, by whom this house is conducted. Music was furnished for the occasion by the band of McDonogh School. Capt. John Logan of the Volunteers made an address.

Tax Rate for Alleghany.

The tax rate for Alleghany county has been fixed at $1.42 on each $100 for 1920-21 by the County Commissioners, who met at Cumberland, Md., recently. This is 25 cents over the 1919 rate.

Elks Reward Good Showmanship.

A handsome silver mounted card case has been presented to Joseph Brodie, manager of the Brodie Theatre, by the Baltimore branch of the B. P. O. Elks, as the shows which were furnished by Mr. Bodie for the Sunday evening performances at the Elks Club on West Fayette street during the season were judged to be the best. There were four other exhibitors who contested for the prize and a committee was formed to judge which moving picture shows were the best and Mr. Bodie won.

Grossman's Return from Orient.

MRS. R. and Mrs. Joseph Grossman, of Cleveland, have returned to that city after several months' tour of the far east. They are well known exhibitors, having operated the downtown Standard Theatre for years.

They visited Japan, China, Australia and the Philippines. Joe says it was a rule in some Chinese theatres that patrons would have to take off their shoes when entering the theatres.

Loew Builds Another.

Marcus Loew, who now has five theatres in Cleveland, and two building, now will invade the West Side of the city. A new theatre will be located in the West End at West 117th street and Detroit avenue. This will be the first house to be built by Loew on the west side, which practically is a city in itself.

The theatre will contain a seating capacity of 2,500. It will cost between $250,000 and $300,000 and will be designed to present both vaudeville and pictures.

Ground has already been broken and the excavation work will be finished by May 1. The theatre is scheduled for opening October 1. Two parcels of real estate, each 100 by 200 feet have been purchased for the building.

"Sex" Stopped by Censors.

The Ohio Board of Censors has declined to pass the Louise Glaum production, "Sex." It was considered objectionable in its present form, and now the producers are attempting to remake it for presentation to the censors again.

Criticisms Must Be Good.

Priscilla Dean, star, and H. H. Van Loan, author of "The Virgin of Stamboul," made by Universal, reading reviews on the production.

San Francisco Sayings

Frolie Has New Manager.

WALLACE FEEHAN, formerly assistant manager at the Frolie Theatre, San Francisco, has been made manager of that house, succeeding Barney A. Goodman, who has resigned to open a musical comedy show in the Majestic Theatre. Mr. Feehan has been in the moving picture business for several years, having been connected with the Frolie for the past year and before that was assistant manager to Leo Weinberger at the Strand.

Exhibitor to Visit East.

Emil Kehrlein, Sr., of the Kinema Theatres, Oakland and Fresno, and one of the pioneer exhibitors of California, is arranging to leave for the East at an early date for a stay of several months. The Kinema Theatre interests are planning the erection of several new houses and the trip will be made in connection with these projects.

Diving Contest on Stage.

The Sun Theatre, San Francisco, recently offered a novelty in the form of a bathing girl revue and diving contest, a large glass tank having been installed on the stage. Local swimmers and divers took part, including Hazel Cunningham, a champion long distance swimmer. This act was presented in conjunction with the photoplay, "The Law of Nature."

Orchestra Leader Starts Overall Club.

John Wharry Lewis, musical director of the American Theatre, Oakland, recently appeared before his orchestra for the regular performance attired in overalls. The idea took at once and other members of the orchestra signed the overall club's roster as a protest against the high cost of clothing.

Camera Club Holds Annual Meeting.

The California Camera Club, with which many picture camera men are affiliated, held its annual meeting on April 14, this being the thirtieth event of this kind. Edward H. Kemp, moving picture expert and distributor of the Motograph in this territory, was chosen first vice-president, the president being Dr. Edward G. Elsen.

Producing Activities at San Francisco.

Mrs. Vincent Whitney, prominent social leader, is lending her assistance to John McHenry, Jr., who has a studio in the suburban city of San Mateo, and a series of inspirational and educational subjects will be produced.

The old barkentine, Mary Winkleman, upon whose decks Jack London played while a boy, has been fitted up for an expedition outside the Heads to film one of the novels of this author.

William V. Mong, a director of the Metro Pictures Corporation, was a recent visitor here, together with David Howard, Edward Sloman and H. C. Cope from the Los Angeles studio.

The University Film Manufacturing Company has a company working at Alum Rock Park, near San Jose, Cal.

Producers Favoring Foreign Markets?

C. W. Midgley, of the American Theatre, Oakland, Cal., and one of the best known exhibitors in the Golden State, declared that it is very evident that program producers are catering more to the demands of foreign buyers than ever before and that exhibitors in this country are suffering as a result.

West Coast Trade Briefs.

The Red River Lumber Company has purchased the Orpheum Theatre, Susanville, Cal., and will operate it in conjunction with a house at Westwood.

J. E. Snelson announces that a new theatre will be erected at Elko, Nev., during the present year.

The Commercial Club of Mina, Nev., is offering moving picture entertainment one night a week.

M. M. Morris and Isidor H. Lichtenstein have filed a statement to indicate that they are engaged in business at San Francisco as the Western Poster Compny, 247 Golden Gate avenue.

Open Letter to President Shay

The writer counts among his personal friends Charles Shay, President I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. of the U. S. & C. He is glad to do so because he regards Shay as a brilliant man, an able leader of men and pre-eminently the right man in the correct place, but that does NOT mean that we must or do agree with everything friend Shay does, or with every idea or policy advanced by him. We hold that that man has never lived who was always right.

The Letter.

Believing it to be the duty of every decent man to question, and to criticize those policies of men in authority which they believe to be wrong, and calculated to work injury, in a spirit of friendliness but nevertheless in direct criticism of the policy we shall speak of, we publish the following open letter to President Shay.

Mr. Charles Shay, President I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O., New York City, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Shay: From several sources it has been brought to our attention that you, as International President, have, with or without the sanction of the main body (we are not certain as to that point), adopted a policy of opposition to the examination and licensing of moving picture projectionists.

We were more than sorry to learn this because we firmly believe such policy to be in error, and one which, if successful in attaining the abolition of examinations and licensing, will react to the very grave damage of the profession of projection.

Right to Criticize.

We assert our right to publicly criticize this policy, because it is one which immediately concerns the very foundation of the fourth industry of the North American continent, the moving picture industry. It is not a policy which can, by any stretch of imagination, be confined in its effects to the I. A. and the exhibitor. It goes to the very foundation of things, and directly concerns at least a hundred and a half millions of

Notice to All

PRESSURE on our columns is such that published replies to questions cannot be guaranteed under two or three weeks. If quick action is desired, remit four cents, stamps, and we will send carbon copy of department reply as soon as written.

For special replies, by mail, on matters which, for any reason, cannot be replied to through the department, remit one dollar.

QUESTION BOOKLETS.

We have two paper covered booklets containing 150 questions designed as a guide to study. They indicate what the projectionist should know.

Either booklet, postpaid, twenty-five cents; both, forty cents. United States stamps accepted; cannot use Canadian stamps.

THE LENS CHARTS.

Are You Working by "Guess," or Do You Employ Up-to-Date Methods?

You demand that your employer keep his equipment in good order and up to date. He owes it both to himself and to you to do so, but you owe it to him to keep abreast with the times in knowledge and in your methods.

The lens charts (two in one, 11x17 inches, on heavy paper for framing) are in successful use by hundreds of progressive projectionists.

Don't "guess." Do your work RIGHT. Price, fifty cents, stamps.

people. For without high class competency in the projection rooms the result upon the screen will inevitably suffer, hundreds of thousands of tons of our fast diminishing fuel supply will be wasted, hundreds of thousands of dollars will be wasted yearly through unnecessary damage to projection equipment and the eyesight of coming generations, one of the very most precious gifts the Creator has vouchsafed mankind, will be placed under unnecessary strain and permanently weakened. We shall not consume space arguing that these things are true because we believe you very well know that all these things will, or may follow in the wake of incompetency in the moving picture projectionist.

The thing then hinges on what would be the effect of an elimination of projectionist examinations. Opposition to license is based on the undisputed fact that up to now there have been very few competent, honest examinations. On the further fact that our men are charged a fee for what amounts to a very meager examination, with yearly "renewal" fee, and on the possibility of an incompetent examination being as bad as, or even worse than no examination at all, to which must be added the annoyance to road men of having to accumulate a lot of license cards, which cost considerable and are of questionable benefit.

Shays' Position Wrong.

First, my dear Mr. Shay, having granted the justice of the charge that a very large percentage of examinations are such largely by stretch of a vivid imagination, and that there is a respectable percentage of them which probably represent pure, unadulterated graft, we still hold that to abolish government examinations would be wrong, and that it would work great injury.

Endangering His Own Home.

We happen to know that you have a home of your own. Presumably in that home is plumbing and electric wiring. We have it from very excellent authority that the examination and licensing of plumbers and electricians in the city of New York leaves much to be desired; that it lets through very many incompetent men. That the license proposition imposes upon plumbers and electricians considerable financial cost.

Would you, President Shay, be willing to have the examination and licensing of electricians and plumbers thrown out, the fire hazard present in poor electrical work and the health of the family, which may well be contingent on safe plumbing, placed under the sole charge of the plumbers and electricians' unions?

Would you not even rather have a poor examination, with hope that time would strengthen it, than have none at all, with every man Jack who could get into the union and get a job (and both you and I know, though we would not, of course admit it, that very many union examinations could only be called an examination by stretching the imagination dangerously near the breaking point) be privileged to endanger the health—yes, the very lives of the members of YOUR family, or to run the risk of destroying YOUR home by fire? Answer me that, brother Shay?

A Pertinent Question.

And if your answer is no, as I think it must be, then apply the same answer to the profession of projection, because, whether you admit it or not, the eyesight of future generations is dependent, in measurable degree, upon what is being done in moving picture theatres today. Not only is that true, but the welfare of the moving picture industry itself rests to a considerable extent upon high grade competency of projectionists. Oh, you deny it. I venture the assertion that I can prove you wrong by the word of high government officials of at least three Canadian provinces, in at least one of which there is a really competent examination.

I can prove you in error, too, by the local unions of British Columbia, where that examination is held; also that the morale of the men of those locals have been measurably raised by the examination they have been obliged to fit themselves to pass.

Your objections to the many farcical examinations we heartily agree with, but we most emphatically do NOT agree with abolishing all license and examination merely because most of them are bad. Let us rather work, as we of this department are working, to secure better examinations. It can be done, and will be done, though the process admittedly will be slow.

We trust you will pardon this open letter. We believe the entire fraternity should read it and weigh its arguments, and we believe you are big enough and fair enough to give it that careful, honest, unbiased consideration which the importance of the matter to the industry and to the public demands. We also have faith to believe that yourself and your colleagues of the International office will agree that the entire industry is just as deeply concerned in this matter as is the I. A. itself; also that its claims should and must be considered by all fair minded men.

Very truly yours,

F. H. RICHARDSON.

President Shay's Reply.

In order that due courtesy and fairness be shown, we mailed a copy of the foregoing to President Shay, who replied promptly, as follows:

My Dear Mr. Richardson: Allow me to acknowledge receipt of your communication of March 27, enclosing proposed article on the licensing of motion picture machine operators, which is to appear in the forthcoming issue of your publication.

It might be well for us to call to your attention the attitude maintained by our Ottawa convention on this question, as indicated on page 21 of the Proceedings of that Convention. This attitude was affirmed by unanimous action of the convention. Allow me to assure you that you have not presented any concrete reason why we should deviate from the action taken by that body.

Rather Surprised.

We are rather surprised that a man of your recognized standing in the motion picture business should be furnishing propaganda for pussyfooting reformers by stating that the eyesight of future generations is dependent upon what is being done in the motion picture theatres to-day. It appears to us from very definite information furnished by our affiliated local unions and the representatives of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry that there are altogether too many pernicious laws both pending and operative against the motion picture industry, and for you at this time to furnish additional assurances to these alleged reformers that the motion picture industry needs further attention from those who have no other business but other peoples', is very ill-timed.

We cannot refrain from mentioning that from a very practical knowledge we know that the vast majority of licensing laws, both municipal and state, throughout the United States and Canada, are positively a disgrace, and instead of guaranteeing the qualifications of the motion picture operator they make it possible for those who have political affiliations to secure licenses and then be foisted upon the public as capable and competent operators, thereby lulling the patrons of the motion picture theatre into the belief that they are safeguarded from injury when entering any theatre wherein a licensed operator is employed. We also know from practical experience that matters of this kind will continue to be the political football of persons whose only interest is to pay off pre-election promises by having licenses issued to incompetents. Therefore, as stated above, you have failed to advance any legitimate and reasonable argument why we should change our opinions on the subject.

Very truly yours,

CHAS. C. SHAY,
International President.

We believe we are justified in commenting briefly on President Shay's letter. First, he blames us for furnishing "pussy-footing reformers" with propaganda by saying the eyesight of future generations is dependent, IN MEASURABLE DEGREE, on what is being done in moving picture theatres to-day (caps are part of our statement omitted by Mr. Shay).

For Mr. Shay's benefit let us say that I cannot alter facts, and it is just plain FACT that we set forth. Mr. Shay wants concrete things. Well, here are a few. There is no eye strain whatever in a properly projected picture projected under proper conditions.

Oil on film, wrong adjustment of projector optical system, failure to properly adjust revolving shutter to local condition, failure to stop down lens to effective ray and many other things traceable directly to wrong projection room practice adds to eyestrain, and adds to it in a measurable degree and as the moving picture comes more and more into universal use, as it most certainly will, this becomes a very serious matter indeed.

No Argument Advanced.

President Shay has, so far as we can see, advanced absolutely no valid argument for the elimination of examinations and license. He says licenses obtained through political influence are used to foist upon the industry incompetent men. Unquestionably true, but is it not also true that some awful dubs somehow manage to secure licenses as doctors and dentists, which license helps them foist themselves upon the medical profession and the public.

Would President Shay abolish the examination and licensing of doctors and dentists, allowing every dub who could get an office and have a shingle painted to set up as doctor or dentist? Well we rather think not!

Not the Same.

But, we think we hear President Shay say, it is not the same, which proposition we dispute in toto. In principle there is not the slightest difference. It is a question of COMPETENCY, and God knows the moving picture industry stands in sore need of that in its projection rooms.

It is nothing less than astounding what the average projectionist does NOT know, though he is improving in knowledge rapidly, for which we take to ourselves some degree of credit. As to "lulling the audience into security," why with modern fireproof projection rooms, audiences educated to the fact that they are fireproof, and theatres well provided with exits, there is slight danger in a fire to any one except the projectionist himself.

The fire hazard is no longer a serious one and, it being only the question of a comparatively short time when non-flam film will be in universal use, it will pass entirely. The real danger is to the eyes of future generations.

As to Convention Action.

We note that the Ottawa convention went on record against licenses. Well, with all due respect to that body, we have known very many instances in which conventions have solemnly taken action, only to have the very next convention declare the action wrong, and overturn it, hence action by a convention does not necessarily establish the action as right.

President Shay speaks of political influence. Well, there are quite some several varieties of "politics," and doubtless the international officers understand the subject fairly well.

In our opinion neither farcical examinations, licenses secured through political influence or anything President Shay has submitted is valid reason for throwing out official examinations and the license.

Not for General Discussion.

In closing this matter let it be clearly understood that this argument is, insofar as this department be concerned, between the I. A. and the editor. We have no intention of throwing the columns of the department open to general criticism of the I. A., in this or any other matter. We have laid our views before you, and the I. A. through President Shay, has replied. All we ask is that projectionists, both union and non-union, think this matter over very carefully.

We are for the license, with the hope that there will be a strengthening of examinations and an elimination of politics therefrom, in both of which the unions can work wonders if they set their minds to it. This will continue to be our attitude until it is shown us that we are wrong. It will take time to eradicate the admitted evils of present license methods, but it can be done.

From Honolulu

From George A. Lodge, Troop B, 17th Cavalry, Honolulu, comes a letter describing an impossible proposition. Friend Lodge says:

Am in trouble. Have a Handbook, and believe me, it is worth the price. Started in this game about eighteen months ago. Projected with a Motiograph for a while for the Y. M. C. A. Later went to an army training school and have been working under a real projectionist. He is now on furlough, however, and I am left to handle the outfit alone.

Here are the facts: Have one brand new Simplex and one issued by the Government. The new projector has a six inch objective, which was on the machine when I received it.

Am using two six inch condensers, but have a ghost in the center of the screen. Have used every combination of condenser I could think of, also tried moving the lamp-house, but to date Mr. Ghost is still on the job.

Have a throw of 17 1/6 feet from film to screen, with a picture sixteen and a half feet wide. Use A. C. through a G. E. Compensarc. White Arc carbons.

Proposition Impossible.

Your proposition is both impossible and contradictory. If you have a six inch lens it would give a 16.5 picture at about 100 feet, so you either haven't a six inch E F objective or else you have a very small picture indeed. In practice you could not project a 16.5 moving picture at 17.5 feet. Too bad you have written all those thousands of miles without stating the proposition clearly and correctly.

I want to help you, but unless you describe the conditions very clearly and correctly you can hardly expect me to diagnose the case.

Above all things you should have told me how many amperes of current you are using. If it is 60 amperes A C, then use the following combination: Two 6.5 plane convex condensers, spaced not to exceed 1/16 of an inch apart, with 18.5 inches from center of condenser combination to film.

That should kill the ghost, provided the amperage is sixty A C at the arc.

If it is forty, then use the same lenses, set the same relation to each other, but have 21 inches from center of condenser to film. If it is fifty amperes, then make the distance a little more than nineteen and a half.

Half a Thousand Dollars

Don't forget that there is an even half thousand dollars, in perfectly good United States coin lying in this office, all of which will be carried away by the three men who give the best answers to the questions propounded in the department, issue of April 10.

Remember, too, that a mere statement that a given improvement will be the most important thing will not win you a prize. You must tell us why you believe the thing you name will become fact within the specified time, and what its adoption will do for the industry. Get busy if you want some of the money. In these days of the H. C. L. you could use that first prize to distinct advantage, the second prize would help some and even the third would not come at all amiss. Get busily busy.

CHICAGO NEWS LETTER

JAMES S. McQUADE

Robertson-Cole Will Build Their Own Chicago Office

MAX LEVEY, manager of Robertson-Cole's Chicago office, advises the writer that work will be begun on the new office building of the organization, in this city, about ten days from the time of writing. The location is at Ninth street and Wabash avenue, with a frontage of 45 feet on Wabash and a depth of 180 feet.

The lease of the present quarters in the Consumers Building will expire on May 1; but the Robertson-Cole office force will remain until their new building is finished, which will be in about sixty days. After May 1, until the new structure is in readiness, the Robertson-Cole films will be distributed from and received at some building outside the "Loop" district.

The new building on Wabash avenue will be one story in height, with a glass roof, and will house the offices, a large projection room and the film storage vaults. Its cost will be $100,000, and the 99 year ground lease costs an additional $150,000.

"The Gumps" in Big Demand Says Salesman M. J. Mintz

M. J. MINTZ, at one time Chicago manager of Exhibitors Mutual, and now traveling sales representative of Celebrated Players, in the interest of "The Gumps," returned to the home office recently after an extended trip through eastern territory. On this tour Mr. Mintz closed with the Merit Film Corporation, New York City, for the rights to New York state and Northern New Jersey; with the First National Exhibitors' Circuits of New England, Boston, for all the New England states; with Royal Pictures, Inc., Philadelphia, for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey; with Savini Films, Inc., Atlanta, for Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida, and with Pearce Films, Inc., New Orleans, for Louisiana and Mississippi.

Mr. Mintz will make a tour of the Pacific Coast in the near future in the interests of "The Gumps." He reports an increasing demand and popularity for these popular screen cartoons in every section visited.

Under his direction a strong press campaign is being promoted to assist territorial exchanges in bringing the merits of "The Gumps" prominently before their customers.

Transfer "Woman He Chose" to Barbee's Loop Theatre

THE WOMAN HE CHOSE" has been transferred from the Ziegfeld Theatre to Barbee's Loop Theatre for a week's run, beginning Sunday, April 25. F. O. Nielsen, general manager of Mickey Film Corporation, says that the change was necessary owing to the fact that many people were turned away at the Ziegfeld, due to its limited seating capacity. The Barbee seats 1,000 persons on the main floor and is in the center of the "Loop" district.

"The Woman He Chose" has created wide interest among the best patrons of the movies in Chicago, and its run at the Barbee will be watched with more than ordinary interest.

O'Toole Made Division Head for National Theatres, Inc.

JACK O'TOOLE, formerly Chicago manager of United Pictures Theatres, Inc., was recently appointed central division manager of National Picture Theatres, Inc., by President Louis J. Selznick and General Manager C. R. Seelye, of the latter organization, his duties commencing Saturday, April 17. Mr. O'Toole will make his headquarters in Select's Chicago office.

Mr. O'Toole will be on the road most of the time, and will have jurisdiction over the offices in Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis. He left Thursday, April 22, on a swing around the circuit.

"The Deadlier Sex" Breaks Records.

W. A. Aschmann, manager of Pathe's Chicago office, announces that "The Deadlier Sex," featuring Blanche Sweet, has exceeded considerably the bookings for "Other Men's Shoes," which broke all previous records in the Chicago office.

"The Deadlier Sex" has been booked for extended runs in all the key cities subject to Chicago. It was released for a two weeks' run in the Loop, at the Castle, and was also booked in all the Lubliner & Trinz houses.

Rozelle Manager of Triangle Office.

L. A. Rozelle, for several years manager of the World's Chicago office, has succeeded Jack O'Toole as manager of Chicago's Triangle office, his appointment taking effect Monday, April 19.

Lila Lee to Have New Guardian.

Little Lila Lee, the fifteen year old movie actress, whose father recently brought an injunction suit restraining Mrs. Gus Edwards from collecting any further money as Lila's guardian while acting in a Los Angeles studio, will succeed in getting a temporary injunction. Circuit Judge McGorty, before whom the suit is being tried, intimated as much last week. Judge McGorty has not yet announced whom he will appoint to succeed Mrs. Edwards.

Campeau to Support Arbuckle in "The Life of the Party"

THE first of the five reel feature comedies in which Roscoe Arbuckle is to star by arrangement of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Joseph M. Schenck will be "The Life of the Party," a story by Irvin S. Cobb which was published in the Saturday Evening Post. This announcement is made by Jesse L. Lasky, who also says that the continuity is being written by Walter Woods and that the production will be directed by Joseph Henabery.

No announcement has yet been made regarding the cast beyond the statement that Frank Campeau will play a heavy role. Hundreds of thousands saw and praised his work as Trampas in "The Virginian" during the years of that production's stage life, and there have been few Fairbanks pictures of the past two and a half years that have not presented him either as a villain or as a rough-and-ready western type bordering on the heavy.

Chorus: "Oh, the Dear, Dear Girls with Their Pretty Curls and Their Smiles of"—(Can't Complete This 'Cause We Just Discovered They're Not All Smiling).

B. P. Schulberg is Elected President of Attractions Distributing Corporation

B. P. SCHULBERG, one of the oldest executives in point of service in the motion picture industry, has acquired an interest in and been elected president of the Attractions Distributing Corporation, which releases the Katherine MacDonald productions through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

B. P. Fineman, who has been president of Attractions since its inception a year ago, becomes vice-president and will remain in Los Angeles to co-operate with Sam E. Rork, president of the Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corporation, on the productions of this star and others whom Attractions plans soon to present on the screen. Mr. Schulberg's headquarters will be in New York, and he will move the offices of Attractions to those he has occupied for some time in the Longacre Building.

The assumption of this office restores to activity in American film circles one who has steadfastly endeavored to advance the standards both of production and distribution. For the past year, since leaving Famous Players-Lasky and the United Artists' Corporation, after aiding Hiram Abrams in the formation of the latter, Mr. Schulberg has been identified with the export end of the business, through an affiliation with one of the largest distributing concerns of Europe, who entrusted him with the purchase, to an extent of many hundreds of thousands of dollars, of American film product.

Was With Zukor in 1912.

This association supplemented a film education dating back over twelve years, a period during which Mr. Schulberg has been identified with every progressive development of the industry, and seven years of which were served with Famous Players-Lasky, starting with Adolph Zukor's formation of the Famous Players Film Company in 1912 and culminating as general manager of the combined Paramount and Artcraft.

Under the new regime, Attractions intends to offer specialized representation to stars, directors and other factors in the business, besides producing big special features from time to time.

In a statement regarding the new plans of the company, Mr. Schulberg said:

"Although I have thought so for a long time, I have never felt with more conviction that the time has come when individual initiative and original thought and action are at last to bring their fullest reward in the film industry. Whether in the case of star, director or sales or exploitation executive, the independent worker in the industry who really serves the screen by conscientious effort and serious purpose can now accomplish more than was ever before possible.

"This is because the industry has, fortunately, reached that stage where personal and specialized methods of production or exploitation transcend in value and in effect all the machinery or unwieldy organizations lacking the same degree of personal inspiration and zeal, without which all creative art is futile.

"It is our purpose to maintain such a policy as will enable us to bring most readily and with the least hindrance to the open market all such pictures as we may be selected to sell or exploit, and to bring to independent producers and distributors all stars and directors who wish to establish independent units of production."

Showing of "Silver Horde" at Capitol Follows Strong Exploitation Campaign

THE Goldwyn Pictures Corporation's intensive exploitation campaign on Rex Beach's special production, "The Silver Horde," to be shown at the Capitol Theatre, New York, the week of May 9, is in full swing. Window displays have been installed in many stores in different parts of the city, and choice locations are being secured for the striking "Silver Horde" paper. In all there will be approximately 1,000 boards.

The ingenious lobby and window display is a mechanical arrangement that represents a horde of fish caught in a net. A play of colored lights on the silvery bodies of the fish, so arranged that they are moved by a breeze blowing through the net, gives a brilliant appearance to the animated display. It will occupy a conspicuous position in the lobby of the Capitol.

Arrangements are being made with the publishers of the novel to ship books to a long list of drug and stationery stores where they will be used in a window display. The active co-operation of book dealers in pushing the sale of the book in connection with advertising of the New York run of the film, has been secured.

Tie-ups With Merchants.

Co-operative advertising in newspapers is being arranged with dealers whose goods make a tie-up campaign feasible. For example, retail fish stores are being induced to make a special feature of salmon advertising, using "The Silver Horde" as a catchline, whereas a number of sporting goods concerns are preparing to push the sale of fishing tackle, making "The Silver Horde" window display the central point of interest in their advertising layout.

Another phase of the campaign that has been favorably received by a number of the leading hotels and restaurants is the featuring of "The Silver Horde" salmon on their menus. Negotiations are now underway with Alfred McCann, the food expert, with a view to having him endorse the production in a way that will arouse interest in the industrial aspect of the fish industry in schools and colleges.

For street exploitation, a float carrying an Arctic set is being prepared, also an automobile rigged up with a special body representing a fish. A booklet entitled "The Story of Rex Beach, the man who wrote 'The Silver Horde'" will be distributed in large quantities from the floats and by boys assigned to different parts of the city.

The exploitation campaign is being planned and carried out by Howard Dietz, manager of publicity for Goldwyn, and G. L. Brightman, manager of the exploitation department.

Crosland Completes "The Flapper."

Containing a splendid cast, out of the beaten track outdoor scenes, and a delightfully pleasing story, "The Flapper," in which Lewis J. Selznick presents Olive Thomas as star, is announced as having been completed under the direction of F. Alan Crosland. The supporting cast includes Arthur Houseman, William P. Carleton, Katherine Johnston, Theodore Westman, Jr., Norma Shearer, Athole Shearer, Dorothy Kent, Marcis Harris, Russell Hewitt, Aleene Bergman, Maury Stewart, Jr., Mildred Cheshire and Warren Cook.

Costello in "The Wilderness Fear."

Maurice Costello marks his return to the silent drama in the forthcoming Selznick production, "The Wilderness Fear," starring William Faversham. Mr. Costello portrays the role of "La Fleche."

Universal Film Stolen.

Film thieves are busy again in Kansas City, Mo., it has just been reported by J. H. Calvert, manager of the Universal branch exchange at that place. The latest print to be missed is episode ten of the Universal serial "The Lion Man." The question that worries Calvert, is just what any film thief thinks he can do with one episode of a serial.

Beck Returns from Trip.

Arthur F. Beck, president of Gibraltar Pictures, who has just returned from a three weeks' sojourn on the Pacific coast, announces the definite conclusion of arrangements through four different units for the production of sixteen big special feature pictures. Mr. Beck has made studio arrangements in Los Angeles for the production of Miss Leah Baird's next picture, announcements concerning which will be made shortly.

Myron Selznick Has Twelve Productions in Work and Four Nearing Completion

WITH the beginning of the week of April 26, Myron Selznick, president of Selznick Pictures Corporation, gathered the reins of no less than twelve important productions, eight of which are being started almost simultaneously and the other four nearing completing.

Prominent in the list of the productions is a screen version of Roy Horiman's widely read novel, "Jenny." Olive Thomas will be starred in this under the direction of Larry Trimble.

Miss Elaine Hammerstein's next Selznick picture, work on which has already been started, is announced as "The Point of View," a screen adaptation of the play of the same name by Edith Ellis, author of "Mary Jane's Pa," "The Seven Sisters," and other Broadway successes. Included in the cast is Arthur Housman, the well-known portrayer of heavy roles. F. Alan Crossland will direct.

At Bahamas Director George Archambaud is reported taking scenes for "Marooned Hearts," a Selznick special production in which Zena Keefe and Conway Tearle are playing the leading roles. Final scenes have been taken for Owen Moore's forthcoming Selznick production, "Stop That Man," written by George V. Hobart. Frank G. Griffin directed.

Ralph Ince is producing "The Man of Iron" at the Selznick Fort Lee studio. This will be a Ralph Ince special production, with the well-known director appearing in the leading male role.

What is claimed to be one of the biggest

Hugh Ford Sails for London to Produce Marie Corelli's "The Sorrows of Satan"

HUGH FORD, director general of European studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has left New York for London. Since the first of the year his trip has been postponed many times, due to the building conditions in England and the impossibility of preparing the new London studio of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., for immediate production of pictures. Everything is now ready and the first picture to be done by Mr. Ford will be "The Sorrows of Satan," by Marie Corelli.

Mr. Ford had many interesting things to say in regard to his contemplated activities with the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

"My particular work will be assisting to establish a British institution, to develop British talent and produce pictures with an international appeal," he stated. "It is my firm belief that motion pictures will play a big part in keeping up the spirit of friendliness and good feeling between the United States and Great Britain by the production of pictures with an international appeal. By developing new British talent and writers, and interchanging them between our New York and West Coast studios and having our leading stars working in the European studios, it is bound to bring about a common interest in motion pictures between the two countries, and a common interest in any one thing is bound to increase the friendliness and good feeling.

Wealth of Photographic Opportunities.

"A complete lighting system has been sent abroad to introduce the American lighting system, the possibilities of which have not been capitalized by the British. They do not use the Copper-Hewitt banks, and the Sunlight arc is a comparatively recent invention, so it was necessary to send a shipment of these lights ahead of us.

"I am very enthusiastic over the possibilities of the natural settings offered by Great Britain in the springtime and very eager to get started. There is no more beautiful country in the world. Think of the beauty of a picture with backgrounds of true British architecture, which is so full of tradition and romance, and it lies there waiting to be put on record so that all the world may see and admire. The proximity to other countries with settings equally as romantic and beautiful is another advantage not to be overlooked. It does not take longer to go on location to the south of France than to go from New York to Florida."

This is not the first time Hugh Ford has produced in Britain. He produced many stage successes in both London and Paris and it is an odd coincidence that just at this time the stage production of "The Garden of Allah" is being prepared for the Drury Lane Theatre. This was one of Mr. Ford's most successful productions in this country. His first picture was "The Eternal City" with Pauline Frederick, which was taken in England and Rome for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and shown five years ago.

Gets West Coast Agency for Black and White Raw Stock

FOLLOWING close upon the heels of its announcement in the trade press of the opening of branch offices in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland for the distribution of motion picture accessories on the West Coast, comes a second announcement from the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation offices stating that it has taken over the west coast distributing agency of the black and white raw stock, manufactured by L. Gevaert & Co., of Antwerp, Belgium.

Eugene H. Kaufman, manager of Inter-Ocean's accessory department who has left for the Pacific Coast for the purpose of opening the new branch offices, will be in personal charge of the domestic distribution of Inter-Ocean's latest acquisition.

Well, If It Ain't Mary Pickford—She Says That She Can Wring More Necks Now Than Ever Before—That Is on Shirts, Etc. She's "The Duchess of Suds" in this new United Artists' play. Scene three shows Mary just after the discovery she has worked overtime without pay.

Otis Harlan Congratulates Charles Ray on Buying C. H. Hoyt's Farce Comedies

OTIS HARLAN, the comedian who first became famous as star of the Charles H. Hoyt farce comedies, which were recently purchased by the Charles Ray Productions, Inc., made a recent visit to the Ray studios in Los Angeles to congratulate the First National star on the acquisition of a wealth of unusual screen material in the Hoyt plays. Mr. Harlan first appeared in a Hoyt comedy at the age of 17 years and during his career acted in eleven of these stage pieces.

Mr. Harlan told the First National star that he almost felt a proprietary interest in the plays, having acted in so many of them, and said that he was glad Mr. Ray was to appear in one or more of them. Mr. Harlan owes his fame to these stage classics. He was intimately acquainted with the author and, in fact, lived with him for some years. He claims that "A Trip to Chinatown" still holds the record for continuous performances in this country. A curious thing he reported about "A Temperance Town," another of the comedies acquired by Charles Ray, is that it ran so long in Boston. The reason suggested by Mr. Harlan is that the residents understood the New England atmosphere so well. Mr. Harlan played the part of Mink in this play.

Mr. Harlan says that the author wrote ahead of his time, and a perusal of his plays shows a perception of things which soon after came to pass, the woman suffrage movement among other things. "A Day and a Night" was written especially for his own use, as a starring vehicle, said Mr. Harlan. He enjoyed considerable fame for his acting the part of Uncle Toby in the successful comedy, "A Contented Woman," one of the most humorous and popular of the plays.

In discussing "A Texas Steer," which Mr. Ray sold soon after he had completed the deal for the Hoyt plays, Mr. Harlan recalled the fact that Tyrone Power made a big hit in it. Mr. Harlan said that his connection with the author was a most delightful one and that he owed much to his former friend, who raised him from a few dollars a week to what was a splendid salary in those days.

It has not been decided which of these comedies Mr. Ray will make in the future for the screen. The initial First National production in which Arthur S. Kane will present him as an independent star is "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," adapted from the George M. Cohan comedy-drama.

To Direct Mildred Harris Chaplin.

Mildred Harris Chaplin's fourth First National attraction will be directed by Lloyd Ingraham, who has "Mary's Ankle" and "What's Your Husband Doing?" to his credit. Mrs. Chaplin has been exceptionally fortunate in directors. Her first First National release was directed by Joseph Henabery, the second by Arthur H. Rosson and the third by John Stahl, who was brought to California from New York by Louis B. Mayer and Bennie Zeidman, vice-president of this First National producing unit.

Selznick Buys Terhune Story.

"The Fighter" is announced as having been purchased by Myron Selznick from Albert Payson Terhune, short story and novel writer, whose works have appeared in all the leading magazines.

This marks the second acquisition by Mr. Selznick from the pen of Mr. Terhune. The first story is a serial written especially for Selznick Pictures. The serial is said to offer strikingly original innovations in the way of exploitation and screen presentation.

"The Miracle of Money" Seems in This Pathe Drama to Transform a "Hen" Into a "Chicken."

The change is going on at the right, accompanied by the song of the waves (permanent) in this Hobart Henley production.

Director of Pathe Exchanges Begins Swing Around Central Western Cities

ELMER R. PEARSON, director of exchanges of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is on a tour around the key cities of the central western states. In the three weeks he has arranged to be away from New York, visits will be made to ten of the Pathe exchanges. He began his tour in Cleveland, and in turn will visit Indianapolis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis and Pittsburgh.

This is Mr. Pearson's first tour of the Pathe branches since his appointment as director of exchanges. Promotion of sales has confined him entirely to the home office, and the results of his efforts are best reflected in the glowing reports just issued on "Brunet Month," when an increase of 45 per cent. in Pathe's total business was made over the average for November, December and January, three of the biggest months in the history of Pathe.

Just before Mr. Pearson's departure, he had a long conference with Vice-President and General Manager Paul Brunet, during which plans were discussed for the extensive development of all Pathe's distribution facilities, in anticipation of the increased business it will be called upon to handle, incident to the growing volume and quality of its serials, short subjects and features.

Its present feature business is destined to double, due to great production expansion, announcements covering which soon will be made by Mr. Brunet; this, too, in addition to the Associated Exhibitors' product, which gives every promise of imposing proportions.

Mr. Pearson is emphatic in his "co-operation with customers" policy, and in a recent letter to branches he laid particular stress upon the imperative of each branch being, at all times, equipped to live up to Pathe's slogan of "Better Service" in every particular.

Sullivan Has the Grip.

C. Gardner Sullivan, who left Los Angeles early in March on a tour of the world in quest of new ideas and "color" for screen plots, has returned to the Thomas H. Ince Studios in Culver City, following an attack of grip encountered while on a visit in New York.

Famous Players' British Publicity Manager Here

FREDERICK MARTIN, publicity and advertising manager for Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., distributors of Paramount Artcraft pictures in Great Britain, arrived in New York on April 22 for a visit of several weeks at the home offices and studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. He was accompanied by Mrs. Martin, a well-known writer of fiction for English publication.

While in New York and Los Angeles, Mr. Martin will make an extensive study of American exploitation methods with a view to obtaining ideas for use in the exploitation of Paramount Artcraft pictures abroad. He expects to spend some time at the Lasky studio in Hollywood, and will return to England in a month or six weeks. Mr. Martin is regarded as one of the best posted and ablest exploitation and publicity experts in the British film industry. For a number of years, prior to taking up his work with Famous-Lasky he managed a string of sixteen motion picture houses.

Glucksmanns Get Control of Metro's 1920 Entire Output for South America

UNDER an arrangement just concluded with Metro Pictures Corporation, Jacobo Glucksmann, acting for his brother Max, has obtained control of Metro's entire output of de luxe specials for 1920, together with some two score of Metro's program pictures for all of South America. The Glucksmanns prior to closing the new contract had Metro releases for Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia. Now they have the rights for the entire continent of Latin America, embracing in addition to the republics named, Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela, the Guianas and Brazil.

Negotiations for the contract were conducted by Harry J. Cohen, manager of Metro's foreign department and Jacobo Glucksmann. The contract was signed by Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro.

95 Per Cent. Are American Pictures

Jacobo Glucksmann was one of the pioneers of the new era in motion pictures for South America. He had formerly been associated with his brother, Max, in Buenos Ayres, where Max had his beginnings as Pathe representative about seventeen years ago. Jacobo came to the United States in 1917 to study for a few months the methods of exchange and exhibition here. He saw such wide opportunities for development that he decided to stay and opened an office at 110 West Fortieth street, later moving to the Candler Building, at 220 West Forty-second Street.

"I venture to estimate," he said, "that 95 per cent. of all pictures shown throughout South America to-day are made in the United States. American productions have almost cornered the market whereas, before the war, I don't think the United States had as much as 5 per cent. of the pictures in the market there. Nearly 95 per cent. came from France and Spain.

"I never could have imagined such rapid development in the industry as has taken place there. So far as the exhibitors are concerned, South America is keeping right abreast of the United States. In the big cities, theatres are being erected that are right on par with the best on Broadway, New York, and the demand for good pictures is growing all the time.

Stars and Stories Appeal.

"Another thing that makes American pictures appeal is that most of them have pleasant stars and agreeable stories. I have noticed an impression among people up here that the Latin peoples desire most of all a lot of bloodthirsty tales, such as you get in the Italian opera. But that isn't true. The Latin above all likes the sweet and charming things of life. He likes well-mannered people and women well gownned. He likes the atmosphere of social life as represented in American films. At the same time, 'the play's the thing,' and he likes a forceful, gripping story.

"The only thing that prevents theatres from equalling in capacity some of the theatres up here is the building laws. Take in Buenos Ayres, they have a regulation that there must be enough space for a person to pass between a row of seats where others are sitting. That takes up a lot of room.

Big Theatres Well Decorated.

"The big theatres make a specialty of artistic decoration inside. I think the last word in this sort of development is realized in my brother's Grand Splendid Theatre in Buenos Ayres. This has just been opened. Its ceilings are painted by masters with beautifully symbolic works of art and there are splendid painted panels on the walls. The backgrounds are of gold leaf.

"But, of course, the theatres throughout South America are as various as the cities themselves. Back in the country places, motion picture shows are frequently given in tents.

"The production of pictures in South America itself has made little headway. There is some production on a small scale, but it doesn't compare in quality with the American product. There isn't enough capital back of the producing end and there is a lack of directors and motion picture actors."

Wesley Ruggles Joins Read, Jr.

Another name has been annexed to the J. Parker Read, Jr., organization in Culver City, Cal. This time it is Wesley Ruggles, actor, director and war hero. Ruggles is at present directing Louise Glaum's second special Read production.

Educational Will Release Scenic Films of New York Conservation Commission

STARTING with the opening of its new exchanges, Educational Films Corporation will release the motion picture productions of the Conservation Commission of the State of New York. In making this announcement E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager, pointed out its special significance.

"These pictures will have a great drawing power," said Mr. Hammons, "and a general appeal to audiences, but it is more important that their acquisition gives another evidence that Educational Films Corporation is recognized by official and semi-public bodies everywhere as a proper medium for release. These organizations see in Educational not only the mechanical arrangements for distribution, but a company that maintains the atmosphere of the high-class product.

"Educational is the first and only company to distribute pictures of the National Geographic Society, an organization that has shunned association with any other film organization. For some months we have been distributing the official pictures of the American Red Cross, which are being made abroad, and two expeditions are out for the Interchurch World Movement and these pictures will be supplied through Educational exchanges. We have very close relations with several other organizations. It should be pointed out that these arrangements are not commercial but that the organizations have selected Educational because it offers the assurance that the pictures will go to the class of people that it is desired to reach."

New York Scenic Beauty Little Known.

The New York Conservation Commission has been engaged in making motion pictures for its own special uses for several years, under the active supervision of Warwick S. Carpenter, secretary of the commission. This work has not only supplied the necessary information for the proper production, but has convinced the members of the commission of the desirability of having proper distribution methods through the nation. The pictures will be offered for general release in single reels, starting in June.

New York State has not been exploited well for its scenic possibilities. The beauties of the Adirondacks and Catskills, the attractive water scenery around Lakes Placid, George and Champlain and the myriad of smaller lakes of the state are little known except to the visitors. Many declare that this state offers more attractive vacation trips than any portion of America; but that they are often neglected for longer railroad trips because they are so little known.

However, these pictures will by no means be confined to scenic beauties. Mr. Carpenter has access to every portion of the state and a full appreciation of the value of its exploitation for purely state purposes. Included in the pictures that have been made are some good pictures of birds and animals in the native habitats, many of which were taken in the state's own preserves.

Much attention will be paid in these pictures to the scientific and development angles. There will be attention given to the fisheries and hatcheries, to the reservations where fur-bearing animals and game birds are guarded. Forest conservation is another point that will be covered.

Capital to Make Sport Feature.

In line with the progressive spirit injected into the operations of the Capital Film Company by its new executives, President Hugh Woody and B. Herbert Milligan, general manager, the firm has just acquired the rights to and will distribute Bill Foreman's Sporting Page, "The Pink Sheet of the Movies," a novelty which is sure to appeal to a large following.

This feature will constitute a periodic sport review of the screen, produced and edited by William S. Foreman, former sporting editor of the Chicago Evening Post. It will be a monthly release. Twelve releases are now provided for, covering every form of sport.

Easy to Tell He's an Easterner by the Way He "Looks."

Harold Lloyd seems to forget all about the pretty maiden to his left when he sees regular American hospitality in Pathe's "An Eastern Westerner."

June Mathis Completes Four Scenarios in Four Months

WHEN June Mathis, head of the scenario department of Metro Pictures Corporation, finished her adaptation of the spectacular Drury Lane melodrama, "Hearts Are Trumps," by Cecil Raleigh, which will be picturized for release by Loew-Metro with an all-star cast, Miss Mathis signalized the completion of her fourth continuity in something like four months.

Miss Mathis scenarioized "The Right of Way," from Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, for Bert Lytell, as the first of the quartet. She followed that with "The Saphead," done from "The New Henrietta," by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, and "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," from the stage comedy by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, the latter in collaboration with A. P. Younger. Miss Mathis is an exceptionally facile worker, and although she frequently rewrites her scripts entirely, has been known to complete one in two weeks.

When Vicente Blasco Ibanez, the Spanish novelist, visited California several weeks ago, June Mathis was selected as the transposer to the screen of his novel, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

June Mathis has been regarded as the prop and mainstay of the Metro scenario department for more than four years, having been with the company almost from its very beginning. She has a long list of successes to her credit. Prior to taking up the work for the screen Miss Mathis had a stage career as an ingenue.

George Fitzmaurice's "Right to Love" Is Highly Praised by Jesse L. Lasky

ONE of the greatest photoplays I have ever seen," is the comment of Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, on the second special production which George Fitzmaurice has made for Paramount Artcraft. Mr. Lasky has given "The Right to Love" as the title of the picture, which he predicts will be even a greater success than the first George Fitzmaurice production, "On With the Dance."

It is rare that Mr. Lasky goes out of his way to praise a picture in advance of its release, preferring to let exhibitors and the public judge for themselves the merit of each Paramount production. Only on some of Cecil B. DeMille's pictures and on a select few of the long list of special productions made by his company has Mr. Lasky gone on record in advance of release.

"I firmly believe," said Mr. Lasky after having seen "The Right to Love" at a private screening, "that in this picture Mr. Fitzmaurice has taken the motion picture art a long step forward. I have seldom seen a photoplay which combines so excellently all the elements that go into the production of an artistic screen drama."

"'The Right to Love' has drama—strong, virile conflict of human emotions; it has beauty—I cannot recall a picture which tells a dramatic story with such lavishness of scenic and photographic beauty; it has pathos and humor. And not the least of its merits is the acting done by a cast headed by Mae Murray and David Powell, whose work in 'On With the Dance' was so effective. This cast includes Holmes E. Herbert, Macey Harlan, Alma Tell, Frank Losee, and Lawrence Johnson, the boy who will be remembered for his work in 'His House in Order.'"

Quida Bergere wrote the story of "The Right to Love" from the play, "The Man Who Killed," by Pierre Frondaie, which in turn was based on the novel, "L'Homme Qui Assassina" by Claude Farrere. The French play was translated into English by Gilbert Cannan and Francis Keyser as "The Right to Kill" and produced with great success at His Majesty's Theatre, London, in 1915.

The locale of the story is Turkey, which fact will stir the imagination of all those familiar with Mr. Fitzmaurice's genius for telling his film stories in settings that are beautiful and atmospheric.

Bickel in Full Charge of Dallas Exchange for Metro

L. BICKEL has taken over complete charge of its Dallas exchange for Metro Pictures Corporation, under instructions from the home office. As recently announced, Metro now has full ownership of the Dallas exchange for the exclusive distribution of Metro productions in the southeastern territory embraced in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

As the result of an error it has been stated that L. L. Dent remained at the exchange as district manager for Metro. This is not, of course, the case. Mr. Dent is not associated with Metro pictures in any way, Mr. Bickel being in absolute charge of the exchange as a Metro branch manager. The position is not new to Mr. Bickel, who had filled it before Metro recently acquired entire ownership and exclusive use of the exchange from the Hulseby interests.

Absorption of the Dallas exchange, following Metro's purchase of its New Jersey exchange from Herman Jans about a month ago, leaves only two offices among those handling Metro pictures throughout the United States still under independent management. These are in Boston and Philadelphia.

Mary Miles Minter's Next Will Be "Jenny Be Good"

FOLLOWING its policy of presenting Mary Miles Minter in roles that will emphasize her dramatic talents, Realart Pictures Corporation announces that the star's next appearance will be in the title role of "Jenny, Be Good," Wilbur Finley Fauley's widely read novel of New York City social life.

The picture will be available sometime in May. In it Miss Minter is said to assume the strongest dramatic part of her career, one that marks a definite step forward in the steady progress she has displayed in her Realart productions of "Anne of Green Gables," "Judy of Rogues Harbor" and "Nurse Marjorie."

The production was directed by William Desmond Taylor, who directed Miss Minter in "Nurse Marjorie." Miss Minter is supported by a Realart cast of customary excellence, which includes Jay Belasco, cousin of the famous American producer, as leading man, and the star's sister, Margaret Shelby, in an important role. Others in the cast are Frederick Stanton, Sylvia Ashton, Edwin Brown, Lillian Rambeau, Catherine Wallace, Fanny Cossar, Maggie Holloway Fisher and Grace Pike.

Myron Selznick Is Made Vice-President Select Pictures

MYRON SELZNICK, president of Selznick Pictures Corporation, has been appointed vice-president of Select Pictures, and will have direct supervision of all productions distributed through Select in addition to his other duties.

This appointment marks but one of the successful milestones that have been meeting Mr. Selznick at every turn in the road. For the past six months, and since he was placed in direct charge of all productions, there has been a decided advance in not only the producing end, but also in the all around efficiency necessary to carry on the tremendous output of Selznick productions.

Business too rushing! The Letter in the Back of the Book postponed until next week!

Templer-Powell Is Member of Cast of Melford Special

IN America primarily as a representative of the Anglo-American Unity League, an organization whose purpose is to encourage a better understanding between America and Great Britain and to combat propaganda launched to estrange the two nations, F. Templer-Powell, one of England's foremost actors, has joined the all-star cast of "The Translation of a Savage," the George Melford special for Paramount Artcraft now being produced at the Lasky studio.

Mr. Powell is prominent both in public and professional life. He was one of the fifty officers on the American-British mission which came to America during the war, at the suggestion of President Wilson, and made speeches, spread Allied propaganda and helped to keep down strikes and arouse general patriotism.

Mr. Powell states that Lord North, of England, who is one of the leaders of the Anglo-American Unity League, has realized the power of pictures as a propaganda medium and is going to use that medium in the work of the league. One production is already being made.

The picture is enacted by an all-star cast, including Mabel Julienne Scott, Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Ann Forrest, Maude Wayne, Helen Dunbar, Winter Hall, Fred Huntley and other notable screen players. Frank Condon wrote the scenario and Paul Perry is cameraman.

These Czecho-Slovakian Door-Knob Hounds Won the League of Nations Celluloid Derby.

National Exhibitor Convention Plans Complete, Says Cohen

FURTHER plans for the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in Cleveland in June have been settled in Albany between Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and temporary president of the coming national convention, and others in authority.

"The outcome of the Cleveland convention," said Mr. Cohen, "will result in a nation-wide organization concentrating its efforts at Washington for relief from the 5 per cent. film tax, now amounting to three times the sum originally intended to be raised by Congress because of the big increase in film rental. We expect a national organization to be effected in Cleveland that will be uncontrolled and uninfluenced by any of the special representatives of film manufacturing companies and distributing companies.

"If 90 per cent. of the exhibitors act together, functioning fairly and equitably to all states, the exhibitors' plight will certainly be lessened and the many abuses and injustices will be done away with. Antagonistic legislation will be defeated. There will be at least forty-seven states represented at the convention in Cleveland."

Lila Lee's Contract Renewed with Famous Players-Lasky

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production, announces the renewal of Lila Lee's contract, and it is understood that she will continue to appear in roles similar in character to those which she has been doing of late.

Miss Lee has developed into a beautiful woman and is no longer the child she was when she first came to the organization about two years ago. It is not as yet announced what her next work will be, but in the meantime she is appearing in William D. Taylor's production, temporarily titled "The Boy."

"The Toll Gate," a Paramount Artcraft, Was Conceived by William S. Hart Alone

APRIL 25, according to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was a red letter day in the history of its distribution department, for it marks the release of the first production made by William S. Hart as an independent star-producer. This is "The Toll Gate," the Paramount Artcraft super-special which was the attraction at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, throughout last week.

"The Toll Gate" is Hart's own story, conceived by the western star nearly three years ago. In the months that followed, so it is related, he worked over it, dreamed of it and polished it to perfection. He was confident that it would make the greatest motion picture of his career, but he would not attempt its filming until he could put into it the full expenditure of time, money and care that he felt that it deserved.

When Hart began making his own productions, with his own company and under his own supervision, it was natural that he should start at once producing his great story as a photoplay. It was also natural that he should put into the production every ounce of energy, ingenuity and dramatic talent that he possessed; that he should procure the best supporting cast available; in short, that he should move Heaven and earth to make this story his film masterpiece.

Long Search for Locations.

The result has been that after six months of the most arduous labor, "The Toll Gate" has reached the screen and already has been acclaimed in several of the largest cities as the best William S. Hart picture ever produced.

On one occasion, it is said, four days were spent in hunting a location for a scene that occupies only eight feet of film. And even after "The Toll Gate" was to all intents and purposes completed, ten days were taken to rephotograph certain scenes to improve them a little, and two weeks were consumed in giving certain little artistic touches to the subtitles.

Not only did Mr. Hart take infinite pains to make "The Toll Gate" his masterpiece, but he risked his life several times in the effort, it is declared, for, although the picture, intended primarily not to be a "thriller," abounds in heart interest and simple human touches, it also contains spectacular scenes that are said to make the hair stand on end.

In the cast supporting Mr. Hart are Anna Q. Nilsson, Joe Singleton, Jack Richardson and Master Richard Headrick. And the Pinto pony, the famous little horse which Hart put through so many stunts in some of his earlier pictures, is back after more than two years of retired life—a return attended by a world of sentiment not only on the part of his master but on the part of every Hart "fan" of more than two years' standing. Lambert Hillyer directed the production.

Wilda Bennett Makes Screen Debut in "S-L" Special Picture

WILDA BENNETT, who has been engaged to play the leading role in "Love, Honor and Obey," the S-L special production to be distributed by Metro, was selected from a number of prominent actresses who were given camera tests for the role of Conscience Williams, at Metro's New York studios. In this role Miss Bennett will make her first screen appearance.

It is a coincidence that Miss Bennett's first stage appearance was also made as a character called Conscience. That Conscience was in "Everywoman." Miss Bennett was 16 years old then.

Next Week sure! The Letter in the Back of the Book!

Metro Starts on Drury Lane Play, "Marriages of Mayfair"

PRODUCTION work on "The Marriages of Mayfair" with an all-star cast has been started at Metro's New York studios in West Sixty-first street. "The Marriages of Mayfair" is a screen version of Cecil Raleigh's Drury Lane melodrama. Julia Burnham wrote the scenario.

The cast includes Thomas W. Ross as Jim Callender, the English gambler; Wilfred Lytell, brother of Bert Lytell, as Migel Villiers, lieutenant in the Welsh Guards; Francis X. Conlan, as Lord Adolphus Villiers; Lionel Pape as the Duke of Exmor; Henry Hallam as Anthony; Jack Crosby as Dudley; Louis Seeley as Felix; Gladys Coburn as Dorothy Gore; Thea Talbot as Bessie Bissett, an actress; Jennie Dickerson as Mrs. Bissett; Effie Conley as Sally; Florence Court as Lily de Mario, and Marie Shaffer as Lady Margaret Villiers.

The director is George W. Terwilliger, who comes from Vitagraph, and is making his first Metro picture. He is being assisted in the direction by Clarence Jay Elmer, who has returned to picture work after recovering from a shrapnel wound received in the Argonne, where he was serving with the Signal Corps of the First Division.

Thomas Meighan Begins on "Conrad in Quest of Youth"

THOMAS MEIGHAN, back once more in Hollywood after his recent sojourn in the East where he played the stellar role in "Civilian Clothes" under Hugh Ford's direction, has started work at the Lasky studio in the title role of William DeMille's special production for Paramount Artercraft, "Conrad in Quest of His Youth."

Olga Printzlau adapted this famous novel by Leonard Merrick for the screen and the picture is being produced with all the skill and attention to artistic detail for which William DeMille is known.

Special attention has been paid to the selection of the supporting cast. That there will be two feminine leads, played by Kathryn Williams and Margaret Loomis, has already been announced. Seen in two scarcely less important roles will be Mabel Van Buren and Mayme Kelso, both of whom were with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company in the earliest days of that organization.

Metro Changes the Name of Next Bert Lytell Production

THE PRICE OF REDEMPTION" will be the screen title of Bert Lytell's next Metro special production, which has been known hitherto at the company's West Coast studios by the name of I. A. R. Wyllie's novel from which the photoplay was adapted, "The Temple of Dawn."

The story being a novel of regeneration—the narrative of a man who had been through fire and was seeking to bring himself back to win his own and the world's respect—those in charge of Metro production deemed "The Price of Redemption" a better box-office denomination than that of the original work of fiction, which, while vivid and perfect symbolically might be confusing to the public.

More elaborate than any other Metro special in which he has yet appeared are the settings for Lytell's "Price of Redemption." The locale of the story is in India, and none of the background necessary to bring out the barbaric splendor and vivid richness of that country has been omitted. Statues have been designed and carved especially for this production; whole temples have risen from the studio lot; villages have appeared where before was only a stretch of grass and earth.

The image of Buddha for the production is an exquisite bit of sculptured work by Victor Andre, reflecting as it does all the spirit of the Orient.

Arthur Zellner wrote the scenario from I. A. R. Wyllie's novel. The director is Dallas M. Fitzgerald, assisted by John T. Prince. Sol Polito is the photographer, and special art settings and effects have been designed and executed by A. W. Alley and G. M. Carpenter.

The cast supporting Mr. Lytell includes Seena Owen, as leading woman, Cleo Madison, Landers Stevens, Edward Cecil, Arthur Morrison and Wilbur Higby.

Heavy Bookings Recorded on Republic Serial, "Whirlwind"

BOOKINGS on the fifteen episode Republic serial, "The Whirlwind," featuring dare-devil Charles Hutchison, the initial episode of which was released by the Republic Distributing Corporation on April 18, are said to be more than exceeding the highest expectations of Republic officials.

Preceding the initial release of the serial, Republic offers exhibitors a 300 foot trailer said to be composed of the most thrilling incidents of the entire series. This is offered primarily to assure exhibitors and their audiences that the fifteen episodes are replete with dare-devil Hutchison stunts said to be unparalleled for sheer realism.

The Saenger Circuit, it is stated, has booked the entire series to play all their southern theatres, the Hippodrome, Prince and Princess of Texas; Blackmore, of Duluth; World in Motion, Kansas City; Casino, Chester, Pa.; Olympia, Altoona, Pa.; Princess, Roanoke, Va., and many other theatres have also signed to play the serial.

Oland Return to Serial Screen.

Warner Oland, Pathe's premier heavy, will be seen as a serial villain for the first time in over a year when "The Third Eye" is released May 23. Mr. Oland's previous characterization was Wu Fang in "The Lightning Raider." Upon the completion of the Pathe serial, Mr. Oland took a brief vacation from the episode plays and appeared opposite Elsie Ferguson in two of her features for Paramount-Artercraft.

"In Old Kentucky" Breaking Records.

Anita Stewart's "In Old Kentucky" continues to smash theatre box office records throughout the country. In Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, the gross receipts reached a very high figure. Nearly $3,500 was taken in Sunday, the opening day, and business all week was absolute capacity.

Universal's "Ransome" Listed for Release Week of May 10

HOOT GIBSON is supported by Virginia Faire, the winner of a recent "Fame and Fortune" contest, in "Ransome," Universal's new western two-reeler. How Jack Morgan, played by Hoot Gibson, puts one over on his father, saves him and his future father-in-law from outlaws and then marries the girl he loves, is told in a new western way. The picture will be released May 10.

The fourteenth episode of "Elmo the Fearless," featuring Elmo Lincoln, and the third episode of "The Moon Riders" with Art Accord and Mildred Moore, constitute the serials releases for the week.

Among the comedy features are Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran in a home-made comedy entitled "Concrete Biscuits" and a Century comedy, "My Salomy Lions," with Louise Lorraine, Billy Engel, Bud Jamison, Edna Gregory and a Century beauty chorus.

Universal's New Screen Magazine No. 65 contains many interesting scenes, showing how a big New York railroad terminal is operated, and the complicated mechanism necessary in the daily handling of New York's millions of commuters. The subject throws considerable light on how the recent railroad strike paralyzed the metropolis so quickly and effectively.

"Don't Ever Marry" Scores Another Success for Neilan

MARSHALL NEILAN's second independent production, "Don't Ever Marry," an adaptation from Edgar Franklin's popular story, is achieving another big success for the young producer, closely following the triumph of "The River's End."

A telegram received by J. R. Grainger, of the Neilan offices in New York, from J. H. Kunsky, in Detroit, where the picture opened at the Adams Theatre, reads as follows: "Great picture; going over big. Received most favorable notice from press and patrons. Should grow in popular favor as week progresses."

In New York, at the Strand Theatre, Jack Eaton reported exceptional business. The newspapers proclaimed the picture another big success. McElliott, of the Illustrated Daily News, said: "'Don't Ever Marry' is an exceptionally bright farce, brisk as they make 'em, and adorned by two very pretty girls, Marjorie Daw and Betty Bouton." Ben. F. Holzman, of the Evening Mail, stated that the picture is not only amusing from start to finish, but the titles indicate that the producer realized the important part that reading matter plays in screen presentations.

Allison Smith, of the Globe, featured Marjorie Daw in the review, saying: "Marjorie Daw is the funniest thing and most agreeable. She can gladden any plot simply by being so exceedingly pleasant to watch." The Brooklyn Citizen said: "'Don't Ever Marry' is the title of Marshall Neilan's latest screen production. It is an uproarious comedy."

The New York Tribune stated that lack of space prevented it from giving this picture the detailed comment that it deserves, "but it will be safe to recommend it to all sorts of friends." The Journal of Commerce said: "'Don't Ever Marry' is a clever and well played comedy, as interesting in its way as was Mr. Neilan's recent success, 'The River's End.'"

Additions to "Stop That Man."

To the already strong cast of the fourth Owen Moore Selznick production, "Stop That Man," have been added several other well known screen and stage players.

Truly Shattuck, long known as a musical comedy prima donna, and Neil Craig, who has appeared in many screen productions, are the two most recent additions to "Stop That Man." Other players in support of Mr. Moore include Henry Miller, Jr., Sydney De Gray and Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of the internationally-famed Russian pianist.

"Marooned Hearts" Being Filmed in Miami.

Scenes for "Marooned Hearts," a forthcoming Selznick production in which Lewis J. Selznick presents Zena Keefe have been taken at Miami, Fla., by Director George Archainbaud. Conway Tearle plays the leading male role opposite Miss Keefe. "Marooned Hearts" was written by Lewis Allen Browne.

A picture that stamps the star as one of the greatest of the day—

SIMPLE SOULS

A play so human, so sweet, so beautiful that the public will rave over it.

"The Inferior Sex" Receives High Praise from Showmen

AN indication of the universal success of "The Inferior Sex," Mildred Harris Chaplin's first starring release through the First National, may be found in the enthusiastic comments from exhibitors who have already played it. Mr. Conover, manager of the Strand Theatre, Red Bank, N. J., said:

"The Inferior Sex" was, in my opinion, the best liked screen production among my female patronage that has been shown at the Strand in months. They went wild over Mrs. Chaplin and the story suited them exactly."

Manager Mason, of the Orpheum Theatre, Ft. Wayne, Ind., was extremely well pleased with the results of his showing of "The Inferior Sex."

Mrs. T. T. Covington, manager of the Ada Meade in Lexington, Ky., said:

"During the engagement of 'The Inferior Sex' the house was booked to its very utmost and not even standing room was available."

Declare "The Deep Purple" R. A. Walsh's Best Picture

A NUMBER of important first run exhibitors gathered last week in the projection room of Realart Pictures Corporation to view "The Deep Purple," an R. A. Walsh production presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, and declared the picture to be the best of the noted director's career.

Edward Bowes, managing director, and Thomas F. Walker, director of film, of the Capitol Theatre, were present and at the close of the showing announced that they would run the feature during the week of May 2.

Representatives of the Park Theatre, Boston, also were present and after viewing the picture concluded a contract to present the Mayflower special during the same week. The Rose Theatre in Chicago has also taken a contract to show the picture for two weeks.

These separate bookings in important first run territory combined to give the Walsh feature one of the most impressive send-offs of the year. Realart officials expressed satisfaction that this substantial endorsement of the new production was based upon an actual viewing of the picture itself by experienced exhibitors.

The prediction was made by several exhibitors that the picture would make a great showing because of its timeliness. Its story deals with the tenderloin district of New York, which is now the subject of an investigation which has interested the country at large.

Fitzmaurice Takes Company to Florida.

George Fitzmaurice, whose "On with the Dance" was one of the outstanding pictures of the year, and who recently completed a big special production as yet unnamed has taken an entire company to Florida to take exteriors for his third special production for Paramount Artercraft. The title of this is "Idole of Clay," an original story by Ouida Bergere, who was also responsible for the continuities of the two preceding special productions.

Mae Murray and David Powell will be the principal players.

Bookings Heavy on "Rio Grande"

The public demand for melodrama and for pictures of the great outdoors is well reflected in the number of bookings received in advance of release date on Pathe's "Rio Grande," the film version of the stage play written by Augustus Thomas. The picture is full of action, spectacular scenes, and is almost entirely an outdoor picture with many beautiful scenic effects. Scores of exhibitors who have seen the picture at exchange showings have wired congratulations. The picture was directed by Edwin Carewe.

Announces Next Hammerstein Picture.

The screen rights to the next Elaine Hammerstein picture, "The Point of View," were recently purchased by Myron Selznick. "The Point of View" is an adaptation of the play of the same name by Edith Ellis. F. Alan Crosland has been chosen to direct Miss Hammerstein.

Kolker to Direct National Picture.

Henry Kolker has been chosen by Harry Raff, Selznick west coast production manager, to direct the fourth National Picture Theatres production, "The Palace of Darkened Shadows."

Many pretentious sets and unique outdoor scenes will be included in the National Pictures production. The scene of the story is said to be laid in India, and the production will be a spectacle of East Indian scenes and life.

Announces Episode Titles of New Vitagraph Serial

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of Vitagraph, who is on the West Coast personally supervising the production of the latest serial, of which he is co-author, "Hidden Dangers," has wired to John M. Quinn, general manager, the episode titles of this serial, in which Jos Ryan and Jean Paige are starred. They are:

Episode 1, "The Evil Spell"; Episode 2, "The Murder Mood"; Episode 3, "Plucked from Peril"; Episode 4, "The Fatal Choice"; Episode 5, "Hands of Horror"; Episode 6, "Springing the Trap"; Episode 7, "Hindoo Hate"; Episode 8, "Hemmed In"; Episode 9, "An Inch from Doom"; Episode 10, "A Fanatic's Revenge"; Episode 11, "The Tank's Secret"; Episode 12, "Human Bait"; Episode 13, "A Woman's Grit"; Episode 14, "The Fatal Escape," and Episode 15, "The Lifting Fog."

At the present rate of production it is believed more than likely that the entire serial will be finished and the prints in the various Vitagraph exchanges before the release date is set.

A big pre-release booking is already announced, exhibitors having been greatly impressed with the first episode, in which occurs the exposition of a most unusual serial plot. It is in this episode that Joe Ryan is seen bulldogging the steer which fell on him and sent him to the hospital for several weeks. This untoward incident threw the serial schedule back considerably.

Jean Paige makes her first appearance as a star in this serial. William Bertram is directing the serial.

Miss Minter in American Film.

"Peggy Rebels," starring Mary Miles Minter, adapted from "The Mate of the Sally Ann," will soon be put on the market by the American Film Company. In this drama, written by Henry Albert Phillips, Mary Miles Minter is charming as a bewitching water sprite in disheveled hair and ragged trowsers, and later, as a dream of a girl arrayed for her first ball, in silk and gauze, with the manners and vocabulary of an old tar. The drama will be presented in five acts, and the cast includes Alan Forrest, George Periolat, Jack Connolly and Adele Farrington. The scenario was written by Elizabeth Mahoney and the direction was by Henry King.

Animated Cartoon in Novelty Reel.

An animated cartoon by Leslie Elton, in which there is a separate drawing for each frame of the entire three hundred feet of film, is announced by Hal Hodes for the new novelty reel soon to be released by Universal.

The subject which features "Cinema Luke," the funny cartoon comedian of Elton's "comics," took more than five thousand separate drawings. Elton was assisted by ten artists.

"Bringing Up Father" Going Strong.

The "Bringing Up Father" two-reel comedies released by International through Pathe, are being energetically "brought up" under the direction of Pathe.

The valuable exploitation these comedies are receiving in the tie-ups of exhibitors with newspapers running the George McManus cartoons is having its effect on the bookings.

Complete First Post Capitol Comedy.

The first of the "Buddy" Post Capitol Comedies being produced by National Film Corporation, to be distributed by Goldwyn, has been completed at the Coast studios of the National Corporation. Mark Goldaine, who is directing the giant comedian, has selected "Oh, Girls" as the title for the first release. This title has been accepted by the officials of the company.

Well-Known Cartoon Subjects in First Goldwyn-Bray Comics

THE first issues of the Goldwyn-Bray Comic, the new single reel being distributed weekly through the Goldwyn exchanges, bring three well-known cartoon subjects to the screen, in addition to the "Lampoons," a selection of clever sayings, gibes, jests and jokes clipped from the press of the world. Approximately one dozen "Lampoons" are presented in each reel.

Happy Hooligan in "The Great Umbrella Mystery" follows the experiences of Hooligan and Gloomy Gus when they enter the umbrella mending business.

The Shenanigan Kids in "Knock on the Window, the Door is in a Jamb" are the comedy cartoon attraction in the Comic No. 802.

"Shimmie Shivers" is the title of the Judge Rumhauser subject presented in the succeeding comic.

Benny Leonard Entertains Newsies.

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, who is now in Los Angeles completing the final episodes of the Hallmark super-serial, "The Evil Eye," recently entertained the newsboys of San Francisco and Oakland at the Dreamland Rink.

The champion sparred four rounds with a Coast aspirant for lightweight honors. Leonard also gave the boys a few tips along the lines of clean living.

Tarkington Baker Sees Growing Demand for Stories Written Solely for the Screen

TARKINGTON BAKER, who is to produce the Booth Tarkington pictures, has returned from Indianapolis where he was in conference with Mr. Tarkington regarding the first of the Tarkington pictures. Production, Mr. Baker announced, will be begun within the next few weeks, probably on the coast.

"One of the outstanding features of picture production today," said Mr. Baker, "is the scarcity of available story or plot material. This scarcity has lately been brought all the more prominently to the attention of producers through the fact that exhibitors and public alike are no longer attracted by the mere fame and personality of star alone.

"In short, it is already a demonstrated fact that the star, when cast in an inadequate, flimsy story, is by no means successful commercially. On the other hand, it is similarly a demonstrated fact that the good story, adequately cast, and minus a screen luminary, is successful commercially.

"The far-sighted producer is already aware of these facts. He accepts them. But what he wants to know is where and how the bigger and better stories are to be obtained.

Little Encouragement for Screen Writers.

"And this brings us to the subject of the situation. Because screen producers in their fight to obtain material have spent big money for adaptation rather than for originality, they have done little or nothing to encourage or cultivate a school of screen writers.

"All this no doubt is a fine thing for authors and playwrights but it is a bad thing for the screen. It shuts out originality. But the last few months have brought a big change. With adaptation material practically exhausted, a demand has suddenly sprung up for original material. It is a demand, moreover, that has its origin with exhibitor and with the public. According to the terms of the contract entered into with me, Booth Tarkington will write directly for the screen. Instead of first presenting the product of his imagination as a novel, or as a play, he will present it as a picture. Instead of compelling the screen to resort to adaptation, this new arrangement very likely will result in the output of stories adapted from the screen or for that matter even in plays adapted from the screen. It is, in brief, a complete reversal of the ordinary procedure."

Robertson-Cole Outlines Its Policy in Telegram to Willard C. Patterson

A TELEGRAM placing on record the position of the Robertson-Cole Company in the motion picture industry was sent to Willard C. Patterson, who called the convention of independent exhibitors in Chicago, by President R. S. Cole on April 23. It gives the company's policy as absolutely against the acquisition of theatres so long as Robertson-Cole pictures are assured a market. The telegram follows:

"I desire to place on record the position of Robertson-Cole in this industry. Our plans have been completed, calling for the release of nothing but the biggest of special productions. Robertson-Cole is now in a position to offer independent exhibitors a product worthy of their support and with their support to continue to deliver bigger and better pictures.

"Our definite fixed policy is to remain independent of all entanglements and we are absolutely against the acquisition of theatres. Robertson-Cole has no desire to enter the theatrical field. But we feel that with the quality of productions that we are offering we have the right to representation in the finest theatres everywhere. If this right is continually denied us we must in justice to ourselves and to properly place our pictures before the public take steps for the exhibition of our pictures under proper auspices in all of the big centers of population.

"We feel that our productions merit recognition of this kind and we are determined to have this recognition, but we earnestly hope that it can be accomplished without the acquisition of theatres. We are independent distributors and we desire to do business on an honesty of purpose basis. We will never be satisfied until our productions, standing as they do on merit alone, are absolutely at the pinnacle in the motion picture industry, and if exhibitors appreciate our efforts in this direction we will feel justified in making whatever investments are necessary to insure success for all.

"If properly supported in our efforts we will go to the limit in the acquisition of stars and productions of the highest standard excellence. We are in the business of distributing motion pictures and we repeat we have no desire to trespass on the premises of the exhibitor unless we are forced to do so in justice to ourselves and to the public.

Reviews printed in Moving Picture World are based upon the production exactly as it will be shown upon your screen. And they are dependable, fair and honest in their expressions.

Bessie Love Returns from Taking Rio Vista Exteriors

BESSIE LOVE and the cast of her first Andrew J. Callaghan production, have just returned to their Los Angeles studio after a long period devoted to exterior shooting in the Rio Vista country. The demands of "The Midlanders," the well-known Charles Tenney Jackson novel which the star is adapting to the screen, were such that special emphasis was laid on accurate and colorful location work.

Directors Ida May Park and Joseph de Grasse, who are collaborating in supervision of Miss Love, declare that the exterior scenes made in Rio Vista will give the first production of the star a unique tone in that aspect of the film alone. The Callaghan organization announces that Bernard McConville, who wrote the continuity for Mary Pickford's "The Hoodlum" and "Heart of the Hills," will do the continuity work for the Bessie Love company. At the same time the announcement is made that Jane Horton and Rosemary Gray have been added to the regular reading staff of the Andrew J. Callaghan company. Both young women are well known in newspaper circles.

N. Y. U. Strong in Film Business.

As an indication of the increasing number of college men and women who are entering the various branches of the film industry may be taken the list which is presented by New York University.

While all the precincts may not be included in the returns, the list now totals fourteen. An "old timer" on the N. Y. U. honor roll is Hopp Hadley, advertising and publicity director for Hallmark Pictures. William LeBaron, scenario manager for International; Abraham Fabian, of First National in New Jersey; Herman H. Bruenner, secretary-treasurer of Biograph; John Waldron, of the Mack Sennet forces; Ralph Kohn, in the legal department of Famous Players; Howard Young, editor of the Paramount Screen Magazine; David and Arthur Loew, of Metro and the Loew Enterprises; Victor Shapiro, in the Pathe exploitation department; Martin Stern, who produced the N. Y. U. "Americanization" endowment film; Edward Marin, of the office management of Famous Players; Rutgers Nielson, handling publicity for the "Literary Digest Topics of the Day"; and Edna Michaels, of Goldwyn all are from the classic halls of New York University.

Earle Williams Next Vitagraph Production, "A Master Stroke," Is Nearing Completion

EARLE WILLIAMS is just putting the finishing touches, out on the coast, to his newest Vitagraph production which has been named "A Master Stroke." The working title of this picture was "The Three Keys," this having been the title of Frederick Van Rensselaer Dey's well-known novel from which the picture was adapted by H. Thompson Rich and Lucien Hubbard. The direction of the picture has been in charge of Chester Bennett.

"A Master Stroke" is announced as a clever comedy drama of wits, women and Wall street. That Williams can handle the comedy touches deftly has been proved beyond all doubt by his work in Winchell Smith's comedy, "The Fortune Hunter," in which he portrayed the John Barrymore role, and big things are expected of him in the role of Yale Durant in "A Master Stroke." A little idea of the original touches may be formed from the knowledge that the "safe-and-money" action seen in so many pictures is here given a novel twist.

There are also moments of high dramatic tension. The roar of the stock exchange floor on a panicky day and the ominous note of the ticker are blended into the big, crashing climax, but at no time do the financial operations become too technical for the average audience to follow. A strong love interest is said to pervade its story.

The exteriors of the production were taken at Santa Barbara, where several beautiful estates and the noted country club were used. One of the exteriors shows an auto crash on a mountain road.

The picture will be released in June.

Frank Keenan to Be Seen in "Dollar for Dollar" in May

THE first of the Pathe features to be released in May will be "Dollar for Dollar," a Frank Keenan production said to be one of the finest pictures in which the star has ever appeared. It will be released on May 2 and hundreds of exhibitors who have shared in the success of previous Keenan pictures have already booked it. A strong coast is seen in support of Mr. Keenan.

Kathleen Kirkham, Kate Van Buren, Jay Belasco and Gertrude Clair are among the well-known faces in the supporting cast. Miss Kirkham will be remembered for her work in "The Master Mind." Kate Van Buren and Jay Belasco were the youthful lovers in "Smouldering Embers" and they have similar roles in this picture. Others in the cast are Harry Van Meter, Larry Steers and Harry Kendall.

The strength that has characterized the previous work of Mr. Keenan is said to be in "Dollar for Dollar," as well as all the able direction evident in his previous pictures. Several of the exteriors were staged at Bear Valley in the mountains of Southern California and some unusual effects were achieved.

Rubye De Remer Gives Party.

A "re-union" of the guests of Marcus Loew who accompanied him on his tour of the South some time ago was held on the evening of Friday, April 23 at the home of Rubye De Remer, 33 West Sixty-seventh street, New York. Miss De Remer was a member of the party of film stars who had such a wonderful time in the south for a week, and ran a party for her fellow travelers, other stars of the stage and screen, and made Mr. Loew the guest of honor.

The feature of the affair was the dancing, in Hawaiian Costume, of Doraldina, a member of the South party, and the playing of her four Hawaiian musicians, who accompanied her.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rowland; Doraldina, Frank Saunders, Florence Moore, of the "Breakfast in Bed" company; Olive Tell, Claire Whitney, Helen Moyer, Anne Luther, Jack Clifford, Mrs. Morris Gest, Taylor Tolmes, N. T. Granlund, Montagu Love, Ben Throope, Rose Mintz, Eugene O'Brien, Richard Barthelmess, June Caprice and Louise Huff.

Favor Penal Law Amendment.

The Senate committee on the judiciary has rendered a favorable report on the bill amending the penal laws by the addition of indecent motion picture films, and it is probable that this measure, which was passed by the House of Representatives on January 28, will become a law within a short time. Only one or two minor changes are made in the bill by the committee, to which it is not expected there will be any serious protest on the part of the House.

The measure would change section 245 of the penal laws by adding the words "motion picture films" to the list of articles which are prohibited from carriage by common carrier from one state, territory, or district of the United States, or place non-contiguous to but subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or from any place in or subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, through any foreign country, to any place in or subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or from any place in or subject to the jurisdiction of the United States to a foreign country.

Exhibitors Indorse "Daredevil Jack."

Though it is only eight weeks since the release of "Daredevil Jack" the books at the home office of Pathe show that this picture has the record for all Pathe serials in playing long established houses that previously never ran an episode play.

The latest is Rickards and Nace of Phoenix, Ariz., who have booked "Daredevil Jack" as the first serial to play their first class house.

Sheldon Lewis Heads Cast of Players in "Silent Barrier"

PLAYERS of uncommon merit make up the cast of the recently completed "The Silent Barrier," first of the Louis Tracy novels to be produced on the screen by Gibraltar Pictures for Louis Tracy Productions, Inc. The picture, now being titled and edited under the supervision of Director William Worthington at the Leah Baird studios, Cliffside, N. J., will be released early in June by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Sheldon Lewis heads the ensemble. A role of importance is in the hands of Gladys Hulette. Florence Dixon has a role commensurate with her ability. Mathilde Brundage furnishes brilliant bits of acting that rank with her fine performance in Leah Baird's new Gibraltar picture, "Cynthia-of-the-Minute." Donald Cameron lends finesse and polish to an important role, as does Corinne Barker. Fuller Mellish is seen to advantage. Jack Raymond and Joseph Burke complete the roster of the first Louis Tracy production.

Fox Buys Novels for Tom Mix.

In combing the market for the new and novel in literary material for use by his increasingly popular cowboy star, Tom Mix, William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, has purchased the picture rights in two of the most successful western novels from the pen of James B. Hendryx.

"The Texan" is the name of the first one, which will go into production very shortly at the Hollywood studios of the corporation. The other book is entitled "Prairie Flowers." While both are western stories and can be made in the same locality, it is understood that the leading roles are in strong contrast.

Sid Grauman Denies Split

With Famous Players-Lasky

Los Angeles, April 28, 1920.
Editor Moving Picture World:

RUMORS that I have had unfriendly relations with Famous Players-Lasky or Mr. Zukor are entirely false and unfounded. On the contrary, my relations with them have been 100 per cent. satisfactory. Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre has played only Paramount-Artcraft productions with the exception of one Realart production since its opening two and a half years ago.

I have never had greater confidence in Famous Players-Lasky or Mr. Zukor than at present and anticipate the most cordial future relations. I still consider and have always considered that Paramount-Artcraft productions are representative of the highest degree of perfection yet attained in the making of motion pictures. Just say for me that I am just as strong for Paramount-Artcraft pictures in the future as I have been in the past.

Carpentier Delights Notable Crowd at Solax Studio as Both Fighter and Actor

THUMBING over the bound volume of champion publicity stories that have appeared in Moving Picture World, we come across this phrase—polished with use, but nevertheless just as good as it was on the first day of creation—"Never in the history of the film business." Lifting it from the page where it has lain dormant for at least a week, we apply it to the fight scene from the Georges Carpentier picture which Robertson-Cole staged at the Solax studio, Monday evening, April 26. So—

Never in the history of the film business did so notable and enthusiastic a crowd attend such a novel studio performance. The "fight," which marks one of the high spots of the picture in which Carpentier is starring for Robertson-Cole, was given an air of more than ordinary importance inasmuch as it was the first public appearance in ring costume made in this country by the "idol of France."

Flossy Fight Crowd.

Nor was this the ordinary fight scene in the ordinary fighting club for which the director hires several hundred extras, and has them remove their coats and show their favorite brand of suspenders. This was an invitation affair and the majority of 1,000 Carpentier rooters who packed the amphitheatre in the Solax studio were entrenched behind the gleaming white expanse of dress shirt. This gave the set the wanted atmosphere of the exclusive London sporting club in which the fight is supposed to be staged.

Before Carpentier and Robert Barrett, the villain of the picture, crossed gloves, director John Adolphi announced to the crowd that Carpentier the fighter was about to show himself as Carpentier the actor. The significance of his remarks became evident as the fight started, and for three rounds the heavyweight champion of Europe permitted himself to take a beating at the hands of his opponent, as called for in the story.

But at that, it wasn't all plain sailing for Barrett. So real was the encounter that at the end of the second round his nose was bleeding profusely from a wallop handed him by Carpentier. In the third round the Frenchman was given a loud salvo applause as, "battered" by his opponent's blows, he staggered from the ropes at the gong, blindly searching for his corner.

Adolphi Delighted.

This was the signal for director Adolphi to leap into the ring, rush to Carpentier's corner, pat him wildly on the back, and then turning to the delighted audience, say, "Didn't I tell you he was going to show himself an artist?"

But from then on, the story called for the artist to become the fighter, so the smooth, cat-like Frenchman just waded into victory. We regret that we cannot get out a sporting edition to discuss the beauty of Carpentier's physical and boxing form, but suffice to say that the smiling ex-poilu made for himself a host of admirers who will in turn make more hosts by their enthusiasm.

A look at the line-up of cars in front of the Solax studio Monday night would convince anyone that Wall Street had taken out its pet machines and moved on Fort Lee. Representatives of all the big New York picture houses and circuits were present, together with a large delegation of the New York press.

6,000 Contracts on Duncan Serial.

The announcement that just as William Duncan is preparing to stage the big sensational thrill of the twelfth episode of "The Silent Avenger" Vitagraph has booked 2,400 contracts with theatres that never before booked a William Duncan serial, and hundreds that never ran a serial of any kind, is regarded as significant. The indications are that the total number of theatre contracts signed for "The Silent Avenger" within the next thirty days will exceed 6,000.

Another Alice Joyce Picture Among the Productions on Vitagraph's List for May

AMONG the Vitagraph productions scheduled for release during the month of May are: Larry Semon in "School Days," written and directed by Larry Semon; Harry T. Morey in "The Sea Rider," written by Harry T. Dittmar, directed by Edwin L. Hollywood; Alice Joyce in "Dollars and the Woman," a special production from the story by Albert Payson Terhune, directed by George Terwilliger; Earle Williams in "A Master Stroke," from the novel by Frederick Van Rensselaer Dey, directed by Chester Bennett.

As in his former comedies Larry Semon has a well connected story in his new comedy, "School Days." The earlier scenes show Larry and his boyhood friends learning their three R's at the little one-room "district school."

Morey in Excellent Role.

In "The Sea Rider" Mr. Morey has assumed an entirely new type of character but one that fits perfectly his robust physique. As the title indicates, he is seen as Beadell to Direct Municipal Picture.

Ben W. Beadell, Select manager of Chicago, was recently chosen by the film interests of the Windy City to take charge of the production of a picture that is to be used in introducing a bond issue for the erection of a convention hall.

The question of how to get this bond issue before the public of Chicago was under discussion at the meetings of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Mayor William Hale Thompson was one of the prominent figures in the discussion and it was finally decided that a motion picture would be the most effective medium.

a seaman, the master of a big fishing schooner. The two leading feminine roles, of practically equal importance, are played by Alice Calhoun and Louiszeti Valentine.

The new Alice Joyce special production, "Dollars and the Woman," affords the Vitagraph star one of the most emotional roles she has assumed for some time, one that shows her in a variety of moods and takes her from the "daughter of luxury" type in which she has met with such great success to poverty and then back again to wealth which she cannot fully enjoy through her fear of meeting straightened circumstances. Robert Gordon is Miss Joyce's leading man in this picture.

"A Master Stroke" again presents Earle Williams in a role that is partly serious and sometimes light comedy. It is a comedy-drama of wits, women and Wall street. Vola Vale is Mr. Williams' leading woman.

Hodkinson to Increase Sales Force 50 Per Cent.

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces its intention of immediately enlarging its selling staff by 50 per cent. Mr. Hodkinson, in speaking of the proposed increase, called attention to the circumstances which have made the enlargement of the selling organization an imperative necessity.

"The progress of our organization and the constant improvement in the quality of our pictures," said Mr. Hodkinson, "have naturally resulted in an increased volume of business, with which the present selling force is scarcely able to cope. We are, therefore, looking for the best material which can be found in the selling field of the industry. I want to take this occasion to point out the unusual opportunity offered to young men gifted with energy and vision. These qualities are as essential as experience and much harder to find."

Wants Men Looking for a Career.

"I hope that every man in the selling field who is looking for a career, rather than a mere job, will send me his name. I want the best brains in the selling field, as well as every other department of our organization. The motion picture industry today offers a maximum of reward to a young man with ambition and the ability to think and look ahead."

C. H. Rosenfeld Forms Company.

C. H. Rosenfeld, formerly New York sales manager for Robertson-Cole, has established the Climax Film Corporation, at 604, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. His many exhibitor friends and those of the industry will be pleased to learn that he has purchased "On Common Level," featuring Edmund Breese and Claire Whitney, for New York State and Northern New Jersey.

Consensus of Trade Press Reviews

Here are extracts from available reviews printed in the five motion picture trade papers. It is the aim to present one sentence that will reflect the spirit of the writer's opinion. The papers are indicated as follows: Moving Picture World (M. P. W.); Motion Picture News (N.); Exhibitor's Trade Review (T. R.); Wid's (W.); Exhibitors' Herald (E. H.).

The Cost

(Violet Heming and Ralph Kellard—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—An elaborate production of David Graham Phillips' story.

N.—Picture is disappointing through lack of moving moments.

T. R.—Owing to the powerful heart interest material and the fact that "The Cost" was one of the most widely read of Mr. Phillips' books, the film version will no doubt be of above the average box-office value.

W.—Not up to the Paramount-Artcraft standard.

E. H.—Is not as convincing in picture form, as it was in fiction.

Treasure Island

(Shirley Mason—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—Maurice Tourneur has transferred the Stevenson story to the screen with a fine regard for the spirit of the original, and the picture smacks of romance and the lure of hidden gold in the same wonderful way that makes readers of the tale stick to the book until the last page has been reached.

N.—Interesting picture made from Stevenson's famous story.

T. R.—Carefully directed, ably presented "Treasure Island" will make its mark in the film world.

W.—Colorful production furnished Stevenson's classic pirate tale.

E. H.—The high points of the original story have been well brought out by Maurice Tourneur.

The Woman Gives

(Norma Talmadge—First National)

M. P. W.—The fact that the picture is graced by the art of one of the screen's most accomplished actresses, and that she is supported by an excellent cast, goes far in establishing the feature as a likeable one.

N.—A highly developed melodrama of rare order is this latest photoplay of Norma Talmadge.

T. R.—The feature will undoubtedly be popular with all the followers of the clever little actress, and win new friends for her as well.

W.—More like this will help neither star nor producer.

E. H.—Compares well with the former works of Norma Talmadge, whose name has come to be popularly accepted as guarantee of satisfaction.

Alias Jimmy Valentine

(Bert Lytell—Metro)

M. P. W.—"Alias Jimmy Valentine" should repeat its stage success upon the screen.

N.—Old time crook play as thrilling as ever.

T. R.—Best of all crook dramas.

W.—Clever, suspenseful, appealing, amusing—a real picture.

E. H.—This polite crime play has been adapted in a very satisfactory manner and convincingly.

Dollar for Dollar

(Frank Keenan—Pathe)

M. P. W.—The development of the plot is skilful and dramatic. The subject is a strong one of its kind.

N.—Should give satisfaction wherever it is shown.

T. R.—Is of the sensational sort and provides thrills and suspense.

W.—Fair production with story that has too many angles for one picture.

E. H.—Displays the absorbing and entertaining work of Frank Keenan.

The Heart of a Child

(Nazimova—Metro)

M. P. W.—Should rank as Nazimova's best screen work.

N.—Nazimova's art will carry this picture by.

T. R.—All in all the picture is one to appeal favorably to almost any class of fan.

W.—Should give general satisfaction to star's admirers.

E. H.—Is qualified to duplicate the best of her previous successes.

Locked Lips

(Tsuru Aoki—Universal)

M. P. W.—The production as a whole strikes a quite original vein.

N.—Antique story and crude touches provide weak entertainment.

T. R.—Tsuru Aoki comes into her own as a star in the Universal offering, "Locked Lips."

W.—Tsuru Aoki in feature slightly above average merit.

The Mother of His Children

(Gladys Brockwell—Fox)

M. P. W.—A strongly entertaining, if not powerfully dramatic story of art life in Paris.

N.—It will shock no one and if your patrons like high society pictures, they will go away pleased.

T. R.—It makes a very acceptable attraction.

W.—Adequate production given to story that lacks forceful elements.

Bullet-Proof

(Harry Carey—Universal)

M. P. W.—The picture will appeal to Harry Carey's admirers.

N.—The picture measures out a healthy lot of Western action—action which is perfectly blended with the backgrounds of primeval nature which Lynn Reynolds has collected.

T. R.—Conventional western melodrama strung around the hero's threat to avenge his father's death.

W.—Has a fair chance of getting over with the star's following.

Paris Green

(Charles Ray—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—The Ray following will take to "Paris Green" like a Sunday School picnic to pink ice cream.

N.—Interesting moments in homespun story despite hokum.

T. R.—Clever comedy, dealing with the reaction which naturally sets in in the case of a doughboy.

W.—It's not as good as previous Ray pictures, but should please.

The Toll Gate

(William S. Hart—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—It is sure to win wherever it is shown.

N.—Quite entertaining picture with Hart as good-bad man again.

T. R.—The human interest element runs through the entire story, and we pronounce it one of the best things Mr. Hart has ever done.

W.—Cowboy favorite's latest proves he's still there.

No Shortage of Wall Paper, Prices, Paste or Comedy

Sidelights and Reflections

THE long run moving picture house which began operations in Times Square the other night with Cecil B. DeMille's "Why Change Your Wife" found the amusement loving public ready to rush in and fill the theatre the moment the doors were opened. New York City has been waiting for a theatre devoted exclusively to this grade of screen entertainment ever since "The Birth of a Nation" completed its engagement at the Liberty Theatre four years ago. The Criterion, under the direction of Hugo Riesenfeld, gives every promise of becoming a Broadway institution and the fore-runner of a group of moving picture houses conducted along the same lines. It is only natural to infer that if dozens of stage productions can run on Broadway for an entire season, feature pictures of equal or superior merit can do the same thing. With the opportunity to learn by experience offered the management of such a picture house, new and valuable effects in the presentation of the entertainment will come into use. The one week houses in Times Square will still have their following, where the news reel, the vocal and instrumental numbers and the short comedy are on the program. Show business in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston has its own laws; and where the long run theatres of the stage exist, sooner or later will be found picture houses governed by the same policy. They will be the hallmark of the best in screen production.

It is doubtful if a moving picture play could have been chosen that would have appealed stronger to Broadway's love of lavish display, keen but not ill-natured satire and the hot-house method of forcing the artificial sweets of life to respond to the call of the corpulent bank roll, then will "Why Change Your Wife." This joint product of the Brothers DeMille takes a light but firm hold of a very serious subject and for over five reels plays with it, tosses it in the air and throws it about with the ease and dexterity of a master juggler. The wrecking of a home and the happiness of its inmates is told with unimpeachable veracity, but with a studied indifference that reveals only the amusing side of the matter. The man and wife in the case are quite ordinary persons, not very clever and never very good or very bad; just the average run of humanity. Both do foolish things—and pay the price of their folly. With the slipping of Robert Gordon on a banana peel the treatment of the story descends to good old melodramatic devices, with a lively fight between the ex- and the present wife that delivers a physical punch in more than one sense of the word.

Cecil DeMille's devotion to satirical comedy has given the screen a well founded claim to a place among the higher walks of the drama, and his craftsmanship in "Why Change Your Wife" is more facile than ever. William DeMille's share in the making of the picture is quite as important and has been executed with the same dexterity. If there is a preachment against divorce in the story, it is made to don the garments of the jester and poke fun at the weakness it unmasks.

"The Orphan"

New Six-Part Fox Subject Features William Farnum in a Vigorous Western Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

ANOTHER powerful subject is added in "The Orphan" to William Farnum's portrayal of Western characters. The new number, in six reels, released by Fox, was produced under direction of J. Gordon Edwards from a story by Clarence E. Mulford.

Mr. Farnum again demonstrates his ability to present vividly one of the strong men of the plans. As the Orphan, he is the terror of a wild, rugged country, where he has grown up from boyhood. His father was hung in a cold-blooded manner by his enemies at an earlier period, and the youth has spent his days seeking vengeance for this crime. The hand of every honest man is against him, yet as the story develops, he has many fine, manly qualities.

The scenes are laid in a typical bad land country, one of the most picturesque shown on the screen in some time. The roads wind in and out among buttes and mountains, flanked on each side by giant cactus and desert growths of all sorts. Some great riding is done in this production, and G. Raymond Nye's handling of a six-horse stage coach is something to be remembered. A band of Indians appears, lending picturesque touches to the action and some sanguinary incidents to the plot. While there is much of a dramatic and violent nature in this production, it is enriched by some humor highly characteristic of the times depicted. Louise Lovely is charming in the feminine lead.

The Story.

An outlaw known as "The Orphan," in the production of that name, is feared throughout Cactus county. He has terrorized the wild region, near the town of Ford's Station, and is badly wanted by the law. At heart the Orphan is generous and kindly. He turned outlaw when a boy in order to avenge the death of his father, but his finer qualities are as yet unknown.

Sheriff Jim Shields is on his trail and when the meeting comes he and the Orphan join forces unexpectedly in a brush with the Indians. The sheriff owes his life to the Orphan, but warns him that on his return home friendship will cease. The Orphan smiles at this and follows the sheriff to the town, where he amuses himself in playing tricks of a highly humorous character. He also meets a second time the sheriff's niece, Helen, whom he had seen on the stage a few days previous. At this time he had saved both the girl and the driver from an attempted hold-up.

Some bad men of the neighborhood, suspecting collusion between the sheriff and the Orphan, plan to kill the former and later deal with the outlaw. But their scheme is upset in a dramatic manner. The Orphan afterward recognizes the leader of these men as the man who killed his father and kills him in a gun duel. He wins the love of Helen.

"The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes"

Elaine Hammerstein Does Fine Acting in Dual Role Picture Produced by Selznick.

Reviewed by Herbert Caryl.

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN plays a dual role in the Selznick picture, "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes," and again demonstrates her fine talent for screen acting. She portrays the character of Leontine Maddern, known along Broadway as "The Flame," as effectively as she does that of Leona Maddern, beautiful, accomplished singer, who is doing her bit to help win the war. One minute Miss Hammerstein is the vampire, the next she is the twin sister, sweet and lovable. It is really a remarkable piece of acting.

"The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes" is minus the usual pretty settings in Selznick pieces. But what it lacks in beautiful photography is made up by intense dramatic action and appealing sentiment. The scene in the hostess house at the army cantonment, where Leona Maddern meets the man she loves, will bring back memories to the tens of thousands of boys who entered the army in the stirring days of 1918. As Leona gives up her sweetheart to her country a heart-gripping love scene is enacted.

The Story.

An unscrupulous vaudeville actress is Leontine Maddern, while her sister, Leona Maddern, is an artist and a singer, very serious and lovable. Leona never uses her right name, because of a scandal in which her sister Leontine figured, and goes under her mother's maiden name of Rosalie Byrnes. Rosalie meets Lient. Gerald Cromwell in the early part of the war, while singing at a hostess house in one of the army cantonments. They fall in love. Overseas orders come to Cromwell and before he leaves he wins Rosalie's consent to an immediate marriage. They are married and the bride watches her husband depart.

Cromwell's family consists of an invalid mother and his sister Eleanor. Their bank balance is depleted, but they have entrance into fashionable society. Eleanor is engaged to Hugo Stone, a cruel and mercenary man, who has craftily planned to have Gerald marry the only daughter of a millionaire, in order to bring money into the family.

Stone, knowing of the scandal attached to the name of Leontine Maddern, jumps to the conclusion that she and Rosalie are one. He is confident he can buy her consent to a separation and divorce, thus clearing the way for a "profitable marriage." Leontine is in a desperate financial situation, and also wants to get away from an ardent lover, Vasco Lamar, a drug addict, so seeks refuge in Rosalie's modest apartment.

Stone calls at Rosalie's apartment, finds Leontine there, and mistakes her for Rosalie. He offers Leontine money to consent to a divorce. She takes it as a joke at first, then becomes serious. She takes ten thousand, rushes to a broker's office and loses all of the money on a tip. In France, Cromwell receives word that his wife has signed an agreement to get a divorce. He writes a bitter note to Rosalie. When she receives it she is disconsolate.

One morning, hysterical and disheveled, Leontine bursts in upon Rosalie and says she has killed Vasco Lamar. In self-defense she struck him. She had left her purse at the scene of the struggle. Rosalie bravely goes to Lamar's place to remove the incriminating article. While there she feels the presence of someone in the room. She looks up; it is Gerald Cromwell. The officer explains that since his return home he has been quietly investigating matters. Having gone to Rosalie's apartment he learned the truth from Leontine, including the Lamar killing. After removing the evidence they discover Lamar is not dead, but injured. They leave hurriedly for their honeymoon.

"Bright Skies"

THE exhibitor may look far and not find as pleasing a production as "Bright Skies," a five-part production made at the Brentwood studios, and released by Robertson-Cole. Zasu Pitts is the star of the picture, and divides honors gracefully with a splendid cast, including a very clever monkey. The realism with which Zasu Pitts imbues the character of Sally, the refreshing individuality with which she clothes the part, places her in the class of the unforgettable.

The picture is artistic. It is well constructed, and the director seems to have given as much attention to one character or situation as to another, with the result that the picture stands out as a distinct chapter of life. The homely natures of its people, the convincing quality of their environment, the painstaking interpretation from which the appearance of effort is eliminated, all combine to make the production one of unusual appeal. It contains a pronounced vein of comedy, which relieves the pathos of the situations and brings with it a delightful atmosphere of bright skies and the open road.

The Story.

Sally, the little waif in "Bright Skies," had no last name as far as she knew. She lived with Mrs. Cassidy, who kept a rooming house, and worked without appreciation. One day Sally became the possessor of a book on health and beauty, and her struggle to become a perfect model by exercise and deep breathing causes a revulsion of circumstances which finally lands her on the open road in the company of an old organ grinder, his monkey and her black kitten, which she calls Aunt Mary.

After the joy of a few days of gypsying, the old man begins to droop, and one morning Sally awakens to find him dead. Fortunately for her, a farmer boy named Billy, with whom she had made friends on the day previous, happened by. Through his efforts she finds a place to work and live with a farmer couple. Here a romance between Sally and Billy has its beginning and development. One day when they are at the depot a detective steps up to Sally and hands her a letter from a father of whom she knew nothing. Sally then learns that she really has a home, and soon becomes accustomed to the luxuries with which Carnsworth, her supposed father, surrounds her. The simple matter of a photograph of her mother, presented to her by Carnsworth, reveals to her the fact that Carnsworth is Billy's father and that she is still a nameless waif.

Sally leaves the Carnsworth home at dawn, is later found with Billy, and confronted with a request that she return to Carnsworth's home to become Billy's wife.

"The Vanishing Dagger"

Eddie Polo in New Universal Serial Lives Up to Pace Set in Previous Productions.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THAT eager host of serial fans who have followed Eddie Polo's adventurous career in the films since the days of "Liberty," will find in "The Vanishing Dagger" a worthy successor to former chapter productions in which he has starred. The first four episodes of this serial are packed with exciting action, and Eddie finds constant opportunities to perform the perilous stunts for which he is famous.

The opening reels were taken in England, where Mr. Polo and his supporting cast went in search of realistic atmosphere for the fore part of the story, which opens there. The English settings stand out picturesquely at times, and the spectator would no doubt have welcomed more of this scenic charm. However, it is the fashion of a good serial to grip the interest quickly and be on its way, and "The Vanishing Dagger" is no exception to the rule. Once Prince Narr, of the royal house of Numidia, has set his evil influence working in the beautiful home of Sir George Latimer, a chain of events follows with melodramatic swiftness.

The hypnotic episodes are presented convincingly, and a particularly fiendish feature is that in which Sir George is forced to write a confession of a crime he did not commit across the forehead of his daughter. The supporting cast is a strong one.

The Story.

John Grant, an American, in "The Vanishing Dagger," is visiting in England with the family of Sir George Latimer, in a fine house near London. Prince Narr, of the royal house of Numidia, is also a guest with his retainers. Prince Narr is possessed of a strong hypnotic power, which he demonstrates in the course of a reception.

After a few days Prince Narr falls in love with Sir George's daughter, Beth, and asks for her hand in marriage. Sir George does not believe in intermarriage between the white and dark races and refuses the prince's offer of his hand. This arouses the latter's displeasure and he also becomes intensely jealous of Grant, who has saved Beth from death during a ride behind the hounds.

To avenge himself Prince Narr presents Sir George with a jeweled dagger, and through hypnotic suggestion commands Sir George to commit murder. The crime is really committed by a servant of the Prince, but Sir George is made to believe himself guilty. He is forced, while under the spell, to write a confession across Beth's forehead, which confession is in indelible ink. This at first fades out, but later reappears and can only be removed by a solution concealed in the dagger. The latter weapon is stolen by Claypool, a notorious criminal, and brought to America, where the chief characters follow in due time.

"The Family Honor"

King W. Vidor Production in Which First National Presents Heart Interest Story of Proud Southern Family.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE First National-King Vidor production, "The Family Honor," supplies another proof that a picture can be entertaining without having a sloppy sex interest. It is based on a story by John Booth Harrower and, while it is not one of King W. Vidor's best, it is an excellent example of what a picture ought to be as regards the moral aspect.

The casting of the production is somewhat at fault; and although there is no glaring example to point at, the impression is that one or two of the players would have found better opportunities in different roles, and that stronger principals would have added to the appeal of "The Family Honor."

The picture contains a deep heart interest, and Little Ben Alexander does his best to inject a pathetic punch into his work. Roscoe Karns as Dal Tucker is convincing, and Florence Vidor as Beverly Tucker is attractive. J. P. Lockney, as the keeper of a saloon and gambling den, and George Nicholas as the Mayor, evidence a fine knowledge of the moving picture art.

The production is a safe bet for the average theatre. Its appeal is wholesome, and the majority of people will rejoice when a proud son of the old South, after wasting his forces in drinking and gambling finally jumps on the village grocer's delivery wagon and gets busy earning an honest living.

Story.

The story of "The Family Honor" presents the problem of Beverly Tucker, the daughter of an old Southern family, when her last dollar has been squandered by her brother Dal, for whose education she has sacrificed much. Dal, arriving at home, brings with him in place of the brotherly aid and encouragement which Beverly had hoped for, only vicious habits, and a determination to earn his living by grafting on others.

With this in view he visits a gambling den, where he sets up a roulette wheel and proceeds to follow the path of dishonor. The fact that Mayor Curran owns the village gambling house, and that his son, who is in love with Beverly, becomes mixed up in a raid on the house, makes an interesting complication. The shooting of one of the detectives causes Dal to be accused of murder. One of the witnesses, after considerable pressure, is brought to bear, tells of having seen Felix, the manager of the house, when he was trying to get away with the cash, shoot the officer.

The matter is finally cleared up, and Beverly promises to marry Merle Curran, while Dal, who has come to his senses, accepts a position with the village grocer to drive his delivery wagon.

The Story.

"The Love Expert" at private school is "Babs." She studies her emotions, while other girls merely develop their minds. By observing her pulse she detects an affinity. She tests herself on meeting men, and they are stupidly puzzled by her conduct. Because of her antics, her dad sends her to visit Aunt Emily in Boston, while he goes to Palm Beach. Babs there makes the alarming discovery that she is in love with Jim Winthrop, her father's agent and the fiancé of Aunt Emily. He has been engaged to Emily for six years, but can not marry her—he has so many relatives to support.

Babs has a brilliant idea. She sends Winthrop a telegram over her father's signature, ordering him to Palm Beach with his relatives and Babs. At Palm Beach Babs covers her trick and starts in systematically to get rid of Winthrop's relatives. She pairs off his two sisters through match-making ingenuity, but his aunt Cordelia, somewhat deaf and near-sighted, is a problem.

Babs has another brilliant idea when her father reproves her for light conduct. He reminds her that a man who compromises a woman must marry her. He would do this himself, like an honorable man. This seals his doom. During a hotel hop Babs manages to break Cordelia's specs. She then leads the helpless Cordelia up to Dad's room, steers the half blind lady in, and puts her to bed. When father comes in later, he disrobes in his sitting room and goes to the bedroom in his nightgown, only to find Aunt Cordelia in his bed. Before he can hustle on some clothes and escape, there is a crowd at the door. One by one Babs disposes of Winthrop's relatives, and fortune favors her. He is freed by

"The Miracle of Money"

Five-Reel Pathe Release Tells Simple But Effective Heart Interest Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is nothing showy or elaborate, except in a few settings, about this five-reel Pathe release, based on a story by Beulah Poynter and produced by Hobart Henley. It is on the contrary a story of a simple, elemental type, which develops unexpected emotional appeal. This latter fact is undoubtedly due to the exceptional acting of Mrs. Bess Gearhart Morrison and Margaret Seddon, in the roles of the two sisters. The picture is described as a subject without "stars," but the leading roles are nevertheless in excellent hands. If Mr. Henley can turn up such able performers as the principals in this, he is justified in dispensing with more highly advertised players.

There is something delightfully refreshing in the character of this story, with its strong underlying pathos. It pictures the romance of two milliners, who suddenly fall heir to two hundred thousand dollars. They have each passed the middle of life and the new-found wealth carries a touch of irony from this fact. But they invade Fifth avenue, like other newly rich, and in the end the self-sacrificing one has the happiness of seeing the other married.

There is a great deal of real life in this, gilded by obvious romance. It is a subject that makes a genuine appeal and will be remembered by those who see it.

The Story.

Two cousins, Patience and Emmeline Hodges, in "The Miracle of Money," are milliners in Provincetown, where they have set the styles in bonnets for more than twenty years. Neither has married, though Emmy previously had an affair of the heart with a man named Jim Heth, of some eight years standing. Patience, as she herself says, is not "one of the marrying kind," but she still has hopes for Emmy. Emmy has never forgotten Jim, who disappeared after the elopement of his younger brother.

The Misses Hodges suddenly fall heir to two hundred thousand dollars. They rejoice in this fact, but it brings a touch of sadness because they are each past forty. Nevertheless they determine to go to New York, where they visit the Fifth avenue shops and live at a fine hotel. They don costly gowns, but are smiled at by other guests of the hotel. Then they patronize a beauty parlor, which accomplishes considerable for both of them.

Emmy insists upon retiring at nine o'clock, but Patience still remains up. She discovers a sick man, who, of course, turns out to be Jim. He calls for Emmy in his delirium and there is a joyful reunion. Jim, it develops, has been making up for a theft committed by his brother.

"Terror Island"

Paramount Presents Houdini in Sensational Melodrama by Arthur B. Reeves and John W. Grey.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

TERROR ISLAND is too well constructed as a story to be classed as a vehicle, but it suits the peculiar qualifications of Houdini as if it was made expressly for him. The authors have done their part with skill and good taste. A vast amount of capable effort has been made by the director to give the voyage to a treasure island the force and charm of realism. The settings are ingenious and admirable. The large ensembles are handled in masterly fashion. Throughout the entire story there is so much to admire and commend in the way of good workmanship that it seems a pity that it is marred in any particular. It starts off with zip, and it is carried on with enthusiasm, but Houdini is too intent on exploiting his tricks to realize that, even in sensational melodrama, it is dangerous to grossly falsify the admitted facts of nature.

When a young lady is crowded in to a safe that barely admits her being inside, locked in and the combination unknown, then thrown over a high precipice into the deep sea, no imagination is elastic enough to conceive of her rescue. When Houdini enters a submarine tank, emerges from the submarine below water and swims to the exact spot where the safe rests on bottom, experiments with the combination awhile, opens the safe, swims back with the lady under water, enters the submarine tank, and then emerges into the boat—whe! The spectator may concede much, but, for the sake of good entertainment, the unpalatable, the impossible, should not be thrust down his throat. The faults of "Terror Island" are those of Houdini alone. He is, nevertheless, a good actor when fairly reasonable. Lila Lee does her best screen work in his support, and the entire product has so much that is really entertaining that it must be valued as good in the summing up.

The Story.

Harry Harper had invented and constructed a submarine with a submerged tank device for salvaging the cargoes of sunken ships when he first heard of "Terror Island." His information came from a bright young girl, Beverly West, ward of Job Mordaunt. She communicates that her father is held captive on Terror Island in the South Seas and threatened with death by the natives. She shows Harper a letter from her father explaining his situation and describing the location of a wrecked ship on which were valuable consignments of diamonds and jewelry. His life will be spared if his daughter brings the natives a sacred pearl, in her possession. Harper makes ready to undertake the rescue on his submarine.

Mordaunt makes one desperate attempt after another to thwart this plan, and obtain the sacred pearl. He finally succeeds in carrying Beverly and the pearl away in a vessel he has outfitted for the same voyage. Beverly is sewn up in a sack and thrown overboard, but Harper is close behind with his submarine, and he rescues the girl by swimming out from his submerged tank. There are many thrilling adventures on the island when the two vessels arrive, but Harper is finally captured and returns to his boat in time to see the natives thrust Beverly into an iron safe they have taken from the wreck and thrown from a cliff into the sea. He goes out from his submerged tank without diving costume and rescues her from the safe. He returns and fights a man in diving suit for the box of jewels. By his bravery and ingenuity he rescues the father of Beverly, and all sail for home in a state of happiness.

"A Nurse Among the Teepees"

Public Health Film Produced by Carlyle Ellis Gives Arapahoe Indians First Screen Introduction.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A PLEASING and valuable piece of work has been done by James Goebel under the direction of Carlyle Ellis in filming scenes among the Arapahoe Indians on the Windy River reservation in Wyoming. The picture, "A Nurse Among the Teepees," is primarily intended to emphasize the necessity for, and the efficiency of the public health nurse who, from the log cabin in which she makes her headquarters, deals out consolation and practical aid to the Indians. Their children, many of whom are afflicted with a distressing eye disease, are treated by the public health nurse, and under her care the race is found to be increasing instead of decreasing in numbers.

The fact that it was forty degrees below zero when the picture was taken made it very difficult for the photographer, Mr. Goebel, to get the scenes with any degree of comfort. He also states that he had considerable trouble to persuade some of the Indians to pose for the camera. The truth of this was evidenced as the women hid their faces behind the babies which they carry in their arms. As the picture progressed, however, they took courage, and finally consented to "smile for the lady."

The types shown in the picture, from very young men and women to the squaw and genuine warrior brave, are unusually interesting. One of the notable features of these scenes is the blending of ancient and modern customs. For instance, an Indian wearing the clothes of the modern man is not averse to the use of the blanket, as of old. This is the first time that the Arapahoes have been filmed; and it is perhaps fortunate that the pictures were taken in the dead of winter, with the snow-covered Rockies in the distance as a background. The "snow stuff" in this picture is delightful, and the production is one that will fit well into the theatre program.

"Edgar's Hamlet"

Second of Booth Tarkington's "Edgar" Stories Produced by Goldwyn Is Replete with Lively Comedy.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE second of the Goldwyn two-reel comedies based on Booth Tarkington's "Adventures and Emotions of Edgar Pomeroy," is a delightful example of juvenile comedy. It serves the purpose of entertainment for the adult audience as well for children, and is well made. The youthful players do credit to the director by the perfectly natural manner in which they portray the different characters of the story; and the person who fails to derive genuine pleasure from viewing this picture, is indeed hard to please.

As the story runs Edgar decides that the next Saturday's entertainment shall be a Shakespeare day. With this in view he gets his cast together and, accompanied by a book of Charles Lamb's "Tales of Shakespeare," he proceeds to put on the show.

His little sweetheart, who refuses to play the part of Ophelia, turns out to be "the fly in the ointment." She discovers that the boys have stolen their mothers' best clothes and threatens them with disclosure of the fact, all of which leads to her getting a free ticket to the show, and a treat of ice cream and fruit sundaes which leaves the treasury bankrupt.

Finally the time comes when, after the show is over and Ophelia has attempted to drown herself in an improvised lake, with "mother's" best dress and hat on, there is a sad reckoning for Edgar and his best friend. Not only does he suffer the pains of punishment, but he is also black-listed by the parents of his pal, who is told that he must not play with Edgar for a month.

Goldwyn-Bray Pictograph

Features of Recent Issue Shows Activities of Travelers' Aid Society and Childe Hassam at Work.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE latest issue of the Goldwyn-Bray Pictograph covers one of the most important welfare movements at work in our country. This is the Travelers' Aid Society, whose activities shown in this issue of the Pictograph bring before us the necessity for lending a hand to strangers landing at our gates, or unsophisticated persons trying to get from one point to another in their own country. This number of the series shows a family from Italy, en route to Texas, being met by an agent of the society, placed in a taxi with fare prepaid to avoid grafting of taxi drivers at the other end, and headed for the train which is to convey them across country to a father waiting on his little farm in Texas. Another illustration of helpfulness shows the arrival of a war bride, whose fiancé is unable to get leave to meet her at the time of the arrival of the boat. She is met by an agent of the Traveler's Aid Society and conveyed to headquarters, where the young man comes later, and the marriage ceremony duly performed, the young couple are started on their way in a happy frame of mind.

Another interesting subject of the Pictograph shows the well-known artist, Childe Hassam, at work in his studio. His method of preparing etchings is one of the attractions of the picture.

An "Out of the Ink Well" number shows the cartoonist overwhelmed with work, too busy to complete the cartoon. So he sends a drawing of "Dave," the clown, to the operator; and Dave takes a hand, directs the picture, and provides some interesting comedy scenes for the audience, after which he dives into the ink well, pulling the cork in behind him.

"Mrs. Temple's Telegram"

Bryant Washburn Scores in Lively Farce
Produced by Paramount Arctcraft.

Reviewed by Herbert Caryl.

FOR good clean wholesome comedy you can't beat "Mrs. Temple's Telegram." For a matinee idol you can't beat Bryant Washburn. And for a leading woman you can't beat Wanda Hawley, now in the star class. So "Mrs. Temple's Telegram" is 100 per cent. A screen version of the popular stage farce of that name, the picture keeps the audience in a continual roar. And being about the troubles of the jealous married woman, the feminine voices can be heard above those of the men. Walter Hiers as "Babe," the fat boy husband, is a scream. He is the key funmaker of the whole piece.

Yes, the film has a "vamp," but she is such a very charming "vamp" that she does not shock even the most sensitive. The part is played by Carmen Phillips. Anne Scharfer, in the role of the Italian woman, is excellent but one wishes that those who wrote the screen version would not have compelled quite such a pronounced Italian type. It is the only jar to an otherwise smooth-running, rollicking farce. Paramount Arctcraft have gathered together a commendable group of fun-makers for the picture. If you are a showman see it; if you are in any other line of this screen business see it; or if you are just a movie fan see it—"Mrs. Temple's Telegram" will cheer you up.

Jack Temple.....Bryant Washburn
Mrs. Temple.....Wanda Hawley
Pauline.....Carmen Phillips
Frank Fuller.....Walter Hiers
Mrs. Fuller.....Sylvia Ashton
John Brown.....Leo White
Mrs. Brown.....Anne Schaefer
Wigson.....Edward Jobson
Story by Frank Wyatt and William Morris
Scenario by Elmer Harris.
Directed by James Cruze.
Length, 4,138 Feet.

The Story.

Mrs. Jack Temple is so jealous of her husband that when he is away she fears that some woman has bewitched him. Jack is attracted to a woman at an ice cream parlor, and the woman's husband upbraids her for her conduct. Jack encounters the same woman on a department store roof. They linger so long that they are locked out alone on the roof. Arriving home, Jack is met by his wife, who has been waiting all night for him. He tries to tell a lie, stating that he met a friend, John Brown. Mrs. Temple telegraphs Brown. Jack persuades another friend, Frank Fuller, to impersonate Brown. Fuller's wife is jealous of him.

Just as Fuller at the Temple home furnishes Jack with an alibi, a man calling himself John Brown arrives. Sure enough Mrs. Temple's telegram has reached a John Brown. It appears that Brown, a hair dresser, has cherished a love for Mrs. Temple. In the meantime, Mrs. Brown, who is jealous of her husband, finds Mrs. Temple's telegram, and follows her husband. Upon her arrival, Fuller is forced to recognize Mrs. Brown, an Italian, as his wife.

Fuller's wife, in search of a butler, arrives on the scene. Temple, Brown and Fuller and their respective wives are in a hub bub when Pauline, the vampire, who was with Jack on the roof, comes to find her opera glasses which she put in Jack's pocket. To the astonishment of all, Mrs. Temple and Pauline embrace. Then comes the climax. Mrs. Temple confesses that she got Pauline to try to kiss Jack. Pauline failed. The three couples are promptly reunited.

"Down on the Farm"

Mack Sennett's Farce Comedy of Rural Life Is Full of Mirth.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IN "Down on the Farm," Mack Sennett, creator of the hilarious two-reel farce, has attempted what he styles "a five-reel super feature," but it is mostly composed of two-reel material. There is a slender thread of story running through the production, but it is not essential. The fun-making elements are the same, ignorance and whatever is foolish in human nature being held up to ridicule. A very large part of "Down on the Farm" is exaggeration of character and incident and therefore farcical.

Louise Fazenda is still among the best of the eccentric comedy actresses. James Finlayson carries the main line of interest in true Mack Sennett style. Ben Turpin and Harry Gibbon are as amusing as ever. The trained dog, Teddy, is a marvel of intelligence utilized by fine training. Pepper, the Maltese cat, does some psychological stunts all her own. Here is the same admixture of Sennett material and characters with a thread of story thrown in. "Down on the Farm," as shown at the Broadway, is good entertainment.

Cast.

The Girl.....Louise Fazenda
Her Father.....Bert Roach
The Rustic Sweetheart.....Harry Gibbon
The Faithful Wife.....Marie Provost
Her Husband.....Ben Turpin
The Sportive Banker.....James Finlayson
The Man of Mystery.....Billy Armstrong

Produced under the personal supervision of Mack Sennett.
Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

"Down on the Farm" there is a girl with a rustic sweetheart. She is a wild tomboy until a sportive banker with a mortgage on her father's house comes along to collect from her father. Then she becomes a woman. She resents his amorous attentions, but father, with an eye to clearing the mortgage and getting rid of his daughter at the same time, consents to the banker's proposal of marriage. In order to disenchant her wealthy lover, she writes a letter, purporting to come from a man of mystery, an artist who painted the barn, which hints at her being compromised by him. The sportive banker turns his attention to the faithful wife of a tenant. He is frightened by the sudden appearance of a big man, whom he supposes to be the husband. The big man is only the grocer. When the real husband turns up the sportive banker dares kiss the faithful wife in his presence. For this expression of contempt he gets soundly beaten.

All is ready for the wedding between the girl and her rustic sweetheart, when the sportive banker spoils it all by displaying the compromising letter. He has opened the father's mail and found that the girl is heir to a hundred thousand life insurance money of a relative. He offers to take the groom's place, but, in his eagerness, he drops the letter concerning the inheritance, and the rustic lover, on reading it, decides to take the girl in spite of all.

Now appears the Man of Mystery in search of his baby boy. He wrote no such letter. His baby is saved from drowning by faithful "Teddy," an intelligent dog, and all turns out happily. The rustic sweetheart gets the girl uncompromised, and she pays off the mortgage.

Do You Want to Go Back to the Good Old Farm Days?—The Days of the Cows and Chickens—Then Don't Fail to See "Down on the Farm"—Mack Sennett's New Super-Comedy Drama—A Laugh for Every Move.

Exploitation Angles: Get this story over with a bang if you expect to collect. It cannot be offered merely as program material. You must make a fuss over it. You can probably get some suggestions from the exploitation department in this issue by studying the Imperial first presentation. You can at least work a country band selection from your orchestra, and it will take little effort to work up a proper rural setting. Use the press book material to get it over, and go as far as you can.

"A Common Level"

Transatlantic Film Presents Edmund Breese in a Story of Modern Theme and Time Illustrated.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

A COMMON LEVEL" is an uncommon screen story. It illustrates that the modern magnate is but the ancient potentate with a change of method. He uses dollars instead of spears to accomplish his evil ends. One disregards human rights quite as much as the other. It is not love that rules the camp, but cash that dominates both. While the theme itself is not new, there is much in the transatlantic presentation that commends attention. Foremost feature is the use of spectacular ensembles in which, not hundreds, but thousands take part. Great massed effects are handled with masterly skill. All this has been done in Europe under the direction of Ambrose.

These grand spectacles represent a tremendous outlay of energy to handle. The costuming and settings are also on a grand scale. In the modern story by Lonergan, directed by Burton King, there is but a small cast and slender story into which the European product is artfully woven. It looks as though a massive historical spectacle had been cleverly utilized to fit in with the modern story as a splendid illustration of its motif.

The performance of Edmund Breese gives dignity and sincerity to the entire production. He is well supported by Miss Claire Whitney in a role of limited opportunity. Febomari as Attila is a fine type and a capable actor. "A Common Level," therefore, offers some unusual merits as a state rights proposition. It is a departure from the outworn "Desperate Desmond" stuff with which we have been surfeited. It has an idea, the one thing usually lacking in this character of product, and it should win with spectators because it will hold close attention wherever it is shown.

Cast.

Matthew Ryan.....Edmund Breese
Marion Schuyler.....Claire Whitney
Mr. Schuyler.....Sydney Gratton
Attila.....Febomari
Directed by Burton King and Ambrose.

The Story.

Matthew Ryan is a wheat magnate of low breeding and great force of character, but ruthless in his methods with friend and foe. He is on the point of ruining an old friend, Schuyler, when he proposes to literally buy the latter's daughter Marion. In her denunciation of Ryan, Marion calls him a modern Attila. This worries Ryan—he is ignorant of what she means. He goes home and reads an account of Attila. He falls asleep, and a mysterious character appears to point out the meaning of Marion's accusation.

Attila, "Scourge of God," king of the Huns in the fifth century, assassinates his brother to control the throne and then conceives the idea of conquering all Europe. He extends his sway over Gotha. He lays waste the Eastern Empire, practising thoroughly modern cruelties. He is defeated, just as were the modern Huns, on the Marne, the Romans aiding. He then overruns northern Italy, but fails to attack Rome. He demands a Roman princess as his bride, buys her, as Ryan would buy Marion, and treats her with such disgusting brutality on the wedding night that she kills him.

All this and more is shown Ryan by the Mysterious Stranger in suggestive prophecy. Ryan is powerfully affected when he wakes from his dream. He is recalled to consciousness by a visit from Marion's father, who announces that she has fled with the man she loves. Ryan, now softened by what he has learned of himself in the character of Attila, begs forgiveness for his pitiless attitude and promises to redeem himself in all future time by an exhibition of true manhood.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines: Who Was Attila? See "A Common Level" with Edmund Breese and Determine Who He Was.

A Story of Modern Times Illustrated by the Big Spectacles of Ancient Days.

The Man of Old Used the Spear to Bring About a Realization of His Evil Ideas—the Man of To-day Uses Dollars—See "A Common Level" with Edmund Breese for This Powerful Story.

Exploitation Angles: Play up the spectacular side instead of offering it as a Breese star play. Treat it in a large way, using newspaper spaces and lithographs to get it over, and in your advertising text dwell upon the story of Attila. Hundreds of people since the war began have been wondering, as does Ryan in the play, who Attila was. Others merely know him as the inventor of German frightfulness. All will want to see him, so work on that angle. Book it for a sufficiently long run to permit you to spend money on the advertising.

Comments

SHOT IN THE GET-AWAY (Rainbow). A very fair two-reel comic, directed by William H. Watson. This carries a slight plot, but one that is sufficient to connect some amusing knockabout situations. The girl's father wants her to wed a man named Percy and she won't have him, being in love with another. The unwelcome wedding ceremony is evaded and an escaped convict comes along and puts Percy out of the running. This is good in action.

WE'LL SAY IT'S GOOD!

Grand Island, Neb.

Editor, Moving Picture World:

Wish to inform you as to a big election battle waged here in our little city. The Ministerial Union endeavored to close us Sundays. They brought the issue to a vote of the people and, of course, the motion picture managers here pulled off their coats and waded in. Here is the outcome: For Sunday motion pictures, 2,643; against Sunday pictures, 863—a three to one victory.

Pretty good, hey?

S. A. HOYMAN,
The Lyda Theatre.

SHOOT ON SIGHT (Rolin-Pathe), a "Snub" Pollard comic, which opens in a wild Western gambling resort. Snub and little Sambo do most of the knockabout work and the former shoots up the place in typical style. This makes an amusing burlesque, with a number of laughs in it.

DON'T WEAKEN (Rolin-Pathe), a comic number, featuring "Snub" Pollard, assisted by little Sambo, the colored boy. The golf links provides a pleasing setting for some good humorous action, and the gypsy camp is elaborately staged. Snub plays a strolling actor who rescues the kidnapped heroine from the gypsies. This is good in action and has humorous moments.

TRAINING FOR HUSBANDS (Sunshine). This is one of the most entertaining of recent comedies, in which the real actors of the picture give second place to the animals of the play, namely, a dog and a monkey. Some remarkable stunts are pulled off by said animals, including the running of a motor boat. It is a comedy that will surely be enjoyed by any audience, although the plot covers the common theme of the rivalry of men and the perversity of women.

WHAT COULD BE SWEETER (Goldwyn-Carter De Haven). Clean, wholesome and moderately entertaining is this comedy featuring Mr. and Mrs. Carter de Haven. A rich man and his pretty daughter motoring through a certain village, puncture a tire. The young mechanic who mends the tire falls in love with the daughter, and she with him. Together they plot to keep father over night at the village hotel, and succeed in staging a fake influenza scare, on the strength of which the hotel is quarantined. By the time the quarantine is lifted father is willing to welcome the young man as his son-in-law. The by-play of the picture is good, and it will be welcome on any programs.

Make All of Your Seats Good Seats and Realize on the House Capacity

PLENTY of seats up front," says the polite usher. "Not on your life," replies the unpolitely positive patron, "you know mighty well why they are empty," and he proceeds to crowd into a lonely vacancy totally surrounded by interested spectators.

Every exhibitor has often wished that he could realize on those front rows and that his boxes and the seats at the extreme sides of the house could be made popular and profitable.

And every planner of a new picture theatre has realized the latitude of design that would be his if he did not feel confined to a comparatively long and narrow house for best screen effects.

Now comes the Glifograph Corporation, of 280 Broadway, New York, with a screen which they claim will make each and every seat in the house an equally good position from which to view the screen. This sounds like a pretty large order, but here is what occurred when the Glifograph screen was tried out in actual exhibiting under extremely adverse conditions.

Made Good at Loew's Roof.

Marcus Loew's New York Roof Theatre has always been regarded by projection experts as offering a most severe test. The Roof is one block wide and the screen is in the center, with a vast expanse of box seats and chairs extending on either side of the two center sections.

With the ordinary flat screen, the manager and ushers found it almost impossible to get patrons to sit anywhere except in the center sections, because of the distortion of the pictures to those sitting in front rows or in the side seats. The many box seats on either side of the center were seldom used.

During the run of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," at the Roof, capacity business was played at every performance, yet when the center sections emptied, no effort was made by those in side seats and boxes to move. Even when the ushers asked

Tell Us Your Troubles

WHENEVER any exhibitor or house manager runs up against a snag in the matter of equipment—its choice, use or installation; whenever you are in doubt as to just what you should do to make a new house attractive or improve an old one—ask the "Better Equipment" Department and we will dig up the dope for you. BUT don't forget to enclose a stamped return envelope with your inquiry.

those seated off the center sections if they did not wish to move over, the invitation was invariably declined with the added statement that "We can see perfectly from where we are now."

Before accepting the Glifograph Screen for other of his theatres Mr. Loew insisted upon giving it the most severe test his projection experts could devise. It has been installed in seven of his more important houses, and others will be equipped with it as quickly as the screens can be manufactured.

What the New York Manager Says.

The manager of Loew's New York Theatre and Roof, both of which use Glifographs, is most enthusiastic about the screen.

"With your audience satisfied with their seats, it is a pleasure to do capacity business," he declared. "At no time since we installed the Glifograph Screens have we had a single complaint from patrons, no matter in what part of the house they were sitting. People have marveled at the change and have remarked on it. Many who previously stood until they could get center section seats have, on the suggestion of our ushers, tried the other seats since the installation of the Glifographs, have been amazed at the difference and now sit anywhere."

Another advantage claimed for the Glifograph screen is its adaptability to theatres playing vaudeville and motion pictures. In these combination houses patrons invariably want to sit as near the stage as possible during the vaudeville, but seriously object to this nearness during the showing of the pictures because of the distortion. With a Glifograph screen this objection is claimed to be entirely removed. Those in the front seats, and even stage boxes, see equally as well. This is particularly true of the older houses with many seats off to the sides which were built before the universal demand for motion pictures.

Description of Screen.

The surface of the Glifograph screen is an extremely finely woven gummed canvas, specially impregnated, reinforced and cured, with rubber backing, which, by reason of lacing on the frame, insures at all times a perfect surface. This surface is extremely durable and may be washed when soiled.

furnishes superior projection, as the light is not confined to the center of the screen, but is evenly distributed over its whole area. With the Glifograph there is not that dimming of the light around the edges of the screen so noticeable and objectionable to persons viewing the picture from the side seats and from balconies. There is, the makers claim, absolutely no reflected glare from the Glifograph screens—it shows an evenly diffused light over the entire surface.

Each Glifograph screen is manufactured according to specification for individual theatres; it being necessary to have all technical data regarding projection, pitch, lenses, etc. The curvatures of the hyperboloid surfaces are calculated in each case, exactly as are the curvatures of lenses or mirrors.

The Glifograph screen presents no radical difference in appearance to the ordinary flat surface screen to the theatre-goer. There are a few angles from which the hyperboloid curves may be seen. It is exceedingly light in weight, and in combination houses may be easily hoisted by screen ropes. It occupies no greater space than the ordinary flat surface screen.

Those Who Have Ordered.

Exhibitors to whom the Glifograph has been demonstrated have been quick to appreciate its advantages. In addition to the Marcus Loew Theatres in New York, others who have ordered these screens are the Palace and Riverside Theatres in New York City, both Keith houses; The First National Exhibitor's projection room; the Rialto Theatre projection room, New York City; Loew's Palace Theatre, Washington, D. C.; De Luxe Theatre, Utica, N. Y.; Cortlandt Theatre, North Bergen, N. J.; The Plaza Theatre, New York City, and many others.

The American Photoplayer Finds Southern Trade Good

F. K. RICKSECKER, Southern representative of the American Photoplayer Company, reports having closed deals with the following theatres for the Robert Morton reproduction of the Symphony Orchestra; New Theatre, Henderson, N. C., a $15,000 instrument; Stallings and Mason for a new theatre in Wilson, N. C., a $20,000 instrument; The Crescent Theatre, Statesville, N. C., a $15,000 instrument; Grand Theatre, Kinston, N. C., a $15,000 instrument; Acme Theatre, Goldsboro, N. C., a $15,000 instrument; Alamo Theatre, Raleigh, N. C., a $15,000 instrument, in addition to a number of others.

Mr. Ricksecker also reports that a number of theatres have purchased the photoplayers, among whom are Roland G. Hill, of Greensboro, H. B. Varner of Lexington, N. C.; Liberty Theatre, Darlington, S. C., and L. D. Joel, of the Casino Theatre, Jacksonville, a $15,000 Robert Morton Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Ricksecker will open an Atlanta office shortly and will have these instruments on exhibition.

The Stratford Theatre of Chicago.

These reproductions of the architect's wash drawings show how the exterior and interior will appear on completion.

Chicago's New Stratford Theatre Will Be Equipped with the Typhoon System

CHICAGO'S latest addition to an already large list of beautiful theatres is the Stratford, at present under course of construction, at Sixty-third and Union streets. The owners, the Chicago United Theatres Company, expect to have the structure completed in time to permit of the opening on or before July 15.

The Stratford, which will seat 3,000, was designed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, of Chicago, who in his plans has left little to be desired in the way of modern equipment for the comfort of the public.

Among the most important items considered in the equipment of the Stratford were the cooling, heating and ventilation and after a thorough investigation it was finally decided to install the Typhoon cooling, heating and ventilating system manufactured by the Typhoon Fan Co., of New York.

Co-operating with the architect, the Typhoon engineers laid out a system that will thoroughly cool and ventilate the entire house during the warm weather and also take care of the heating during the winter months.

Based on a Common Sense Principle.

The Typhoon system is based on a common sense principle and uses immensely large fans running at comparatively low speed. Ducts are entirely done away with, thus effecting a considerable saving not only in the cost of installation, but also in the cost of operation.

The Typhoon installation in the Stratford Theatre consists of two No. 19 Typhoon single sets, one No. 29 Typhoon twin set, four No. 18 single sets, and one No. 27 twin set.

For heating purposes, the two No. 19 Typhoon single sets, which are located in special chambers in the attic space, draw the air through 3,264 square feet of vento heaters and discharge this air into the theatre through grilles located on each side of the stage.

This equipment will blow ten and a half million cubic feet of fresh heated air per hour into the theatre.

To heat the theatre before opening up, the air may be recirculated through the auditorium by the No. 27 twin set, located in a specially constructed chamber on the roof of the theatre at the back of the balcony. This No. 27 Typhoon twin set takes the air from the grilles located underneath the balcony, and the grilles located in the ceiling of the lounging room and returns the air to the No. 19 heating Typhoons, located in the attic space on each side of the stage, thus effecting great economy in coal consumption.

By a simple damper arrangement, this same No. 27 Typhoon twin set may be utilized to exhaust the air when necessary.

During the Summer Months.

For the cooling and ventilation of the house during the summer months, the cooling equipment consists also of the two No. 19 Typhoon single sets (in summer the heating stacks being cut down and by-passed) and in addition there is also used a No. 29 Typhoon twin set located in a specially constructed chamber over the stage.

This equipment takes fresh air from high above the street and blows it into the theatre through the grilles located in the proscenium arch and on each side of the stage. Above the balcony there are also, in addition to the above equipment, four No. 18 Typhoon single sets, located in specially constructed chambers in the attic space, which blow large volumes of fresh air directly into the theatre through circular grilles located in the ceiling just over the balcony.

The air is blown out through the entrance doors and through the grilles located in the ceiling at the back of the balcony, assisted also by the No. 27 Typhoon twin set, which during the summer is used for exhausting purposes.

Through the use of these Typhoon cooling equipments, there is blown into the theatre every hour thirty-five and a half million cubic feet of pure fresh air, creating a steady refreshing breeze throughout the entire house without draughts.

Owing to the fact that the theatre is not yet completed, we are unable to reproduce photographs of same. However, the accompanying cuts will show reproductions of the architect's drawings, and the exterior of the Stratford and also the interior of a portion of the orchestra showing a corner of the stage and ceiling grilles. The plans give an idea of the location of the various sized Typhoon sets as they are installed.

But One of Many.

The Stratford is but one of many of the newer and larger theatres throughout the country now being equipped with the Typhoon System.

The recent warm weather throughout the South, has convinced theatre owners that it is time to install their cooling apparatus for the coming summer, and, during the past week, the Typhoon Fan Company has closed contracts to equip the following houses with the Typhoon Cooling System:

Howard, Atlanta; Royal, S. A. Lynch Enterprises, San Antonio; Rex, Sumpter, S. C.; Bijou, West Palm Beach; Capitol, Moultrie, Ga.; Spohn, Goshen, Ind.; the Empress, of Wichita Falls; Lucas, Savannah; Georgia Amusement Company Theatre, Athens, Ga.; Strand, Rome, Ga.; Princess, Henderson, N. C.; and the Critterion Amusement Co., Chattanooga.

The Howell's Cine Equipment Moves to Larger Quarters

HOWELL'S CINE EQUIPMENT has moved from the offices it has occupied with David P. Howells, Inc., into new and larger quarters in Suite 1110-1111 of the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue.

The new offices which have been taken over by the Howell's Cine Equipment Company have been remodeled, redecorated and refurnished, and the projection room in connection has been reconstructed and re-equipped.

Howell's Cine Equipment Company was organized six months ago by David P. Howells and placed under the management of Joe C. Hornstein, a pioneer in the film business, who has been a projectionist and an exhibitor as well as an equipment specialist. He was one of the first to turn from the theatre to the equipment business.

The Automaticket Now Plaything to Big Houses

WITH such installations as the new Grauman million-dollar theatre in Los Angeles, the Criterion in New York, just opened, the Garden in Paterson and the Harris in Pittsburgh to its credit, the automaticket register may be said to be playing to big houses.

It isn't, of course, simply a big house ticket selling register, but the big guns know what's what, and what is good in the way of motion picture theatre equipment, and if they find it good business to protect their money, it is good business for every other exhibitor in the country to do the same.

If you don't know all about the automaticket system, you owe it to yourself to write the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company at 1780 Broadway, New York, at once and see just what the concern can do for you.
